JOSEPH B. CASE'S CAREER

SKETCH OF POPULAR ENGINEER OF CENTRAL WHO DIED THIS MONTH.

Nearly Seventy-Three Years Old—Resident of Flemington—His Wife Survives.

"There were sad hearts among the employes of the New Jersey Central on October 19, when it was announced that Engineer Joseph Heyser Case, of Flemington, was no more," says The Railroad Employes. "Engineer Case was known to everybody connected with the company, and everybody liked him. His nature was of that winning, genial stamp, and about him was that manliness which commanded admiration. In the social group he was its life, for his repertoire of anecdote and amusing stories seemed inexhaustible. As a story teller he had few superiors. And withal, his hand was charitable, and his heart could throb in sympathy. The distressed found in him a comforting friend.

"Mr. Case lived until October 20 next he would have been 73 years of age. Several years ago he had a severe attack of grip which left him with a weak heart, and although he resumed his duties on the railroad he never fully recovered. Diabetes finally set in, followed by dropsy, and he was obliged to give up work.

"Engineer Case was born in Flemington. His father, Joseph Case, was a tanner, and did business in the old stone structure whose ruins still stand in that town. This was more than fifty years ago and he has followed railroading all his life. He was connected with the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, and afterwards with the Pennsylvania, and finally came with the Central, being the second engineer to run the South Branch train to New York. He was a most faithful man to duty and missed very few trips on his engine for more than thirty-five years.

"On April 15, 1857, he married Miss Sarah Coates, of Quakertown, who survives him, and excepting about eight years spent in Trenton the couple lived in Flemington all their married lives. They had one son who died three months after birth. The deceased was an ardent lover of piscatorial sports and spent his annual vacation in the haunts of the trout, bass and sea fish, and had many an interesting story to tell of his varied experience with rod and reel.

"The funeral, conducted by his brother Masons, took place at 11 o'clock Thursday, October 15, at his late home in Flemington; interment was in Prospect Hill Cemetery."

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION

DELEGATES FROM THIS CITY AND ELSEWHERE TO GATHER AT NEWARK.

Association to Meet on November 17, 18 and 19—The Programme for the Several Lessons.

Plainfielders will be among the more than 1,500 delegates who from all parts of the State will gather in Newark next month, at the annual meeting of the New Jersey Sunday-school Association. The convention will be held November 17, 18 and 19. The association was organized in New Brunswick in 1858.

The first four sessions this year will consist of an institute prepared for teachers of the elementary grades, but to which all who are interested in the training of the young will be welcome. It will be held in the First Presbyterian Church on Tuesday afternoon and night, and Wednesday morning and afternoon, November 17 and 18. On Wednesday night the first public meeting will be held. This and all subsequent gatherings will take place in the Peddie Memorial Church.

The convention will open with an address of welcome by Mayor Henry M. Doremus, who will greet the delegates on behalf of Newark. Rev. Dr. James I. Vance will welcome them on behalf of the religious organizations of the city, and Mrs. Charles Hastings Dodd, pastor of the Peddie Church, will extend the greetings of his congregation.

—John Giles, of 1220 Highland avenue, has received a permit from Building Inspector T. O. Doane to erect a stable in the rear of his premises.

—Twenty building permits were granted by Building Inspector T. O. Doane during the month of October.

—The improvements at the Park Club are nearing completion and the members hope to get full possession within a few weeks.

—At the Weightman-Cox and Parker Randolph weddings last Saturday, Frank Hedden, of East Fourth street, had charge of the carriages.

—A meeting of the Plainfield High School Session was held Monday when the resignation of Tribune Howard Lapsley was accepted with regret and George Bentley was appointed his successor.

CITY CONSIDERS BOROUGH'S OFFER

Board of Education Acts on Proposal of Consolidation of High Schools.

MATTER IN ABEYANCE

CHANGES IN TEACHING STAFF ANNOUNCED AT MONDAY'S MEETING.

Other Business Mostly Routine—Superintendent Reports on Trip to New England—School Report Soon to be Published.

The City Board of Education at its meeting Monday night voted to take into consideration the proposition of the North Plainfield Board for a union of the High Schools of the city and borough. They passed this resolution on motion of Mr. Lovell: "In reply to a communication from President James R. Joy of the school district of the borough of North Plainfield, it is resolved: That the sense of this Board is that the matter ought to receive our serious consideration, which it will have as soon as the erection of the new building is actually begun."

Mr. Joy, in his communication, said that inasmuch as the wisdom of the policy of duplicating accommodations, effort and expense by maintaining a separate High School in North Plainfield had frequently been questioned, it was deemed well to invite a proposition for a practical basis for a union of the two High Schools. Such an arrangement he said would relieve the pressing need for a new primary school in the borough and was especially timely considering the present plans of enlargement of the High School facilities in Plainfield.

Other business of a routine nature was considered by the city Board Monday night. The resignation of Clara L. Henderson from the Washington School, on account of the illness of her mother, was accepted and Eva M. Vincent, a graduate of the Buffalo Normal School, was appointed to the place. Catherine B. Nielson was chosen substitute teacher to assist in instructing overcrowded classes and to teach backward pupils. Miss Nielson is a resident of this city and a graduate of the Normal School. It was also voted that the salaries of teachers acting for an extra hour every day should be increased $50 a month.

Superintendent Maxson in his report announced that in the course of a trip through New England for the purpose of examining candidates for teachers he had interviewed Herbert D. Hale, of Boston, the architect of the new High School. With Mr. Hale he inspected the South Boston High School, a building of Mr. Hale's architecture. Mr. Maxson expressed himself as greatly pleased with Mr. Hale and his work which showed a thorough knowledge of High School architecture.

The superintendent announced the reception of a copy of the new school law. He said that the section that referred to the truancy regulations and the appointment of janitors as truant officers met with his entire approval.

Provision was made for the issuing of 2,000 copies of the annual report of the school board. Messrs. Abbott, Lovell and Cave were appointed the auditing committee and Messrs. Lovell and Abbott were chosen to the Board of Estimates. The report of the custodian of school moneys showed a balance on hand October 31 of $1,992.40. It was announced that $670 had been received for tuition from out-of-town pupils since the opening of the school year, an increase of $300 over last year.

Hoagland's Park avenue express does the best service because it gives the quickest service. A trial will convince.

A clever watchmaker and one who understands the jewelry business from A to Z is Carl Silbert, Somerset street.

If you are troubled with warts, superfluous hair or other facial blemishes, call upon Dr. W. G. Allen, Park avenue.

The Belleview avenue nursery company, importers and growers, has everything in the line of shrubs, fruit trees and vines. Tel. 2171.

There is nothing too good for the table. If such be the case, trade at R. W. Barnes where prices are low but the quality of goods is high.

Never have your wife go to New York to have her dress fitted when right here in this city is a tailor who guarantees satisfaction. S. Hirsch, 430 Watchung avenue.

There's only one "best" dry and fancy goods store in Plainfield and that one is Peck's on West Front street. Have a look at Peck's laces and dress trimmings. It will repay you. Examine the quality of Peck's goods, and you will wonder at the prices.

HAPPY HALLOWE'EN'S PRANKS AND PARTIES

The Small Boy Not the Only One Who Had a Jolly Good Time.

BUT HARMLESS ANTICS

MERRY LITTLE GATHERINGS AT HOMES IN CITY AND BOROUGH.

Gates, Fences and Steps Carried Away—Some of the Fun Which Took Place on the Streets —No Arrests Made.

Gates, fences and front doors suffered Saturday night and weird and uncanny costumes were seen upon the streets all in celebration of Hallowe'en, the one day of the year when the old and the young alike cast aside all dignity and enter into the pranks appropriate to that day without reserve. The young people of this city were in their element and they made the best of their opportunity.

Many social gatherings were held in different parts of the town, while younger folk paraded through the business streets in companies of four to a dozen attired in weird costumes. Young girls, and in one or two cases young women, were seen upon the streets dressed in male attire and in many instances young men were observed vainly trying to gain control of the skirts which they wore. These last were the special objects of delight for the younger boys and girls who followed them about.

The police received complaints from numerous people who neglected to make secure their front gates and not infrequently an irate citizen would follow a band of youngsters for blocks only to find his gate blazing in a bonfire. Fences and other movable objects received the same treatment.

In many cases, people, who started to go out of their houses, found their front doors tied fast and upon their exit from a rear door, were showered with rice and corn and sometimes flour. A party of youngsters gathered at the corner of Fourth street and Park avenue and threw flour and pieces of starch at people riding on the cars.

In North Plainfield hazing was indulged in. One party of young people disguised, was captured by another party and made to do stunts, such as climbing electric light poles, stopping street cars and in one or two cases where strong objection was made, they were treated to a ducking at a watering trough.

A social gathering was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Hummer, on Arlington avenue, at which numerous Hallowe'en games were played and dancing was enjoyed until almost midnight. There were about a score of young people present and a feature of the evening was a doughnut eating contest for a prize.

A Hallowe'en social was held at the home of Miss Lillian Whitall, on East Fifth street. Appropriate games were played and the evening was made enjoyable by music and singing and dancing. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

The Misses Sanderson, of Fairview avenue, entertained the Tuesday Night Whist Club at a typical Hallowe'en party at which there were about thirty present, en masque. The rooms were decorated with artificial skeletons and skulls and cross bones and about the walls were distributed playing cards, arranged according to the various hands in well known games. Jack-o'-lanterns made of pumpkins and shoe boxes also formed part of the decorating scheme. Bobbing for apples, and other games appropriate to the day were enjoyed. Refreshments, consisting of pumpkin pie and sweet cider were served.

The Scottish Thistle Club met at the home of David Bowden, on West Fourth street, and were entertained with various games and other Hallowe'en pastimes. Many of the party were en masque and some came in the Scottish kilts. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

A Hiawartha party was held at the home of the Misses Jackson, on West Fifth street, at which here were about twenty present. All the guests came attired as Indians and everything was carried out according to the customs of the Indians. A fish dance, ghost dance, snake dance and other antics were enjoyed until a late hour. Refreshments were served, consisting of maize cakes, and other Indian dishes.

Among the pranks played by the boys was the throwing of a buggy into Green brook at Madison avenue, the burning of a billboard at Chatham street and Elm place, and the placing of a number of crates on the flag pole of the Fourth street school.

A surprise party was held at the home of Miss Mayme Kelly, in Netherwood, by a number of her friends. Hallowe'en games and games were enjoyed. Refreshments were served.

Mrs. William VanOrden, of Astor place, entertained about twenty young boys and girls. Hallowe'en games were played and refreshments were served.

Hallowe'en and all its gayety took place at the home of the Misses Irene and May Kitchen, of Everett place. About forty people were present.

A social gathering was held at the home of Miss Mary Woolston, Fairview avenue.

Miss Agnes Mantz, of Craig place, entertained a number of her little friends at her home.

Under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society, of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, a Hallowe'en social was held at the home of Miss Ida Randolph at Mt. Pleasant. The committee in charge consisted of Miss Ida Randolph, Mrs. Louis Fairchild, Miss Ernestine C. Smith and George Clark.

COUNCIL ACTS ON OVERHEAD WIRING

Question Whether Electric Light Company is Liable to Indictment.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMITTEE INSTRUCTED TO INVESTIGATE.

The Matter Taken Up as the Result of Recent Death—Advised That Working of Gamewell System be Examined and Report Made.

To ascertain whether or not the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company is liable to indictment before the Grand Jury for maintaining wires strung on overhead poles in the city assigned to a new public service committee appointed by the Common Council at its meeting Monday night. This is the resolution offered by Councilmaan Tyler at a meeting Monday night and passed.

"Resolved: That the Public Service Committee gather such information as lies within their power with a view of ascertaining whether or not the wires of the Plainfield Electric Light Company are in such condition as will constitute a nuisance and to apply such remedies as will protect life and property and adopt all lawful means of protecting life and limb from this cause."

In explaining the reason for offering this resolution Mr. Tyler brought to mind the recent case in the West End where a life was sacrificed through all alleged negligence of the electric light company. He said that the investigation which followed this catastrophe resulted in the discovery that many of the wires are unsafe, and, the insulation being worn off. In speaking with Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, Mr. Tyler learned that the company was undoubtedly guilty of criminal negligence in maintaining wires in such a condition as reported, and is possibly indictable before the Grand Jury.

Mr. Tyler declared that he himself saw a police officer receive a shock from one of the Gamewell system police alarm boxes while making his report one wet night and declared that if an officer, while performing his duty, received an injury from a shock, the city would be liable for damages. He said further that 1,000 volts, alternating current, is carried in the electric light wires and that that was sufficient to do considerable damage to a man's heart action. It was therefore urged that something be done at once by way of an investigation and if necessary to abandon the use of the boxes until the defect is remedied.

It was decided to notify the Gamewell company in regard to the condition of the police boxes and to pursue a stringent investigation of the condition of the other electric light wires in this city.

Arthur Humbie, of Somerville, has been visiting his cousin, Miss Bertha Beekman, of this city.

John Welch, of Madison avenue, has recovered from a slightly sprained ankle received in a recent hunting expedition.

C. A. REED LEADS BY HALF A POINT

Samuel Townsend a Close Second for President's Cup at Park Golf Club.

RESULTS OF CONTEST

LITTLE CHANGE IN STANDING FOR HILLSIDE'S COMMITTEE CUP.

E. B. Shoemaker Wins First Honors at Hillside—At Park Club S. St. J. McCutchen First in Competition Play for Club's Cup.

J. L. Watson won first honors for the President's cup in the weekly competition at the Park Golf Club on Saturday, with a net score of 86. Second honors were divided between J. B. Betts and Samuel Townsend, each making a net score of 88. The only material change in the standing for this cup is that Samuel Townsend has increased his position to within a half point of that of Charles A. Reed, who now holds the lead with fourteen points. The other point winners scored their first points and these do not change the standing at all for this trophy.

For the Park Golf Club cup S. St. John McCutchen won first points, giving him a total of 11½ points. Samuel Townsend who scored second honors now has eleven points, while Charles B. Morse in winning third honors, added a point to his standing of 1½.

These scores were posted for the two cups:

J. L. Watson, 116, 30—86; J. B. Betts, 119, 30—89; Samuel Townsend, 104, 15—89; S. St. John McCutchen, 100, 9—91; Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, 113, 18—94; Charles B. Morse, 108, 12—96; Leon R. Thurlow, 111, 15—96.

As the leaders in the competition for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club did not play on Saturday, there is no great change in the standing for that trophy. E. B. Shoemaker won first honors, giving him a total of nine points and placing him in fifth position. S. H. Paterson received second honors, giving him his first two points, while W. L. Glenney and C. B. Morgan divided the remaining point, each making a net score of 78. This gives Glenney nine points and C. B. Morgan 4 1-6 points.

These scores were posted for the Golf Committee cup:

E. B. Snoemaker, 95, 20—75; S. H Paterson, 103, 27—76; W. L. Glenney, 79, 1—78; C. B. Morgan, 90, 12—78; H. W. Beebe, 91, 10—81; J. E. Erickson, 94, 13—81; Robert Abbott, 94, 13—81; H. F. Fox, 103, 18—85; H. C. Munger, 101, 15—86.

POLITICAL TALK OF THE DAY

Pagan, Republican, has been elected mayor of Jersey City.

Lankering, Democrat, has been elected mayor of Hoboken.

At Trenton, Frank H. Katzenbach, Jr., Democrat, was elected mayor.

J. H. Terrill, Democrat, was elected mayor of Rahway by a majority of four.

Next Legislature—Senate: Republicans, 14; Democrats, 7; House: Republicans, 37; Democrats, 23.

New York—McClellan, Tammany, 62,000.

Ohio—Col. Herrick, Republican Governor, 100,000.

Rhode Island—Gov. Garvin, Democrat.

Maryland—In doubt.

Kentucky—Gov. Beckham, Democrat.

Massachusetts—Gov. Bates, Republican, 37,000.

Iowa—Gov. Cummins, Republican, 80,000.

Nebraska—Fusion.

Colorado—In doubt. Denver Democratic by 5,000.

Pennsylvania—State: Republican, 75,000; Philadelphia — Republican, 100,000.

Mississippi—Major Vardaman, Democrat, Governor.

The detailed vote in Summit, New Providence borough and township and Clark township were not received at the time of going to press.

Prominent Republicans have been discussing the availability of Representative John J. Gardner, of Atlantic City, for the party's next candidate for Governor. Word has now come from Washington that Mr. Gardner is not likely to enter into any scramble for the nomination, but it is believed he would willingly respond to his party's call, should the Republicans of the State decide upon him as the most available man to lead the party to victory next year.

PLAINFIELD GOLFERS IN MANY EVENTS

Goodwin, Shoemaker and Morgan Winners on the Hillside Club's Course.

THE SCORES AS POSTED

CHARLES A. REED WON PRESIDENT'S CUP AT PARK CLUB.

William A. Townsend Captured Holiday Cup at Park—Green's Committee Tankard at Hillside Went to E. P. Goodwin.

There was all-day play for the green's committee tankard at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club yesterday, the winner being E. P. Goodwin with a net score of 75.

The scores for the green's committee tankard were these:

E. P. Goodwin, 98, 18—75; C. C. Burke, Jr., 94, 16—78; W. L. Glenney, 81, 1—80; D. H. Rowland, 94, 12—82; D. W. Taylor, 99, 16—83; G. T. Van Boskerck, 99, 9—83; Walter Peterson, 91, 6—85; H. D. Hibbard, 94, 7—87; F. A. Clark, 98, 10—88; Morris J. Dumont, 94, 6—88; Arthur Murphy, 98, 10—88; Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, 99, 6—93.

A bucker's handicap was won by E. B. Shoemaker with a net score of 83. D. W. Taylor, Arthur Murphy and S. H. Patterson were tie with Shoemaker for first honors, each making a net score of 88. These names were placed in a hat and the first name drawn was declared the winner. This was Shoemaker.

Mr. Shoemaker also won the holiday cup, his score being 72. The other scores were: Harold Serrell, 107, 27—80; S. H. Patterson, 116, 37—89, H. F. Fox, 110, 18—92. In the play-off for the men's handicap cup between C. B. Morgan and J. E. Erickson, thirty-six holes, Morgan was the winner by 3 up and 2 to go.

During the day there were many social features at the clubhouse, several small dinner parties and a tea adding to the pleasure of the members and their friends.

Several events at the Park Golf Club brought out a large number of enthusiastic players yesterday. In the morning there was a bogey handicap. Bring your tinware which was won by J. B. Betts, who was five down to bogey. L. R. Thurlow, George T. Rogers and W. B. Faber were tie for second honors, each being six down to bogey.

In the afternoon the events were of special interest, as the final play for the president's and Park Golf Club cups, as well as the stated play for the holiday cup was scheduled. Charles A. Reed won the president's cup by a half point, having a total of fourteen points. Morgan T. Townsend won the Park Golf Club, with a total of twenty-two points. Samuel Townsend finished second for the president's cup with a total of 13½ points.

William A. Townsend won the holiday cup with a net score of 75.

These scores were posted for all three cups:

W. A. Townsend, 89, 14—75; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, 102, 15—87; Samuel Townsend, 108, 18—90; J. H. Howell, 110, 15—95; S. St. J. McCuchen, 105, 9—96; Morgan T. Townsend, 91, plus 5—96.

Intermediates Graded.

The Intermediates in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium were graded into classes Monday afternoon, the highest percentage being scored by Horace Vail, with 97 points out of a possible 120. The second and third were Henry Pound, Paul Collier and Harry Gilmore. The last two tied for the place.

MISS RANDOLPH WEDS A CANADIAN

Daughter of L. V. F. Randolph Marries Dr. Charles D. Parfitt at Parents' Home.

BRIDE A SOCIETY GIRL

REV. DR. D. J. YERKES AND REV. DONALD BRUCE MACDONALD OFFICIATE.

Miss Marion Fitz-Randolph Maid-of-Honor—Henry G. Kingstone Best Man—The Guests at the Ceremony.

Miss Caroline Fitz Randolph, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, and Dr. Charles D. Parfitt, of Ontario, were married at noon today at the home of the bride, on East Front street, by Rev. David J. Yerkes, assisted by Rev. Donald Bruce McDonald, of Ontario. The ceremony was performed in the presence of only a few immediate friends and relatives, there being only fifty present.

Miss Randolph was attended by Miss Marion Fitz Randolph as bridesmaid. Henry G. Kingstone, of Ontario, was best man. Miss Josephine and Miss Blossom Randolph discoursed music while the wedding ceremony was being performed.

Dr. Charles D. Parfitt has successfully practiced as a physician in Toronto and more recently has had charge of a large sanitarium at Gravenhurst. He is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Albion Parfitt, of London, Ontario. It was while taking a course of study over a half dozen years ago in connection with his business that he met his destined bride. At that time she was taking a post-graduate course after her education at Wellesley.

The bride is a society girl in this city which has always been her home. Her father is president of the Consolidated Stock Exchange, of New York. She was educated in the schools of this city and has studied in Germany and in Italy. She is an accomplished linquist and musicians, and was, until recently, one of the principals in the Randolph-Cooley Collegiate School.

Late this afternoon Dr. and Mrs. Parfitt will leave for an extended wedding trip through New England and the Canadian Dominion. Among those present at the wedding were Hon. Andrew H. Green, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Mali, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Smith, Major and Mrs. Mason Patrick, Mr. and Mrs. Horace K. Ford, Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Halloway, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Huntsman, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. B. Huntsman, Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, E. F. Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Ashley Grace and Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Patterson.

CIVIL WAR HEROINE BURIED

MRS. EUNICE C. LAURENCE DIED AT THE EVERGREENS.

San Blockade of James River Twice During Civil War—Funeral at Hillside Friday Morning.

Mrs. Eunice C. Laurence, who died at her home, "The Evergreens," on Wednesday, after a severe illness of six weeks, duration, was well-known during the Civil War times for heroic services performed for both Union and Confederate soldiers. During the progress of the war she ran the blockade of the James river in Virginia, twice, coming North and returning with medicine for the sick and wounded soldiers of the South. She resided at Americus, Ga., and was a welcome visitor at Andersonville, attending to the wants of the Northern soldiers, as well as those of the South. She was buried at Hillside Cemetery Friday morning.

MR. ROGERS' FUNERAL.

Rev. George H. Shaw and Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis Officiate at Obsequies.

The funeral of Francis A. Rogers, whose death occurred at his home at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street Wednesday evening, was held Friday afternoon from the Seventh-Day Baptist Church. Rev. George H. Shaw was the officiating clergyman, assisted by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis. The remains were interred in Hillside Cemetery. The bearers were A. C. Rogers, William H. Rogers, T. A. Rogers and F. A. Dunham. "Asleep in Jesus" was rendered by a quartette composed of Mrs. David Titsworth, Miss Nan Randolph, Andrew J. Church and E. E. Runyon, accompanied by Miss Jessie Utter.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS HAVE A BIG TIME

Perseverance Lodge and Crescent Company Entertain Port Chester Lodge.

WORK ORIENT DEGREE

STREET PARADE PRECEDES FINE ENTERTAINMENT IN K. OF P. HALL.

Entertainment and Supper Features of the Affair—The Committee Who Had Charge.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., and Crescent Commandery, Uniform Rank of the same order, entertained Port Chester lodge, of Port Chester, New York, last evening, in their hall on East Second street. It was one of the greatest nights in the history of the local lodge. During the evening a handsomely engrossed set of resolutions was presented to Perseverance lodge by the visitors.

The Port Chester lodge, fifty strong, were met at the North Avenue depot by the Independent Fife and Drum Corps and a parade was held through the principal streets of the town. Upon their return to the lodge rooms fifty members of the visiting lodge and ten members of Perseverance took the Grand Orient degree, that being the main object of the visit of the New York lodge.

A fine supper was served in the hall by Thomas Timbo and afterwards the hosts and guests repaired to the lodge rooms where a pleasing entertainment was provided. Among those who entertained were Elmer Cutting, Joseph Loughead, Tony Lesardi, Robert Stott and William N. Runyon. During the entertainment the presentation was made by Past Chancellor Commander Rockwell, of the Port Chester lodge and was responded to by Past Chancellor William N. Runyon.

The committee in charge of the arrangements was Walter L. Hatfield, chairman; Thomas Muir, Elmer D. Cutting, Asa Pope and William Mattox.

The visiting lodge entertained the Knights of this city last spring.

ALLEN B. LAING INJURED

COVER OF AUTOMOBILE FALLS ON HIS HEAD.

Not Seriously Hurt—The Accident Happened Near His Home.

Allen B. Laing, son of Eugene M. Laing, of Grove street, met with a peculiar accident at his home Thursday, which came near resulting seriously. As it was, Mr. Laing received a severe gash over the eye and had his scalp cut to such an extent that it was necessary for Dr. Zeglio to take several stitches in the wound. He was rendered temporarily unconscious.

Mr. Laing drove his automobile to his home at noon and while waiting for meal time started to look at the machinery in his auto. He loosened the top to the vehicle and thought that it had dropped down but instead it caught half way. He walked around to the rear of the auto and lifted up a cover to expose the machinery. As he did so the top fell with a crash and caught Mr. Laing's head between the cover and the lid to the machinery box.

With great effort Mr. Laing freed himself and went into the house where he lapsed into unconsciousness. A call was sent to Dr. Zeglio's office and it required almost an hour's work to dress the young man's wounds.

WORK ON GAS TANK.

Delay Necessary on Account of Scarcity of Iron.

On account of large orders for pressed steel the work on the new gas receptacle which is being erected on East Fourth street corner of Washington, has been delayed somewhat on account of difficulty in getting the iron for the new tank fast enough.

The contractors, a Philadelphia firm, announced some time ago that the tank would be completed by the first of December but it is now apparent that the new addition will not be ready for use before the first of the year at the earliest. It will be much larger than the present tank when it is completed and already it is almost as large as the old one. It is said that when it is completed it will be one of the largest tanks in this section of the State.

W. C. T. U.'s Profits.

It is believed that the net profits from the "Xraize Xposition," held in the Babcock building under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. will be over $300. A committee meeting will be held in a few days, when the exact amount will be determined.

PETROLEUM IN BURMAH.

Its Use There Long Before the First Well Was Driven in Pennsylvania.

The use of petroleum seems new, but it had been used in Asia for a long time before the first well was driven in Pennsylvania. The following description, published in 1829, is from the account of Crawford's embassy to Ava.

Petroleum wells supply the whole Burmah empire with oil for lamps, and also for smearing timber, to protect it against insects, and particularly the white ants. Its consumption for burning is stated to be universal, until its price reaches that of sesamum oil, the only other kind used for lamps.

The wells, which occupy a space of about 16 square miles, vary in depth from 200 to 250 feet; the shaft is square, not more than four feet each side, and is formed by sinking a frame of wood.

The oil, on coming up, is about the temperature of 90 degrees Fahrenheit. It is thrown into a large cistern, in the bottom of which are small apertures for the aqueous part to drain off, when the oil is left for some time to thicken. It is then put into large earthen jars, placed in rude carts drawn by oxen, and carried to the banks of the river, from whence it is sent by water-carriage to every part of the empire.

By the number and burden of the boats employed in this trade, and the number of voyages they are supposed to make in the course of a year, the exportation from the wells is estimated to amount to 17,568,000 vis, of 2½ pounds each.

TESTS OF THE HUMAN VOICE.

Over the Telephone Wire One Cannot Always Be Certain of the Person at Other End.

Many persons imagine that the human voice is as easily recognizable as the human countenance; they think that they could never be mistaken in the voice of their friends, but in the branch telephone exchange of a big business house the other day an experiment proved that this was not altogether true, says the Philadelphia Record. One of the employes of the house took his place at the exchange, and, as various persons called for various members he guessed who was speaking. Out of ten guesses six were wrong. He erred in the case of his own brother's voice, mistaking it for that of the proprietor. He was sure that he had detected a fellow clerk on account of the pronunciation of coffee—"cawfee"—that he believed to be peculiar to this person, but the event proved that there were others in the building who also pronounced coffee in that odd way. The girl at the exchange said that she never attempted to tell people by their voices, especially over the 'phone. "When you make a mistake it is so embarrassing," she murmured. "A roguish voice says: 'Do you know it is?' You answer: 'Yes, it's Harry.' Thereupon the 'disappointed reply comes: 'No, it is Jack.' That makes you feel small."

INGENIOUS BEGGARS.

Even the Child Mendicants of Italy Are Up to All Sorts of Sly Schemes.

It is hard to beat the beggar game in Italy. A fleet-footed urchin grabbed a girl, and bounded like a chamois over an intervening short cut, heading us off at the next turn. He and his maiden fell into a fox-trot by the side of the carriage, relating a writer in the Argonaut.

"Look, noble gentleman!" he began, "look, beautiful lady! See the little ragazza—the poor girl—have pity on her! See, noble signor—you cannot refuse to give her something—your heart is too good, you are too generous, too noble, too handsome, to refuse. Have pity on her dreadful state, for look—she has one gray eye and one black one!"

We stopped the carriage. It was true. The maiden had indeed parti-colored eyes, in addition to which she rejoiced in a most appalling squint. I gave her one copper.

Hereupon her escort set up a howl at being ignored.

"But why should you have anything?" I asked.

"You ought to give me two coppers," he replied, with a twinkle. "for I have two black eyes, and she has only one."

I was vanquished. I gave him his two coppers. I don't believe in begging, but I think he earned them.

ODD BOOK-SMUGGLING.

Forbidden Work Sent from Paris Into Belgium Without Any Trouble.

Recently a book containing some very uncomplimentary allusions to King Leopold of Belgium was published in Paris, and as a result the publishers were promptly notified that no copies would be allowed to enter Belgium. There were, however, several persons in Brussels and other parts of Belgium who desired to read the book, and in spite of the official notice they managed to get copies of it. The method which they used was very simple.

The books were removed from the original covers in Paris and placed in other covers bearing such titles as "How to Grow Best Root," "Popular Text Book on Horticulture" and "The Farmer's Every Day Book." In this disguise they were passed to the frontier, and the officials, misled by the innocent titles, never dreamed of confiscating them.

LITERARY.

The November Leslie's Monthly is an enlarged and improved magazine, with more pages, more pictures and more stories than ever before. The leading article—and it is one that must attract a great deal of attention—takes up the way in which big corporations influence legislation at Washington, tells how the lobby is managed, and points out what Senators and Representatives are in the service of the trusts and just what trusts they serve. It is a most striking story and one that is only too true. There is also a clear-cut sketch of Charles F. Murphy, the present leader of Tammany Hall, with a full-page portrait. There are seven short stories in this number, including the delightful beginning of a new series of Scotch sketches, by J. J. Bell, the author of Wee Macgregor; another of Marion Hill's stories of children and some more of Judge Steele's "A Few Real Boys." There is a series of six full-page football drawings, by Howard Giles, appropriately called, "Our College Education."

Wayside Tales for November has another pretty landscape for a cover. This one is particularly appropriate to the title of the magazine which is increased in size and improved in contents. Frank H. Spearman has another clever railroad sketch. S. E. Kiser contributes an humorous article on the Sultan of Turkey and a former editor of the Youth's Companion has a South American "Wayside Tale" his month. The magazine is replete with clever jokey light verse and entertaining little sketches, judiciously distributed through the periodical.

McClure's Magazines making a name for itself—doubtless it is doing it unconsciously. But those who have watched it since its inception—now eleven years ago—have seen it grow from a good, readable magazine into a vital, important one, with a ethical significance. Some one has said that as it stands now it is the first attempt at National Journalism. Three great questions of the day—the Corruption in the Trust, Labor and Political Worlds—are being handled in a masterly way, the first by Miss Tarbell in her fearless "History of the Standard Oil Company;" the second, by Ray Stannard Baker; and the third, by Lincoln Steffens, in his series of flaming pictures of cities.

MRS. CAMPBELL BURIED.

Funeral Largely Attended—Three Ministers Officiating.

A large number of relatives and friends gathered yesterday for the funeral of Mrs. Eleanor Amanda Campbell, wife of the late John O. Campbell, who died Wednesday morning. The services were held at Mr. Campbell's late residence, 409 West Front street. Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, of the First M. E. Church, was in charge and he was assisted by Rev. Dr. B. H. Burch, of Kingsbridge, N. Y., and Rev. George H. Whitney, of this city. Rev. James R. Bryan offered prayer, and Miss Florence Bennett sang two hymns The body was taken to Hillside Cemetery for burial. The bearers were John Cory, George R. Vanderhoof, James R. Joy, Nelson A. Miller, Fred Cutter and George M. Rittenhouse.

have their vineyards stocked of the same grape, the only vineyard of the kind in this country, the vines were imported and planted here over forty years ago. The Speer Port wine and Burgundy are now regarded the finest in the world, their rich, full body and high character is unexcelled. Invalids, weakly persons, especially females, and the aged are made strong and vigorous by its use, as a medicinal wine it has no equal; as a family wine it has no superior. First class physicians all over the country, here and in Europe, who have tried them recommend them as the best.

A close study by physicians on the effect of different brands of wines on the system convinces them of the superiority of the Speer Passaic wines for their patients. Sold by Druggists and Grocers.

HYMN SAVED HIS LIFE.

And Many, Many Years Afterward His Fourman Told the Singer All About It.

The power of a song is something wonderful at times. This is well illustrated by a story, and a true one, told not long ago:

Two Americans who were crossing the Atlantic met in the cabin on Sunday night to sing hymns. As they sang the last hymn, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" one of them heard an exceedingly rich and beautiful voice behind him. He looked around, and, although he did not know the face, he thought that he knew the voice. So when the music ceased he turned and asked the man if he had been in the civil war. The man replied that he had been a confederate soldier.

"Were you at such a place on such a night?" asked the first.

"Yes," he replied, "and a curious thing happened that night which this hymn has recalled to my mind. I was posted on sentry duty near the edge of a wood. It was a dark night and very cold, and I was a little frightened because the enemy was supposed to be very near. About midnight, when everything was very still, and I was feeling homesick and miserable and weary, I thought that I would comfort myself by praying and singing a hymn. I remember singing this hymn:

"All my trust on Thee is stayed,
All my help from Thee I bring;
Cover my defenseless head
With the shadow of Thy wing.

"After singing that a strange peace came down upon me, and through the long night I felt no more fear."

"Now," said the other, "listen to my story. I was a union soldier and was in the woods that night with a party of scouts. I saw you standing, although I did not see your face. My men had their rifles focused upon you, waiting the word to fire, but when you sang out:

"Cover my defenseless head
With the shadow of Thy wing,

I said: "Boys, lower your rifles; we will go home."

ANIMALS AT FUNERALS.

Birds, Dogs and Horses Follow Masters to Their Graves, Because of Strange Whims.

Provisions in wills, and the last requests of dying men often account for strange funerals. A funeral in a small eastern city attracted attention recently, although it differed only slightly from the usual kind. On the velvet pall which covered the coffin was a large white handkerchief, on which rested a couple of small bird cages, each with a canary inside.

It was a bright, sunny day, and the attention of all passers-by was attracted towards the gloomy procession. The fact was that of a bird fancier, who, just before his death, had made his wife promise that his two pet canaries should accompany his coffin to the grave. Little bits of crape were tied round their cages. The woodwork had also been stained a dark color, which gave them a peculiar appearance.

The death of a famous dog fancier near Albany, N. Y., was followed by a funeral in which half the attendants belonged to the canine species, each of the human mourners leading by a string some favorite animal of the fancier. The dogs behaved as though they perfectly understood the real nature of the ceremony in which they were assisting.

It is not uncommon for the favorite horse of a military officer to take part in the procession at his master's funeral. This sentiment also finds expression among other classes of society. A cab horse in Sioux City, Ia., followed his former driver to the grave, and in London recently 40 of his horses followed the hearse which contained a teaming contractor. All the animals were draped with black cloth.

I. C. T. CLUB MAKES MERRY AT DANCE

Lads and Lassies Arrayed as Hayseeds Have a Jolly Time as Club's Guests.

LARGE CROWD PRESENT

ROOMS DECORATED WITH WHEAT, HAY, RYE, CORN AND PUMPKINS.

Some Funny Costumes—The Committee Worked Hard—Good Music —Some of Those in Attendance at the Unique Affair.

The Pinebgut Agricultural Society, an organization of farmers held a genuine husking bee in the rooms of the I. C. T. Club, Park avenue, last Thursday. There were large number of farmers in town and they all appeared at the dance in the costumes which they wore to town. The farmers were the guests of the members of the I. C. T. Club and the reception and dance which followed was one of the most successful ever held by that organization.

Decorations of wheat, hay and rye in different parts of the room and large oriental lanterns strung about the ceiling and rafters gave to the room the appearance of a typical hay loft. Charles Suhr and an orchestra of five pieces provided the music for the dancing and each member of the orchestra was attired in jeans with red bandana handkerchiefs conspicuously displayed. Variations of rooster crowing, donkey brays, dog barking and ducks quacking lent a country effect to the music.

All the members of the committee in charge of the arrangements were attired in typical farmer costumes. One of the costumes most representative of a rural citizen was that of V. W. Nash, Jr., who with false beard, and leather boots took his part excellently. Others who took their part well in their unique costumes were Walter L. Hatfield, Jr., George E. Firstbrook, Leonce Texier, Edward Texier, Archibald Hacquer, Harry Blimm, Allen E. Beals, Harry De Mesa, George Apgar, Clarence Bilyeu, William Walters, Matthew D. Sweeney, Bert Banks, Helaire Blatz, Raymond McVoy, Harry Kesselring, Miss Ida Furman, Miss May Squiers, Miss Jeanette Somers, Miss Mamie Brady, Misses Anna and Florence Morrison, Miss Mabel Firstbrook, Miss Ada VanHorne, Miss Alberta Toms, Miss Minnie Myers, Misses Mary and Anna Jahn, Miss Helen Apgar, Miss Mamie Ribrand, Miss Anna Feiring, the Misses Kolohan, of Roselle and Miss Egel, of Elizabeth.

To the committee, composed of Leonce Texier, chairman; Edward Texier, C. H. Bilyeu, Ray McVoy and Bertram Banks, special credit is due for the original ideas in decorating and general arrangements.

FIRE IN A GROCERY STORE

MATCHES PROBABLY RESPONSIBLE FOR BLAZE COSTING $150.

Property Belongs to Frank Neal—Occupied by Smith—Out in Half Hour.

What promised to be a lively and expensive blaze in Smith's grocery store on the corner of West Front street and Central avenue Thursday was averted by the prompt arrival of the firemen. The blaze had a good start and had good stuff to feed on.

It originated among the back shelves which were filled with match boxes. The cause is unknown.

The store was closed for the night a few minutes before 6 o'clock and the flames were noticed about ten minutes later. The alarm was sent in from box 43, at 6:13, and the fire was "all out" half an hour later. The damage was principally to the stock and would amount possibly to $150 or $300. Smoke caused most of the damage, there being little woodwork burned and small damage from water. The building is owned by Frank Neal, of West Front street.

PARISHIONERS OF HOLY CROSS GATHER

Rev. and Mrs. W. Montgomery Downey Tender Reception at Their Home.

PRETTY DECORATIONS

VESTRYMEN'S WIVES ASSIST IN RECEIVING GUESTS.

Reception An Annual Affair—The Vestrymen As Ushers—Rector for Five Years—Some of the Guests Present.

Rev. and Mrs. W. Montgomery Downey tendered a reception at their home on Washington, avenue Thursday, to the members of the Church of the Holy Cross, of which Rev. Mr. Downey is rector. There were a large number of people present and the evening proved to be a most enjoyable one. The reception was held in honor of the reopening of the church edifice, which has been closed on account of repairs and interior improvements for almost two months.

The reception was held between the hours of 8 and 10. It was an informal affair. Rev. and Mrs. Downey were assisted in receiving by the wives of the vestrymen: Mrs. Frank Bowen, Mrs. H. R. Phillips, Mrs. A. E. Faber, Mrs. Murray and Miss Ida Davis. The ushers were the members of the vestry: A. E. Faber, Charles Nichols, H. R. Phillips and Mr. Watson, and Wardens, George Dupee and Dr. J. H. Carman.

Decorations of chrysanthemums and autumn leaves gave to the parlors a cheerful effect. Handsome bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums assisted in carrying out the general color effect of yellow. A luncheon was served in the dining room and there the same general color scheme was carried out. The decorations were most artistic.

The reception was planned by the women of the guild and it was a great success. The women of the church have given an annual reception in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Downey for the past three years. Although the reception last night was in no way a celebration of the event, Mr. Downey has been the rector of the Church of the Holy Cross for five years. Since Rev. Mr. Downey has been rector it has enjoyed a steady growth.

Among the guests present were Rev. E. M. Rodman, rector emeritus of Grace Church; Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace Church, and Rev. W. Bryce Morrow.

RETURNS AS FROM THE GRAVE

JNO. MORRIS REAPPEARS AFTER ELEVEN YEARS ABSENCE.

Dropped Out of Sight One Day and Not Heard From Since—His Explanation.

Eleven years ago, John Morris, at that time employed in a livery stable on North avenue, disappeared from Plainfield as though the earth had swallowed him. His wife and friends in this city made every effort to discover his whereabouts, but to no purpose. Theories of suicide and foul play were aired but with nothing definite upon which to base them. The case remained a mystery to this day.

Thursday the "mystery" was proved no mystery by Morris himself who made a casual trip to Plainfield for the purpose, as he said, of meeting old friends. His story was that he had simply wearied of life in Plainfield and left. He spent several years in Kansas and went from there to Philadelphia where he obtained employment in a large oyster house. He came to this city Thursday to spend the day, returning to Philadelphia in the evening. It is said that he is permanently separated from his wife.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY.

Epworth League and Ladies' Aid Society of First M. E. Church Entertain.

Hallowe'en was celebrated in genuine fashion in Vincent Chapel, last night, under the auspices of the Epworth League and Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. Church. Various forms of amusement helped to make a pleasant time. Miss Snodgrass, Arthur Humble and William Pike impersonated George Washington, Julius Cesaar and Queen Victoria and the audience guessed the characters. Various tricks were played and Miss Clayton delighted all with her fortune telling.

After the entertainment refreshments were served. These persons were in charge: Miss Lizzie Stafford, E. A. Edgar, Mrs. F. W. French, Miss Gillette, Miss Alice Martin, Miss Ida Angleman, J. R. Joy, Miss Edna French, Miss Mary Smith. D. S. Dunevan had charge of the decorations.

Miss Bessie Giles Maid-of-Honor—The Two Ushers — Mrs. Wm. Drake Plays Wedding March —To Reside in Brooklyn.

Miss Elsie Runyon Giles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac R. Giles, of North Plainfield, and William H. Sebring, Jr., son of William H. Sebring, were married Thursday at the home of the bride, 94 Grove street, by Rev. J. Wilbur Richardson, of Stamford, Conn., but formerly pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist Church. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of guests from this city and New York.

The house being decorated for the occasion with autumnal flowers, chrysanthemums, autumn leaves, roses, carnations and smilax predominating. A ribboned aisle was arranged, leading from the library to the parlor, where in the bay window the ceremony took place. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Isaac R. Giles.

The bride wore silk mousseline trimmed with Mexican drawn work and ribbons. A tulle veil was held in place by "a cluster of orange blossoms. She carried lilies of the valley. Miss Bessie Giles, a sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. She wore French mousseline trimmed with Valenciennes lace and embroidered. She carried carnations and smilax. The groom was unattended. His ushers were R. Elwood Sebring, his brother; and Judson R. Giles, brother of the bride. Mrs. William Drake, of Stelton, played the wedding march.

A reception following the ceremony lasted until late in the evening a supper being served. Mr. and Mrs Sebring left for a wedding tour through the South. Upon their return they will reside on Bushwick avenue, Brooklyn, where the groom has resided for several years.

The groom is employed in a lithographing concern in New York. The bride was at one time connected with the choir of the First Baptist Church.

IMPROVING TROLLEY SERVICE

INSPECTORS HERE WATCHING FOR VIOLATION OF COMPANY RULES.

P. S. C. Determined That Employes Shall Live Up to the Language of the Orders.

The inspectors employed by the Public Service Corporation have been kept unusually busy of late in watching the motormen and conductors on the various lines. The men are required to live up to the rules strictly and if they fail they get an order to lay off anywhere from one day to a week or more. A few days ago two conductors were seen entering a saloon while off duty and they were given there days off without pay. Another conductor was seen down in his car barn off duty and he was laid off two days without pay. The company is determined to enforce all rules to the letter for the purpose of increasing the efficiency of the service.

WETUMPKAH INDIANS IN THE VAUDEVILLE

Local Tribe Scores Success Before a Large Audience in the Casino.

"HECTOR" LAUGHABLE

SEVERAL MEMBERS DEPICT THE SAVING OF CAPTAIN SMITH.

Past Great Sachem Peterson Explains the Aims and Principles of the Order—One of Keith's Men on the Programme.

The third anniversary of Wetumpkah Tribe, No. 223, Improved Order of Red Men, was celebrated in right royal fashion Oct. 28, at the Casino by a vaudeville entertainment of the first order. The hall was packed to the doors with the guests of the tribe and even standing room was hard of obtaining.

The one-act farcical absurdity "Hector" was the laughing hit of the evening. It was enacted by a competent cast. A. E. Willard did most commendable work in the part of Frederick Long, the excitable and distracted merchant, keeping the audience happy every minute he was on the stage. Mrs. Ida Willard, as Mrs. Long, was thoroughly at home in the part. The antics of F. M. Slater and M. D. Sweeney pleased and R. V. Stott was a natural pawnbroker. The others in the playlet were W. Emmons, Miss Ethel Reynolds and Master Harold Willard.

Dreier's orchestra opened the evening's programme with an acceptable selection. An Irish song and jig by Master Harold Willard showed that that precocious youngster inherits a considerable aptitude for performing in the glare of the footlights. Mrs. Ida Willard's serpentine fire dance was one of the prettiest and most graceful acts of the entire entertainment.

Joseph Longhead was given the "glad hand" for his clever performance on the banjo and was ably assisted by Fred Finnigan. Robert Vernon Stott made one of the biggest successes in his singing and enacting of "There Is No Room For Me" and the "Butterfly Dude." He was given a hearty encore. Miss Florence Bennett's clear soprano voice was charming as usual and William Jeffery's well known vocal talent found a happy medium of expression in an illustrated song. A clever children's dance by the Misses Rothberg and Rauchstein merited the applause it received. Several members of Wetumpkah tribe gave a vivid picture of the saving of Captain Smith by Pocohontas including an inspired war dance.

D. V. Peterson, Past Great Sachem of the order and a member of the Great Council of the United States, made a ten minute speech in which he explained something of the aims and standing of the Improved Order of Red Men. Herr Astro, ventriloquist, and his two funny men, of New York, and C. D. and Genevea E. Mead, violin and piano performers, of New York, performed capably, and Miss C. J. Mears sang a selection and encore sweetly. One of Keith's performers, "Professor" Eldridge, did some remarkable work in making pictures of colored sands, his rapidity and seasoning being exceptional. Fitzbrook and Downey kept the audience in a good humor by their clever jokes.

The programme in its entirety excited much surprised comment by its excellence. The performers were for the most part from this city. It is doubtful if an audience ever sat through a performance at Keith's Theatre with any keener enjoyment than was afforded the guests of the Red Men last night.

The committee from Wetumpkah Tribe in charge of the celebration consisted of H. R. Humphrey, chairman; M. Leichtentritt, Fred Firstbrook, J. Clark, R. Scott, W. A. Westphal and A. E. Willard. A. E. Willard was dramatic coach and to his professional knowledge in large part can be ascribed the high character of the show. Justice Fred Huff was master of properties, R. E. Humphrey, stage carpenter, William Jeffery, electrician and Harry Dreier, chief usher. A dance followed the entertainment and continued until the early hours of the morning.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 5.—Comment by Rev. S. E. Doyle.

Topic—Great Men of the Bible. What Elijah teaches us—II Kings ii. 1-12; Matt. xi, 14; Jas. v, 17, 18.

Elijah the prophet was a native of Tishbeh, in Gilead. His parentage and early history are unknown, nor have we any systematic account of the life of Elijah such as we have of Joseph, Moses and David. "He bursts upon our view without previous notice and disappears by a miracle." His life and character were noted for their boldness and ruggedness. God used him mightily in the reign of the wicked Ahab and in him has exemplified the sternness of character that should adorn his people in the midst of periods of great moral decline among the people of the world.

1. Elijah's translation (II Kings ii. 1-12). Elijah was one of the two men in the world's history who have passed from this life without tasting death. God translated Enoch and Elijah alone of the world's inhabitants, and Elijah had the further great honor of appearing with Moses upon the mount at the time of the transfiguration of Christ. But while God does not remove His people generally in any miraculous way He does remove from them the sting of death which amounts practically to the same blessing. When we can say with the psalmist, "Yea, though I walk in the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me," we are equally blessed with Elijah. Death, the greatest enemy of mankind, has been overcome by Christ. He burst the bonds of death asunder and gives His people freedom from its fear and dread.

2. Elijah and John the Baptist (Matt. xi. 14). Of John the Baptist Jesus said, "If you will receive it this is Elijah which was for to come." Others in the playlet were W. Emmons, Miss Ethel Reynolds and Master Harold Willard. not Elijah reincarnated, and we find here no support for the reincarnation doctrine or the false claims of such men as Dowie. John resembled Elijah in life and character. His age was similar, morally and spiritually, to that of the prophet, and God used his stern boldness to call His people to repentance. Our own age is not without some tendencies toward the effeminate luxuries and easy morality of those of Elijah and John, and we may do well, therefore, to cultivate the stern qualities that they possessed.

3. Elijah's faith (Jas. v, 17, 18). By faith, through prayer, Elijah controlled the rain for three years and a half. He prayed that it might not rain and it rained not. He prayed for rain and "the heaven gave rain and the earth brought forth her fruit." Yet he was but "a man, subject to like passions as we are." He was nothing, but his faith was strong in God, who is everything. The "prayer of faith" still prevails, for God is "the same yesterday, today and forever." Therefore let us take advantage of the blessings and privileges vouchsafed to us upon the conditions of faith and prayer.

BIBLE READINGS.

I Kings xvii, 1-6; xviii, 20-40; 41-46; xix. 1-21; Ps. xxiii; Matt. vii. 7, 8; xvii. 1-13, 14-21; II Cor. xi, 23-33; Jas. v, 14-16.

A Noted Western Church.

The Central Presbyterian church of Denver was largely used in connection with the recent international Christian Endeavor convention there. It was the big tent, with its seating capacity for 10,000, this was the meeting place most often called into service. The church frequently held audiences of 5,000 people. It is a costly edifice, elaborately furnished and stately as well as churchly in all its details. It was here that Rev. Reginald John Campbell of London preached his notable sermon. The pastor is Rev. Dr. Robert F. Coyle, the man chosen as moderator of the last general assembly of the Presbyterian church.

Good For All Denominations.

If the principles of outspoken devotion to Christ, service for Christ, constant loyalty to Christ's church and constant fellowship with Christ's people are good for the Presbyterians, they are good for the Methodists; if they are useful to the Congregationalists and Disciples of Christ, they are equally good for the Baptists and Lutherans. Because there is nothing of sectarian bias in the name or the principles of Christian Endeavor, it is, I believe, a God ordained common denominator between the denominations.—Rev. Dr. Clark in President's Annual Address at Denver Convention.

Something More Than Machinery.

Don't use up all your energy in running the machine. Christian Endeavor's supreme aim is to gather souls, not to gather statistics.—H. N. Lathrop.

Show Novelty in France.

The French have some variations on "jumping off the cars." The record sensation is the "deathly circle over the lion's cage." The circle is in mort itself, which is no novelty, consists of a circular cycling track, which, while performers ride round it, is slowly raised, the center remaining on the ground. Eventually the cyclists are displayed tearing around what looks like the inner surface of a basin with no bottom. At deadly fair the circle is to rest on a lion's cage. When the track is raised the roof of the wild beasts' house will at the same time slide off. Thus the cyclists will, as usual, be disclosed riding round the side of a basin, but they will be worse off than if the latter were bottomless, for beneath them lions, under the whip of a tamer, will roar and rage, and a slip or the bursting of a tire would mean for the wheelman a fall into the den of wild beasts.—London Mail.

Difficult Plurals.

The difficulty about the plural of words for different kinds of fish is not solved by lexicographers any more than by grammarians. The Oxford dictionary says the word "cod," for example, that the plural is rare, and it gives a quotation from a writer of the seventeenth century in which occur both "codds" and "salmons." During the last few years we have several times been unsatisfactorily in the plural of trout. Dr. Murray quotes from Isaak Walton, "three brace of trouts." And there is, of course, Hood's use, in the "Dream of Eugene Aram," of troutlets —"like pouters in a pool." By the way, Dr. Bain, in his excellent grammar, says that the collective plural, salmon, corresponds to a class of neuter nouns which lost their (nominative) plural inflexion in the oldest English. And then—there is and are "sheep."—London Chronicle.

Treatment of Cramp.

Many persons of both sexes are troubled with cramps in one or both of the legs. It usually comes on suddenly, and while it lasts the pain is acute. Most people jump out of bed—the cramp nearly always comes on just after going to bed or while undressing—and either rub their legs themselves or get some one else to do it for them. There is nothing easier than to overcome the spasms, and the method suggested is as follows: Provide a good strong cord—a long garter will do if nothing else is handy. When the cramp comes on take the cord, wind it round the leg, over the place in which the pain is felt, and take one end in each hand and give it a sharp pull—one that will hurt a little. The cramp will cease instantly, and the sufferer can go to bed assured that it will not come again that night.

Relic of Antiquity.

The famous iron pillar of Delhi, India, rises 22 feet above the ground, and extends to an unknown depth, which a leading archaeologist has reported to be more than 60 feet, the total length being about 70 feet. It tapers from 16.4 inches to 13.5 inches in diameter, the weight being estimated at about 17 tons. It is found to be pure malleable iron, although a curious yellow shade long gave it the reputation of being bronze, but there are no records of early iron-working processes to show how it was welded up. A roughly cut inscription is credited by some authorities to the third or fourth century, while others suppose it to belong to a later period.

Worse Than None.

"But, my dear," protests the husband who has vainly endeavored to explain why he was detained at the office until a late hour, "even if the reasons I advance seem unsatisfactory to you, I remember that they are reasons, just the same."

"But mighty poor reasons, I must say," she sniffs.

"As you please, my angel; but remember that a poor excuse is better than none."

"Well, I call that a very poor excuse for making a poor excuse."—Chicago Tribune.

Cairo is Interesting.

Cairo is one of the world's interesting cities. It has a million people population. While there are no great industries, the people are busy at all kinds of handicraft, and many of them are clever artisans. Cairo has no municipal autonomy, but is managed by the central government. It has electric lights, trolley cars and other improvements of the day, and some exceedingly good hotels.—London News.

Asking Too Much.

Housekeeper—I'll give you a good meal if you'll light the fire in the stove for me.

Weary Willie—All right, lady.

Weary Willie—Here's a hatchet. Just chop some of that wood out there—"

"Oh, see here, lady, I thought it was a gas stove you had! Good-day!"—Philadelphia Press.

Everything But Play.

Bellows—Does your daughter play on the piano?

Old Gruff (in tones of deep disgust)—No, sir. She works on it, pounds on it, rakes it, scrapes it, jumps on it, and rolls over on it; but there's no play about it, sir.—Tit-Bits.

Must Learn to Swim.

All German soldiers must learn to swim. Some of them are so expert that, with their clothes tied on their heads and carrying guns and ammunition, they can swim streams several hundred yards wide.

Neither Had Much Sense.

Mrs. Crabshaw—My first husband had much better sense than you have.

Crabshaw—I don't see why. We were both foolish enough to marry you.—Judge.

They Are Destructive.

In France the phylloxera, a tiny insect with luxurious tastes, cost the vineyard owners $600,000,000 a few years ago, that being the value of the royal feast they had enjoyed.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov 5, "The Power of a Consistent Life"—Text, Neh. v, 9; Rom. xiv, 22.

Labor agitation and industrial reform are not new things in the world.

The need of having the doings and sayings of a Christian correspond closely is not a recent discovery either.

But there are many important principles which it takes a long time to get adopted into common customs of men even after their value is recognized.

"We ought to walk in the fear of God."

"That no man put a stumbling block in his brother's way."

This duty has been for ages clearly recognized as binding on all who would serve God acceptably. Yet to this present time the consistent Christian is not so common as is needful.

The religion of Jesus Christ is more than exact performance of rites. It is actual establishment of rights, the rights of God and man. It is heart worship and reverence for God and justice and helpfulness to men.

Love to God is impossible without love to man. No worship of the divine is of slightest value unless it is joined with regard to man. No sacrifice is acceptable to God that does not undo frauds and wrongs a brother man and offers the gain to God. That worship is most acceptable which makes offering of soul and body to God in the work of making men more godlike.

Nehemiah found things in Jerusalem in sad shape. The poor had no rights which the rich recognized. The laws were ignored or twisted to the profit of the ruling class. Grain and the other necessities of life were cornered as effectually as was ever done in modern days. Land, by which the ancient law could not be permanently alienated from the family possession, was forced from the poor by outrageous rates of interest. The greed of the rich went to the length of obliging the poor to sell themselves or their boys and girls to keep from starvation. The condition of affairs had become unbearable. When matters get into such a condition that life becomes intolerable the history of the past has shown that a change comes in one of two ways—either the mob in blind fury and madness destroys the existing form of society and a new order rises out of the ruins as best it may, but rarely as good as should be, or, if there be wise ones to direct, the cry of the oppressed is heeded, their rights are recognized and wrongs are redressed. A new order emerges from the old without violence and with sanity and the best possible to the times is reached.

The need of all times is sane leadership. Consistent lives are priceless in the world's work. The root of consistency in outer practice lies in constancy in heart to a divine commission. Who ever has heard and heeded the call of God to faith and obedience has entered this right path.. It alone leads to real success in life. Be the sphere high or low in the estimate of social conditions, the worth of the man is gauged by the measure of fidelity to conviction of right. No brilliancy of intellect, no popularity among men, no position of power, political or financial, no command of luxury and leisure, compares in permanent worth with consistent Christian manhood.

Answers to Our Prayers.

I believe that many of our prayers fail to receive answers because there is something wrong in our lives. If we will not confess our sins then we need not pray. If we will not turn from sin God is not going to hear or answer. Some one has said that an unconfessed sin is like a bullet in a man's body. We will never have a healthy body while the bullet is therein. As long as the unconfessed sin is in his soul no man can have a healthy soul. It is a foreign element— does not belong there.—D. L. Moody.

Christian Purity.

Purity is the robe of the child of God; not the purity that has never known a stain, but a purity in spite of which every stain has been taken by the blood of Jesus and the power of the Holy Spirit. It is not possible to have the innocence of childhood, but it is possible to have the purity of saints. Christian purity, like every other grace, comes out of the fires of trial and has a higher beauty because it has been "tried."—Rev. Isaac W. Gowen in Christian Intelligencer.

The Endless Chain Religious.

If there were only one Christian in the world and he worked a year and won a friend for Christ and if those two continued each year to win another and if every man led into the kingdom led another every year, in thirty-one years every person in the world would be won for Christ.—Church Eclectic.

MISS G. S. PANGBORN WEDS

PRETTY BOROUGH GIRL BRIDE OF OSCAR W. ELLIS.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis Officiates at Quiet Ceremony Held at Bride's Home.

Miss Carrie Slater Pangborn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Pangborn, and Oscar W. Ellis, of Alfred, N. Y., were married at the bride's home on Linden avenue October 28, Rev. Dr. Abram H. Lewis, formerly pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, officiated. The wedding was a quiet one. The bride and groom were unattended and only the members of the two families were witnesses to the ceremony. After the marriage Mr. and Mrs. Ellis took a train for New York and today they left for a wedding trip through the upper part of the Empire State where Mr. Ellis's home is. Upon their return they will reside in this city, where the groom is employed in the Potter Press works.

*Miss Pangborn was one of the vic*tims of the Westfield disaster last January. She was thrown from a car window and received injuries which confined her to the house for almost six months.

CROWD AT Y. M. C. A. CONCERT

ASSOCIATION'S ORCHESTRA SCORED A DECIDED HIT.

Miss Florence A. Ackor, As Soloist, Enthusiastically Applauded—The Programme.

A crowded house Thursday listened to the concert of the Young Men's Christian Association orchestra, the ninth since its organization and the first of the present year. The orchestra maintained its reputation for skillful interpretation of difficult selections and the programme was well suited to popular tastes. Martin A. Korff was conductor.

Miss Florence A. Ackor, the soloist, received much applause for her delightful rendering of "The Bird and the Rose" and the "Flight of Ages." She was accompanied by Miss Charlotte Conger. Every selection on the programme was received with evidences of high pleasure on the part of the audience. One of the most difficult on the list was the tone picture of bird life in captivity which, in spite of its range of expression, was most effectively presented by the orchestra. The programme:

Part I — March, "Dixie Girl;" Lampe; overture, "Light Cavalry," Von Suppe; solo by Miss Ackor, "The Bird and the Rose," Horrocks; tone poem, "Sunbeams and Shadows," Keiser; characteristic, "Dance of the Butterflies," Sinteris; concert valse, "Francesca," Blanke.

Part II—Fantasia on modern classics, "Mosaic," opus 421, Tobani; intermesso, "Anona," Greg; solo by Miss Ackor, "Flight of Ages," Bevan; tone picture, "In a Bird Store," Orth; march, "Alagaram," Holzman.

ACCUSED OF PICKING POCKET.

Fred Winter Said to Have Threatened to Hit T. S. Merle.

After charging him with the larceny of $300, Fred Winter, a horse dealer of North Plainfield, went to the home of T. S. Merle, of Rose Market, Thursday night, and it is said, told Merle's wife that he was going to knock her husband over the head with an axe. His actions were so threatening that he alarmed the entire neighborhood and caused a large sized sensation in the village for several hours.

Winter's claim was that Merle had picked his pocket Thursday afternoon to the extent of $900. He said that he had been unwise enough to flourish a roll in Merle's presence in the course of a social chat and that, directly after he had returned it to his pocket, he had missed it.

Yesterday morning both men appeared before Justice Von Minden, of New Market. Merle produced the $300 saying that he had found it after the dispute. Strong testimony was made against him, particularly by Miss Edith Norrey, who said she had seen Merle take it from Winter. The Justice thought her testimony inspired by animus and discharged the prisoner principally for the sake of his wife and children.

To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids into the nasal passages for catarrhal troubles, the proprietors prepare Elys Liquid Cream Balm. CO. K IN 2D. REGT. FIELD DAY EVENTS Soldier Boys Have a Big Time at Elizabeth, Where the Annual Outing Took Place.

GOVERNOR AT REVIEW

FIRST BATTALION, CO. K BEING A PART, IN CHARGE OF MAJOR DURGAN.

Brig.-Gen. Q. O'M. Gilmore and Other State Officials Present—Ball Given at Armory in the Evening—The Programme.

Governor Franklin Murphy and staff reviewed the Second Regiment, N. J. *N. G., at the field day manoeu*vres in Elizabeth and the companies in line, including Company K, of this city, with Captain William B. Martin at its head, acquitted themselves thoroughly in their quickness in executing difficult and intricate evolutions on the field and in the excellence of their line formation. The members of Company K left this city early Wednesday, Oct. 25, and, after parading all day before the Governor and other State and municipal officials attended the ball given in honor of the visiting companies by Companies C and I in the Elizabeth armory last evening.

It was soldiers' day in Elizabeth. Morris avenue and Julian place resembled a typical army encampment. Tents were erected and meals or in army vernacular, hations, were served as in war time, plebes marched back and forth, and everything was done according to the rules laid down for regular army service. Hundreds of citizens watched the soldiers drill the greater part of the afternoon. The music for the drilling was provided by the Second Regiment band, from Trenton. All along the lines of march flags and bunting waved over the soldiers as they marched to the scene of the day's events.

Arriving at McCandless' field the three battalions had a separate drill. The first battalion is composed of Companies C and I, of Elizabeth, and K, of Plainfield; the second battalion is made up of Companies A, B, D and E, all of Trenton. The third battalion consists of Companies F, Freehold; G, Lambertville; H, New Brunswick; L, Princeton.

The first battalion was in command of Major Nelson Y. Dungan, of Somerville; the second under Major George L. Forman, of Trenton, and the third under Major Horace Reading, of Lambertville. The drill occupied more than an hour.

Brigadier-General Q. O'M. Gilmore was present at the drill, accompanied by Assistant Adjutant-General of the Brigade, Fred. Gilkyson, Major, Richard B. Rogers, brigade sergeant, Captain, William H. Hairm; aid-de-camp, and Sergeant Rawley. In the Governor's party were:

Adjutant-General Brientnall, Colonel Franklin Murphy, Jr., Lieutenant-Colonel C. W. Parker, Lieutenant-Colonel L. T. Bryant, Captain A. H. Lackie, Lieutenant W. E. Edge and Lieutenant E. Colby. They were also met by Captain Oliphant and driven to the Elizabeth Club, on East Grand street.

Farm Sold.

The property on Rahway road, owned by R. B. Vail, of Rahway, formerly known as the McNabb property, has been bought by S. F. Babcock, of Brockville Farm.

There's only one hotel in town for all practical purposes and that is the Hotel Kensington.

Begin the week aright by making your purchases of a good baker. John Wirth, West Front street.

If you are thinking about having your house painted or papered give I. R. Wyckoff, of West Front street, an opportunity to figure on this work. He is sure he can please you.

Wm. Hand & Son, of East Second street, have the reputation for being careful in the removal of furniture, pianos and anything that they contract to move. Their prices are reasonable.

MISS COX BECOMES MRS. A. H. WEIGHTMAN

Daughter of the Late Rowland Cox, Bride of Philadelphia Merchant and Club Man.

A MAGNIFICIENT SCENE

BISHOP AND TWO CLERGYMEN OFFICIATE AT NUPTIAL CEREMONY.

Members of the Bridal Party—Description of Gowns—Scenes at the Church and at Home—To Reside in Quaker City.

Miss Fanny Cummins Cox, only daughter of Mrs. Fanny Cummins and the late Rowland Cox, and Aubrey Herbert Weightman, of Philadelphia, were married Saturday afternoon in Grace Church at 5 o'clock in the presence of the relatives of the two families and a few intimate friends. While it was not a large event, it was one of the most brilliant of the autumnal season.

The scene of the wedding was resplendent in decorations, there being a profusion of palms and flowers of the autumnal season. These decorations were arranged chiefly about the chancel and were especially attractive.

While the guests were arriving and being seated at the church, an attractive programme of music was rendered on the organ, with harp accompaniment. This innovation was a pleasing feature of the musical part of the ceremony. In the rendition of the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, as well as the Mendelssohn wedding march and other selections by the choir, the harp music added very much to the impressiveness of the service.

The boy choir entered the church from the choir room and proceeded down the centre aisle singing a hymn. When the front doors of the edifice were reached, the choir turned about and singing the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, preceded the bridal party on its way to the altar. Following were the ushers, the page, matron of honor, bridesmaids and the bride, accompanied by her brother, Archibald Cox, who gave her in marriage. At the chancel the party was met by the officiating clergymen, the groom and his best man.

Rt. Rev. John Scarborough, Bishop of New Jersey, officiated at the marriage and he was assisted by Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector-emeritus, and Rev. R. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace Church. The vested boy choir from Grace Church, New York, also assisted in the service, being in charge of James Helfenstein, choirmaster of that church. The choir sang as processional the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, and the chorus from Mendelssohn as a recessional.

The ushers were Robert H. Cox, of this city, brother of the bride; M. Stevenson Eneby, Howard Wood, Jr., F. VenA. Cabeen, Jr., Galloway C. Morris, Jr., and T. Duncan Whelan, all of Philadelphia. Master William Weightman, 3d., of Philadelphia, was page; Mrs. Lewis E. Waring, of this city, as matron of honor; then the bridesmaids, Miss Ethel H. Weightman and Miss Sydney H. Rogers, cousins of the groom, of Philadelphia; Miss Abby White, of New York; Miss Helen Y. Judson, of Brooklyn; Miss Margretta Wood, of Pittsburg, and Miss Esther Waterman, of Southport, Conn.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's mother on West Seventh street, where best wishes were showered on Mr. and Mrs. Weightman.

The gowns worn by the women of the bridal party were noteworthy. The bride was gowned in white satin, trimmed with point lace, and a tulle veil was held in position by a crown of orange blossoms. She also wore a solitaire diamond necklace, with pendant, the gift of the groom, and her bouquet was of white orchids and lilies-of-the-valley.

The matron of honor's gown was white crepe de chine, trimmed with lace, and she wore a white picture hat and carried Neemith roses. The bridesmaids were gowned similarly in white tulle, with white satin hats, trimmed with white feathers with pink tips. They carried Neemith roses, tied with broad bands of pink ribbon. The page was attired in a suit of black velvet.

In the exchange of gifts among those in the bridal party, were many of value. Besides the diamond necklace given to the bride by the groom, the latter also presented his best man and ushers with star sapphire scarf pins, while the bride gave her matron of honor and bridesmaids gold bracelets set with chrysoprase. The gifts received by the bride comprise a collection of intrinsic value and taste.

In the decorations at the house, where the reception was held, the general effect was unusually pleasing. There favorite chrysanthemum, in its many colors, was used throughout the rooms. The arrangement in the parlor, where the bridal party received was particularly striking. In one corner there was a canopy of pink chrysanthemums, with a pure white background. Beneath this canopy there were fifty small incandescent electric lights, and it was here that the bridal party stood. In the dining room there was a profusion of chrysanthemums and roses and the same decorations were used in the spacious hallway.

Following a wedding trip of three weeks' duration, Mr. and Mrs. Weightman will reside in Philadelphia, where the groom as a member of the firm of Powers & Weightman, is engaged in business as a manufacturing chemist. The bride has been a member of Plainfield's most exclusive society, enjoying the admiration of a large circle of friends. She was born and has always lived in this city. Her father Rowland Cox, who died three years ago, was one of the best known lawyer's in New York. She is a niece of Mrs. Edwards, wife of George Wharton Edwards, the well-known artist.

Mr. Weightman holds a similar position in the society of Philadelphia as does his wife in this city. He is a member of several leading clubs in the Quaker City and commands considerable wealth and influence. Owing to a recent death in the groom's family the wedding was planned as a quiet one, the invitations being limited.

The bridegroom is a grandson of William Weightman, and is one of the richest young men in Philadelphia. Since the death of his mother, about a year ago, he has resided alone at his residence, 1915 Walnut street. Mr. Weightman is a member of the Rittenhouse, Philadelphia Cricket, Country and Merion Cricket Clubs. He is noted for his retiring manner and modest mode of life, which has made him most popular among his large circle of friends.

—James E. Martine was one of the speakers at Monday night's rally of the Democratic Club of Orange.

—The employes of the New Jersey Central are engaged in making improvements to the driveway to the eastbound station leading from Park avenue.

—George Ball is endeavoring to secure from the Union County authorities the usual amount given toward a memorial headstone for deceased soldiers. Joseph Decker, the father of Mrs. Ball, was a soldier in the War of 1813, and is buried at Hazlewood Cemetery, Rahway. No tombstone marks his grave.

—Henry Schmeyer, of North Plainfield, has sold his farm in Martinsville, to John Hoefel, of Newark, for $3,800. Mr. Hoefel, a file cutter, has given up his business in the city to take up farm life. Mr. Schmeyer will still reside in North Plainfield.

—In the Somerset County Orphans' Court at Somerville last week former Judge John D. Bartine was cited to account in the estates of John Stine and Catharine Sophia Stine and the master was laid over until next Friday, when a hearing will be given. The citation was asked for by the executors of the estate of the late H. Newton Spencer, of North Plainfield.

O. F. C. DEFEATS RARITAN

VISITORS ARE EASY MARK FOR PLAINFIELDERS' ONSLAUGHTS.

Score of 26 to 0—First Half a Good Contest—Rolled Up 20 Points In Second Half.

Raritan proved a comparatively easy mark for the Orange Field Club in Saturday's football game at Raritan, losing 26 to 0. The play was fairly even in the first half which ended with a 6 to 0 score in favor of Orange, who won as she pleased in the last half. Features of the game were two long runs by Sherwin in the second half, and a thirty yard run by Emmons, with half a minute left to play. The line-up:

Orange F. C., 26—Emmons, le; W. McCullough, lt; Lake (Smith), lg; Hillier, c; J. McCullough, rg; Day, rt; McVoy, re; Hamilton, qb; Todd, lhb; Sherwin, rhb; Tobin, fb.

Raritan, 0—Crosse, re; Hales, rt; Hoagland, rg; Hendershot, c; Drake, lg; Fallon, lt; Layton, le; Smith, qb; Vosselle (Capt.) rhb; Enright, lhb; Burke, fb.

Touchdowns, Todd, 2; Tobin, Emmons. Safety, Layton. Goals from touchdowns, 4. Referee, Johnson. Umpire, Brokaw. Linesman, Commings, of Rutgers. Time, two 15-min. halves.

BITTER ATTACK ON KIELY

TEMPERANCE SPEAKER CONDEMNS ACTION OF CHIEF OF POLICE.

Says he Increases the Number of Drunks by Alleged Refusal of Temperance Workers Request.

Because Chief of Police P. S. Kiely had refused the Reform Club permission to hold meetings on the streets of the city in the cause of temperance, he was bitterly attacked Sunday by John Edward Brown who led the evening meeting of the Reform Club in Reform Hall. According to Mr. Brown, Chief Kiely had said that there is little or no drunkenness in Plainfield and little or no need for temperance meetings on the streets, and that he would arrest any speakers from the Reform Club who attempted to hold such meetings. Mr. Brown declared that, by this action, the Chief of Police was injuring the cause of temperance and increasing the number of drunks in Plainfield. He waxed sarcastic about the fact that the Mayor and city authorities found it possible to grant permits for patent medicine [and other fakirs to hold forth in the public streets and yet could not see fit to allow temperance workers to hold occasional meetings for their cause.

Electric Light in Bathrooms.

The using of electric light in bathrooms, either public or private, so it is asserted by an English engineer, is dangerous in many cases. Writing to the Government Gazette, he says that "the electric light switches most usually employed have brass covers and brass knobs, and it is quite possible that this metal work may be in unsuspected contact with the electric supply wires. In such a case a person standing on a dry wooden floor, and using the switch, would not notice any defect, but anyone in the act of taking a bath, or standing with bare feet on a wet or metallic floor, and attempting to turn on the light, would receive a very severe shock, which would probably prove fatal even at the comparatively low pressure of 220 volts."

Friend's Fried Onions.

A new tenant in an uptown flathouse was promptly and forcibly remonstrated with when she was found to possess an appetite for fried onions. Later, when she became acquainted with the other tenants and they grew to like her, she furtively mentioned her fondness for the odorous edible and her disappointment because she could never have them at home. "Why, of course, you can have onions here whenever you want them," exclaimed one of the prime movers against the onion frier at the beginning. "But you said you couldn't live in the house with such an odor," returned the other, in astonishment. "Oh, but it's different now," was the answer, in seriousness. "A friend's onions don't smell nearly so disagreeable as a stranger's, you know."—N. Y. Tribune.

A Russian Statesman.

M. De Witte, who now holds the most powerful portfolio in the empire of the czar, is a remarkable example of the self-made man. As was perhaps to be expected of a porter, he made his succession in connection with railways, and rapidly rose until he obtained a post as government director of railways. He became minister of finance some 11 years ago, and since then has grown more and more powerful. A simple and unostentatious man, M. De Witte does not lack impressiveness. He is a big man. He stands six feet one inch in his stockings and his frame is strong-limbed and muscular. His forehead is very high and full and his hair rises from it combed straight back without a parting.

Very Conservative.

Conservatism is believed to be the distinguishing characteristic of Englishmen. A young man of Bermuda, of English descent, now residing in New York city, shows that the belief is well founded. He imports his collars from St. George's Town, on the island where he was born, not because he has any prejudice against American-made goods, nor because he can't get a collar to suit his needs in one of the thousand or more shops where collars are sold here, but simply that he is used to the sort that he imports. "It's the kind I've always had, y' know," he says, by way of explanation.

Japan's Tea "Combine."

When we buy Japan tea in these days we are more than probably buying the product of a trust. But of a trust with a difference. As its organization is described in the news columns the tea combine of Japan has more than a million members. It insists on tea being up to a certain standard and its inspectors, travelling from plantation to plantation, reject the leaves that do not come up to the mark. The association is a monopoly only because practically all growers belong to it.

Reflecting Telescopes.

Recent work with reflecting telescopes indicates that in a good atmosphere the photographs taken by the projected reflecting mirror of the Lick observatory should show us a universe 300 times as great as that revealed by our best refractors. That is, such an instrument should detect stars seven times as far as any that have been yet observed.—Science.

A Mammoth Rug.

A rug has just been made for the lodgeroom of the Knights of Pythias in Hartford, Conn., that is 42 feet six inches long, by 36 feet six inches wide, or, in other words, contains 1,329 square feet, or 149 yards. It is immensely heavy, taking 16 men to handle it. Special poles had to be made for rolling it on.—Chicago Chronicle.

Acquitted.

On the ground that letters patent have no intrinsic value, a woman was acquitted of theft on her trial at Vienna for stealing such a document.

Volcanic Dust and Insects.

The agricultural authorities at Barbadoes have been carrying out investigations to ascertain the effect produced by falls of volcanic dust on insect pests and other parasites of the field. The first examination was made after the fall on October 16 last to study the results. Taken on the whole, the dust appeared to have exercised but little effect, most of the insects having hidden themselves during the actual fall. Observations on the following day showed that the greater number of insects had escaped unharmed. Two-winged flies suffered severely, there being a notable absence of them after the dust. "Cow bees," "wild bees," and other hymenoptera suffered in the same way. Other groups practically escaped, so that the dust had little, if any, effect on the pests. The destruction of two-winged flies, "cow bees," etc., is not regarded as beneficial, as many of these serve to keep caterpillars and other pests in check.

It Was "Extinct."

The teacher of a rudimentary school in Brooklyn took up a primary study of prehistoric animals, and found it somewhat difficult to make her juvenile division understand the meaning of the word "extinct." Finally, however, she saw by the radiant faces that the children grasped the idea, and then, to fasten it upon their minds, she sought for instances: "Can any little girl," she asked, "give me the name of an extinct animal?" A dozen hands popped into the air, and a dozen pairs of eyes beamed with eager intelligence. "I am glad to see such a response," said she. "Florence, you give us an example of an extinct animal." "Canary!" piped Florence, very sweetly and knowingly. "Canary!" exclaimed the teacher. "I am astonished, Florence. Why do you say a canary is an extinct animal?" "Because it flew out of your cage this morning, and the cat extincted it!" was the convincing answer.—Golden Days.

Character and Surgery.

Much interest has lately been aroused in London by two surgical operations which have resulted in a marked change of character in the patients. One was that of a boy of good family who had developed strangely brutal instincts. A clever surgeon examined him with care, located what he considered the seat of the trouble, removed a piece of the skull, and thus relieved the deforming pressure. The lad was restored to his parents a normal, lovable child. The other case was that of a soldier who, after an injury in a skirmish, developed a propensity for theft. An operation on the brain cured him.

Favorite Dishes of Kings.

The German emperor is particularly fond of thrush salad, a kind of stew made of thrushes. Queen Wilhelmina of Holland prefers roast joints, and the king of Spain likes underdone beef. Custards are the favorites of the king of Italy, while cod fried in oil finds favor with the czar of Russia, and mutton is chosen by the president of the French republic. The grandfather of the king of Italy had a peculiar taste for a monarch—he preferred bread and cheese, and used to carry it about with him even to the opera. King Edward has a special liking for well-cooked mutton chops.—N. Y. Sun.

Kissing Law in Servia.

The Servians have a curious custom of giving a parting kiss to their deceased friends before final burial, and the observance of it has caused a serious epidemic of diphtheria. The police prefect of Belgrade has accordingly issued stringent orders against the custom, prohibiting it for the present; however, only in the case of those persons who have died from that malady.—London Tit-Bits.

Germany Past and Present.

In 1871 Germany was a nation of 29,000,000 inhabitants, of whom 60 per cent. were engaged in agricultural pursuits. In 1900 it had increased to an empire of 56,000,000 inhabitants, of whom 35 per cent. were employed in agriculture and 65 per cent.—nearly two-thirds—in industry and trade.

CUSTOMARY BUSINESS BY CITY COUNCIL

New Lights Ordered for Several Places in City and Two New Police Officers Chosen.

CITY OFFICERS REPORT

CORPORATION COUNSEL MARSH ANNOUNCES RESULTS OF LAW CASES.

John Kane and John Kelly Are the New Policemen—C. O. Peterson Recommended as Call Man for Fire Department by Mayor.

Routine business occupied the attention of the City Council Monday evening. All the Councilmen were present excepting Mr. Pray. Reports were read from the city officers; new lights were ordered placed at different parts of the city in response to petitions received from property owners; and two new police officers were placed on the city pay rolls. They were John Kane and John Kelly.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that twenty permits for the erection of buildings were granted during the past month. Corporation Counsel Marsh said that as December 20 was the last day of the year for the collection of taxes in the Martin act, he would advise all the members of the Council to familiarize themselves with the revision of the general tax laws recently approved by the Governor. The action of the Counsel in collecting the taxes on the stock of Everett Smith, piano dealer on North avenue, was approved by the Council. Mr. Marsh also reported that the case of Louis Donavan against the City of Plainfield, recently brought up in the Supreme court, was won by the city and that the costs, $14.66, had not been paid by Donavan. He asked the Council for instructions regarding the collection of the debt. The case of the American Sewerage Disposal Company against the city was reported to be in statu quo. Mr. Marsh also announced to the Council that the new school laws required the appointment of a new Board of School Estimate. Councilmen Tyler and Van Herwerden, who were appointed in January, were reappointed, to serve until January, 1904. President Buckie instructed the Public Service Committee to confer with the Board of Health regarding the garbage inspection. A detailed report will be at the service of all the committeemen.

On account of the resignation of A. I. Littell, as a call man, in the fire department, Charles O. Pearson was recommended as his successor by Mayor Jenkins. The appointment was confirmed. Warrants were ordered drawn for $16,000 in $1,000 bonds, at 5 per cent. $700 of the last year's balance on the Martin act tax collections was ordered paid on the new police cells. Councilman Tyler reported five license applications, one for a peddler's license, three for carting and one for auctioneer's privileges.

After a recess of half an hour, during which time the bills were audited, the Council adjourned.

Mrs. Davis to Rebuild.

A. J. Winkler, of North Plainfield, has been awarded the contract for rebuilding the house on Vine street, which was destroyed by fire two months ago. The house is owned by Mrs. Mary C. Davis, of Long Island. The insurance was recently adjusted and almost twice the amount received will be used in making improvements. It is planned by the owner to thoroughly renovate the place and to remodel it, transforming it into a model residence. At the time of the fire the house was occupied by Peter Markey and family.

Quietly Married.

A quiet wedding Saturday night was that of John Samuel Ashton, of East Sixth street, and Miss Alice Mc Intyre, of Cranford. The ceremony was performed by Justice of the Peace Hesekiah Hand at the groom's home. Mr. Ashton is a machinist at Walter Scott's Press works and is the son of William Ashton.

ALIS NO MATCH FOR BERGEN POINT

Visitors Play All Around the Plainfield Eleven in Contest on Crescent Oval.

TWENTY-TWO—NOTHING

WINNING TEAM OUNWEIGHTED LOCAL AGGREGATION CONSIDERABLY.

Alis Made First Downs Only Twice During Game—First Half Was Ten to Nothing—A Much One-Sided Contest.

In the presence of two hundred spectators, the Bergen Point Field Club eleven, of Bayonne, defeated Alis Saturday afternoon at Crescent Oval, by a score of 22 to 0. The visitors had the locals at their mercy throughout the entire game and advanced the pigskin whenever they wished.

The Field Club gained at will through the Alis center and seldom failed to work their opponent's ends for substantial gains, Alis was helpless the entire game, having the ball in her possession for a few minutes in the second half when she lost it on downs. After almost every play time had to be called to allow some Alis player to recover from injuries.

The locals were outclassed at every stage of the game, the visitors outweighing them ten pounds a man, and in team work far surpassing them. Alis was never on speaking terms with Bergen's goal line.

At the end of the first half the visitors were in the lead, 10 to 7, two touchdowns resulting from good work by Allen, who advanced the ball by steady line plunging from the center of the field. Line up:

CONGREGATIONS GIVE $2,000

REOPENING OF FIRST M. E. CHURCH MARKED BY SPECIAL SERVICE.

Rev. Dr. Snodgrass Preaches—The Amount Subscribed Now Meets Entire Indebtedness.

Yesterday was a day of rejoicing at the First M. E. Church where the members of the church and congregation assembled in the newly-improved edifice for the first time in many weeks. These improvements were greatly admired by all who attended the services yesterday. In the morning the pastor, Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, preached a short sermon, after which subscriptions were received for liquidating the debt incurred by reason of the improvements. About $2,000 was subscribed. This amount together with that subscribed by the women of the church will meet the expense.

In the evening a communion service was held, at which time four new members were received by letter and one on probation. There was special music both morning and evening.

STREET REPAIRING.

Improvements in Grading Started on Several Streets of the City.

Repairs are being made to Woodland avenue, west to Hillside avenue, and west from Watchung avenue to Hillside avenue. That part of the street has been below grade up to the present time and the improvement will greatly add to the attractiveness of the thoroughfare.

C. M. Meeker, who has the contract for repairing streets in this city and laying new top dressing, has started work on Dunellen avenue, between Clinton and Compton avenues, Albert street, South Second street from Plainfield avenue to Muhlenberg place, and on West Seventh street from the present terminus of the macadam pavement to Monroe avenue and the county line.

Church Officers Installed.

Elders F. E. Smith, H. J. Martin, A. L. Force and Deacons C. M. Thrope, E. F. Sheppard and B. E. Force were installed into their offices yesterday morning at Trinity Reformed Church by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, prior to his sermon.

GUNNING SEASON HAS NOW OPENED

The Hunters Are Scouring Wood and Dale in Search of Game.

GAME LAW PENALTIES

SYNOPSIS OF OPEN SEASON AND RULES FOR SPORTSMEN.

Facts Gleaned From the Laws of New Jersey—Local Hunters Report Their Luck—Some of the Prohibitions.

The gunning season opened Tuesday and nimrods were numerous in the woods throughout the State. In this locality it is reported that game is not plentiful. Squirrels are very scarce and rabbits are far from being numerous. Recent forest fires on the Watchung mountains have practically spoiled the hunting in back of Dunellen, where heretofore the rabbits hunting has been exceptionally fine.

There seems to be good hunting in the woods around New Market. Several parties brought back large bags full last night. Adolphus Emery and Charles Christianson, of Watchung avenue, report that rabbit hunting is good in that vicinity. They returned with thirteen cottontails and some squirrels. James Frazee, of East Third street, shot a silver fox near Watchung, and several rabbits. Hunters report that there are far more "No Trespassing" in this locality that ever exsercinced before.

It is explained that the farmers have been obliged to take this means of preventing the hunters from shooting their grounds because of the large number of forest fires. It is said that there is an unusually large number of hunters from New York in the woods this season on account of the report that game would be plentiful.

It will be of interest to all sportsmen to know what is unlawful as regards the hunting of game, and the various liabilities in case of conviction for violation of the laws:

To take or to attempt to take any game except by the use of guns held at arm's length, fine, $20; to have trapped game in possession, fine, $20; to hunt on Sunday, or carry firearms in the fields or woods or on the waters on Sunday, or to hunt for quail, partridge, pheasant, woodcock or rabbits when there is tracking snow on the ground, fine, $20; to permit the erection or maintenance of unlawful contrivances for taking game and fish; applies to owners and tenants of land, fine, $20; to capture, kill, injure or to have in possession insectivorous and certain other birds and to rob birds' nests, fine, $20; to hunt geese, ducks or any water wild fowl, except between one hour before sunrise and one hour after sunset; to hunt any kind of water wild fowl from boats not propelled by oars or paddles, fine, $20; to permit hounds to run at large during the close season for rabbits, fine, $20; to remove quail, grouse, woodcock, squirrel, hare, English and ring-necked pheasants from the State, fine, $20; farmers and fruitgrowers have the right to trap rabbits under certain restrictions; dealers have fifteen days after the close of the season in which to dispose of game.

The open seasons are as follows: Quail, rabbit, partridge, English and ring-necked pheasant and squirrel, November 10 to December 31, inclusive; woodcock, July, October, November and December; gray or Wilson snipe, reed birds, rail-birds, marsh hens or mud hens, October, November and December; not more than thirty rail-birds in one day; plover, August and September; geese, duck and water wild fowl, October 1 to April 30.

To the above may be added the following prohibitions, which, while not the subject of legal enactment, are recognized as binding laws of behavior by all reputable lovers of the pursuits of game and fish:

Never violate the letter or spirit of the game laws. Never take more fish or game than you have convenient use for. Never be insolent or impolite to a landowner who orders you off his premises; for although he may not own the game or fish you are after he has the right to exclusive possession of his property. Never fail to destroy if not or trap when you find one set. Never shoot at a game bird except on the wing. Never kill the last quail in a cover; leave some to breed next year. Never forget that game laws are intended to improve and increase sport, and not to prevent or restrict it.

BISHOPRIC FOR DR. MITCHELL

FORMER PASTOR OF FIRST M.E.CHURCH MENTIONED FOR HIGH OFFICE.

Editor of Chautauqua Magazine Endorses Him in New York Tribune Article.

Rev. Dr. Charles Bayard Mitchell, who was pastor of the First Methodist Church in this city from 1898 to 1902, has been endorsed by the Eastern Ohio conference as a candidate for a bishopric in that State. Rev. Dr. T. L. Flood, editor of the Chautauqua Magazine, has mentioned Dr. Mitchell as a candidate in an article in the New York Tribune of last Saturday.

Friends of Dr. Mitchell in this city will rejoice in his prospective honors. The First M. E. Church in this city, of which he was formerly pastor, was filled Sunday morning when he conducted the services there. His originality in forcefully and convincingly delivering his sermons has won for him many friends here. His sermon here on Sunday was characterised by depth of thought and breadth of knowledge.

In the course of his sermon he made an eloquent plea for more interest in missions which he considers vital to the growth of Christianity.

TOLLES AS COUNCIL'S CHIEF

GENERALLY BELIEVED THAT HE WILL SUCCEED JAMES F. BUCKLE.

President of Body to Be Chosen at Caucus—Many Changes on Committees.

Although no date has as yet been fixed for a Councilmanic caucus, no doubt one will be held within a short time, when the various committees will be decided upon and a new president will be chosen. The general opinion seems to be that Ralph I. Telles will occupy the seat of the president next year. He is at present the oldest member of the Council and is considered to be entitled to the position. During Mr. Telles' service in the Council he has filled many prominent positions on the various committees. This has given him a thorough working knowledge of city affairs and it is believed he is peculiarly well-fitted for the position of president.

As regards the make-up of the various committees little can be told at present. That there will be considerable change is a known fact for there are seven new members to be put on these committees, leaving only five original members to be divided in the make-up. This will be decided upon when the caucus is held early in December, that generally being the time for planning for the coming year's work.

MASONIC PIPE ORGAN.

New Instrument Has Arrived and Will be Placed in Position.

The handsome new pipe organ purchased by the Masonic Hall Association at a cost of $1,600, arrived yesterday from New York and the work of assembling the various parts will be begun at once by expert organ builders, in the association's new home in the Babcock building. The organ will be used probably for the first time next Tuesday night, when Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., will hold a communication. The instrument was made by one of the best known organ manufacturers in New York.

Suburban Building Boom.

A healthy building boom is now being enjoyed at Scotch Plains. George H. Guest is having a cellar excavated for a modern dwelling to be erected at the corner of Hastle and Stout avenues. J. D. Loizeaux, of Plainfield, is securing estimates for the erection of six cottages of moderate cost with city water. It is expected that work will be started on the houses within a short time. This will afford persons an opportunity to secure a home in a desirable locality at little expense.

Non-Suit Granted.

Justice J. E. Mosher yesterday rendered a non-suit in the case on contract between George Leland and Johanna Wearrea. He decided that the plaintiff had sued the wrong party. The case was tried last Friday, decision having been reserved. Wilson G. DeMeza, Esq., represented the plaintiff and L. A. Clement, Esq., the defendant.

Tea for a Bride.

Mrs. George H. Frost, of 745 Watchung avenue, has sent out invitations for a tea to be given in honor of Mrs. G. Harwood Frost on Thursday, November 12, from 4 to 6 o'clock.

JOSEPH E. MORSE'S TALK ON PETROLEUM

Instructive Address Before the Men's Club of the Congregational Church.

ITS DISCOVERY AND USES

METHODS OF RIDDING PETROLEUM OF ITS ODOR AND COLOR DESCRIBED.

W. B. Wadsworth Presides at the Meeting—Committee in Charge of Affair—Refreshments Served and Social Time Enjoyed.

A sketch of the history of the production of oil and a description of many of the methods used in preparing it for use was the theme of an enjoyable talk by Joseph E. Morse, of the Tidewater Oil Company, Tuesday night, before the Men's Club of the Congregational Church. Mr. Morse said that oil was well known to antiquity as indicated by references in the Bible, in the histories of Herodotus, and the Latin works of Lucitas and Pliny. The first real "strike" in oil in this country he said was made in '59 in Titusville, Pa.

The annual output of oil in 1900, said Mr. Morse, amounted to five billion gallons, of which the United States contributed one-half, the greater part of the reminder coming from Russia. In 1902, oil was ranked sixth among the exports of the United States. The wells average 3,000 feet in depth and an enormous pressure is necessary to force the oil to the surface. Mr. Morse showed numerous samples of petroleum at different stages in its preparation and indicated by them the numerous processes of refining oil. He referred to the numerous by-products that are obtained from the production of petroleum.

Some of the processes of refining the oil as described were particularly interesting. The methods of ridding petroleum of its odor and colored awakened special remark. This method consists in the use of an acid, which in its turn is washed away by the forcing of water through the oil.

Mr. Morse's address was followed by an informal discussion of the subject. The meeting was largely attended, and was presided over by the president, W. B. Wadsworth. Several selections were sung by a male quartette. The committee on the entertainment consisted of Joseph E. Morse and Charles B. Morse. H. C. Nomer had charge of refreshments.

ANDERSON TAKES THE OATH

TY CLERK-ELECT OF SOMERSET INSTALLED IN OFFICE.

Bond for $25,000 Filed—Sheriff Calvin D. McMurtry Renews His Bond.

Alexander G. Anderson, who was elected County Clerk of Somerset County over John L. Anderson, his Democratic opponent by 25 majority, took the oath of office yesterday, Judge Scheuck administering it. The new official gave $25,000 bonds and his surety were former Senator L. A. Thompson, W. H. Cawley, former Surrogate W. H. Long and former Sheriff W. H. H. Wyckoff.

Sheriff Calvin D. McMurtry renewed his bond of $20,000 and his bondsmen were former Senator Calvin Corle, Charles L. Voorhees, former Sheriff Selah Schoonmaker and C. A. Speer.

NO TRIAL IN CASE AGAINST SEBRING

Postponement Granted Pending a Probable Settlement of the Whole Trouble.

BIG CROWD IN COURT

LIKELY THAT OWNER WILL MOVE THE BUILDING TO ANOTHER SPOT.

Difficulty Practically at An End*—Structure to be Placed on Vacant Lot in Rear of A. M. Griffen's Residence.

In view of a possible settlement of the case of the Borough of North Plainfield against Charles P. Sebring, for blocking Grove street with an objectionable building, Recorder Dood, Tuesday, granted a postponement of the trial for one week. The case will come up again in the borough court on Tuesday night, November 17, unless amicably settled before that time.

While Mr. Sebring refuses to divulge his plans for the disposal of the house, it is understood that an arrangement will probably be made whereby the objectionable building will be backed in upon the lot off Grove street in the rear of A. M. Griffen's home in Prospect place. The ordinance under which the permit to move the building was granted by Building Inspector Doane, of this city, gives Sebring until November 15 to get the house off the bridge.

If an agreement is made whereby Mr. Sebring is allowed to back the building on the property in question, no further action may be taken by the borough.

The proceedings at the hearing last night were brief. Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed opened the case by reading the complaint whereupon Mr. Sebring, representing himself, Harry Johns and Fred Hammond, who were arrested with Mr. Sebring for violating Section 9 of the borough ordinance, regarding the blockading of streets, plead not guilty. Sebring asked the court for a postponement of the case for a week, pending an amicable settlement.

Anticipating an exciting trial, over a hundred citizens had crowded into the little court room. When it became known that there was to be no trial there was a murmur of disappointment as the spectators slowly filed out.

UNION'S VOTE CANVASED

Total Ballots 18,856, and Only 137 Rejected by County Board of Elections.

The total vote for Union County assemblymen and coroner at the recent election was 18,856. Rejected votes numbered 137. The vote was canvassed yesterday by the County Board of Elections, with these results:

Africa, a Mission Field.

The Forward Movement Club of the Y. M. C. A. discussed "Africa as a Missionary Field" last night in the association rooms. President Cahoone led the meeting. The life of the African explorer, David Livingstone, was studied in detail. A session of prayer in observance of the week of prayer for young men followed.

Miss Giles Entertains.

Miss Bessie Giles entertained a few friends last night informally at her home on Grove street. Games, music and refreshments helped to pass an enjoyable evening.

DEPARTMENT OFFICERS PAY ANNUAL VISIT

Commander and Staff Guests of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R.

SPEECHES AND SONGS

COLLATION SERVED BY THE WOMEN'S RELIEF CORPS.

Captain William C. Smith Presides at Meeting—Guests Present From Newark, Orange, Elizabeth and Perth Amboy.

The annual visitation of the department commander and his staff to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., last Tuesday was marked by pleasing features. Several comrades from Elizabeth, Newark and other nearby places were in attendance. The members of the Woman's Relief Corps were also present and participated in the festivities. Past Deparment Commander W. C. Smith, of Post No. 73, was in charge of the affair.

Following the words of welcome from Mr. Smith, there was a response by Department Commander Stephen M. Long, of Orange, and other remarks were made by Junior Vice Commander George R. Bunten, of Perth Amboy; Assistant Adjutant General L. H. Bridgen, of Newark; Assistant Quartermaster General A. W. Griffing, of Newark; Judge Advocate Walter S. Tully, of Orange; Chief of Staff Joseph Colyer, of Newark; Comrade March, of Newark; Com*rades Hewston and Oakley, of Eliza*beth; Past Department Commander Keefe, of Newark and Past Department Commander Cushman, of Massachussetts. There was also a song by Comrade Keppler, of Orange and in terspersing the speeches there was a song, entitled "Tatters," by Alfred Manley, accompanied by his mother on the piano.

After the evening of song and speech, a collation was served by members of the Woman's Relief Corps and the rest of the time was spent in sociability, during which members of the local Post made short speeches.

Y.M.C.A. WOMEN'S AUXILIARY

MRS. STEPHEN CAHOONE CHOSEN TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.

Another Meeting to be Held at Which Permanent Officers Will be Chosen.

A Woman's Auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. was formed yesterday by a good-sized gathering in the association building. Mrs. Stephen Cahoone, wife of the president of the Y. M. C. A., was elected temporary chairman and Mrs. J. W. Gavett was made secretary pro tem. Regular officers will be elected later. The next meeting of the new organization will be held Monday, November 30 at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. A report on the State conference of Woman's Auxiliaries of the Y. M. C. A., held last week in New Brunswick was made by the delegation in attendance from Plainfield, which included Mrs. Stephen Cahoone, Mrs. J. W. Gavett, Mrs. Henry Gee and Mrs. John M. Lewis.

Warren's Brotherhood Meets.

The Young Men's Brotherhood, of Warren Chapel, met last evening at the home of William Staats in the borough and enjoyed a social time. The quartette, which will sing at the entertainment to given in the near future, rendered several songs and at a late hour refreshments were served. It was decided at the business meeting, which preceded the social hour, that the Brotherhood tennis tournament will be held a week from today on the Chatham street grounds. The mandolin club will meet for practice this evening.

Plainfielder As Coach.

Robert Tilney, of this city, formerly captain of the Leal's School football eleven, was one of the coaches of the Yale freshman team that defeated the Princeton freshman eleven Saturday. Tilney is a sophomore at Yale. The current number of the Yale Alumni Weekly speaks in high terms of his work as coach.

Fifty Years Married.

Mr. and Mrs. David E. Crowell, of Craig place, observed the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding on Monday night at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Garthwaite, in Rahway. The couple were married at Chester, Morris County.

DR. G. M. F. EGEL MARRIED

WESTFIELD DOCTOR WEDDED TO A PHILADELPHIA GIRL.

Ceremony in McDowell Presbyterian Church in Quaker City—The Misses Egel, Bridesmaids.

Miss Laura Alberta Koch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel H. Koch, of Philadelphia, and Dr. Chauncey M. F. Egel, of Westfield, were married last Tuesday at McDowell Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. J. Logan Scott, pastor of the church, was the officiating clergyman.

Mrs. J. N. Mowery, of Yonkers, N. Y., was matron-of-honor, and the Misses Emma E. and Margretta Egel, of Bound Brook, sisters of the groom, were bridesmaids. John S. Egel, of Westfield, brother of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were Dr. R. R. Sinclair, of Westfield; W. H. Brackett, of Cranford; M. H. Myer, of Pottsville, Pa., and J. N. Mowery, of Yonkers, N. Y.

A reception followed the wedding at the home of the bride's parents, *and upon their return from a honey*moon the couple will reside at Westfield.

PERSONNEL OF Y.M.C.A. TEAMS

PLAYERS ON THE FOUR AGGREGATIONS COMPOSING ASSOCIATION LEAGUE.

Games on Friday Nights—Local Five to Meet Passaic Team Twice.

The personnel of the four Y. M. C. A. teams composing the Association Basket Ball League has been announced. The teams will practise Friday night and the games will be played probably the following Friday night. The intention is for each team in the league to meet every other team at least twice, two games to be played on an evening.

The four teams within the association are known by the names of their captains, Percy Hand, Raymond Smith, William Heinecke and William E. Neal. Hand's aggregation has for members in addition to the captain: Long, Gluck, Jacot, Sebring, Sheppard and Carolin; with Smith will play Scull, B. H. Collins, R. G. Collins, Calesn, Schenck and Pruden; Heinecke's helpers are Cahoone, Koons, Mundy, J. A. Utzinger, Woodland and Aalholm; and Neal's team will be picked from Marolay, Case, Bentliff, Scott, Hoagland and Kirch.

A match game has been scheduled between the Y. M. C. A. five and the Passaic Y. M. C. A. for December 21, on the local floor. The return game will be played in Passaic January 27.

NURSES TO MEET.

Second Annual Session of New Jersey State Association to be Held in Trenton.

The second annual meeting of the New Jersey State Nurses' Association will be held in Mercer Hospital, Trenton, Tuesday afternoon, December 4 and nurses from all parts of the State are expected to be present.

The meeting will be opened with prayer by the Rev. W. Strother Jones, chairman of the training school committee, after which the address of welcome will be made by Dr. William Elmer, medical director of Mercer Hospital.

The principal business to be transacted by the association will be the receiving of reports from the secretary, treasurer, and standing committees and the delegates to the federation of women's clubs and the election of officers.

Francis B. Lee will deliver an address on "Legislation."

Protection for "Yellow Dogs."

Wedded Ten Years.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Agger, of East Fourth street, celebrated the tenth anniversary of their marriage on Monday night, when a large number of guests were entertained. During the evening there was a programme of vocal and instrumental music, after which dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

One Drunk—$3.

James Hagan, drunk, was fined $3 by City Judge Runyon this morning. It was a second offense.

ANDREW VANDERBEEK DIED YESTERDAY

A Prominent Citizen Passed Away After a Long Illness From Complications.

AGED SEVENTY-THREE

HIS CAREER IN UNION COUNTY AND PLAINFIELD POLITICS.

Leaves a Wife, But No Children*—No Arrangements Made for the Funeral—Interment to be at North Branch.

Andrew Vanderbeek, one of Plainfield's most respected citizens, died yesterday a. m. at 9 o'clock at his home on West Front street, following a long illness with a complication of troubles. At 6 o'clock this morning, he lapsed into unconsciousness and remained so until he died.

Mr. Vanderbeek was born at Lamington, N. J., seventy-three years ago. His early life was spent on a farm and when a young man he learned the marble cutting trade at Somerville. Early in his career he developed musical talent and for some time he taught singing in a school in the vicinity of North Branch.

After moving to Plainfield about forty years ago he conducted a marble stone yard at the corner of Park and North avenues, where The Daily Press building now stands, and for some time he continued his trade. Afterward he opened a music store at the same place. He was active in temperance affairs and was a prominent member of the Reform Club, during its palmy days. He had charge of the music at all the special meetings.

Mr. Vanderbeek was always a faithful member of the First Baptist Church. Here, too, he was active in the musical part of the services. He served the city faithfully as a member of the Union County Board of Freeholders for several years and afterward was appointed overseer of the poor, which office he filled with efficiency.

In politics Mr. Vanderbeek was a staunch Republican and always worked for the success of his party. He was particularly fond of fishing and hunting, and it was his pleasure every year to make trips to various waters and fields in search of fish and game.

Mr. Vanderbeek is survived by a wife, also two adopted daughters, one being Mrs. John Shotwell and the other one lives in the West. He also leaves a niece, Mrs. Jacob VanArsdale, of South Branch; four nephews, E. C. Vanderbeek and C. E. Vanderbeek, of South Branch; C. L. Vanderbeek, of North Branch, and Andrew M. Vanderbeek, of North Plainfield.

Brief services will be held in the North Branch Church on Saturday at 2 o'clock. Friends may see the remains at his late home on West Front street from 2 until 4 on Friday.

To be Bridesmaid in Chicago.

Miss Lelia Moore Cruikshank, of Belvidere avenue, Netherwood, is to act as one of six bridesmaids at the wedding of Miss Laura Elizabeth Young, daughter of Otto Young, of Chicago, to Samuel K. Martin, of New York on November 17 at Grace Church, Chicago. A reception at the bride's home on Calumet avenue will follow. Miss Cruikshank, with the other bridesmaids, has been the guest of Miss Young for several days.

Democrats to Celebrate.

The Plainfield Democratic Club will give a smoker and reception in celebration of the victory at the polls, in the Democratic headquarters on East Second street, Wednesday night, Nov. 18. It will be the second annual Democratic reception to the party candidates. The programme will be informal. Those in charge are P. J. Seville, Victor Troyce, J. V. R. Dilts, James J. Kane and Andrew J. Nolan.

Adopting New By-Laws.

Crescent Company, No. 13, U. R. K. of P., adopted several sections to its new by-laws at its regular meeting, last night. Plans were made for entertainments during the winter months. The business meeting was followed by a smoker.

Landlord Wins.

In Justice R. P. F. vonMinden's court at New Market, yesterday, judgment was awarded for the plaintiff in the landlord and tenant case of O. M. Hetfield against John Lemore.

—There are now twenty-five patients at Muhlenberg Hospital under treatment. None of the patients is dangerously ill.

Drink Plenty of Water.

A well-known physician says that the girl who has not a clear complexion and wishes one has a simple remedy right at hand if she cares to use it. And it is water, applied not outwardly, but inwardly. That is, not so much outwardly as inwardly. This authority says that the sallow girl should drink two quarts of water between rising and retiring, but not a drop at meals. More than this, the water drank must not be too cold.

Revolvers for Railway Men.

Robbery with personal violence has become so frequent upon the Trans-Caucasus railway that the authorities have decided to equip with revolvers the station masters, the older railway servants, and especially the men charged with safeguarding the line. A special train has been sent from Tiflis to Baku with a supply of revolvers to be served out to the railway staff, together with instructions as to the use of the weapon.

Electricity and Fires.

During the last quarter 30 fires have occurred which were due to electrical causes. In one case the static electricity from the belt ignited benzine vapor, causing a loss of $198,000. No less than nine of the fires resulted from the use of flexible cord conductors, and several others from the melting of open-link fuses. Improperly installed and unprotected lamps in show windows were the cause of several fires.

Anesthetics.

"The use of anaesthetics in surgery," said a physician, "is regarded by the general public as a new thing, but anaesthetics, as a matter of fact, were known and used 2,000 years ago. Pliny tells us about a stone of Memphis that they crushed and mixed with vinegar. This poultice produced a local anaesthesia where it was applied."

Every Luxury Provided.

A dog's tailor exists in Paris. The tailor is a woman and in her reception rooms the dog has rugs, water and even biscuits to refresh him during the trying ordeal. Here are the daintiest water color pattern books to choose from, and anything from sealskin to chamois is provided.

Rusty Stoves.

To polish a rusty stove which has long been neglected is no easy matter. Begin by rubbing it all over with a rag or piece of old newspaper dipped in paraffin. Then add a few drops of turpentine to your blacklead and polish in the usual manner.

Brussels Is Healthier.

Brussels boasts of an astonishing decrease in its mortality rate. The average per day has lately been only one-third of what it used to be, and there were several days in September when there were no funerals at all.

Assurance.

"But why," asked the discontented heir, "why are you so sure that you can break the will?"

"My dear sir," replied the lawyer, smiling patronizingly, "I drew it up."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Rum as Currency.

In the island of Papua, where money is unknown, Java rum is used as the medium of exchange, half a gallon being considered sufficient to pay for a day's fishing or rattan cutting.

Lamp Wicks.

Lamp wicks should be soaked in strong vinegar and then well dried before being used. This precaution will insure a better light and a freedom from smoked lamp chimneys.

Water and Complexion.

Don't use hard water if you value your complexion. The excess of lime in hard water neutralizes the oil in the pores of the skin, and thus he dries the cuticle.

Colors of Uniforms.

Red uniforms present the best marks for the enemy's shot; rifle green comes next, brown third, while Austrian bluish grey is found to be the least fatal.

In St. Petersburg.

Trials of wireless telegraphy at short distances have been carried out by the military telegraph school at the Russian capital, with excellent results.

Her Mood.

In Arctic Regions.

Owing to the clearness of the air, conversation in the Arctic regions can be carried on quite easily by persons two miles apart.

Blindness in Prussia.

Although there has been a diminution in recent years in the number of the blind in Prussia, it is still over 21,000.

Grass Stains.

Grass stains on white material should be dipped in spirits of wine, after which they may be washed out with soap and water.

Odd Unions Made by Cupid

Straw Darts Show the Little Fellow Still Loves to Puzzle People—Clandestine Marriage Betrayed by Wedding Ring—Young Bride Married in Older Sister's Dress—Joke of His Life Played on a Louisville Business Man.

A WEDDING ring carelessly left on the mantel of the house in which she was visiting led to the discovery of the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Mayer, daughter of Mrs. Frank C. Mayer, of East Orange, N. J., to John R. Henry, of Newark. The bride is a Presbyterian and the groom is a Roman Catholic. The wedding took place before a Presbyterian minister, and afterwards the bride went to East Orange to visit a friend.

Then Miss Katherine Mayer, the bride's sister, came to visit at the same house. The first thing she saw was a wedding ring on the mantel.

"Hello, Lizzie," she said to her sister, "who has been married, and leaves her wedding ring about the house?"

"Oh, Kate," exclaimed the bride, "John Henry and I have been married, and I'm afraid to tell mother."

The sympathetic sister consented to break the news and secure pardon for the bride.

The reason for the disappearance of Miss Pansy Mottelier, the daughter of a wealthy Louisville shoe dealer, has been discovered. She was married in July to "Nick" Denunzio, "king" of the newsboys of that city. Her father has made a new will.

After borrowing a long skirt from the sister of the groom-elect, little Miss Virginia Bowling, the 16-year-old daughter of W. T. Bowling, of Lynchburg, Va., eloped and was married to Lewis A. Hoffman, of Charlottesville.

Hoffman went to Lynchburg to meet his sweetheart. She told her parents that she was to visit friends, and left with him for Charlottesville. His mother was ignorant of their intentions, and welcomed the young guest. At three o'clock the next morning she was awakened by her daughter, who told her that her son and Virginia were about to take an early train for Washington to be married.

The mother had the young people before her, and pleaded with them not to take the step, but they were stubborn in their determination.

"Why, child," she said to Virginia, "no minister will marry you. You are still in short skirts."

Miss Virginia became aware for the first time that her skirts lacked several inches of reaching the ground.

"I'll borrow Irene's," she said, and the groom's sister gave her a skirt long enough to suit the conventions, and the two left. Presently there came an anxious telegram from the bride's parents inquiring as to her whereabouts. The mother sent back word that the girl and her son had left on their wedding trip.

President Bourlier, of the Louisville Cornice and Roofing company, awoke the other morning to find the joke of his life had been played on him. When he went to bed the house was dark and quiet. When he reached the breakfast table there sat his son and daughter—also a son-in-law and a daughter-in-law.

Both the new members of the family he knew—but not as relatives.

While he stood in the doorway trying to make himself believe that he saw straight, his son called out:

"It's all right, dad. We're married, that's all."

Father immediately ordered up a few bottles of wine, and said he always had been a lucky man.

It had come about in this way: His daughter, Mrs. Walter Elrod, a widow, had been engaged to Mr. Westley Bailey, a Chicago physician. Emile B. Bourlier, his 21-year-old son, had just become engaged to Miss Lettie Hamlet. The physician was about to leave for Grand Rapids, where he is to establish a practice.

"WHO'S BEEN MARRIED, LIZZIE?"

The four were sitting on the front steps, when some one proposed immediate marriage. An agreement was reached, and the two men gave orders that the family surrey be hitched. Into this they climbed and left in search of two discreet friends. Then they called on a minister, who was a friend of the family, and told him of their desire. Both couples were married at once and then joining hands they heard the minister pronounce the benediction.

Again in the surrey they drove home arriving before the unsuspecting father. He found them at the breakfast table and ordered the wine.

Cupid Has No Respect for Age

Like Death, He Picks His Victims Among Old and Young—Couple Aged 101 and 99 United in Matrimony—Italian Lover Rescues Bride from Authorities—Aged Eloping Couple Caught—Leaves Dance to Be Married.

TWO personages have no respect for age, condition of servitude, past experiences, or anything else. One, of course, is death. Maybe you can guess the other after you have read the following:

The clerk of the bureau of vital statistics in Atlantic City was given the start of his life the other day. Rev. Samuel Tucker, of Rum Point, filed a marriage certificate. There was nothing unusual about that, but wait for the rest of it.

One of the two concerned in the certificate was 101 years of age; the other was 9. For him it was the sixth matrimonial venture; for her it was the fourth.

The husband was Jerry Bozarth, of Tanner's Brook; the bride was Julia Ann Jenkins, who had taken three other husbands, and had been robbed of them by death.

In Pontiac, Mich., there have been locked up for safekeeping two Canadians. One was M. J. Reed, aged 56, a school-teacher, formerly of South Colchester, Essex county, Ont., and the other Elizabeth Gibb, aged 67, of the same place. They were held pending an investigation.

They wanted to elope, and they did. They came across the boundary, and found that the United States authorities wanted to know something about them. It is not known who objected. Possibly it was the parents on account of the youth of the two. Anyway, some one did, and these two people, who might be assumed to have reached an age when they ought to know what they have a right to do, were treated as if they were a school boy and girl. It only shows that the young person who is no respecter of persons gets people of all ages into just about the same trouble.

They met in the shade of the Apennines —not the two above, but the following two. That was eight years ago. They were Giuseppa Salamone, belle of the vale, and Salvatore Basil, a handsome tender of flocks. The other day their romance ended in the United States commissioner's office in Brooklyn, a violin, strategy and Cupid foiling laws and jailers.

The life upon the Apennines was limited, and the young man wanted larger opportunities. He wanted to give his sweetheart more than the simple flowers he could pick in the fields, and so they played the violin together he spoke of another land. One day he said good-by to the girl and as a troth presented his violin to her.

Presently there came a message across the sea telling her to come to him which she did. A disappointment was the first thing she met. In her eyes, glistening with tears of joy, were found the germs of trachoma. Of course, she did not understand what that meant, but she soon came to see that it meant something which would send her back home and prevent her from joining her lover.

The boy found her, hugging his violin to her breast, and about to be taken back to the ship. His movements were rapid, and they had to be. He was back in a short time with some papers which he had her sign. Then he was away again to present to the authorities the document in which Giuseppa agreed, by a properly signed and witnessed paper, to be his wife. Habeas corpus proceedings were instituted and Commissioner Morle produced the bride.

Neither time, place nor circumstance is a great obstacle to Cupid. The truthfulness of this statement is proved by the following:

A justice of the peace in Houston, Tex., was approached the other night by a young man, who asked him if he had a minute to spare. On the justice replying that he had, the young man remarked that he had about made up his mind to get married. The justice said that he was willing if the proper credentials and the young woman could be produced. The young man said he would endeavor to find the girl, if the justice would get the license, and his agreement was reached.

By telephone the justice made arrangements for the license. The young man said the girl was at a dance, he thought. He would make a try and see if he could find her. Evidently, as the justice began to see, he had picked the girl. It was not going to be a case of sudden selection. She was found at the dance. It really was sudden, and she had five dances engaged, but just the same she explained to the young men whom she would have to disappoint, and accompanied the young man. She had known that the wedding would take place in a few days, and it didn't matter much if it were to take place a few hours earlier.

Used Cats for Poker Chips

This Story Tells in a Truthful and Unassuming Way How Pete Snelling Won the Cat Poker Championship of Western New York and How Old Man Booker Went Broke on Two Pair, Queens High.

The strangest poker game ever played in western New York was fought out two weeks ago by Pete Snelling, of Hamlin, N. Y., better known as the "Cat Hermit," and "Old Man" Booker, of Clarkson, likewise a recluse and something of a cat fancier. The two men live about one mile apart, with the town line between them. It was in reality town against town, with cats for chips.

The game grew out of professional jealousy, as each of the players pretended to be the boss hermit in point of years, hard luck and number of cats. Last August Old Man Booker happened to meet Pete at the village store, and among other things declared that when it came to poker he could make Pat Sheehy look foolish.

"I am strong on it," he announced. "I'm husky. I haven't played for years, just because I know there is no one hefty enough to make it interesting."

"If you dig up my past, you'll find I'm quite a cuss with the pasteboards, myself," said Pete.

"Dare you to meet me," cried the old man.

"I'm for that. What shall we play for?" asked Pete.

Old Man Booker scratched his rough chin and thought deeply. Then he had an inspiration.

"How are you fixed for cats?" he asked.

"Got about 50, and 20 kittens," replied Pete.

"All right! let's play for cats," said Booker.

So it was agreed, and two weeks ago the game was pulled off. Booker collected his feline assets and carted them over to Pete's tumble-down farmhouse. Pete had his ships meowing and spitting in an empty room and no time was lost in bringing out a greasy deck of cards, and the game began on a kitten ante and two-cat limit.

On the first hand Pete straddled the ante for one cat, but his boost began to eat up Booker's kittens.

"I'm not going to lose my edge that way," declared Booker. "If you want to fight cats I've got some thoroughbreds in that crate."

A compromise was effected by bringing in two big boxes with stout covers, one for kittens and one for cats. Booker refused to play and Pete pulled down the stakes.

On Booker's deal it went into a jackpot and both put up a kitten, as neither had opened.

"Change a cat for me," requested Pete.

Booker pushed two kittens across the board.

On the next deal Booker opened for two cats and Pete drew cards and boosted the sweeting one kitten. Booker drew five cats. As each called his raise he would grab the limit by the necks and toss them into the pot.

"See here, Snell, I'm out of cats, but I've got a show for my stakes," announced Booker, as he threw in two kittens and went shy a cat.

"Well, Book, we'll show hands now, or sell up the cards until you can raise more cats. It's a shame to take your cats. I wish you'd call me."

"Not by a long chalk, Snell. I'll never lay down on this hand. I'll die first. Give me ten hours to hustle in for more cats and then we'll show up."

This was agreed to and inside of six hours Booker drove up with 20 cats and six kittens. The limit was raised and the whole bunch of furry chips were deposited in the fighting cat-pot, and the cards were unsealed.

Thus, says the New York Sun, did Snelling win the cat-poker championship of western New York and incidentally break Old Man Booker.

Visitors in the neighborhood of North Clark and Chestnut streets, Chicago, at a certain hour, however, will be introduced to a novel and wholly unexpected aspect of cat nature. Any evening about eight o'clock a stately white cat may be seen following a stalwart colored man up Chestnut street from a restaurant on State street.

"Come along, Johnson; come along!" is all the man says, and his faithful companion obeys implicitly. When the master boards a Clark street car for home Johnson stealthily departs and spends the rest of the night after the noisy and unmusical manner of its tribe.

Such Was Father's Punishment for His Child Daughter's Clandestine Marriage.

Because his daughter, who is just 14, dared to be wedded clandestinely to the son of her choice, William Smith, a well-known resident of Columbia, N. J., is charged with chastising her in a way that has found favor with parents for generations. In brief, Mr. Smith is accused of spanking his daughter, to her great humiliation. Her husband, Albert Ellis Cisco, of Nicholson, Pa., promptly had his father-in-law arrested.

The young bride was formerly Margaret Maitida Smith. She was attending the public school in Columbia when she met young Cisco. After a very short acquaintance they went to Washington, N. J., where they were married by a justice of the peace. It was on their return to Columbia that the irate father administered such summary punishment.

Young Mr. Cisco is said to have declared he will push the prosecution against Mr. Smith. The latter has been considering whether he has not a case against Cisco for running off with and wedding his young daughter.

Gin in Her Prayer Book.

A devout lady in a London church was observed to occasionally press her lips to the edge of her prayer-book. One day it dropped to the floor, and a stream of gin issued from the supposed book. The latter was full of it, and the contents served to satisfy the devout lady's craving for alcoholic stimulation.

FIGHT TO THE DEATH.

Woman in California Has Struggle with Wounded Deer Which She Will Never Forget.

While hunting last Saturday Mrs. Tomlinson, of Philo, Cal., had to fight for her life with a wounded deer. The doe was killed by a blow from one of the animal's hoofs, and then it dashed furiously at the woman. She gripped the big antlers and held on, and woman and deer wrestled back and forth in a struggle that could end only in the death of one of them. They battled fiercely for several minutes, and then, weakened by the loss of blood, the deer sank to the ground. Mrs. Tomlinson is a powerful woman, otherwise the contest would not have lasted so long, nor would it have ended as it did.

Mrs. Tomlinson is well known as a hunter. She has to her credit a large string of deer and smaller game. Saturday morning she started on a deer hunt. Her dog raised a fine four-pointer and Mrs. Tomlinson immediately dropped him. As it lay on the ground Mrs. Tomlinson ran up to cut the animal's throat, but at the first prick of the knife it sprang to its feet, full of fight.

After it was over Mrs. Tomlinson, weak from the exertion and torn and bruised from the horns and hoofs of the deer, made her way home. Her husband returned to the spot and secured the body of the deer, and Mrs. Tomlinson is going to have the head mounted as a memento of her fight for life.

SAVED MASTER'S LIFE.

Dog Runs for Aid When a Tree Falls on the Man and Carries Evidence Along.

John Reegan, a Cascade (Pa.) farmer, went out to fell trees. The dog followed him. Reegan cut down a tall oak. It fell and lodged against another tree. Reegan was pinned to the ground.

DOG CARRIED A BOOT.

There was a depression in the earth under Reegan's body, else he would have been killed instantly.

The dog, seeing the predicament of his master, began to bark, supplementing it with attempts to pull his master from under the tree. Finding it useless, he ran toward the house. When he arrived there he sat down in the dooryard and howled.

When the door was opened the dog was seen with one of his master's boots in his mouth. The men saw that something was wrong, and followed the dog, which still carried the boot. When the tree was reached Reegan explained that the dog had, after hard work, succeeded in pulling off the boot and taking it away. Reegan was soon released, little the worse for his queer experience.

Pet Crow Attacks Children.

Several residents of Crookston, Minn., have fed a crow during the summer, and the bird became so tame that the children could feed it from their hands. The little folks have had great sport playing with the bird, and were in the habit of harnessing it with strings. One day, however, when the children started to play with it in the afternoon they had cause for sorrow. The crow darted at them, as if to peck their eyes out, and scared several of the little ones so that they called for help. Several scratches on faces and arms resulted from the attack, and a dead crow is the result.

to a pair of queens and caught a small pair. Pete split a pair of jacks and found a straight.

"Oh, I'll bet a kitten," said Booker.

"See your kitten and raise you two cats," Pete came back.

Booker called and lost.

For the next six hands they simply swapped kittens back and forth without getting any action. Then on a jackpot Booker opened for one cat, holding pat a club straight, nine high.

Pete discarded a queen of hearts and caught the ten of diamonds, which gave him a diamond straight, ten high. Then the cats flew into the box fast and furious.

The boxes began to get a bit crowded and a vacant room was used to accumulate the chips. Both men left their cards on the table and stood by their respective cats. As each called his raise he would grab the limit by the necks and toss them into the pot.

"See here, Snell, I'm out of cats, but I've got a show for my stakes," announced Booker, as he threw in two kittens and went shy a cat.

"Well, Book, we'll show hands now, or sell up the cards until you can raise more cats. It's a shame to take your cats. I wish you'd call me."

"Not by a long chalk, Snell. I'll never lay down on this hand. I'll die first. Give me ten hours to hustle in for more cats and then we'll show up."

This was agreed to and inside of six hours Booker drove up with 20 cats and six kittens. The limit was raised and the whole bunch of furry chips were deposited in the fighting cat-pot, and the cards were unsealed.

Thus, says the New York Sun, did Snelling win the cat-poker championship of western New York and incidentally break Old Man Booker.

INDIAN GIRLS ELOPE.

Leave Government School at Night and Make Their Escape by Canoe and Steamer.

Two pretty quarterbreed Indian girls, 17 and 18 years old, escaped from the government Indian school on Vermilion lake, near Tower, Minn., by a rope from the washroom window, and eloped with their lovers. Thomas Gheen and John Gagnon, aged 21 and 18, respectively, pilots on lake steamers.

The girls remained that night under a rowboat on a point in the lake during one of the most terrific storms of the season, while the fellows returned to Tower to allay suspicion.

After picking up the girls, the fellows took a small steamer and went up Vermilion lake, pursued by Bob Fleetwood, an officer at the school, and an Indian policeman. At a roadhouse half-way across Crane lake portage the quartette were captured, but the girls eluded the officers and escaped to the woods. The hunt was resumed, but the girls could not be found.

Later Gheen and Gagnon rejoined them, and they sought shelter in a landlooker's shanty several days.

Gheen and Gagnon went on up the lake, but Gagnon returned with a third fellow, whose name is unknown. Gheen came back in time to see the quartette board a steamer for Fort Francis, Canada, where they were to be married.

This is the first elopement from the school, and the authorities are greatly chagrined to be outwitted by two girls. The story has been kept secret, the escape having occurred on September 13. Gheen has returned to Tower and resumed his position as a pilot on a steamer.

MILK MADE INTO POWDER.

Recent Invention of Which Swedish Manufacturers Are Preparing to Take Advantage.

As important movement appears to be on foot in Sweden for the conversion of skimmed or separated milk into a dry powder, by means of a machine called an "exsiccator," invented by Dr. Martin Ekenberg. The price of one of these machines to evaporate 528 gallons of milk in ten hours is stated somewhat vaguely to be from £220 to £280, says the London Standard. It was recently reported that ten sets of apparatus were being erected in Swedish dairy factories and that inquiries about the machine from butter makers in Sweden and foreign countries were numerous.

The powder, when dissolved in a proper quantity of water of the right temperature, resumes the appearance and other characteristics of milk. As the annual output of separated and skimmed milk in Sweden is estimated at over 158,000,000 gallons, the supply of the powder from that country alone, if it proves a commercial success, will be very large, and in all other countries where butter is extensively produced the difficulty of finding a profitable use for this product is felt, as the return for it when it is used as food for calves or pigs is small. Although separated milk is almost devoid of fat, its alimentary value is considerable, and, in the form of powder, a large quantity of it can be transported in a small compass. It is stated that the powder will keep good for an indefinitely long period.

SCIENCE AND OLD AGE.

Only One Man in a Million at Present Dies in a Natural Manner.

From 20 to 50 a man should live for himself and his family; from 50 to 100 for science and humanity, and after a hundred for the state. Honored, useful, in full possession of all his faculties at six score years and ten, the grayheard of the approaching future will be among the most enviable of mankind. For the fear of death is an aberration, says Prof. Elie Metchnikoff, in Putnam's Magazine.

The fact is that only one man in a million at present dies a natural death. We should live till 140 years of age. A man who expires at 70 or 80 is the victim of accident, cut off in the flower of his days, and is to be unconsolably resents being deprived of the 50 years or so which nature owes him. Leave him a little longer and in due time he will desire to die, as a child at their desires to sleep. The sandman will panic! And the man drops from us one by one. The child cries for mother's milk; the idea of such an ailment is repugnant to the adult. The desire for sweets, for play, for love and love-making, for long walks and adventures are all accessories that leave their day and pass. And the wish to live is an instinct which fails also with satiety. Only at present none of us live long enough to be satiated with days.

SUFFER FROM PARASITES.

Some of the Afflictions of the Flesh to Which Animals Become Subject.

All animals, both great and small, suffer as severely as mammals in the matter of parasites, according to Leslie's Monthly. The parasite of the os*trich is a formidable looking example.* The most interesting of the pigeon's parasites is the one known as the slender pigeon louse, which is supposed to do much service to the bird by thinning its body plumage as the weather grows hot. Fish also have parasites. The legs of one variety which inhabits the carp and pike are attached to the posterior part of its anatomy, and constitutes paddles by means of which the organism can change its host and depart to pay its attentions to another fish.

Two dark spots in the forepart of the creature represent the first pair of legs, which have been converted into suckers, by means of which the organism retains hold of its host. There is good reason to believe that this "pike louse" is not a parasitic torment, but rather a desired attendant. In all probability it derives its nourishment from the mucous products secreted by the skin of the fish. And when it has satisfactorily arranged the toilet of one fish it abandons it for another which needs its help.

What Stokers Drink.

Down in the holds of the ocean monsters, where scores of men are shoveling coal into the mouths of the im*mense furnaces, it is far hotter* weather than a landsman can find even under the direct rays of the sun. It is so hot down there that the stokers go naked to the waist. Their thirst is intense, and they alleviate it in a simple way. They do not seize upon buckets of ice water and drink for momentary relief. They know better than that. They have had experience with heat, and they adopt the only best method when they take a mouthful of cool water upon which is floating a little oatmeal. They have found that this drink is just what they need.

King's Cleaner Guard.

The English bodyguard of gentlemen at arms, which is the "nearest guard" to his majesty, is limited in numbers, and composed of officers who have seen active service, who are of a certain height and under 50 years of age at the date of appointment. His majesty personally selects the officers who form his English guard, and the appointment is looked upon as a great prize. The gentlemen at arms receive pay.

Very Tall Elephant.

There has recently arrived in Germany the hide of an elephant that was 14 feet nine inches high, this being over three feet above the largest elephant ever known hitherto.

THE WELL DRESSED WOMAN

Some Simple Hints Which Will Prove Valuable to Her.

Chiffon velvet is one of the new inventions of the year in dress material, and it will be much appreciated by those who have suffered from the weight of their velvet gowns.

Mink is much used to border chiffon evening gowns. The bolero of mink which was worn so much last season is finding its rival in moleskin.

Brocade, velvet and satin are to be worn in the evening, and the sleeves of these heavy dresses are usually made of draped lace. This is a marked change from net and thin materials.

The cloth street costumes are plentifully appliqued with designs in a different shade of cloth or silk on velvet.

A costume of dark blue cloth was decorated with folds of deeper blue velvet and pale gray cloth. These were combined to give a banded effect at the bottom of the skirt and the loose hanging jacket.

There are all kinds of delightful specimens in outdoor wraps entirely apart from the ordinary boleros and coats, such as fichu pelerines in fur, plush, velvet and cloth, which are dragged round the shoulders and tie at the back, with a smart little tail as a finish. They are very quaint and charming and at the same time extremely useful, while they present great possibilities to the amateur.

WHAT IS WORN.

Shirred Velvet Toques—Fur Hats. Evening Capes.

Shirred velvet toques are a feature of the fall season. They are made of the new thin chiffon velvet.

A great many of the new turbans are elongated instead of flat, as we have been enjoying them. There seems to be a tendency to make the front brim very deep.

All the expensive hats are models of stitchery and intricacy.

The wide cape worn instead of the evening coat is to be seen this season at smart functions. It is made of fine cream cloth, with long shoulders trimmed with fringe and embroidery.

HAT OF GRAY FELT.

The high hats are not popular, and are only seen occasionally on well dressed women.

Fur hats will either follow the toque shape or that of the French sailor. One of the prettiest seen recently was of sable, the crown being of salmon pink roses, while the brim rolled up in the French sailor shape.

Coarse or rather boldly patterned laces are finding the heartiest favor headed by the fascinating Venetian, an exceptionally effective quality carrying a reminiscence of the one time adored furniture or macrame lace and entitled point d'art. This is in great request for blouses and dressy effects, the distinctive motifs in the pattern being worked with a long stitch in colored flax thread. Thus a red material will have the lace worked red thread, with here and there a touch of black, or a blue and white spotted silk looks well contrasted with blue and a faint rose.

Right royalty are we assisted to the end of elegance by the trimming department. Scarcely a tassel, galloon, chou, embroidery or motif makes its appearance on some fa vored model but knows that the various enterprising trimming manufacturers are prepared to offer it at a popular price.

Milliners predict that we shall soon have again the hat tilted over the face.

CLOTHES FOR BOYS.

Appropriate Winter Costumes For the Little Men.

It is rather pleasant to note that the rameness of very small boys' costumes has been broken up a little, and, curiously enough, the latest fancy is the outcome of a set of funny adventures of a mythical little newspaper chap called Buster Brown. We had little Lord Fauntleroy pictures and book and play and boys dressed in that picturesque but exceedingly well hated fashion. I don't think one single boy who had to wear the velvet suit, with its long sash and wide collar and frilled shirt, ever liked it, but the Buster Brown suit has the hearty indorsement of the children, for the original little fellow is so human and so full of the stuff that boys are made of that they even like the suits and don't torment their mothers half so much for long pants.

This Buster Brown suit is really the easiest to make, to put on and off, and the roomiest and most comfortable of all the things invented for small chaps of from three to seven years old. The trousers are much like those worn a year ago under the name of Russian, but I can remember them even further ago than that, and then they were called knickerbockers. Their principal *point of difference from the usual trou*sers is that they are large at the knees and loose, and the hem has a strong elastic in it, which draws them up to the knee just below it. Thus there is absolute freedom of motion, a great thing for an active boy. When the weather grows cold a warm pair of leggings can be worn, so that the young man can still be comfortable and free.

There is a strong and warm waist under the blouse to which the trousers are fastened by buttons and over this the famous blouse. This may be of any preferred material, but something that will bear much hard usage is manifestly best. The blouse is simplicity itself, being made to pass over the head, without buttons or other opening except a placket-like space for enough room in front to allow the young head to pass through. This closes with a fly, and the opening is entirely hid by the Windsor tie. It has a plain band at the neck. The sleeves are in regulation shirt shape, only the bands are made all in one piece instead of having buttons. Indeed the greatest charm about this pretty suit is that there is so little to fix. The loose belt is fastened at the back and drawn through the slide all ready to buckle. The collar is arranged with the tie attached to it and needs but to be buttoned in front. Think of the comfort to the active boy!

Large, round hats are found everywhere that one can find other boys' things, and this peculiar hat seems to belong to this suit. Any other hat might be as good, but probably a mother would find it difficult to convince her offspring of that fact.

A pretty Russian blouse suit for boys from three to seven years is made in almost the same style as the Buster, only the blouse opens diagonally down the entire front and is trimmed with handsome braid. The trousers are the same, but the sleeves are tucked and stitched into shape. Some of these suits intended for cold days have narrow bands of astrakhan down the front. This gives them a very warm and dressy effect. These blouses always have belts, sometimes of patent and sometimes of yellow leather. Felt hats in a wide brimmed shape are preferred. Cheviot, tweed, cloth and fleece backed stuffs, of which there are many, expressly for children's wear, are all used in these and the Buster suits, and the thick ribbed velutina is also very satisfactory, and so are the rough, woolly fabrics, used for women's wear. Dark blue, brown, Russian green, red and some mixtures are oftenest seen.

For cold days there are now shown the nattiest of reefers and short box coats for the little men and some long ulsters for very bad weather. There are also the knitted sweaters which will be proudly worn under a Buster or Russian suit to keep the active little bodies warm as toast when the boys would declare they did not need an overcoat.

There are pretty Tam golf caps, which seem to be well liked among the boys for every day and school, and probably they would be better liked for dress than any other kind of headgear.

I forgot to mention that the reefer coats and double breasted Russian overcoats for small boys have pockets, lots of them, but not the inner blouse, which seems a big mistake. This is somewhat rectified by the fine long, wide pockets in the knickerbockers. There are four of them, two in front and two at the rear.

HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

DRESS REFORM

It Gains Ground Slowly

At Ostend, Belgium, is held an annual beauty show of women. Prizes are bestowed not only for comeliness of face and grace of figure, but likewise for tastefulness in dress. The illustration here given shows the two young ladies who won first and second prizes. The one with the dark face and the high crowned black hat was No. 1 in the award. She is a Spanish girl named Carmencita Alvarez. The girl with the flat, light hat won the second prize. She is a French woman, Lydia de Bouton. The costumes of the two ladies were especially commended for their artistic beauty. They are, of course, indoor or carriage gowns, not to be worn for walking.

If you notice the two women you will see that neither is pinched in extraor*dinarily at the waist; neither is the* kangaroo back straight front corset figure enabled—rather the reverse.

It does begin to look as if the dress reform idea, so long hammered at by artists, hygienists, preachers and sensible women, were at last making its way. The horrible high peg heels and incisive, trailing skirts are now never seen upon the street on well dressed women. The comfortable walking shoe and the walking length skirt are the thing. It took quite twenty years of agitation ere women awakened to the harm done by fads and garden by the destruction of birds for the adornment of their hats. Then parrots, crows, pheasants and young roosters or whatever they were seemed to disappear suddenly as ornaments for head coverings. Long, beautiful ostrich plumes that may be taken from the bird without destroying its life are the thing. They say that English sparrows' stuffed bodies, dyed any color wanted, will be worn also because sparrows are a nuisance anyhow.

It is curious that in Germany women, in France men, are attacking in woman's costume those twin relics of a semibarbarous age, the viselike corset and the long, filth and poison collecting trailing skirt in the street. A famous French writer, M. Marcel-Prevost, takes a hand in the affair by writing in a leading Paris paper a long article demanding for women in the name of the human race a corset that does not confine lungs, heart, stomach or diaphragm and a skirt that does not sweep the streets. M. Marcel-Prevost's paper intensified a discussion already lively in Paris.

If leading French dressmakers, masculine and feminine, really set themselves to the devising of something that will take the place of the corset *and at the same time not injure a wom*an's body the battle will be won for healthful dress. Whatever anybody continues earnestly to try to do will finally be done.

For our hustling, practical age something midway between the ancient Greek draperies that suggest only re*pose and the long, ugly tight waist of* the middle ages, suggesting the days of woman's utter repression, is needed. So far as we have attained in seeking for a perfect feminine costume nothing seems better for a foundation than the American combination undergarment, all in one piece from shoulder to knees for warm weather, from wrist to ankles for cold.

For hose supporters some ladies wear braces or suspenders of wide braid over the shoulders, confined by a loose band or belt that passes around the body just below the bust and arms. To this are attached the stocking supporters. For the lower limbs in cold weather either equestrian tights or flannel bloomers are worn over the combination underwear. These tights or bloomers may be held around the waist by an elastic band run into a case at the top, and that band is really the only one about the waist. If the bloomers are used, they should be made somewhat narrower around the knees by having little gores cut out at the bottom. This is to keep them from being clumsy.

Some support is needed for the bust. It may be usually secured by means of a boned waist or corset cover, the bones being easily removable for washing. One of the best arrangements is to have a corset cover and petticoat cut princess fashion, all in one piece. Different skirts of this kind may be made for different occasions. If this arrangement is not always desirable, a boned waist, cut long and sloping over the hips, may be worn and the outside petticoat attached to the bottom of this by means of buttons or safety pins, the buttons of a band around the waist being thus avoided.

MARCIA CAMPBELL.

EVENING GOWNS.

Costumes of Chiffon Velvet Are Among the Novelties.

Princess gowns of chiffon velvet are very smart this season. They are made with collarless chiffon yokes tucked and outlined with embroidery and with huge tucked chiffon puffs on the loose hanging embroidered sleeves.

Gowns of chiffon voile are sometimes entirely made of tiny ruffles edged with narrow velvet. The waist is in the shape of a loose hanging blouse, and the sleeves are of the bell shape.

Yokes of heavy lace are very smart made up over chiffon. They have the long shouldered effect and are pieced into full sleeve puffs of the dress mate*rial.*

The full skirt of this material is very smart shirred into three corded effects at the hips and edged with three tiny ruffles at the lower edge.

Chiffon appliques are much used on crepe de chine and velling gowns to outline yokes and to decorate the skirts with panels and irregular bands.

White is still beloved of the tailor and in English homespuns or thick plain cloths is extremely smart wear, especially when adorned with dark furs.

Serges in navy blue, black and brown are always in fashion, and sporting frocks for hard wear are made of tweed mixtures and gray whipcord. For the country heavy makes and rough surfaces are used in preference to the smooth, softly finished cloths, which will be kept for the smarter tailor mades in light colors. Later on we shall trim these faced cloths with narrow fur edgings.

The cut shown is toque of shaded green feathers, having a strap of deeper green velvet. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FURS AND WRAPS.

Short Fur Coats to Be Worn—Three-quarter Loose Coats.

Short fur coats will still be worn, all predictions to the contrary notwithstanding, but they will hang loose from the shoulders after the sack fashion. They will end just at the waist line in the back, and in the front they will be considerably longer, with rounded points. These little coats will be richly lined, with fancy buttons.

Evening coats of the richer sort are so incrusted with lace that the original material almost ceases to appear. The sleeves are as large as possible, being eked out with plaited chiffon and applications.

The Russian blouse style is much seen in sealskin and in Persian lamb. These three-quarter length blouse coats are very becoming to tall girls.

The three-quarter loose coat of moleskin is one of the smartest and most expensive fur garments of the season.

The hats which accompany walking toilets are for the most part of the long turban shape, pointed in front, with a sweeping cock's feather or plume going across the crown and down the back. There is a great deal of white worn both in felt and beaver, the long and short haired makes being equally popular. Cloths, too, are used for hats, and these are charming when adorned with a few small buttons.

Just now burgundy shades, ruby red and glorious purples, black and brown, are the favorite colors for our best reception and carriage frocks, while the best dinner gowns will be composed of chiffon velvet in white, pale, soft green, vieux rose, ciel blue, ruby and black, in nearly every case adorned with sumptuous embroideries and real lace.

The picture shows a costume of crepe de chine trimmed with shirred bands of chiffon. JUDIC CHOLLET.

UP TO DATE STYLES.

Accordion Plaited Waists and Skirts. Panels For Trimming.

Accordion plaited waists and skirts are smarter than ever, and this simple style is particularly effective for young girls.

The kilted short skirt is very becoming to the slight figure. This is put on a tight fitting yoke and is trimmed with three stitched rows at the bottom.

Suede is used as a trimming, particularly on short skirt costumes and fur coats.

Buttons of all degrees and kinds are used in great quantities.

The high pointed collar in stitched linen or batiste is the vogue in Paris. Those who cannot wear such a plain collar use one of transparent gulpure lace with scalloped edges. With tailor made blouses the pique or clerict four-in-hand is always good form.

The plainer the shirt waist the better. When combined with a tailor made walking suit and a tailor made hat it is far more becoming than a pretentious blouse.

Buttons are assuming almost dangerous proportions. It is a pity when a chic fashion reaches an exaggeration, especially in tailor made garments. The introduction of buttons originated in the smart tailoring world. The tiny silver, jet or gold specimens are charming, but when a cheap serge is covered with gilt buttons it has become a vulgar mode, and the best dressed woman will have none of it, although at the same time the button in itself, treated by the master hand, is a charming trimming.

The cut shows a white broadcloth gown trimmed with heavy embroidery and sable. JUDIC CHOLLET.

THE SEASON'S NOVELTIES.

New Muffs Are Fancy—The Low Style of Hairdressing.

Stoles and muffs of white marabout are pretty for evening wear.

The new fur muffs are flatter and quite as large, with a shirred in effect at the top and small holes for the hands.

Squirrel has rather gone out of vogue. It was never a rich looking fur.

Neckwear is becoming more plain so far as cut is concerned, but it is covered by a great deal of fine needlework and embroidery.

Really smart women are wearing their hair coiled at the base of the head, some even low down on the neck.

VELVET TURBAN.

The front is either worn pompadour or parted to suit the face. A side part is affected by many well dressed women.

The long tailed coat seems to have come to stay, so far as tailor made suits are concerned.

Smaller figures are the fashion in vells, but in order to make up for this the mesh is more complicated.

We may safely assume that at last the short skirt has become universal in this country. That is to say, all smart tailors, and indeed our big shops, now give us the walking skirt with the serge or cloth dress of utility. The short skirt has to be well made and cut exactly right. Above all, it must be full and longer in the front than it is behind. The smart tailor made short skirt just clears the ground in front, but is a good two inches off at the back, raised below the waist by a small pad.

The picture shows a scarlet velvet turban in three shades of red.

LONG-LASTING TASTES.

Flavors of Some Things Come Back to One After the Lapse of Many Years.

"It is a curious thing how the flavors of certain things will come back to a man after the lapse of many years," said an observant man, according to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "and often without any sort of an excuse, unless we are to rely upon rather finely spun theories for an excuse. Many years ago I used to eat liver oil. Men who have taken cod liver oil will understand that there is no special reason why one should forget the peculiar flavor of this article. But my experience is not simply a question of memory. I have experienced the physical fact, not once, but a number of times since I quit taking it. Even to-day the taste of cod liver oil came back to me, and it was as fresh on my palate as it was when I last put it there. Now, why is this? Why should I taste cod liver oil years after I quit taking it? I cannot say. I cannot be mistaken when I say I experienced all the physical symptoms of the taste. Were it not for this fact I might account for it on the ground of association. Some fact, or something of other, intimately associated with the fact of taking cod liver oil, might have caused me to remember rather vividly the taste. But things remembered, no matter how vivid the picture, no matter how intimate the associated fact which brings the picture back, are not as fresh as the things of the moment. I taste cod liver oil, feel it on my palate, and, in fact, experiences all the physical unpleasantness of the dose, and I'm sure the fact cannot be accounted for by the theory of the association of ideas. It is up to the doctor."

JUVENILE REASONING.

An Instance of Mature Wisdom Equal to Any Ever Uttered by the Sages.

"Children have their own way of reasoning out things, and often they are direct, forceful and even eloquent," said a man who takes great interest in children, relates the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "and really, I sometimes think children are much keener mentally than grown folk. There is a world of rich, mature wisdom in the little sayings and doings of children, if one will pause in the hurly-burly of the fast life we lead to gather it. At an uptown car line one evening I was very much amused at a little conversation I heard between the mother and two of her offspring who had become involved in a quarrel over marbles. 'Why, dearies,' said the mother, by seemingly 'why' stirring up your brother have some of your marbles to play with?' 'Well, he keeps 'em,' the youngster said, grumblingly; 'he won't give 'em back.' 'Oh, I guess not,' said the fond parent. 'Well, I guesss yes,' the youngster replied, for he swallowed 'em.' There was logic for you in a nutshell, logic without equivocation, eloquent, and convincing. How can you get around reasoning of that sort? You simply can't beat it, and yet it is the kind of wisdom often let fall from the lisping lips of children."

AN OMINOUS SIGN.

One Posted in Government Department Which Should Prove Effective.

There is a new sign hanging out of a door in the great office building. It is a novelty as an official notice put in its place by a formal act of the big department of the government, and in a pedigree book probably would rank as a cross between the "danger" signs that warn people on the streets away from the concrete rollers and the "Look-out for locomotive" signs at railway crossings, reports the Washington Star.

Way down in what might be called the subterranean depths of the building in which a large part of the interior department effects are located, is a room which is lower by several feet than the floor of the corridor with which it connects. The latter was a hybrid idea, perhaps, but it's a condition and not a theory, and the difference between the two floors had to be guarded against.

To save the unwary from taking an involuntary plunge for that distance, with possible hospital results, the department has hitched to the door this flaming placard:

"Look before you leap!"

Story Told by Mesmo.

M. Rambout, an attache of the Elysee palace, the official residence of the president of France, has been collecting menus of state and other dinners for 20 years and now has 8,000. The names of the dishes of state banquets indicate the relations or alliances sought for with other nations; for instance, "A la Russe' figured prominently at the time a Russian alliance was desired. The most recent menus show dishes "a l'Anglaise," indicating the desire of the republic for more friendly relations with England.

Wooden Bowlders.

The most singular forest growth in the world is encountered in the Falkland islands, a dismal region constantly swept by a strong desert wind. What appear to be weather-worn and moss-covered bowlders are scattered about, and when one of these curious objects is seized in an attempt to overturn it, strong roots are found to hold it down, these "bowlders" being, in fact, native trees, which the wind has forced to assume this shape. The wood appears to be a twisted mass of fibers, almost impossible to cut up into fuel.

John Alexander Dowie's father has concluded that his son's mind is unsound. There's no mistake about this, except that it seems perfectly sound so far as money making is concerned.

That father's sword was just sharp enough to slash the Fusion majority into seven million pieces. These little con-fusions can be bought cheap. Some of them look like thirty cents, and are passing at their face value.

The boom for James J. Bergen for a vice chancellorship meets with the approval of the best of Somerset's citizens irrespective of politics. Mr. Bergen possesses the necessary qualifications for a seat on the bench. His loftiness of character and dignified bearing commend him. Somerset County would have reason to feel proud of him.

GEO. DEMLER BURIED.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass Conducted Services and Interment Made in Hillside.

The funeral services of the late George Demler, Sr., were held Monday afternoon from the home of his son, William, Demler at Watchung, where a very large number of friends and relatives, including many of the older residents, gathered. Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. Church, conducted the services and there were several selections by a quartette.

There were many floral tributes from relatives and friends. The interment took place in Hillside Cemetery and the pall-bearers were J. Worth Coddington, Harrison Coddington, William Gordon, George Smith, Daniel Acker and Truman Bilyea.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Perkins, of Rochester, on Election day. Mrs. Perkins is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen A. Olmen, of Watchung avenue.

AMUSEMENTS.

R. C. Goodwin in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" will remain but one more week at Klaw & Erlanger's wonderfully beautiful New Amsterdam Theatre, which was thrown open to the public for the first time last week. The latter is unquestionably the most elaborate production of a Shakespearean piece ever made in the world. The scenery and costumes represent an immense outlay.

"Way Down East," by virtue of the fact that three companies have been playing it continuously for seven years, has had more performances than either "The Old Homestead" or "Monte Cristo." The total number of these performances is about 6,720.

Francis Wilson and his merry band of talented comic opera players have only two weeks more of their very successful engagement in "Erminie" at the Casino to fill. Not within the recollection of the most assiduous theatregoer on Broadway has there been a revival that is more welcome than this sumptuous reproduction of the famous comic opera classic.

One of the hits of the season has been made at the Madison Square, where Jessie Millward is playing "A Clean Slate." The comedy is by R. C. Carlton, author of "Lord and Lady Algy" and is drawing big houses. The Herald's dramatic editor says that as a play it is a clean and bright success. It might very properly be advertised as an all-star production, considering the able support given by clever talent.

James K. Hackett is starring in "John Erminie" at the Manhattan Theatre. The mention of Hackett is sufficient guarantee that the play house is being packed nightly. He is well adopted to the piece and shines at his best. Evenings at 8:15.

"Babes in Toyland" is enjoying a great run at the Majestic Theatre with William Norris and a company of 150. The catchy music is by Victor Herbert. Critics give the "Babes in Toyland" a front seat among the attractions presented this fall.

Much superior to Sherlock Holmes, as a play, is "Raffles the Amateur Cracksman" at the Princess Theatre. Kyrie Bellew takes the leading roll and plays his part in his own characteristic way. It's a good show.

The Manhattan Theatre, New York, has in "John Erminie of the Yellowstone," the new play in which that popular star, James K. Hackett, makes his first appearance at this theatre, one of the most picturesque and pleasing dramas seen in New York this season. Large audiences are enjoying the work of Mr. Hackett and his fine supporting company in this play, which should be seen by every palygoer who visits the metropolis. "John Erminie of the Yellowstone" was written by Louis Even Shipman, from suggestions furnished by the virile and truthful "Sketches of Frontier Life" of that eminent artist of Western characters, Frederic Remington.

The largest and most beautiful flower display ever given in this country is the grand chrysanthemum show of the American Institute of New York City and the Chrysanthemum Society of America now being held at the Herald Square Exhibition Hall, Broadway, 34th and 35th streets, New York. The main feature of the exhibit is the show of chrysanthemums, but beautiful displays are also made of ornamental and flowering plants, orchids, crotons, ferns, palms, roses, carnations, violets and the latest floral novelties. The show will continue through tomorrow from 10 o'clock in the morning to 10 in the evening.

George Ade's comedy, "The County Chairman," will have its first hearing at Wallack's Theatre in New York on Tuesday, Nov. 24. This is not a musical play but a straight comedy and reveals George Ade, hitherto known as a humorist and the writer of libretios for musical plays, in a new light. In "The County Chairman" Mr. Ade has depicted in a wholesome love story, vigorous and original, the types of the Middle Western village.

Hattie Williams, who captivated the theatre-going public in Vivian's Papas, is taking a leading part, and incidentally receiving decidedly favorable comment, in "The Girl From Kay's," at the Herald Square. Sam Bernard is also in the cast. These two stars are proving a drawing card and the Herald Square is enjoying full houses Evenings at 8. Matinee Saturday.

Mrs. W. B. Mazson, of West Fifth street, will leave the latter part of the week for Boston, where she will remain for some time.

The Misses Lizzie Crosby and Mamie Carney, of this city, who spent Sunday with friends in New Brunswick, have returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Clawson, of Bethlehem, N. H., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. James Clawson, of this city. They are on their way to Florida, where they will spend the winter.

DRUNKEN BRAWLS IN SAENGERBUND HALL

Citizens Complain to Borough Council That Place is a Nuisance.

ACTION ON PROTESTS

COUNCILMAN LEE APPOINTED TO INVESTIGATE CONDITION OF AFFAIRS.

Question Right of Gesang and Turn Verein to Allow Others to Sell Liquor in Its Building—Many Disturbances Reported.

Protests to the manner in which Saengerbund Hall is being conducted was received from residents residing on Somerset street in that locality, by the North Plainfield Common Council at its meeting last Friday and it is probable that after the first of the year no intoxicating liquors will be allowed on the premises. In the meantime greater care will be used in granting permits for the use of the hall and the sale of beer, wines and other intoxicating drinks will be restricted to some extent. The time limit was placed at January 1 on account of several permits which have already been granted for balls, entertainments and other affairs between now and December 31.

In speaking for people residing in that locality, Councilman James K. Arnold said that frights and midnight revels were by no means uncommon and that citizens have complained to him that the place was a nuisance and suggested that the number of permits should be restricted and that no intoxicating liquors should be sold.

A lengthy discussion followed the reception of the complaints. It was held that the Gesang and Turn Verein had no right to rent the hall for gain without a permit and that the sale of liquor on the premises made it a disorderly house coming under the jurisdiction of the county court. Mr. Arnold's remarks met with approval.

It was stated that last Friday evening a dance was held in the hall and early in the morning a free fight occurred in the building which aroused the neighborhood.

Councilman Lee, chairman of the police committee, was appointed a committee of one to investigate the charges and to personally visit the hall, which will be given by the Concbman's Association on November 12 He will report back to the Council and further action by that body will depend upon his report. On motion of Mr. Northrup, chairman of the laws and ordinance committee, a resolution was adopted urging the surrender of one of the borough laws, on page 42, regarding affairs of this kind which makes it necessary to pay a license fee besides the granting of a permit to conduct a fair, ball or other assemblage held for profit in that building.

LANDLORD LOSES CASE.

Jury Holds That He Has No Cause of Action Against Tenant.

The suit on contract of Ernestine Cotrelly against John C. Coyle was given a trial in Justice Huff's court last week and a verdict for the defendant returned after an hour's deliberation of the jury. Coyle was the plaintiff's tenant in a Dunellen house and left September 15. The plaintiff claimed that the defendant had leased the house by verbal agreement until May 1, 1904 and sued for rent for the month ending October 15. The defense was that Coyle had never formally leased the property for the time specified and that, although he had agreed to do it, he had actually signed no papers. It was testified that Mrs. Cotrelly had made repairs to the house and entered into negotiations with a prospective lessee and that by so doing she had made invalid her claim upon the defendant. The verdict of the jury was that there was no cause for action. Francis J. Stats, Esq., represented the defendant and Nelson Runyon the plaintiff. The jury consisted of John J. Kenney, foreman; J. C. McCarthy, Harry Werner, Frank Zarro, Harry Thompson and D. Emery.

BOROUGH COUNCIL AT ROUTINE WORK

Street Commissioner Appointed and Communications Referred to Proper Committtees.

MONTHLY STATEMENTS

THREE FIREMEN HAVING SERVED FULL TOR APPLY FOR EXEMPTION.

Councilmen Invited to Free Band Concert Fair—Treasurer's Report—Eleven Arrests During the Month.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley at the Council meeting last Friday appointed John Barry, of the borough, street commissioner, with a salary of $4 a day, be to supply horse and cart. Mr. Barry succeeds John Conover, who has been in position for a year. Other routine business was transacted.

A communication was received from Warren Engine Company notifying that body that J. M. Higgins, La Fayette Rosenstiehl and A. F. Brokaw, members of that company, having served their full time as volunteer firemen, were entitled to the privileges of exempt firemen. This was referred and favorably passed.

A communication was received from Benjamin LaVere, inviting the members of the Common Council to attend the fair which is to be held in Saengerbund Hall during the week of November 16 to 21, to raise funds for a series of band concerts in the borough next summer. The communication was referred.

The reading of reports followed. Borough Tax Collector George F. Brown reported: Tax and interest, 12,122.67; special school tax, $6,478.95; Board of Health, $145.08; Norwood avenue, macadamizing, $1,485.59; Recorder, fines, $14; balance on hand Oct. 1, $3,000.93; total received, $23,348; disbursements, $11,978.29; cash on hand, $369.71.

Councilman Arnold reported that $293.85 was expended for street work. The cost of macadamizing Norwood avenue was $2,000, of which the Hyde estate paid two thirds, which made the cost to the borough $742.94. Councilman Clark, of the fire committee, reported expenditures of $2,197.53. Mr. Lee, chairman of the police committee, reported that there had been eleven arrests during the month and $5 had been received for Recorder fines. Bills amounting to about $14,083 were ordered paid. The meeting then adjourned.

WESTFIELD CLUB DEFEATED

CRANFORD GOLF TEAM WON SECOND SUCCESSIVE MATCH.

Score 12 to 10—Halstead and Worth Only Members of Westfield Team to Score.

The active season at the Westfield Golf Club was concluded Saturday afternoon, with a team match between the home team and one from the Cranford Golf Club. This was a return match, the Cranford having won the first contest. Saturday's match resulted in another victory for Cranford by a score of 12 to 10. C. E. Halsted and J. A. Worth were the only members of the home team to score. The summary:

Cranford—F. Davis, 0; W. Hart, 0; S. Fuller, 4; B. McClellan, 2; R. L. Mix, 2; L. M. Lyon, 4; R. P. Wood, 0. Total, 12.

Westfield—C. E. Halsted, 5; R. I. Townley, 0; E. F. Raynor, 0; R. L. Paret, 0; William M. Townley, 0; A. D. Tuttle, 0; J. A. Worth, 5. Total, 10.

Day of Prayer.

A day of special prayer for young people all over the world will be observed on Tuesday, December 1. Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D., founder of the Christian Endeavor movement, calls upon all the Christian Endeavorers to recognize the day by holding special services, either in the early morning, by means of an afternoon service, or through meetings on the evening of that day.

Choir Witnessed Show.

The choir of St. Mary's Church occupied two boxes Saturday night at the performance by Elitch's of "Over Niagara Falls," in which Walter M. Sherwin, formerly a member of the choir, took a leading part.

Moffett's New House.

Assemblyman-elect Charles L. Moffett and his family have moved from West Front street to their new residence at the corner of Park and Moffett avenues. The new house cost $12,000.

Elizabeth Club to Attend Fair.

The Crescent Field Club, of Elizabeth, will attend the band concert air in the borough on Saturday evening, November 21.

JERSEY'S DELEGATION IN 58TH CONGRESS

Charles N. Fowler to be Reappointed Chairman of Banking Committee.

FEW CHANGES EXPECTED

SOME BETTER ASSIGNMENT FOR SENA TOR JOHN F. DRYDEN.

Probable That Senator Kean Will Remain on Same Committees as Formerly—Those to be Taken Care of at This Session.

Members of the New Jersey delegation share the feeling of uncertainty regarding the committee assignments to be made in the Fifty-eighth congress as the result of the choice of a new speaker. Then the change in the personnel of the New Jersey delegation may affect the committee assignments to some extent, although it is believed the principal places held in the Fifty-seventh congress by the Jersey representatives will be retained this year. There will be one more Republican to take care of, and two more Democrats.

If there is any change in the senate committee assignments it is expected that Senator John F. Dryden will get a better committee than that which he holds at present—Relations with Canada. He is also on the Committee on Enrolled Bills, Library, Immigration and University of the United States. Senator Kean is chairman of the Committee on Geological Survey, and a member of these committees: Foreign Relations, Claims, Territories, Inter-State Commerce and Auditing Contingent Expenses.

As chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency in the Fifty-seventh congress Representative Fowler sought to introduce a bill to regulate the currency. It is expected that he will be reappointed as chairman of this committee. He also served on the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

JUDGE RELEASES SORENSEN

MAN ARRESTED IN NORTH PLAINFIELD GETS OUT OF JAIL.

His Wife Died and He Succeeded in Obtaining His Temporary Freedom.

Christian Sorensen, arrested in North Plainfield by Mayor Smalley several weeks ago on a charge of entering a house, with the supposed intention of stealing, has been released from the New Brunswick jail by Judge Woodbridge Strong, who was touched by the prisoner's plea that his wife had died of a broken heart over his arrest and downfall. Judge Strong is reported as saying that the evidence was not strong enough to hold the fellow and he was released on his own recognizance until today, at which time the case against him will be tried, if he appears.

Sorenson's wife died suddenly in Brooklyn. A telegram was sent to the husband in the Middlesex County jail and he seemed to be greatly effected by grief. His tears touched the hearts of the hardened New Brunswick jailers and that of Former Judge Cowenhoven, Sorensen's counsel, who has volunteered, it is said, to defend him.

On returning from a trip to the Morris Park track he met a young woman on Park row, who flirted with him, and he made her acquaintance. She asked him to visit her at Plainfield and gave her name as Miss Annie Johnson, a Swedish girl, living at No. 109 Sycamore avenue, in this place. Sorensen went there to see her and in trying to find her in the house was taken by the other servants for a burglar. He was arrested and held in jail until the officers from Perth Amboy saw him and said he was connected with a robbery down there.

Sorensen was taken there and recognized by Mrs. Fannie Booth as the man who had stolen her gold watch, worth $50. He was brought to the county jail in New Brunswick a month ago and has been there ever since awaiting trial. He was arraigned last week and the day of the trial fixed for November 12. Sorensen claims he was never in Perth Amboy in his life until the officers took him there, and that on the day the robbery was committed he was in New York and returned with two men from the races.

The only relative Sorensen had in this country was his wife. His mother died two months ago and since he has been in jail his wife has had a hard struggle to get along. He gave her his overcoat some days ago when she visited the jail to pawn so she could get money to buy bread.

Arthur Porzon, of the borough, spent Sunday with friends in Newark.

TO ALVEN BEVERIDGE:—

By virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of New Jersey, made on the day of the date hereof, wherein The Board of Trustees of the Seventh-Day Baptist Memorial Fund is complainant, and you and others are defendants, you are required to plead, demur, answer or demur, to the bill of said complainant on or before the twenty-first day of December next, or the said bill will be taken as confessed against you.

The said bill is filed to foreclose a mortgage given by Ross Woltman and Emil Woltman her husband to the said complainant, dated January 6, 1900, on lands in the City of Plainfield, County of Union, State of New Jersey; that the names of all the defendants in the said cause are as follows: Ross Woltman, Emil Woltman and Alven Beveridge, and that the said Alven Beveridge, are made a party defendant because you are the holder of a second mortgage on said premises, the foreclosure sale of which is prayed for in said bill.

Dated, October 20, 1903.

Respectfully yours,

WILLIAM M. STILLMAN,
Solicitor of Complainant,
212 West Front Street,
Plainfield,

FIRE INTERRUPTS PLAY AT HILLSIDE

Employes of Club Extinguish Flames Before the Arrival of the Fire Department.

CRUIKSHANK'S PLAYING

WEEKLY COMPETITION FOR THE GOLF COMMITTEE CUP THE ONLY EVENT.

C. B. Morgan Finishes Second, H. C. Munger Third and E. B. Shoemaker Fourth—The Scores as Posted.

The only event at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Saturday was the continuation of play for the Golf Committee cup, weekly competition.

While there were a good many players on the course, playing was difficult owing to the high wind which blew almost a hurricane all day. Soon after the afternoon play was started, there was considerable excitement when it was learned that the roof of the clubhouse was in a blaze. Sparks from the chimney, which is used for the burning of a log fire, set fire to the shingles and in a few minutes the flames spread over a considerable space. Marty O'Loughlin and other employes at the club went to work, and before the department, which was sent for, reached the place, the fire was extinguished. The damage was about $200. Chief T. O. Doane continued on his way to the clubhouse and lent some assistance.

The fire interfered somewhat with the afternoon play. However, several made the rounds of the course. S. A. Cruikshank won first honors, with a net score of 76, while C. B. Morgan and H. C. Munger finished second and third respectively.

The scores were posted for the Golf Committee cup:

S. A. Cruikshank, 105, 27—76; C. B. Morgan, 92, 12—80; H. C. Munger, 100, 15—85; E. B. Shoemaker, 108, 20—88; Arthur Murphy, 98, 10—88.

BISHOP WELLS ON MISSIONS

PRELATE OF EPISCOPAL CHURCH PREACHES AT GRACE.

Describes Work in His Diocese and Appeals for Help for the Ranchmen and Miners.

The obligation of eastern churches to support the work of missions in the West was the theme of an interesting and eloquent discourse by the Rt. Rev. Dr. Lemuel W. Wells, bishop of Spokane, from the pulpit of Grace Church Sunday morning. Dr. Wells described his work in Spokane and the cosmopolitan character of the people with whom his work lies. He said that though his people are for the most part rough miners and ranch men, they are readily responsive to Christian influences.

The chief lack, according to the Bishop, is for men and means to do the church work. Home missions, he declared, are more necessary and quite as important as foreign. Of the work in Spokane and throughout the State of Washington, Dr. Wells made encouraging reports, stating that much progress had been made within the last few years, but insisting that much greater progress still is possible if the eastern churches will do their part proportionately to the adding to the facilities for Christian work in the thinly settled West.

FIREMEN ARE NOT EXEMPT

LAW ALLOWING THEM EXEMPTION ON PROPERTY HELD UNCONSTITUTIONAL.

Decision Applies Also to Members of National Guard and to Veterans of Civil War.

The New Jersey Supreme Court at Trenton yesterday rendered, among a number of decisions, an important one bearing on taxation. The court held unconstitutional the law under which firemen receive exemption from taxation on property to the value of $500. The court holds that the constitution does not permit any tax exemptions to persons, so that yesterday's decision applies equally to veterans of the Civil War, their widows and members of the National Guard, who received exemptions. This decision will mean taxation throughout the State of $9,749,000 worth of property now exempt. The court distinguishes in its decision between the exemption of property such as churches and the exemption of individuals. The exemption of a particular class of property, the court holds, is constitutional, but it is not constitutional to exempt individuals where the State has no return to the property they own.

REV. DR. CHAMBLISS ACCEPTS THE CALL

Becomes Pastor of the First Baptist Church, Succeeding Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes.

LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE

FORMER PASTOR MAKES THE ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

Words Spoken by the Pastor-elect Concerning His New Charge—Delegation of Former Congregation Attends Service.

There was an unusually large congregation present at the First Baptist Church Sunday morning, it being previously announced that Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, who recently received a call to the pastorate of the church, would make known his decision. As was expected Dr. Chambliss accepted the call and a most impressive service followed. After the opening part of the services, Oliver B. Leonard, church clerk, read the reply of Dr. Chambliss.

After the reading of the letter, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor-emeritus, said that the announcement of acceptance had cheered his heart greatly. It had been a matter of great and serious anxiety that of securing a pastor for the church and he said that the church felt that somewhere there was some man of God for this people if they had the grace and wisdom to know him.

Continuing Dr. Yerkes said that the church had appointed a wise committee and many possible candidates had been heard in their own pulpits, but no definite conclusion was reached. "It so happened that you were asked to supply this pulpit for a time," said Dr. Yerkes, "and as you preached Sunday after Sunday, all were impressed with you and your work. It was eventually thought wise to call you until a pastor was found; but your work took such a hold of us that all felt that you were the man that we wanted and needed. The action of the parish meeting is but an expression of this unanimous feeling that we want you. We believe that God's hand is in this. Our committee heard men far and near and while they were pursuing their way, God was taking His way and He has sent you to this field.

In behalf of the church I bid you a hearty welcome and greet you as my pastor and may God graciously bless you in this relation of life. And may this church grow. I commend you to this church and congregation."

Dr. Chambliss, who was much affected, found some difficulty in making a ready response. He thanked Dr. Yerkes for the kind words of appreciation, and gave expression to the feeling of comfort he would have through the presence of his honored friend who had served the church for forty years, his life being an open book.

"I am overwhelmed with these words," continued Dr. Chambliss. "This is a situation in which I never expected to find myself again, believing that my pastoral work was done. It seems to be God's leading and I sincerely hope that I know many of you and I hope that the joy of this acquaintance will continue as I grow. I will try to my utmost to serve you faithfully. I feel my own great weakness and I lean upon you unto God believing that it is by God's Spirit that the work will be successful."

Dr. Chambliss then continued the service preaching the morning sermon with much zeal and holding the attention of all closely. The church was attractively decorated with flowers for the occasion, chrysanthemums in many colors and profusion being arranged about the pulpit. After the service, a great many remained to meet the new pastor. Among the congregation was a large delegation from the First Baptist Church, East Orange, where Dr. Chambliss formerly held a pastorate for ten years.

DR. ANDERSON SUSPENDED.

Former Candidate for Coroner Tried for Violating Ordinance.

Dr. Jefferson C. Anderson, the colored candidate for coroner who was sacrificed at the recent election, appeared before City Judge Runyon this morning to explain why he had violated the city ordinance with reference to riding bicycles on the sidewalks. The doctor said his only excuse was that he had been in a hurry. In so much of a hurry in fact that he had run into and almost knocked down Roundsman Mattox. His failure to report at court yesterday morning at 9 o'clock as ordered by Roundsman Mattox, the doctor said, was due to the fact that 9 o'clock is his busy hour. The Judge thought the arrest was sufficient punishment and suspended sentence.

NEITHER TEAM ABLE TO MAKE TOUCHDOWN

Alis and Has-Beens Fail to Cross Each Other's Goal Line on the Oval.

TWO PLAYERS INJURED

PHILLIPS AND WILSON SLIGHTLY HURT IN FIERCE GAME OF BALL.

Leather Once Within Short Distance of Alis' Goal—Some Very Clever Plays—The Lineups of the Two Teams.

A good article of football was witnessed by a fair sized crowd on Crescent Oval Saturday afternoon, when the Alis eleven played two fifteen minutes halves with the Has Beens, a team composed of old time players who live in this city, neither side scoring.

Dupee, a former Yale player, kicked off to Alis' goal line. Waltman caught the ball and was downed in his tracks. By steady gains the Alis boys reached the Has Beens' thirty-yard line where Whitney fumbled. The Has Beens rushed the ball back to the Alis twenty-yard line. Then both teams showed good team work, and when the whistle blew for the ending of the first half it was within one yard of Alis's goal line. No score.

Both teams fought like tigers in the second half and the ball was zigzagged up and down the field. Neither aggregation was able to score. Wilson, right tackle for Alis, had his ankle turned and was rep'aced by Koons. Phillips had his shoulder hurt in a mixup in the first half and Radford was filling his position. Dupee made good gains through center. The end runs made by Serrell and the tackling of Emmons and Cathcart, were features of the game. The line up:

Alis.		Has Beens.
Cathcart	re	Peck
Wilson	rt	Hall
Egan	rg	Burt
Quinn	c	Cathcart
Koons, Smith	lg	Milne
Pike	lt	Macyne

The trusts have been in all far worse sinners than the unions. The trusts expanded inordinately in both capital and the demand for labor. Both have collapsed. The Harvester Combine is about to discharge five thousand men, and the Acme Harvester Company, one of the biggest in the country, has failed. The Lake Superior ore mines are cutting down labor one-half. The Steel Trust continues retrenchment. Freight shrinking, the Pennsylvania Railroad shuts down $10,000,000 of improvement. By January, any one will be able to run over a list of side-tracked railroad betterments which will tally a round $100,000,000.—Collier's Weekly.

FIREMAN PUNISHED BY COMMON COUNCIL

Fire Committee Imposed Fine Upon Fireman for Carelessness in Driving.

MUCH TESTIMONY GIVEN

WAGON DAMAGED AND MEN HURT BY ACCIDENT.

Assistant Chief and Others Were Witnesses—Four Hours Trial Before Decision Reached to Punish Negligent Driver.

G. Holly Freeman, of No. 1 hose house, was fined $15 pay for carelessness while driving to a fire last Saturday noon. His conduct was passed upon by the fire committee of the Common Council, Robert L. Lee, chairman. Freeman's fine was made light and he was returned to duty, in consideration of his excellent past conduct.

Chief T. O. Doane said Monday that the chief reason for punishing Freeman was the fact of his carelessness in not drying his hands while were slippery with oil with which he had been cleaning the sliding pole. Had he done this, the testimony seemed to show that he could have controlled the horses. Freeman is not the regular driver of No. 1 hose wagon but took the lines Saturday in the absence of the regular man.

Assistant Chief Andrew Jennings and Fireman Fred. Breem, who were on the wagon at the time of the accident, were among those who testified. Six citizens were also called upon to tell how it happened. Sentence was passed only after four hours had been spent in taking testimonev and in deliberation upon it.

The Companion as a Christmas Gift.

The Youth's Companion is one of the few gifts that are always appropriate and yet within reach of the smallest purse. It brings to every member of the family something of interest, something of value—a story that is brave, or noble deeds that rise to the height into far-off countries or among men who govern, a sketch that amuses, a poem that puts a bit of truth in a new and convincing way, a page of pictures that holds the children spellbound. It is America's home paper—a paper received weekly in more than half a million households in the United States.

If you desire to make a Christmas present of The Youth's Companion, send the publishers the name and address of the person to whom you wish to give The Companion, with $1.75, the usual subscription price. They will send to the address named The Companion's Christmas Packet, all ready for Christmas morning, containing the Christmas number, The Companion Calendar for 1904, lithographed in twelve colors and gold, and subscription certificate for the fifty-two issues of 1904.

The new subscriber for 1904 will receive all the issues of The Companion for the remaining weeks of 1903 free from the time of subscription, also The Companion Calendar for 1904, lithographed in twelve colors and gold.

Annual Announcement Number fully describing the principal features of The Companion's new volume for 1904 will be sent to any address free.

UNION'S SENATOR FOR THE PRESIDENCY

Joseph Cross Stands a Good Chance of Presiding Over New Jersey State Senate.

POLITICAL SITUATION

STORY THAT CONGRESSMAN FOWLER INTENDS TO LEAVE NEW JERSEY.

Part Played by James T. MacMurray Towards Making Muddle in Union County—Talk at State Capital.

Senator Edmund Wakeley, of Bergen County, will find a dangerous rival in Senator Joseph Cross, of Union, for the presidency of the State Senate. Last winter Senator Cross was the chief opponent of President Hutchinson, and his friends say he was defeated then on a sort of tacit understanding that he would be given the honor the next time. The next session will be the Union man's sixth year in the Senate.

Senator Cross began his legislative career in the Assembly of 1894, and when during the session Speaker Holt resigned, he was chosen his successor. The following year he was elected speaker. In 1898 he was elected Senator to fill the unexpired term of Foster M. Voorhees, who was nominated for Governor, and in 1899 and 1902 he was elected Senator for full terms. He is considered by some of the more impulsive members to be over-conservative, especially in the matter of appropriations, of the committee on which he is a member, but is con*sidered one of the ablest men* in the Senate.

Camden, of course, has a candidate in Senator Bradley. Thomas Glohosey Elvins, of Atlantic, is an avowed aspirant for the office, and the speaker of the Assembly rances, which carries with it the leadership of the House. The able and successful manner in which Everet Colby, of Essex, piloted the new school law which bears his name through the House during the recent extra session has caused his name to be considered favorably by some in connection with the leader*ship.*

Politicians of both parties in Trenton are still discussing the muddle in Union County and are speculating upon the effect the re*sult of Tuesday's election will* have upon the political fortunes of United States Senator John Kean and Representative Charles N. Fowler. Many are of the opinion that Mr. Fowler made a grievous error when he allowed Republicans, who claim to be his followers and supporters, to knife the ticket to such an extent as to cause its defeat.

One of the stories floating about is to the effect that Mr. Fowler could not have changed things if he had tried to, for City Clerk MacMurray, of this city, the leader of the Fowler faction of this city, had declared that he would not have ceased working against the Republican ticket even if Mr. Fowler had requested him to. Another story circulating around Elizabeth indicates at least the effect which some of the people of his home think the result in Union has had on Mr. Fowler's political future.

It is said that he is contemplating disposing of his home in Elizabeth and taking up his residence in Vermont, where his large business interests lie. If this is so, those who are spreading the story say, it means that Mr. Fowler has seen the handwriting on the wall, and proposes to give up New Jersey and New Jersey politics.

There are those on the other hand who declare that Senator Kean has not come out of the struggle as unlicensed as he would have people believe by his talk on Thursday.

They say Union will elect three Republican Assemblymen next fall, but they will be men who will not vote for John Kean for United States Senator.

Regarding the story that the Congressman would remove, Mrs. Fowler said today: "It was started by enemies of Mr. Fowler, and there is not the least bit of truth in it. It is absurd."

Friends of Mrs. Frank Sheppard, of Brooklyn, will be pleased to learn that she is much improved from a long illness, and that her daughter is also convalescing. They are former residents of Plainfield.

Miss Minnie Williams, of Sandford avenue, who some weeks ago fell down stairs and sustained severe injuries, is now able to be out again.

HIGH SCHOOL FIVE MEETS WITH DEFEAT

An Exciting Game of Basket Ball in Which Business Men's Team Wins.

FINAL SCORE, 22 TO 8

PAUL WHITFORD DOES SOME GOOD SHOOTING FOR BUSINESS MEN.

Fenno and Anderson Stars on the High School Team—Good Team Work of the Two Aggregations.

A warmly contested basket ball game between the business men's team of the Y. M. C. A. and the Plainfield High School five, took place Monday and, considering the difference between the teams in weight and height, the score of 22 to 8 in favor of the business men was not at all discreditable to the High School boys.

Exciting from start to finish, the game was witnessed by a crowd that completely filled the ball and that lacked nothing in enthusiasm. The High School supporters were especially numerous and always ready with their school yells. The contest was of the nature of a practice match for the High School boys, who, though much lighter, were more active than their opponents. Though the result was never in doubt, there wasn't a goal scored except after the stoutest kind of a resistance. The school team was without the services of the center, Collier, whose long reach would have proved of material assistance.

Most of the scoring was done in the first half which ended 13 to 7 in favor of the business men a lead which was increased to 22 to 8 at the close of the game. Good team work was exhibited by both aggregations, although at times lack of practice was evident. The business men from their greater weight were particularly prone to make fouls. Sixteen were scored against them, from which, however, only four goals were thrown. The school team fouled eight times. Paul Whitford's shooting for the basket for the business men was remarkably accurate. For the High School Anderson and Fenno did some remarkably fine work at guard against their heavier opponents. The summary:

Business Men, 22—P. Whitford, if; Deane, Spicer, rf; Spicer, Rogers, c; Dr. Whitford, Dr. Browning, lg; Clark, Utsinger, rg.

High School, 8—Long, rf; Thompson, lf; Freeman, c; Anderson, rg; Fenno, Gavett, lg.

Goals from the floor, P. Whitford, 7; Browning, Spicer, Thompson, Long. Goals from fouls, Spicer, 2; Thompson, 3; Long. Fouls—Business Men, 16; High School, 8. Time, 20-min. halves. Referee, C. E. Morse. Umpires, W. Helmcke and Kenneth Robbie. Timer, L. Koons.

SOME GOOD VOCALISTS.

Southern Jubilee Singers Entertain Crowd at Y. M. C. A. With Many Catchy Airs.

The Southern Jubilee Singers, a colored troupe of five from Morristown, splendidly entertained a crowded house in the Y. M. C. A. Hall Saturday nigbs. They sang numerous songs that had the true southern flavor, and gave several recitations, some of them pathetic, most of them humorous, and all of them pleasing. They introduced these songs, including many "changes in the programme," with a spirit of enjoyment and a swing that set about every foot in the house tapping in time. The troupe consisted of a quartette of singers, George Thomas and Miss Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morris, and as accompanist, Mrs. John Carter. They sang also at the men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon. Fletcher Humphrey, formerly State secretary of the Y. M. C. A., of Indiana, was the speaker at this meeting.

One comment regarding her says "Miss Wilson's part of the evening included also a New England sketch in which mimicry formed a considerable part of the presentation, and Mr Dooley's famous conversation on 'The Practice of Medicine.'"

Father Egan has planned to give the workers for Mary's fair, which was held a short time ago, a reception in thanks for the good work. It will be held on next Thursday evening, Nov. 12, in the school hall.

BAPTISTS CALL DR. CHAMBLISS

Congregation of First Baptist Church Invites New York Minister to Become Pastor.

ASKED UNANIMOUSLY

SKETCH OF CAREER OF MAN WHOM PLAINFIELDERS HAVE CALLED.

L. V. F. Randolph Acted as Moderator at Meeting—Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes Made an Address Recommending Dr. Chambliss.

The First Baptist Church at a largely attended parish meeting held in the lecture room of the church, November 4, extended a unanimous call to Rev. Dr. John A. Chambliss, of New York, to become pastor of the church for a term of one year, beginning now and terminating in December, 1904. This provision is made in deference to the wish of Dr. Chambliss, who is not willing to accept a pastorate for any longer term at a time. Dr. Chambliss has been occupying the pulpit at the church during the past month or so and he has made a most favorable impression. In fact it was this unity of feeling among the members of the church as well as the special committee appointed to secure a successor to Dr. Yerkes, that led the latter to negotiate with Dr. Chambliss.

The call was extended through a rising vote, after the report of the committee and the recommendations were presented. It was unanimous.

A short devotional service was conducted by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor emeritus, after which O. B. Leonard, church clerk, read the call for the meeting, which was to hear the report of the committee and its recommendations. L. V. F. Randolph, acting as moderator, asked the committee if it was ready to report. The response was made by Chas. W. McCutchen, chairman of the committee, who presented lengthy report in which he reviewed the actions of the committee following the resignation of Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, after a continuous service of over forty years. The committee consisted of C. W. McCutchen, H. E. Needham, Alex. Gilbert, T. S. Armstrong, H. C. Compton, George A. Chapman, L. H. Biglow, Jr., O. B. Leonard, E. L. Bonney and George H. Batchelor, representing the deacons, the trustees and the church-at-large.

On June 15, 1903, Dr. Yerkes resigned and on June 25 following it was accepted. The committee was then appointed for the purpose of securing a successor at the earliest possible time. Since then the committee has been busily engaged in the work selected for it. The report stated that the committee was harmonious and a unit in its work. Seventy-five names of candidates were presented for consideration and the committee visited various pulpits and heard many preachers, it being the adopted policy not to invite any candidate to occupy the pulpit of the church.

In its work the committee was assisted with the counsel of Dr. Sanders, Dr. Rush Rhees, President Harper, of Chicago University, and Dr. Judson. The committee heard several whom it desired to call, but for various reasons they were not obtainable. It was also discovered that there are now many Baptist pulpits vacant and up to within a short time ago, the members were unable to name a successor.

The report then states that in Dr. Chambliss the committee has found a man peculiarly suited to the needs of the church and the vacant pulpit, and after a consultation with him learned that he was willing to give up other plans and that he would accept a call if extended.

The report then recommended Dr. Chambliss for the pastorate, and this was followed with a resolution offered by H. McCutchen, that the First Baptist Church extend a call to Rev. Dr. John A. Chambliss to become its pastor at once and continue as such until December 31, 1904, and that the trustees arrange with him concerning the salary.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes made a few remarks, before the vote was taken, in which he took occasion to say that he had known Dr. Chambliss for many years and that he possesses a delightful personality. He said that Dr. Chambliss has the capacity to preach to the heart and understanding and that he is a remarkable preacher of the gospel commanding himself to old and young.

L. V. F. Randolph and H. E. Needham also spoke hearty words concerning Dr. Chambliss, the former stating that his only objection being that the term of pastorate is to be only for one year. However, he believed the committee had used wisdom in its deliberation and action.

The vote on the resolution was then taken, the result being already stated. Mr. Gilbert then offered another resolution, which was adopted, that the church clerk inform Dr. Chambliss of the action of the church.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss is the son of Rev. Dr. A. W. Chambliss, who was a prominent Baptist preacher and college professor in the South. The new pastor was born in Georgia, and was converted at the early age of eleven years. After preparatory, colleges and theological training he settled in his first pastorate at Sumter, S. C., in 1861. Since then he has labored in three or four other fields of Christian usefulness and at times meanwhile taught in literary institutions of the Southern States.

Dr. Chambliss came to New Jersey in 1899 and has been the honored pastor of the East Orange Baptist Church for ten years. For the past four years he has been engaged in literary pursuits monthly, though preaching occasionally. His sermons are scholarly and orthodox, and altogether he is an effective and popular preacher.

MISS MINNIE HANSEN WEDS

BRIDE OF PETER PETERSON, OF NEW BRUNSWICK, AT HOME WEDDING.

Marriage a Quiet One on Account of Illness of Bride's Brother—Mrs. Wood Matron-of-Honor.

Miss Minnie Hansen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hansen, of Lincoln place, and Peter Peterson, son of Nelson Peterson, of New Brunswick, were married November 4, at the home of the bride at the corner of Lincoln place and Vine street. The wedding was performed by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of Warren Chapel.

It was a quiet wedding on account of the illness of the bride's brother who was in an adjoining room while the ceremony was being performed. The bride was attended by Mrs. Charles Wood, of this city, and Charles Wood was the best man. Miss Hansen wore a suit of blue broadcloth as did the matron of honor.

A reception followed the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson will make their homes here for the present although they intend making their permanent residence in New Brunswick.

BOARD OF TRADE'S MEETING

NO INDUCEMENTS TO MACHINE COMPANY WHICH WISHES TO COME HERE.

Trolley Roads and Water Works Discussed—Only Six Members Present.

Six members, including President L. B. Woolston and Secretary F. H. Smith, were present at a regular meeting of the Board of Trade, Thursday. The secretary read a letter from the Ferricute Machine Works, of Bridgeton, N. J., asking what inducements the Board would offer to bring these works to this city. The Board had nothing special to offer, but the matter was referred to the proper committee for further consideration. The officers will be communicated with for the purpose of ascertaining what arrangements can be made to bring this new industry to Plainfield. The members also discussed other public matters, including trolley roads and water works, but nothing of importance was done in these matters. The Board had no manifest wrongs to right or reforms to suggested for the present.

IN MR. LEEK'S HONOR.

Surprise Party Tendered at His Home on East Second Street.

The members of the Lenox Euchre Club tendered a surprise party last Thursday to H. W. Leek, at his home on East Second street. A most enjoyable evening was spent, progressive euchre being the chief feature of the evening. Frank Marolay, on behalf of the members of the club, presented Mr. Leek with a bag of gold as a token of the esteem in which he is held among the members of the club. Mr. Leek leaves in a few days for Ashville, N. C., where he will make his home in the future. On account of ill health he has been obliged to give up his business on Richmond street. He will be succeeded by U. G. Pierson.

Deer in Upper Michigan.

The deer in the upper peninsula are increasing at a great rate every year, notwithstanding the immense number of hunters who spend part or the whole of the open season there. One reason advanced for this increase is the great falling off in the number of lumber camps as the timber has been cut away. Formerly the men in these camps practically lived on venison all winter in and out of the season, and thousands of deer were killed each year to supply their wants. The camps being fewer now, the slaughter has been greatly curtailed.

Part of the Ceremony.

Fire is an essential in some wedding celebrations. In Persia the service is read in front of a fire. In Nicaragua the priest, taking the couple each by the little finger, leads them to an apartment where a fire is lighted, and there instructs the bride in her duties, extinguishing it by way of conclusion. In Japan the woman kindles a torch, and the bridegroom lights one from it, the playthings of the wife being burnt then and there.

The Speer Wine Company, Passaic N. J.,

have their vineyards stocked of the same grape, the only vineyard of the kind in this country, the vines were imported and planted here over forty years ago. The Speer Port wine and Burgundy are now regarded the finest in the world, their rich, full body and high character is unexcelled. Invalids, weakly persons, especially females, and the aged are made strong and vigorous by its use, as a medicinal wine it has no equal; as a family wine it has no superior. First class physicians all over the country, here and in Europe, who have tried them recommend them as the best.

A close study by physicians on the effect of different brands of wines on the system convinces them of the superiority of the Speer Passaic wines for their patients.

Long Sentences.

Ex-Assistant District Attorney Osborne, of New York, spoke recently of an extremely able argument presented in the course of a recent murder trial by a rising young lawyer. "I don't like his delivery or his style at all," protested an interested and perhaps jealous bystander. "He uses such long sentences."

Mr. Osborne turned sharply. "There are just two kinds of people who object to long sentences," he said, "they are criminals and fools."

Paper Cloaks.

Some scientific genius has taken it into his head to make us wear paper overcoats. And why not? In the large cities of Japan a sort of mackintosh made of oiled paper costs less than 20 cents. It is worn by the coolies who draw rickshaws in the streets. These men, exposed to all seasons, wear these oiled paper cloaks constantly, and notwithstanding their incredible cheapness they will last a year or more.

The Authority.

The story is told of Dr. Bacon, a New England divine of an earlier century who was reproached with a pronunciation that was not "according to Webster." Webster lived in his parish, therefore Dr. Bacon thus delivered himself: "What right has Webster to misstate my pronunciation? He is one of my parishioners, and he ought to get his pronunciation from me, not I from him."

Cork in Europe.

While Spain still yields 32,800 tons of cork annually, worth $6,000,000, Italy's production has decreased to 4,000 tons ($250,000 worth). Italy used to have splendid cork forests, but they have been felled for charcoal and for potash. Seventy-five years ago England's supply of corks came altogether from Italy.

Broom Handles.

To fix a broom handle first bore a hole sideways through the handle and into the head of the broom. Then take a long nail, dip it in water and hammer it well into the hole. The wet nail will soon become rusty, and the rust will make it extra firm in its hold.

Shampoo.

A shampoo mixture that is highly recommended consists of one-quarter of an ounce of alcohol, one dram of powdered borax, two and one-half grains of camphor. Add the borax last of all, cork tightly and shake well before using.

Nothing Homemade.

Mrs. Nurich—Well, I should say not. She got all them things made to order in Paris.—Philadelphia Press.

The Bath.

Avoid bathing within two hours after a meal, and bathe when the body is at a normal temperature—neither overheated nor chilled. Do not remain in the water after a feeling of chilliness comes on.

Hot Grease on the Floor.

If hot grease be spilled on a kitchen floor or table pour cold water upon it immediately. This will cool the grease, when it can be scraped off instead of being allowed to sink into the wood.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Gifts During Sept. and Oct.

Especially notable is the set of New York Supreme Court reports, volumes 8-99 inclusive, and volumes 1-178 inclusive of the New York Court of Appeals reports, given by Colonel Mason W. Tyler. These have been placed in the reference department, and together with the law books already owned by the library form the nucleus of a law library whose value lawyers will not be slow to perceive.

Joseph D. Osgood, Jr., presenting the first six volumes of "Mineral Industry" has completed the library's set of an annual which is yearly becoming more difficult to procure.

The Monday Afternoon Club has presented Besant's London in the 18th century, illustrated from contemporary sources, Traill's Social England (18th century), Meteyard's Life of Josiah Wedgwood in two volumes and Whitman's Print collector's handbook. Though purchased chiefly for the use of the Club, there may be consulted by all interested.

Hugh F. Fox, of this city, has presented his report prepared for the National conference of charities and correction, entitled "Some aspects of child labor in the United States." The position of the various states toward this problem is compactly given and social workers will find it an indispensable tool. Interesting as showing the library's resources on this subject is the fact that of the books and magazine articles referred to by the author, over 50 per cent. are in this library.

Miscellaneous gifts of books have been received from Mrs. H. M. Humphrey, Horace Cummingham and Mrs. W. H. Sampson.

The gift of Miss M. L. Hotchkiss is one of exceptional value, comprising the complete file of the American Notes and Queries, English Notes and Queries, 26 volumes, Anderson's History of Waterbury, Conn., in 3 volumes, also a number of books of rare and curious interest, such as Carey's Malignant fever recently prevalent in Philadelphia, 1794, a quaint history of Buxton, a rare pamphlet on Druidical remains, and a collection of English plays of the later 18th century.

From Andrew J. Gavett, the library has recieved the valuable and exhaustive report of the committee on the Charles River dam.

Of curious and historic interest is the copy of the Chicago Evening Journal of Oct. 9, 1871, published during the Chicago fire of that year. This was given by F. W. Runyon.

Miss Mary E. Tweedy has presented a year's subscription to Hammer and Pen, the official organ of the Church Association for the advancement of the interests of labor.

Two early volumes, 1875-76, of the Art Journal were the gifts of Mrs. H. P. Reynolds.

The Board of Education has presented a bound volume of its reports for the past ten years, forming a history of public education in this city for these years.

This record is a notable one and speaks for itself of the growing interest shown in the Public Library by citizens of Plainfield.

Miss Yerkes' Nuptials.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Grace Yerkes, youngest daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, of West Seventh street, and Dr. H. Worthington Paige, of New York. The event will be quietly celebrated Thursday evening, November 19., at the home of the bride's parents, and will be attended only by the relatives. No invitations have been issued for the wedding.

All Physicians Here and in Europe.

Who have used Speer's Port Grape Wine or his Burgundy recommend it in preference to any other for its medicinal properties, especially for females, debilitated persons and the aged.

Miss Evelyn Howard, of East Orange, who has been the guests of friends in North Plainfield, has returned to her home.

Miss Celia McGuirk, of this city, has returned from a visit with her father at Raritan.

A. I. LITTELL AND MISS SEARS MARRY

Rev. Dr. Erskine M. Rodman Officiates at Wedding at Home of Bride's Parents.

CAPT. MARTIN PRESENT

FRIENDS FROM JERSEY CITY, NEWARK, AND NEW YORK ATTEND WEDDING.

Miss Mary Caryl, Bridesmaid—Edith Sears as Flower Girl—The Groom is a Member of Company K.

Miss Elizabeth A. Sears, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sears, and Albert L. Littell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel W. Littell, were married November 4, at 7:30, at the home of the bride's parents, 327 Clinton avenue. The wedding was attended by guests from this city, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Newark and New York and they numbered almost a hundred.

Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector-emeritus of Grace Church, was the officiating clergyman. Before the flower bedecked bay window of the parlor the clergyman awaited the approach of the couple who came from the library through ribboned aisles carpeted with flowers.

D. W. Littell, Jr., was best man, and Miss Mary Caryl, of Norwich, Ct., was the bridesmaid, and Miss Edith Sears, a niece of the bride, was the little flower girl. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown was of white Lansdowne trimmed with lace and chiffon and she carried an ivory covered Prayer book, the gift of the groom. A white tulle veil hung from a cluster of blossoms fixed in the hair. The dress of the bridesmaid was of white Swiss mulle trimmed with lace and she carried a large shower bouquet of roses. The little flower girl was attired in white and strewd yellow chrysanthemums in the path of the bridal couple.

A reception followed the wedding. The parlors were filled with people and a pleasant time was enjoyed until train time when the couple left for a honeymoon. Upon their return they will reside for the present in this city at the groom's home on West Seventh street. The presents received by the bride were handsome. The present of the groom to the bride was a Prayer book. To his best man he presented a stick pin. The bride's gift to the bridesmaid and flower girl was a brooche.

The groom is a member of Company K, Second Regiment, New Jersey National Guard. He is second sergeant in the company and is a member of the State rifle team. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum.

Company K was represented at the wedding by Captain and Mrs. William B. Martin, of Elizabeth; and Lieutenant and Mrs. John Louis.

REALTY CONVEYANCES.

Burdick et ux to Cathrina Brown, 40 feet on northwest line of West Front street, 81 feet northeast of DeKalb avenue, $1,650; Hannah Linke et al to Caroline S. Pangborn, on southwest line of Lee avenue, 250 feet southeast of South Second street, $1.—Architects and Builders' Review and Real Estate Record.

FIFTY YEARS MARRIED.

Friends Assemble to Congratulate Mr. and Mrs. James Clawson.

The fiftieth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. James Clawson, was observed in an informal way last Thursday at the home of their son, Dr. Marcus L. Clawson, of East Front street. H. H. Baker, of East Fifth street, who performed the marriage ceremony of Mr. and Mrs. Clawson fifty years ago, was present also last evening.

Among the guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Clawson, of Bethlehem, N. H., and Martin D. Titsworth, of Adams Center, N. Y. Among other gifts Mr. and Mrs. Clawson received one hundred and fifty dollars in gold.

THREE CAUSES FOR UNION'S FLOP

Newark Evening News' Intelligent Discussion of Reasons for Political Conditions.

KEAN AGAINST FOWLER

CALIBRE OF RECENT ASSEMBLYMAN A DISGUST TO THE VOTERS.

Bad Management, Factional Fights and the Nomination of a Negro Primarily Responsible for the Bolt—Some Recent History.

"In 1900, the Presidential year, Union County gave 4,857 Republican plurality. In 1901, the Gubernatorial year, Union County gave 1,859 plurality for the R publican ticket. Last year the average majority for the Republican candidates for members of the Assembly was 1,358. Tuesday the whole Republican ticket was swamped, and three Democratic Assemblymen were elected by a majority of 1,000 or over. As the county of Union was the only one in the State to utterly break away from the Republican party and from the traditions of many years, it presents an unusually interesting study.

"Three causes are responsible for the Union County bolt—factional fights, bad management and the nomination of a 'colored man on the Republican ticket. Dr. Anderson, who was nominated for coroner, is a scholarly man, a skillful physician and a good citizen, but from the day he was nominated his defeat was certain. Everywhere throughout the county Republicans not only scratched his name from their tickets, but in many instances manifested their disapproval by voting the entire Democratic ticket, for no other reason than to rebuke their party for nominating a colored man. Even the colored voters, whose loyal support was sought and expected by this nomination, cut the ticket as freely as did the white voters. If the Union County object lesson is well studied it will be a long time ere another colored citizen, however worthy, is put on a county Republican ticket.

The factional fights and the bad management of the Republican party in Union County are so closely related that it is difficult to differentiate their effects. United States Senator John Kean and Congressman Charles E. Fowler have been bitter factional enemies ever since the later served one term in Congress and became a candidate for renomination. They have each had all the honors that Union County could give them. There is abundant room for both if they were inclined to be friendly, but their quarrel has been continuous and relentless. The Fowler faction dominated the Republican county committee a few years ago, and then the Kean faction secured the chairmanship. The first open outbreak occurred last year when Mr. Fowler sought to nominate Judge Runyon, of Plainfield, for State Senator in the place of Senator Cross, who was the candidate of the Kean faction. In this struggle the Kean element won an overwhelming victory.

"Plainfield, the Republican stronghold of the county, has for many years been dissatisfied, rightly or otherwise, with the division of the county offices and with the alleged dictation of Elizabeth. Mr. Fowler has fostered this dissatisfaction and has practically made his political headquarters in the "Queen City of the Plains." He is credited with having pacified his adherents there last year, but from that day to this the Plainfield factional leaders have declared that neither Mr. Fowler nor any one else would prevent the retaliatory measures they were resolved upon. If Mr. Fowler endeavored to heal the breach this year there are no evidences that he succeeded.

The bolt of fifteen out of nineteen Plainfield delegates at the Union County Republican convention in September last was the open declaration of war. The bolters demanded the nomination for Assemblyman of a candidate known to be inimical to Senator Kean. Elizabeth and a majority of the rest of the county refused to concede this, and nominated a Kean man. It is said that efforts were made prior to the convention, to induce the Plainfield men to accept a more moderate candidate than the one they had decided on, but if so they were unsuccessful. Last year Plainfield's candidate for sheriff was defeated in the convention in exactly the same way, but that was not followed by a bolt. This year the anti-Kean delegates left the convention.

"There was some hope that a truce would be patched up before the election, that the Plainfield Republicans would prove too loyal to abandon their party because of factional differences and factional leaders; but neither truce nor quarter was asked or given, and Plainfield, which last year gave an average of 700 majority for the Republican Assemblyman, this year gave an equal or possibly greater majority for the whole Democratic ticket. Never before have such results been known in Plainfield. The factional fights have produced exactly the results predicted, and it has been the worst kind of political management that has allowed them to continue, year after year. What effect the results will have on the leaders remains to be seen.

"Still another factor, growing somewhat out of the factional conditions in the county, but also referable, in part, to other causes, was the increasing unfitness of the Republican representatives to the Assembly. If any one will take a Legislative Manual and compare the names of Benjamin A. Vail, John T. Dunn, George T. Parrot, William H. Corbin, Foster M. Voorhees and Joseph Orros with those of Later Union County Assemblymen, a strong light will be thrown on some of the more deeply grounded reasons for the bolt in Union County; a light that is intensified by the fact that the Democratic candidates this year were able and excellent men.—Newark Evening News.

CRESCENT CLUBHOUSE SOLD

A. D. FINDLAY PURCHASED ULRICH BUILDING AT EXECUTOR'S SALE.

Knocked Down for $7,000—Uses to Which the Structure Has Been Put.

A. D. Findlay, of East Second street, is now the owner of the Crescent Club property, adjoining his present place of business. Mr. Findlay purchased the property Thursday at an executor's sale for the sum of $7,000. The property belonged to the estate of Mrs. Elizabeth Ulrick and Justice Hand sold it for the executors, Joseph A. Blass and Charles M. Ulrick. Just what use the new owner will make of the building is not known at present.

By this purchase, one of the best known properties in the city has changed hands. For some years it was owned by the Crescent Club, a promoter of sports, including baseball and bowling. It was during this ownership that the famous Crescent baseball team was in existence and enjoyed great popularity. The clubhouse has also been the scene of many important meetings, it being here that Plainfield's building ordinance was given a public hearing under the direction of the Councilmanic committee having that matter in charge. More lately, the Democratic City Club has been in possession of the clubhouse, holding its various meetings and celebrations there. Whether this club will continue there is not definitely settled.

RIVAL CLAIMANTS.

Dr. Moldenke and Mrs. Giebelhouse Both After Same Strip of Land.

Dr. Richard Moldenke and Mrs. George Giebelhouse are engaged in a warm dispute over a strip of land located between their properties in Washington valley. The land in question, it is understood, was recently conveyed to a party named Riger, but the conveyance papers were not filed. Consequently Dr. Moldenke claims the land, although it is said it has been attached to the Giebelhouse estate for the past thirty years.

The erection of a fence by Dr. Moldenke enclosing the disputed property is reported to have added to the bitterness of the dispute.

GEORGE DEMLER'S CAREER.

Hotel Keeper Who Died Yesterday Prominent in This Locality.

The death Friday of George Demler, Sr., which occurred at the home of his son, Freeholder William Demler, at Watchung, removes from North Plainfield township one of the most prominent and respected citizens of that locality. For thirty years he conducted Demler's Hotel in the "Notch," and there was perhaps no man throughout this section of New Jersey better known and liked. He was born in Germany, but he came to this country at the age of five years and spent the remaining seventy-six years of his life were spent in the vicinity of Plainfield. His birthday occurred the day before his death. Seven years ago he disposed of his hotel and since then he had been in failing health.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 15—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—How may we help abolish the saloon?—Eph. vi. 10-18. (Temperance.)

That the saloon should be abolished should admit of no question. That it is the direct cause of drunkenness, can not be denied, nor can it be so regarded by the state as to make it possible for the saloon to exist without making drunkards. License as a preventive of excessive drinking is a failure. The most stringent laws about selling to minors and to confirmed drunkards have proved a failure. The young purchase the saloons, and those cursed with the appetite for strong drink have no difficulty in obtaining it. If the saloon were abolished and alcohol used only for medicinal purposes drunkenness would soon pass away. But it never will while the saloon exists. In the face of the terrible effects of intemperance how can any one interested in humanity advocate the saloon or oppose its destruction?

The problem of abolishing the saloon is beyond question a gigantic one. Its patrons are numerous, and there are legions more who are absolutely indifferent to the havoc it plays among the children of men. But this only makes it the more important that those who do desire and pray for its overthrow should be instant in season and out of season for the accomplishment of their purpose.

The saloon can be abolished. To some this may seem a vain boast, but it is not so. The saloon has been abolished. In some states, in some countries and even in some states it has been prohibited and has ceased to exist, and what has been on a smaller scale can be on a larger one if the people of the larger sphere can be made to see and to have faith as have the smaller one. The abolishing of the saloon in the smallest hamlet in the United States is conclusive proof that it can be abolished throughout the entire nation if the people of the nation will act as the people of the hamlet.

Since the saloon should be abolished and can be abolished, what may we do to bring about this desirable end?

1. We may help abolish the saloon by personal action. No one who desires the overthrow of the curse of mankind should ever patronize it in any way, shape or form. The total abstainer is a constant hindrance to the saloon, and if all men could be got to totally abstain from intoxicating drinks as a beverage the saloon would soon close its doors and cease to exist.

2. We may help abolish the saloon *by educational influence. Public opin*ion should be educated against the saloon, and every antisaloonist should be an educator of the public upon this subject. The saloon is firmly intrenched in our national life. It is supported by tremendous financial and political influence. It is safe to say that, when the people of the United States want the saloon to go and say to the saloon "Go!" it will go. "Educate" should be the battle cry of all opposed to the saloon in our land.

3. We may help abolish the saloon by political action. The ballot is the decisive influence in our land, and if all Christian and temperance people would upon every occasion cast their ballots against the saloon the days of its doom would be hastened. But here it is well to remember that denunciation should have no part in our campaign against the saloon. Denunciation of friends and fellow laborers who do not see as we do never won a battle, much less a campaign. God never made two men exactly alike. Intemperate zeal upon the part of many advocates of temperance has done more to injure the political campaign against the conveyance papers were not filed. Consequently Dr. Moldenke claims the land, although it is said it has been attached to the Giebelhouse estate for the past thirty years.

4. We may help abolish the saloon by prayer. In spite of sin God's power is still absolute upon the earth, and His people should cease not to appeal unto Him for help in the great struggle against this gigantic evil. In His strength we should fight against it and earnestly implore Him for divine power to bring about its overthrow.

BIBLE READINGS.

Josh. i, 6, 7; Prov. xx, 1; xxiii, 18-21, 29-32; Isa. v, 11; Zech. iv, 6; Hab. ii, 15, 16; Matt. xvii, 21; Rom. xiv, 14-23; I Cor. iii, 1-7; Gal. v, 19-26.

The Pledge in Rhyme.

The Christian Endeavor World recently had a competition, with 165 entries, for a rhymed version of the Christian Endeavor pledge. The following was the choice of the judges. Its author is Lucy G. Whitwell of Cleveland, O.:

Now, trusting in the Lord for strength,
This promise I can make:
That I will try my life with His will,
To live for Jesus' sake.
My rule of life shall be to pray,
My Bible daily read;
To help my church in every way,
And worship Him indeed.
Throughout the week, where'er she calls,
Or on the Sabbath day,
I shall be there unless He leads
My steps another way.
Endeavor meeting I'll attend,
Unless that thing be; [be true;
To all my duties I'll be true;
But service is the watchword true
Which may be read for me.

One Great Object.

But what is our whole system of Christian Endeavor if it is not a series of unconscious steps up invisible mountains? The prayer meetings, in a sense, are routine affairs, fulfilling the pledge, in our the-forget moments may seem like a perfunctory obligation, the committees like the lifeless parts of a machine, but one great object of the society is to form habits of well doing, habits of confession, of devotion, of service.—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark in "Fellow Travelers."

THE FASTEST ROAD

Description of German Line Which Has Proved So Speedy.

Roadbed Specially Prepared, and the Cars Driven by a Three-Phase Alternating Current of 12,500 Volts.

The very recent record made on the Marienfelde-Zossen road in Germany of over 125 miles per hour has renewed the interest in high-speed electric traction experiments being carried on there, and makes a fuller description of the roadbed, over which the car ran and the car which was driven at such *terrific speed, of especial value and in*terest at the time.

The road, which runs between Marienfelde and Zossen, and which is part of the Prussian railway, is 14.29 miles in length, and is a nearly level track. The 69-pound rails which were used in the first experiments in 1901 were found to be too light and for later experiments 96.1-pound rails were laid upon heavy spruce ties 22 inches from center to center and heavily ballasted with broken basalt. The rails were laid on each tie in a steel chair, strongly bolted down, and were joined perpendicularly by bevel joints seven inches in length, held firmly together by bolts passing horizontally through the fish plates, so that the effectiveness of a continuous rail is practically secured. The old light rails were laid down flat as guard rails, resting horizontally on special cast-iron chairs in such a way that the flat bottom flange of the rail stands vertically along the inside line of each heavy rail and about two inches distant from the inner edge of its face. With the exception of one curve of 2,000 yards in radius near its southern extremity the line is perfectly straight.

The motor car used is 72.18 feet in length and weighs 100 tons. Of this weight considerably over half is taken up in the body of the car and the running gear, and the rest is made up by the motors, transformers and other details of the electrical equipment. Each end of the car rests on a six-wheeled bogie truck of the American type, and the motors are four in number, one attached to the front and rear axle of each truck, the middle pair of wheels in each group running free. The wheels are 49 inches in diameter and are equipped with pneumatic brakes of the standard type. The transformers, which are hung beneath the middle section of the car, weigh 12 tons, besides which a storage battery of 631 pounds weight supplies the currents for lighting purposes. The interior of the car is provided with upholstered seats lengthwise along the sides, and an open railing encloses at each end the space occupied by the driver, who, standing behind a curved front of plate glass within easy touch of switch and ampere meters, gauges which show the resistance of the air, and a dial that indicates and registers the speed, controls its movements by turning a pilot wheel.

The trolley poles were set along the side of the track 100 feet apart, and the steel bows extending over the track sustained three parallel lines of heavy copper trolley wires. This three-phase alternating current supplied a voltage of 13,500 volts and this was reduced by transformers carried under the floor of the car to an average pressure of 1,500 volts, and in that condition turned into the motors, of which the car carried four, two at either end, with an aggregate energy of 1,000 horse power.

Despite the tremendous speed attained —over two miles a minute—the swaying *movement of the car was scarcely per*ceptible, and according to those who have made trips in the car during the test trips the comfort from vibration, wind pressure or other cause was experienced in greater degree than on an ordinary express train of the D class in Germany.

Careful examination since the trials has failed to detect any sign of failure or deterioration in track, car or transmission system, so that it is hardly too much to assume that the technical problem of electric-traction speed up to 100 miles an hour is now successfully solved for all localities where straight and reasonably level and well-guarded railway lines can be provided.

FRANK H. MASON.

The Mosquito Destroyer.

The recent announcement of a mosquito destroyer has commended upon in Popular Science Monthly in no very uncertain terms. It is pointed out that the original paper published in bulletin 13 of the public health and marine hospital service hardly justifies the newspaper claims which were made for it. Dr. Stiles, the author of the investigation, simply discovered a new parasite of the mosquito, several of which were already known, and pointed out that these organisms might be of value in how to check the mosquito plague. There are many technical difficulties in the way of a practical utilization of these "destroyers," and there was in the original article an intimation that the public health service is breeding the germs in order to infect mosquitoes.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 16, "Personal Work the Duty of Every Christian"—"Tact, John i, 35-42; xii, 20-22; Acts viii, 26; Acts x.

"He brought him unto Jesus."

As truly as self preservation is the first law of nature self impartation is the first impulse of grace.

Every creature with intelligence or instinct naturally defends itself when danger threatens its welfare. With many it not most animals this care includes its own young. In some cases there is a banding together of many for common ends. But trace this natural impulse as far as we may, it falls far short of the motive impulse of the Christian life. This is grounded not in any instinct of preservation of life for self and those nearly connected. It is deeper rooted than the craving for companionship. It is not akin to physical appetites and desires. It is of spiritual nature and arises from recognition, first of all, of personal relationship to God and through Him of a relation and obligation to men. It has less to do with any reasoning process than with an insistent longing of soul. It is far more than the impulse to tell of some new discovery or share some new possession.

There is wonderful satisfaction in showing another person some newly found object or *skill in any line of ef*fort. Much of the pleasure of life comes from such display and the resulting admiration and society of like minded.

*But Christian fellowship is more se*curely based than this. When a soul comes to a clear knowledge of Jesus Christ as personal Saviour and participates with Him in glad obedience to the will of God as Father Almighty there is born in that soul a sentiment of earnest concern that others shall come into the same condition of sonship and fellowship.

It is useless to attempt to explain this experience to one who has never felt its thrill. It is as impossible as to describe color to one born blind. Only when one sees with his own eyes can he understand. It does not come to any one simply because he is alive and active in the world of men. It comes, if it comes at all, only as a soul sees Jesus Christ as his personal Saviour and receives into it the divine impulse to the new life of faith and hope and love.

It is not a matter of education and culture, not a matter of thought and will. It is a gift of grace from God, which comes as a fresh impulse from without self, but is joyously welcomed and acted upon willingly.

Whoever follows the heavenly impulse to go after others and bring them to Jesus continues in the companionship of the Master and in fellowship with the inner circle of His friends. Andrew finds Simon and brings him to Jesus. Philip finds Nathanael. All after years are made brighter by the fact that they, too, were brought by the Man of Nazareth. They had known each other from boyhood in Bethsaida. They had much in common before. Now, in Jesus the Christ they find a higher plane of life, a closer fellowship. The Apostles and converts and Roman centurians can in after years be led into the inner circle of Christian discipleship as the Holy Spirit opens the understanding and kindles the emotions.

What need now prevails in the church of Christ, and especially the Leagues of young people, is this same earnest desire to bring some soul to Jesus.

Will you not find that waiting one and show him the way?

The Joy of Anticipation.

Why does a horse at once quicken its pace when it turns homeward? It is the same horse. It is drawing the same load. Yet it can go faster now. Which new force is added? Simply the joy of anticipation. Our lives need this force and can have it. We are weary, our load is heavy. Let us look up and on. The happiness at the end is enough to quicken our pace and give us new life. It does not matter how heavy our load or how far away from home we are, home is awaiting at the end, and that joy is enough to enable us to do this labor.—Forward.

Good Deeds Never Die.

One deed of good is worth more than a thousand lives such as some men live. Every truth uttered, every good principle vindicated and every act that improves the moral condition of a fellow being is immortal and never dies, although the agent may be buried from sight.—Orphans' Friend.

"He That Overcometh."

Great is he who masters empires,
Greater he who conquers self;
Great are they who like the vampires,
Live to glut themselves with pelf.
Good is sent that we may share it,
Ill that we may bravely bear it,
Good and ill,
Sent as God sees it will,
Strangely blending in God's plan
To evolve the perfect man.

Live your life, and you will find it
Year by year more fair and free;
Take this truth and firmly bind it
To your heart, for if you do
You will see
Some coming day,
That the lot which God designed
Was the truest and the best.

Greet your day; it may be clouded;
Rain or snow or sleet may fall;
Let your dawn be darkly shrouded;
Light will sure break through it all.
Outer veiling clouds can never Quench the sun, that shines forever.
Evermore
And star flamed night
Will succeed the darkest day;
With every storm and every fight
Comes a calm that lasts always.

Drink your cup, for love prepared it;
Drink, though bitter it may be;
Drink, for He who gave it shared it.
Drink it drain it and not weep
Changed by alchemy of love,
Bitter drugs will sometimes prove,
And the draft,
Freely quaffed,
To your panting lips will bring
Gladness of eternal spring.

GEORGE BOLSTERLE WEDS MISS PUGH

Marriage at the Bride's Home, Attended by Many Relatives and Friends.

DECORATIONS AT HOUSE

MISS ALICE PUGH, A SISTER OF THE BRIDE, BRIDESMAID.

William Krisey Best Man—The Flower Girl, Marion Wooley and the Page, Harold Zeek—Wedding Supper.

The wedding of Miss Mary L. Pugh and George Bolsterle, both of this city, took place Nov. 4, at the home of the bride at 945 West Fourth street. It was witnessed by a large number of friends and relatives. The officiating minister was Rev. Dr. Cornelius Sobenck, pastor of the Trinity Reformed Church.

Miss Alice A. Pugh, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and William Krisey was the best man. The wedding took place in the parlor of the home of the bride at 7:30 o'clock. The house was decorated with palms and ferns and chrysanthemums were scattered here and there, giving to the decorations a general effect of yellow. Miss Marrion Wooley, a niece of the bride, acted as flower girl and Harold Zeek, of New York, cousin of the bride, was page.

The bride was gowned in white peau de sole trimmed with ribbons and lace and carried a bouquet of roses. The bridesmaid wore white organdie trimmed with ribbons and applique. She carried pink roses. The flower girl wore white pique.

After the wedding a reception was held and at a late hour a supper was served. Later the couple departed for a wedding trip and upon their return they will reside in this city.

RURAL FREE DELIVERY STARTS IN DECEMBER

Divided Into Two Routes, Covering Nearly Forty-Five Miles Altogether.

COMPLETE IN DETAILS

CARRIERS TO LEAVE LOCAL POSTOFFICE EARLY EACH MORNING.

Outline of Routes—Powers Invested in Rural Carrier—All the Outskirts to be Covered—Other Matters.

Through the efforts of Postmaster E. H. Bird, the local mail service is to be increased in efficiency to that extent that two rural free delivery routes are to be established on December 20 December 1 next, covering the entire territory on the outskirts of Plainfield by rural free delivery. Mr. Bird has been working on this matter for over a year. It was not at first expected that Plainfield would get two routes, but the inspector who investigated the petitions for the rural delivery service once decided that one route would not be sufficient and the two routes were recommended and granted. Postmaster Bird received word yesterday of the adoption of the routes.

The first route, which will be known as Rural Free Delivery Route No. 1, will be this: Through Park avenue to Pompytown, to Marcoonier Chapel, through Woodland avenue to the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, to Mt. Pleasant school-house, to Willow Grove, to Terrill road, past Jackson school-house, through Cushing road to Leland avenue, to South avenue, to Terrill road, to East Front street, to Raymond avenue, to Mountain avenue, to Belmont avenue to East Front street and back to the postoffice. This route covers 23½ miles, an area of eleven square miles. There are 190 houses in the route and a population of 675.

The second route will be known as Rural Free Delivery Route No. 2, and it will include this territory: Park avenue to Randolph road, to DeGlow's corner, to Woodland avenue, through Woodland avenue to Rahway road, through Rahway road to Dog Corners, to the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, to Randolph's corner, pass Fred Valentine's property, to Plainfield avenue, to Chamberlain's corner, near New Brooklyn, to Clinton avenue, through Clinton avenue, to Sherman avenue, through Sherman avenue, to Monroe avenue, through Monroe avenue to West Eighth street, to Clinton avenue, to West Fourth street, to Kerwin's Hotel, to Rock avenue, to Front Front street to city line, back to DeKalb avenue, through Rock avenue, to Greenbrook road, through Greenbrook road, to Prideville, to Grove street and terminating at the corner of Duer and Howard streets. This territory covers 22½ miles, an area of ten square miles and there are 190 houses on the route and a population of 834.

It will be noticed that Prideville will now get one delivery a day, something that the residents in that section have been trying for. There will be two carriers, and the successful candidates will be announced in a few days. The carriers will leave the Plainfield office at 7:30 o'clock in the morning and they must return in time to dispatch mail at 2:30 in the afternoon. As heretofore published these carriers will have many privileges and they will be allowed to sell stamps, postal cards, take money orders, collect and deliver mail on their routes, carry and deliver packages. Within a short time the mail boxes will be located at various points along the two routes.

REV. M. E. SNYDER AT TRINITY REFORMED

New Brunswick Minister's Instructive Talk on Work of S. S. Home Department.

SEMI-ANNUAL SESSION

MEMBERS OF THE HOME DEPARTMENT GATHER TO HEAR ADDRESSES.

Rev. Dr. Schenck Makes Pleasant Remarks — The Superintendent's Report—Refreshments Served.

An entertainment that combined in a delightful way amusement and instruction was that given Friday by the home department of the Sunday-school of Trinity Reformed Church. The principal speaker of the evening was Rev. Melville E. Snyder, of St. James M. E. Church, of New Brunswick, and superintendent of the State Home Department Council, whose remarks made a strongly favorable impression upon his hearers. The department was increased by the addition of several new members who were made to appreciate the great worth of the department's work by Mr. Snyder's words.

The necessity for personal religious work in "the byways and hedges" of life, the sort of work that the home department does, was emphasized by Mr. Snyder. The usefulness of the work, its influence in the homes of the sick and in the busy lives of business men, was insisted upon. In expanding the knowledge of God's word, the home department, said Mr. Snyder, encourages business men to keep to the straight path and resist the strong temptations that so frequently beset them.

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor, spoke in high terms of the helpfulness of Mr. Snyder's address. He said that the great work of the home department of the Sunday-school is to encourage in those not able to attend Sunday-school, or who are not church members, a study of the Word of God.

Miss Bessie Case recited with much expression two amusing selections, "Molly" and "When the Minister Comes to Tea," and was heartily applauded for the excellence of her work. Mr. McAphee sang a bass solo, and Miss Florence Bennett sang and was heartily encored.

Superintendent F. E. Smith, of the Sunday-school, conducted the meeting, which is a semi-annual affair. He said that the members of the home department number 143 at the present time, and that fifty-six members during this month have studied every lesson presented. The total lessons studied amounted to 1,115, he said. Contributions received during the half year amounted to $39.82, the greater part of which was expended for the missionary fund. The superintendent also illustrated the value of the work of the visitors of the home department.

At the close of the entertainment, refreshments were served, in charge of the Sunday-school committee of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor.

Violation of Building Ordinance.

Following the instructions of Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett, this morning, a black line was painted on the building owned by Henry Durlach, of New York, showing where the structure at the corner of Watchung avenue and Front street, will have to be cut in two in order that the street line may be maintained.

Seventh-Day Baptists' Social.

Under the auspices of the men of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church an entertainment and social will be held in the parlors of the church on Monday night, November 23. Nathan E. Lewis is chairman of the committee, and the whole affair will be in charge of men.

Miss DeMott's Marriage.

Miss Kinzie DeMott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry DeMott, of Somerset street, and John R. Landers, also of the borough, will be married at the home of the bride on Thursday night, November 19.

Candidate Goes Gunning.

Fred. S. Cutter, of Sandford avenue, is at Chester, Morris County, on a hunting trip for a few days at the home of Alonzo DeCamp.

Miss Vail Arrives.

A young daughter arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vail, of Orange place, last week.

Howe Family Group.

Julia Ward Howe, her great-granddaughter, little Miss Julia Ward Howe Hall, the latter's mother and father and grandmother, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, compose an interesting group in last Sunday's New York Tribune. A short sketch of the author of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," accompanies the picture.

FIREMEN INJURED ON WAY TO BLAZE

Assistant Chief Jennings and Driver A. H. Freeman Figure in An Accident.

NEITHER BADLY HURT

CHIEF T. O. DOANE'S STORY OF HOW THE ACCIDENT HAPPENED.

Jennings Hurt in Chest—Freeman Cut on Head and Face—Damage to Hose Wagon—Other Details of Accident.

In going to a fire at 428 East Sixth street Saturday morning, No. 1 hose, driven by A. H. Freeman, collided with the wall on the corner of East Third street and Watchung avenue; broke the pole of the wagon and damaged the harness; threw Freeman heavily on his head and slightly injured the horse. Beyond bad cuts on his head and face, Freeman was not seriously injured.

Chief T. O. Doane's explanation of the accident is that Freeman's hands were wet and slippery and prevented him from maintaining control of the horses. He had been oiling the pole of the wagon as the alarm rang, and did not have time to dry his hands. The horses are both new and it is said that one of them, which ate a piece of paper at the North avenue corner of Watchung, The wagon struck the curb stone on the corner of the street, then swerved to the other side, most of the time running on two wheels. Freeman was unable to control the horses sufficiently to prevent the collision with the wall. Assistant Chief Jennings, who was on the wagon, was thrown and injured on the chest.

The fire itself was quickly extinguished. It was in the cellar of the house at 430 East Sixth street, opposite the Bryant School and was caused by the overheating of the steam pipes. The damage was inconsiderable. The house was owned by Patrick Laughlin, whose wife was buried from it Saturday.

Hospital Appropriation.

The Union County Board of Freeholders has made the usual appropriation of $3,300 to Muhlenberg Hospital. A petition presented by J. O. Clark and A. N. Pierson, of Westfield, and E. D. Millar, of Springfield, asking that a road be built from Cranford through Westfield and the borough of Mountainside past the Baltusrol Golf Club to Summit, has been presented.

Drake's Offer Refused.

Fielding H. Wilhite, secretary for the Zion City and Investment Company, of which John Alexander Dowie is the general overseer, has written to Mayor C. D. Dooley, of Lincoln, that for the present nothing can be done with his proposition at present to locate a Zion City near Lincoln.

Wedding Date Set.

Miss Daisy Adams, of Netherwood avenue, and Joseph F. Berg, of Prospect avenue, will be married Wednesday night, November 18, at the home of the bride.

FREEHOLDERS' BOARD MAY BE DEMOCRATIC

Political Complexion of Union County's Board Still Remains in Doubt.

SITUATION IN COUNTY

SPRING ELECTIONS IN TOWNSHIPS WILL SETTLE QUESTION.

A Chance That Board May be Composed of Eleven Democrats and Seven Republicans—How the Elections May Go.

Will the Union County Board of Freeholders be Republican or Democratic next spring or will the forces of the rival parties be evenly divided? That is a question that has come up as an aftermath of the election and the settlement of it in the township elections next spring means the control of several county official positions in the gift of the freeholders, including the offices of county physician and county attorney.

If the townships maintain their present political standing there will be nine Republicans and nine Democrats on the Board. Plainfield's two Republicans have already been elected. Others to be chosen next spring from townships normally in the Republican column are one each from Clark, Cranford, Fanwood, Linden and New Providence and two from Westfield. Of the Democrats already elected four are from Elizabeth and two from Rahway. Union, Summit and Springfield have been carried by the Democrats for years and under existing conditions will be likely to be so carried next spring. This count will divide the Board, nine and nine.

It is said, however, that there is an excellent chance that the carrying of the factional fight in the Republican party into Westfield may result in the loss of one of the two freeholders from that place to the Democrats. It is asserted that Former Freeholder Scudder already has his eye on the place. And further if Fanwood or some other of the townships normally Republican should become involved in the disaffection, it is quite among the possibilities that the Democrats will gain another point and the standing of the Board of Freeholders become 11 to 7 in favor of the Democrats.

Big Bowling Match.

The Y. M. C. A. boys have arranged to charter a special trolley car to Rahway, November 27, for the bowling match between the Plainfield and Rahway Y. M. C. A. About forty-five will make the trip.

Seventh Birthday.

In honor of her seventh birthday, Miss Anna Retzer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Retzer, entertained a number of her little friends at her home Saturday evening. She received many fine presents.

Dr. Ard's Purchase.

Dr. F. C. Ard has bought the property on the south-west corner of Park avenue, opposite his present home and will remodel the house and occupy it.

THE KAISER'S GIFT

Harvard Museum Accepts the Emperor's Collection.

A MARK OF GERMANY'S FRIENDSHIP

Hon. Carl Schurz Said, "Most Heartily Do We Thank His Majesty For His Appreciation and Hope For His Speedy Recovery."

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 11.—In the presence of a select gathering of distinguished scholars and others whose inclinations have led them to take a deep interest in matters of an educational nature the Germanic museum at Harvard was formally opened and the collections sent to it by Emperor William of Germany formally presented. It will be remembered that the announcement of these gifts was made by Prince Henry of Prussia during his visit to this country in March, 1902.

When the exercises in the new lecture hall began upon the platform were Professor H. C. G. von Jagemann, the presiding officer; Baron von Dem Bussche-Haddenhausen, counselor of legation, first secretary of the imperial German embassy and charge d'affaires ad interim at Washington, representing the German ambassador; President Charles W. Eliot, Professor Kuno Francke, curator of the Germanic museum; Hon. Carl Schurz, president of the Germanic Museum association; Edward Robinson, director of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston; Professor William James and others.

While all the addresses were of much value, that of Baron von Dem Busschе-Haddenhausen was of particular interest, for besides presenting the emperor's collection he announced that a number of German scholars, officials and men of affairs had prepared a reproduction of German silver and gold work, which is to be given to the museum; also that Professor A. C. Coolidge of the historic department at Harvard had given the university a library of 10,000 volumes on German history.

A feature of the exercises was the reading of the following cablegram from former German Ambassador Holleben to the United States received by President Eliot:

"Prosperity and success to the Germanic museum, the newest milestone of German-American friendship. Harvard forever."

Professor von Jaggemann opened the formal proceedings. He was followed by Baron Bussche-Haddenhausen, the German charge d'affaires, who made the presentation speech in behalf of the emperor.

President Eliot then tendered thanks to the emperor in behalf of the university.

After referring to the visit of Prince Henry in March, 1902, President Eliot closed with these words:

"This generous act recalls to mind that the records of civilization through the long future, as in the past, are to be inscribed in books of letters drawn by man from nature. These powers have changed profoundly every human occupation and the whole mode of life of civilized man, but their province is the material world and man's welfare."

Members of the emperor were in part to the Germanic Museum association, Hon. Carl Schurs returned thanks for that organization.

The theme of Mr. Schurz's was the old one that "Blood is thicker than water," as stated in the opening that the establishment of the Germanic museum "is more particularly an expression of the instinctive desire of the Germanic branches of the human family, which, although now separated by political lines of division, claim a community.

"Most heartily do we thank his majesty the German emperor for his quick and sympathetic appreciation of our endeavors and for the most generous munificence with which he has aided them. I am specially charged by the association of the German Museum I express the unanimous and cordial wish of its members that the ailment which has recently befallen the generous benefactor of this institution may soon disappear."

After short addresses by Edward Robinson of the Boston Art museum and fellow curator at the Germanic museum and Professor William James of Harvard the entire assembly walked over to the Phillips Brooks house, where tea was served.

In the evening in Sander's theater three German plays were given by the Irving Place theater company of New York.

Refused Servian Congratulations.

VIENNA, Nov. 11.—It is announced in a dispatch received from Belgrade, Servia, that the British charge d'affaires there has refused to receive the congratulations of the Servian government on the birthday of King Edward. This refusal was in accordance with his instructions not to maintain diplomatic relations with King Peter's government. The affair has caused some sensation.

To Call Off Miners' Strike.

PUEBLO, Colo., Nov. 11.—The railroad men of southern Colorado are taking active steps to cause a calling off or at least a modification of the strike of coal miners. All the brotherhoods of railroad employees are to hold a mass meeting in this city tomorrow evening and take action to bring influence to bear upon President John Mitchell and others.

Shipbuilding Hearing Postponed.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The hearing in the affairs of the United States Shipbuilding company has been postponed until Thursday morning at 11 o'clock, owing to the sickness of one of the attorneys. Mr. Nixon's examination will then be continued.

A SPECIAL SESSION

Governor of Montana Calls For Relief Laws.

TO AID INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS.

Works of the Amalgamated Copper Company Will Resume at Once In Various Parts of the State.

HELENA, Mont., Nov. 11.—Governor Toole has called a special session of the legislature to meet at Helena to pass laws to relieve the industrial condition in Montana caused by the shutting down of the Amalgamated Copper company's properties, whereby 15,000 persons were directly thrown out of work and 15,000 more affected.

The aim of the session is to pass a law whereby mining cases may be taken from one court to another when the judge in the initial court is shown to be prejudiced.

Other legislation of like character has also been promised. A so called fair trial bill of the character proposed was passed by the last legislature, but was decided by the supreme court to be unconstitutional on technical grounds. Recently at Butte Judge William Clancy of the district court gave a decision in which he said that he might appoint a receiver at any time for the Boston and Montana company, one of the largest constituent companies of the Amalgamated. The decision was made on the application of John MacGinnis, a prominent holder of stock in the properties controlled by F. Augustus Heinze of the Montana Ore Purchasing company, which has been at war with the Amalgamated for years.

Upon this announcement by Judge Clancy President William Scallon of the Anaconda Mining company and general manager of the Amalgamated issued orders to shut down all the Amalgamated properties in Montana and elsewhere, declaring that the company, unable to secure judicial fairness in the courts, could not continue in business. Since that time Governor Toole has been overwhelmed with petitions signed by thousands of citizens of Montana asking him to call a special session to pass laws to relieve the conditions.

The work of the Amalgamated company will at once resume in various parts of the state. This includes the greater mines in Butte, the smelters of the Washoe company in Anaconda, the largest in the world; the smelters of the Boston and Montana company at Great Falls, also vast in their capacity; the coal mines at Storrs, Belt, Oakdale and in Wyoming; the great quarry in northern Montana and the immense lumber industries in western and northwestern Montana.

The resumption of the Amalgamated properties means the return to work of approximately 20,000 men and the averting of an industrial crisis in Montana, as the Amalgamated Copper operates in at least six different counties. In Butte alone it pays a pay roll of about $25,000 a day. Seven thousand men will resume work in Butte this morning.

Miner Would Smoke at Opera.

WALLACE, Ida., Nov. 11.—Two dead and two wounded are the result of a shooting affray at the entrance of the Wallace Opera House. The dead are: William Fiss, shot through the head; William Cuff, miner, shot three times. The wounded are: Chief of Police McGovern, shot through the right hand; Theater Policeman Rose, shot in the leg. The trouble arose over Cuff insisting on smoking a cigar in the gallery.

LARGE FUNERAL FOR MR. HEGEMAN

Solemn and Touching Services in Trinity Reformed Church.

EULOGIES PRONOUNCED

REV. DRS. CORNELIUS SCHENCK AND JOHN C. BLISS OFFICIATE.

Music Adds to the Impressiveness of the Burial Service—The List of Pallbearers—Flowers as Tokens of Remembrance.

The funeral services of the late Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, Sr., were held Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock from Trinity Reformed Church, where a large number of relatives and friends gathered to honor the memory of one who was highly esteemed. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. Dr. John C. Bliss, formerly pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, was in charge of the services.

The services began with a prayer by Dr. Schenck, after which a quartette composed of Miss Florence Bennett, soprano; Miss Eva Donavan, alto; H. J. Martin, tenor, and J. C. Martin, bass, sang "Nearer, My God to Thee." Arthur L. Titsworth presided at the organ.

Appropriate Scripture reading and remarks by Dr. Schenck followed. He spoke chiefly from the text "Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through out Lord Jesus Christ," and he referred to Paul's view of death; that transitory period before entering into future glory which Paul spoke of as a triumph over the grave.

Dr. Schenck spoke personally concerning the life of the departed and he said that Mr. Hegeman was a person that had the confidence and hope like unto Paul. He could view death times. The wounded are: Chief of Police McGovern, shot through the right hand; Theater Policeman Rose, shot in the leg. The trouble arose over Cuff insisting on smoking a cigar in the gallery.

AMATEURS SCORE A HIT AT THE CASINO

Dramatics and Minstrels Receive One Continuous Round of Well-Deserved Applause.

AN EXCEPTIONAL BILL

AMATEUR SKETCH ARTISTS IN AN UNSURPASSABLE PRODUCTION.

Some Really Clever Acting in "The Shades of Night"—Minstrel Jokes Sparkling—Another Performance Friday.

The dramatic and minstrel entertainment given at the Casino Thursday night for the benefit of the Exchange for Woman's Work was surprisingly good, so good in its entirety that it is difficult to decide whom to praise first or longest. The performance was exclusively by amateur talent.

The entertainment opened with a one-act fantasy, "Shades of Night," by R. Marshall, a rather clever comedy sketch presenting opportunities for the exercise of considerable dramatic ability. The phantoms of Lady Mildred Yester and Sir Tudfore Trivet, lovers of a hundred years ago, appear before their descendants, present day lovers, and enact for them the tragedy that leads to their haunting of the scenes of earth. The sudden transitions from grave to gay, from tragic to sardonic, in the parts of the phantoms, make the strength of the production, and Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell, as Lady Mildred, availed herself brilliantly of the possibilities of the character. The other parts were most acceptably taken by George S. Ring, who was the phantom of Sir Tudfore, and Miss Edith Burt and Frederick G. Goddard, who were the lovers of the present day.

Too high praise can hardly be given the performers in the "Plainfield Sassiety Minstrel Show." The chorus was well trained, the voices strong and tuneful. The jokes of the end men, Messrs. Guilford, Goddard, McGee and Hall, were not only laughing hits, but they were almost twithon exception fresh. And the manner in which they were "sprung" was as effective as the jokes themselves.

The songs were all good. Wallace Guilford delighted everybody with "I'm a Jonah Man" and both he and Frederick Magatte were recalled several times, the latter for his fine work in singing "When My Baby Calls Me Honey." Harold Hall with "In the Sycamore Tree" and "The Queen of the Bungalow" was equally good, and Messrs. Hall and Schelebarger gave a clever performance with banjo and guitar.

"Under the Panama," a song by Miss Madeline Ulah, of Fanwood, assisted by a pickaninny doing a cake-walk, was one of the prettiest numbers on the programme. It was something out of the ordinary, and most cleverly done. The entertainment was concluded by a song and dance by a double quartette as a chorus. Mrs. George Ring, Miss Reinhart, Miss Ostermoor, Miss Martin, Miss Goddard, Fred. Goddard, Harold Hall, Arthur Burt and Willis West were the performers in this.

In addition to the end men in the minstrel show were the following: Willis West, George Schoonmaker, Reeve Stockton, Edward Hobby, Henry Burt, James Middleditb, Messrs. Jefferys, Dodd and Peck, Charles Dupee, Charles Barlow, Messrs. Brainard, Place and Schelebarger, William Rushmore, George Dupee, H. McGee and Mr. Simpson. George Ring was interlocutor. A double quartette which sang familiar negro melodies was composed of Messrs. Guilford, Hall, Schoonmaker, McGee, West, Burt, Magette and Barlow. Introductory and incidental music was by Miss Elizabeth Lamson and Miss Sibyl Anderson, violinists and Mrs. Charles Lewis, pianist. The dramatic director was Douglas L. Houghton. Harold Hall was one of those most influential in promoting the success of the affair.

New Teachers.

Two new teachers have been enrolled in the teaching force in the North Plainfield High School. M. K. W. Heicher, of Pennsylvania, will succeed Mr. Barhite, who has been selected as teacher with a responsible position in one of the great New York schools. Mr. Heicher was a teacher in a collegiate school in the Keystone State. Miss Catherine S. Buell, of Saratoga, has been appointed teacher of the receiving class of the North Plainfield schools to succeed Miss Plumm, of Elizabeth.

Chief Doane, a Guest.

The Somerville Fire Department is making preparations for a firemen's smoker to be held in the rooms of Central Hook and Ladder Company this (Thursday) evening. Among the guests will be the Somerville Board of Commissioners and Chief T. O. Doane, of this city.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

ELECTION OFFICERS DRAW DOUBLE PAY

The Court of Errors and Appeals Affirms the Supreme Court Decision.

COSTS PLAINFIELD $1,000

MEEKER ACT DOES NOT COVER QUESTION OF COMPENSATION.

Those Serving on Election Boards in 1901 and 1902 Entitled to Pay for City and County Elections Which Were Merged.

A decision has been handed down in the Court of Errors and Appeals affirming the judgment of the Supreme Court relative to extra compensation to election officers from the passage of the Meeker Spring Election Act of 1901 until last winter, when the Legislature fixed the compensation. This decision will interest many Plainfielders who have served on the local election boards for several years. According to it, election officers who served at the elections in 1901 and 1902 can collect double pay.

The case decided was a test suit brought by Frank E. Bennett against the city of Orange, which was tried in the Orange district court and resulted in a verdict for Bennett. Justice Hendrickson, when the case was appealed to the Supreme Court, filed an opinion affirming the judgment of the court below.

The plaintiff, an election officer in the city of Orange, brought suit in the District Court in his own behalf and as assignee of the claims of other election officers of that city to recover the compensation claimed to be due them for services performed at the election for city and county officers on November 5, 1901. The claim of each officer was for services at such election as follows: One day's registry, $3; election day, $7, aggregating in all the sum of $240 for which judgment was given, besides costs. The claims of the local officers were practically the same.

By the opinion of the Court of Errors and Appeals compensation for both the general and charter election is allowed the election officers just as though the spring election, wiped out in cities, had taken place. The officers claimed that by reason of the combination of the elections they had extra work to perform.

The Supreme Court found that the Meeker act did not touch the question of compensation, but that a supplement to the general election law of 1898 approved March 22, 1901, regulates that subject matter.

Justice Hendrickson, in his opinion in the Supreme Court, said:

"We think the words of this supplement clearly give to the election officers the compensation provided for their services in connection with each election. This view is strengthened by the fact that this supplement was passed after the enactment of the Meeker act. It must be observed also that the city election is still held, only the time for holding it is changed by the Meeker act to the time of holding the general election."

It is this decision the Court of Errors affirms.

The additional expense to this city as the result of this decision for 1901 and 1902 will be over $1,000. The regular pay for single elections has been given in most of the cities of the State, but the extra bills have been held up awaiting the Court of Errors' decision.

It is said that the local Boards of Elections will institute proceedings against the city of Plainfield if not paid for services in the elections of 1901 and 1902. A demand for the extra pay for those years authorized by the Meeker act has been made upon the city.

The Yellowstone Trail, His Subject.

Friday night's entertainment at the Y. M. C. A. building will be one of the most interesting and instructive of the season. It will be a lecture "On the Yellowstone Trail," descriptive of a week among the wonders of the National Park and illustrated by 100 beautifully and accurately colored succoptican views. The lecturer will be James R. Joy, of North Plainfield, who knows intimately the country he describes and whose ability as an entertaining talker does not need mention among Plainfielders. Among the specially fine views of natural wonders in the park which Mr. Joy will present will be several showing geysers, "paint pots" bear and elk, and the unsurpassed scenery of terrace, lake and canyon.

CAREER OF MR. VANDERBEEK

SKETCH OF DEAD MAN, WHO OCCUPIED PROMINENT POSITION.

With the passing of Andrew Vanderbeek last week continues the gradual thinning out of the ranks of Plainfield's old-time citizens and business men. Few are now living who began business with Mr. Vanderbeek in the spring of 1850. Plainfield was a little country village at that time with all of the territory now lying south of Fifth street a well-tilled farm.

Soon after Mr. Vanderbeek came to Plainfield, he erected a small building on the corner of North and Park avenues, and conducted a marble business in it. In 1873 in the same place, he opened a music and sporting goods store. The building is now occupied by The Daily Press, Moraller & Soe and T. S. Armstrong.

Mr. Vanderbeek was a member of the Union County Board of Freeholders for a number of years and also served as overseer of the poor. Three years ago he retired from active business owing to failing health. He died November 11, 1903, in the seventy-fifth year of his age. He was married early in life to Eliza A. Green, daughter of Warren and Harnia Green, formerly of Franklin, Delhi County, N. Y., and had two children who died in infancy.

Mr. Vanderbeek's death, though not unexpected by his family, came as a great shock to his many friends. All the arrangements for the funeral had been made by himself before his death and the day before he died he repeated his instructions to his wife and nephew, A. M. Vanderbeek, choosing his nephews as pall bearers.

He selected as his undertaker Mr. I. A. Moore, of Watchung avenue, who successfully carried out all the arrangements. A state vault was placed in position to receive the casket. An intimate friend said of him: "We shall miss his genial smile, and the friendly shake of his hand."

SEBRING GETS OFF EASY

FOR OBSTRUCTING GROVE STREET, A FINE OF $10 IS IMPOSED UPON HIM.

Charles P. Sebring, Harry Johns and Fred Emmons again appeared before Recorder Thomas Dond, in the North Plainfield police court, Tuesday night, on a charge of obstructing a highway. They were not represented by counsel, Mr. Sebring conducting his own case and that of his fellows. The case had been postponed for a week pending a settlement of the difficulty which has existed for two weeks between the borough authorities and himself regarding the removal of a house from this city to the borough. The matter has in the meantime been satisfactorily settled.

When the case was called Corporation Counsel Reed read the complaint. Sebring put up the best defense possible but had to admit that the street had been blocked and that he and his workmen had been the cause of the obstruction. Recorder Dond fined him $10, and Harry Johns and Fred Emmons each $1.

The fines were paid under protest, Mr. Sebring declaring that he intended taking the case to a higher court to test the legality of the action against him. It is hinted that here is where the test case of the entire trouble will be made.

Sorensen Acquitted.

Christian Sorensen, alias "Kid" Nelson, the clever second story man who was arrested here on October 8 by Mayor Smalley charged with entering the house of T. U. Dudley, Jr., in the borough, has been acquitted of robbing the homes of Perth Amboy people, in the courts in New Brunswick, and has been re-arrested and taken to Bayonne, on charges of grand larceny preferred against him by people at whose houses he has made several attempts to commit day light burglaries.

Dr. Richards Officiated.

Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, of New York, formerly pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, officiated at the funeral services yesterday of the late Andrew H. Green, "Father of Greater New York."

Tea at Mrs. McCutchen's.

A tea and sale will be held at the home of Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen in North Plainfield, Friday afternoon, from 4 to 6 under the auspices of the Daughters of the Cross.

Indians' Smoker.

After the regular business meeting of Wet ampbek Tribe, No. 129, I. O. R. M., tomorrow night, the tribe will entertain its friends with a smoker.

CAMERA CLUB'S FINE NEW HEADQUARTERS

The Amateur Photographers' Organization to Take Possession of Rooms Dec. 1.

EXHIBITION PLANNED

COLLECTION OF PRINTS TO BE DISPLAYED IN THE NEAR FUTURE.

Modern Appointments in Restored Rooms in Babcock Building—New Leases Purchased—Plenty of Light.

The members of the Plainfield Camera Club hope to be able to open their handsome new rooms in the Babcock building, early in December. For some time the work of refurnishing and fitting up these rooms has been going on, and now it is believed that the rooms are the finest in the State. The lighting facilities have been increased and in place of the valuable lense destroyed in the fire, another one of equal value has been secured.

In the decoration of the rooms a pleasing color scheme has been chosen, and altogether the change is considered even an improvement over the former place.

If possible the rooms will be open early in December with a valuable collection of prints from the "Photo Era." This collection is considered to be one of the best from a photographic standpoint and no doubt all lovers of photography will want to see the exhibit.

In the future the club will plan to *interest and advance the art of photo*graphy among those who have talent in that direction and from time to time lectures and entertainments will be given for that purpose. The club now has a large membership, but it is the desire to add others to the roll; those who are enthusiasts in photography and its branches.

WOMEN SUFFRAGISTS MEET

MRS. F. H. HALL AND MRS. A. R. POWELL AT STATE CONVENTION.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, Mrs. Anna Rice Powell and others of this city are in attendance at the annual convention of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association at Trenton, which convened this morning. Mrs. Hall, who is a daughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, is honorary president of the organization and Mrs. Powell is its auditor.

Wm. Jeffery to Sing.

William Jeffery, who sang "Dream of Paradise" at the Park Avenue Baptist Church on Sunday night, will sing in the illustration lecture entertainment to be given by Rev. Erwin Dennett, Tabernacle Church, of Brooklyn, in the Park Avenue church tomorrow night. The lecture is given under the auspices of the Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters of the church, for the benefit of Mrs. Dassori's mission work in the First Italian Church, of New York. There will be a silver offering.

Relief Association's Appeal.

The Relief Association again appeals to the generous public for donations for the usual Thanksgiving dinners to be given to its beneficiaries. Contributions of money, poultry, fruits and vegetables will be acceptable and may be sent to the Relief rooms, 544, West Front street, on Tuesday, Nov. 24, for distribution the following day. w m

DEGREE WORK EXEMPLIFIED

DISTRICT DEPUTY WOLFSKEIL GUEST OF MASONIC LODGE.

An official visitation of William D. Wolfkeil, district deputy of the Fifth Masonic District, at the regular communication of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., Tuesday, was attended with pleasant features. There was a large attendance of members. The exemplification of a portion of third degree, the commendation of the deputy was extended for the excellent work.

The new organ, recently installed in the lodge rooms, was used for the first time, Garret T. Dunham being the organist. It gave entire satisfaction. During the evening there were vocal selections by William Jeffery and a quartette composed of F. J. Pope, Elmer D. Cutting, William Jeffery and D. W. Jones. A collation was served in the banquet hall.

MARRIED AT BRIDE'S HOME

MISS ELLA M. VAN NEST NOW WIFE OF GEORGE S. ROBSON.

George Scholes Robson and Miss Ella May VanNest, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert H. VanNest, both of North Plainfield, were married yesterday at 10 o'clock, City Judge William N. Runyon officiating. The ceremony was performed at the bride's home on Whitewood avenue, in the presence of the immediate families of the couple. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Smith, of North Plainfield, as bridesmaid.

Mr. and Mrs. Robson left this afternoon on the Clyde line for Florida, where Mr. Robson has taken a position.

HILL & SHUPP'S IMPROVED

ALTERATIONS AFFORD MORE LIGHT IN PROGRESSIVE ESTABLISHMENTS.

Extensive improvements underway at Hill & Shupp's dry goods store are now completed and the firm is better able than ever to attend to the increasing patronage. The basement has been enlarged, and a wide stairway now leads to it from the first floor. More space is devoted to crockery and housefurnishings in the basement. The main stairway has been shifted from the centre of the store to one side, and the office has also been changed accordingly. The partitions have been taken out and in place there are iron columns, giving more room and more light. Instead of the small lights heretofore used, large gas arc lights have been placed about the establishment. Day light prism glass has also been put throughout the store. The front windows have been lowered, making them modern in every respect. The men's furnishing goods department is now practically a store by itself, having been put in a part away from the other departments. Everything about the store presents a clean and attractive appearance and the firm is now ready for its Thanksgiving sale which begins on Saturday.

THE FAIR SUCCESSFUL.

Bazaar to Raise Funds for Free Band Concerts Continues to Draw Crowds.

The fair in Saengerbund Hall, which is being conducted under the auspices of several prominent citizens of North Plainfield, for the purpose in of raising an amount of money sufficient to conduct summer band concerts in the borough next year, was well patronized last nigh in spite of the inclemency of the weather. The members of the Geesag and Turn Verein were guests and the members of the Singing Society gave several vocal renditions. William Jeffery, tenor soloist, rendered several vocal selections which proved to be the star attraction of the evening.

Medal Contest Postponed.

Owing to the stormy weather of last night the temperance entertainment and medal contest, arranged to be held in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union rooms in Madison avenue, was postponed. Another date will be arranged soon for the event.

W. C. T. U. to Entertain.

The members of the W. C. T. U. will entertain the members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., in their rooms on Madison avenue, tomorrow night. There will be a programme of addresses and music.

Borough Physician in Quarantine.

Dr. J. Harvey Buckingham, of Dover street, is confined to his home by a light attack of diphtheria. The house has been quarantined.

PRISONER ASSAULTED CONSTABLE WEAVER

While Being Taken to Jail, James Flynn Knocks His Wife Senseless.

HOT FIGHT IN STREET

SUMMIT CONSTABLE FOUND A BLACKJACK HAD SOOTHING QUALITIES.

Prisoner Abusive and Profane*—Both of the Constables Worse for Wear—Flynn's Past Record.

Constable Peter Weaver, of this city, was harshly used Tuesday in a fight with a fractious prisoner whom he was conducting to jail in Elizabeth. Together with Constable James Crann, of Summit, Constable Weaver arrested and brought into court, before Judge Vail, James Flynn, of Elizabeth, who was charged with assault upon an officer of the law. Not being prepared with bail, Flynn was taken into Sheriff Corbell's private office where his wife went in search of a gentleman friend.

When his wife had gone, Flynn grew abusive and threatened violence to everyone in the office. The sheriff requested that Flynn be removed, and Constables Weaver and Crann were directed to conduct him to jail. The prisoner abused the officers with his tongue all the way up the street. When the three neared Rahway avenue, Mrs. Flynn was encountered. Flynn had an umbrella in his hand and, before the officers could realize what he was doing, he dealt his wife a terrific blow across the face with his umbrella, cutting a deep gash in her head and knocking her senseless. Mrs. Flynn was taken into the sheriff's office while the constables proceeded with their prisoner.

Flynn refused to be quieted and while he walked along with the officers he filled the air with his curses. As the trio approached the jail Flynn made a sudden turn, seized a fence, pulled off a picket and began to belabor Constable Weaver. Crann then came to his brother officer's aid with his black-jack and a big fight ensued until some bystanders ran to the officers' assistance.

Both constables were badly done up and their prisoner also issued from the fray considerably the worse for wear. He did not show any further fight, but had to be carried into the jail.

Flynn's original offence for which he was arrested was kicking an officer *down stairs when he attempted to is*sue a summons upon him.

EPISCOPAL CLERGY GATHER

REV. E. VICARS STEVENSON ENTERTAINS PLAINFIELD CLERICUS.

The Plainfield Clericus was entertained at the Park Avenue Hotel yesterday afternoon by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace Church. After the dinner, Rev. Mr. Fiske, of Somerville, spoke on "The Marginal Readings of the Bible; its History and Use." A general discussion followed.

There was a consideration of plans to invite members of the New York Clericus to address the local organization at its meetings.

The next meeting will be held in New Brunswick, it being a joint affair with the Clericus of that city.

Those present yesterday were Rev. Dr. J. P. Taylor, Rev. E. M. Rodman, Rev. Harrison C. Rush, Rev. Dr. Nelson, Rev. A. C. Phelps, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, Rev. W. Bryce Morrow, of this city; Rev. C. M. Phelps, rector emeritus St. John's Church, New Brunswick; Rev. Mr. Fiske, of Somerville.

Miss Shaw's Funeral.

The funeral services of the late Miss Sarah E. Shaw were held Tuesday afternoon from the First Presbyterian Church. In the absence of Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the Church, who was away, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed Church, conducted the services. There were a number of friends and neighbors present. The interment took place in Hillside Cemetery.

Mr. Fowler Sworn In.

Washington, Nov. 18.—When the House convened yesterday, Charles N. Fowler, representing the Fifth New Jersey District, was sworn in after which the House went into committee of the whole and resumed consideration of the Cuban bill.

HARVARD WINS FROM YALE

NOT THE CAMBRIDGE MEN, BUT THE Y. M. C. A. JUNIOR BASKET BALL TEAM.

Harvard defeated Yale Tuesday, but it was not the football warriors of the Cambridge University that triumphed over the blue. It was the Junior basket ball team of the Y. M. C. A. that goes by the name of Harvard which won by superior team play from its Yale rivals yesterday afternoon in the association gym. Six to one was the score, Lambert making two goals from the floor and C. Doeringer one, for Harvard, and Denton scoring a goal from foul for Yale. The line-up:

Harvard — Deane, C. Doeringer, Lambert, Loughlin and R. Doeringer. Yale—Briggs, Alpaugh, Denton, Van Arsdale and Leland.

Another closely played game among the Juniors was won by "Princeton" over Columbia." The score in this game was 4 to 4 until the last half minute of play when Princeton tallied and made the final score 6 to 4. Caldwell, of Princeton, scored two baskets, Martin, of Princeton, one, and Hodge, of Columbia, two. Line-up:

Princeton—Caldwell, Martin, Ward, F. McClintock and Line. Columbia—Stern, H. Freeman, R. McClintock, Morris, Mackay and Hodge. Fifteen minute halves were played in both games.

The teams will meet again next Tuesday afternoon, Yale playing Princeton, and Harvard fighting it out with Columbia.

THANKSGIVING DAY SERVICES

MINISTERS' ASSOCIATION APPOINTS A COMMITTEE ON UNION MEETING.

The Plainfield Ministers' Association at its regular meeting listened to a paper of more than interest by Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church. His subject was "The Delights of Biography." A discussion followed.

At this meeting a committee consisting of Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of Trinity Reformed Church; Rev. Charles E Herring, of the First Presbyterian Church, and Rev. G. B. Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, were appointed to arrange for the Union Thanksgiving service.

It will probably be held in the First Presbyterian Church. All except the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian and the Episcopal churches will unite in this service.

Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational Church, has been selected to preach the sermon.

FAUST TO BE PRODUCED.

A. E. Willard Amateur Dramatic Club to Give Play in the Casino.

The A. E. Willard Amateur Dramatic Club began Monday night to rehearse for its production of "Faust" which will be presented at the Casino some time during the winter. "Faust," the play, will be given, and not the opera. New scenery and costumes will be obtained specially for this production. Mrs. A. E. Willard, as Marguerite, and A. E. Willard, as Mephistopheles, have played in the parts on the professional stage and Mr. Willard from his experience in charge of a professional company makes an exceptionally able coach. Others who will take prominent parts are William Jeffery and Robert Slater. Mr. Willard states that he has set no definite date for the performance but that it will not be given until all the members of the cast are better perfect in their parts.

A Fascinating Speaker.

Miss Hartwell, a missionary from Foochow, China, who is to speak in the Congregational Church tomorrow afternoon, is a most fascinating speaker and held the absorbed attention of a large audience at the recent meeting of the Woman's Board at New Haven. She will appear in Chinese costume. The public is invited to listen to this address which comes in the afternoon session of the neighborhood missionary meeting which is held with the Congregational Woman's Association on Thursday, November 19. Morning session, 11; afternoon session, 2:30'clock.

L. T. L.'s Programme.

The Loyal Temperance Legion held its regular meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms yesterday afternoon. There was a large attendance of the members and a literary and musical programme was presented.

—Prepare for the holiday season by getting your spices for cooking now. Neuman Brothers have a large assortment of candied citron, lemon peel, orange peel, new currants and seeded raisins.

SICK BENEFITS FOR HOPE'S Y. M. A.

New Scheme Launched at Largely Attended Meeting of Chapel's Association.

MINSTRELS PLANNED

COMMITTEE APPOINTED FOR THIRD ANNUAL PERFORMANCE.

V. W. Nash, Jr., Elected Treasurer to Succeed T. M. Muir—Pool and Billiard Table to be Purchased —Basket Ball Arrangements.

A sick benefit plan for the Hope Young Men's Association was formed Tuesday at an especially important meeting of the association in the chapel. The benefit is for $5.50 weekly and will be extended to all sick members in good standing. A sick and visiting committee was chosen, consisting of Rev. L. B. Howard, chairman; John Coss and William N. Runyon.

First practises for the minstrel show will be held next Monday night. The show will be given on three nights and a matinee and as planned will be the best ever put on the boards by the association. There will be new talent, new features, new costumes and entirely different acts including a farce comedy. The show will be given the latter part of January or early in February. Judge W. N. Runyon is to be full charge of the rehearsals. These sub-committees have been appointed:

Ticket and advertising committee, G. B. Firstbrook, chairman; J. Duckworth, C. A. Dixon, F. J. Warnes, W. Dilts and Raymond McVoy; music committee, W. N. Runyon, chairman; George Coss, W. Dilts, H. Flock and Charles Vincent; joke committee, M. D. Sweeney, chairman; Bertram C. Firstbrook and J. H. Coss; stage committee, V. W. Nash, Jr., chairman; W. Morton, E. Hoffman and A. B. Marsh; vaudeville committee, Bertram Firstbrook, chairman; M. D. Sweeney and S. Evans; play committee, J. H. Coss, chairman; T. Chamberlain, W. L. Hetfield, Jr., and W. M. Firstbrook.

As treasurer of Hope Y. M. A. to fill the unexpired term of T. M. Muir, resigned, V. W. Nash, Jr., was appointed and will serve until next March. Judge Runyon was made a committee of one to obtain a pool and billiard table and have it placed in the gallery of the gymnasium some time during the present week. The matter of bowling alleys was laid over until more bids for the contract of building them could be obtained.

Practises in basketball will start immediately for the association and two nights a week have been set apart for the purpose of getting the candidates in shape. Tuesdays and Fridays will be the practise nights. Beginning the week of December 1, there will be one game every week with teams from Plainfield and surrounding towns. Manager Fred Wharton has begun work on his schedule.

In a New Home.

S. Scheuer & Co., the grocers and butchers, will open their new store on West Front street, in the building formerly occupied by J. A. Smith & Brother, tomorrow morning. The extensive improvements underway during the past number of weeks are now completed and the firm believing that its store is the equal of any in the State, invite your inspection and solicit your patronage.

Another Sea-Food Market.

Fred Ivamy, of the Rogers' seafood market in West Second street, has opened a branch market on Park avenue, opposite North avenue, where he will sell the best fish for cash at low prices. This maket is handy for those who are not able to go to the West Second street place and the same courteous treatment will be given as at the old stand.

A Musical Treat.

The Rutgers College Glee and Mandolin Club will give an entertainment tomorrow evening in the Parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild. An interesting programme has been provided.

West End's Routine Work.

The members of the West End Hose Company met last evening in the headquarters on Harrison street and transacted routine business. The tax exemption was discussed informally.

Elected to Ministers' Association.

Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, has been elected a member of the Plainfield Ministers' Association.

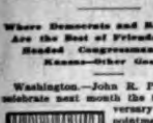
THE CIVIL SERVICE

Nearly Ten Years of Service for Commissioner Proctor.

AN UNPOPULAR DEPARTMENT

Where Democrats and Republicans Are the Best of Friends—A Red-Headed Congressman from Kansas—Other Gossip.

Washington.—John R. Proctor will celebrate next month the tenth anniversary of his appointment as civil service commissioner.



John R. Proctor

He has had an extraordinary record in that position. His term of service represents almost exactly one-half the life of the commission and he has survived republican and democratic administrations with equal facility. He has seen the entire personnel of the commission except himself change no less than four times since he has held the office of president. Eight commissioners have come and gone, beginning with Theodore Roosevelt and ending with James R. Garfield.

Curiously enough, Proctor was first appointed president of the commission on the recommendation of Mr. Roosevelt who was then nearing the end of his service and who proposed Proctor to President Cleveland as the best man to keep the commission going in a democratic administration along the lines laid down. Roosevelt and Cleveland were the only two men who knew anything about the appointment in advance, for Proctor was never much of a political factor. At the time he was state geologist of Kentucky, a place he had occupied for 13 years, and he was a member of the jury of awards for mines and mining at the Columbian exposition.

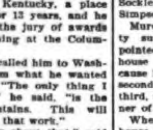
When Cleveland called him to Washington and told him what he wanted Proctor objected. "The only thing I am interested in," he said, "is the Appalachian mountains. This will take me away from that work."

"Oh, don't bother about that," said the president. "You won't have much to do here. Whenever you want to go away for a month or two, we can fix it up easily enough."

So Proctor accepted, but he hasn't yet been able to get away as Cleveland promised him.

Proctor and Roosevelt.

Mr. Proctor is a close personal friend of the president—a friendship which has continued now for many years.



Two Ghosts

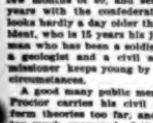
It is true that he classes himself as a democrat, but his political leanings are not strong—he voted for McKinley in 1896 and 1900. Besides he is an expansionist of a radical type, and on that point he is thoroughly in harmony with the president.

But politics aside, the president and the civil service commission are decidedly chummy. Proctor is at the white house about as much as he is at the commission. He is a great favorite with the children, as well as with the old folks, and, altogether, he is almost one of the family. He rides with the president oftener than anybody else, and that is one of the ties that bind the two together. He is a splendid horseman, with all the native Kentuckian's love for a fine animal. He is fond of outdoor sports of every kind, and although he is within a few months of 60, and served several years with the confederate army, he looks hardly a day older than the president, who is 15 years his junior. But a man who has been a soldier, a farmer, a geologist and a civil service commissioner keeps young by the force of circumstances.

A good many public men think that Proctor carries his civil service reform theories too far, and that he is too much enamored of the machinery of the system. But they know he is honest and pugnacious, and they respect him even while they disagree with him sometimes.

Civil Service Experiences.

The civil service commission once in awhile has an interesting experience. Newly elected senators and representatives generally come to Washington with a prejudice against the commission, and a quiet determination to wipe it off the face of the earth. They don't stay here long before they begin to realize that however unpopular that body may be the only thing to do is to grin and bear it. The civil service law never was popular with congress, and yet it has continued to war strong in spite of its unpopularity.



How Rules Were Too Hot.

The fighting aggressiveness, first of Commissioner Roosevelt and then of Commissioner Proctor, has had much to do with this. Even the most hardened opponent of the system could not withhold admiration from two such manly advocates.

Every little while the commission breaks out with a new set of regulations which prove a stumbling block for those in search of knowledge. That circumstance gives rise to some amusing experiences. Not long ago Senator Pettus, of Alabama, drifted into the commission's offices. Senator Pettus is the oldest man in congress, a hard-headed and able citizen with a keen sense of humor. He had a problem for Commissioner Proctor to solve. The commissioner explained it all out in great detail, while Pettus listened gravely. Finally Proctor asked him if it was perfectly clear.

"Yes," said the senator. "It is clear enough; but the trouble with your infernal commission is that whenever I come up here and get the rules down fine I don't have time to ride down in the elevator before you bring out a new set of regulations and I have to learn them all over again."

"I'm glad you speak of that, senator," said the commissioner, gravely. "That elevator is old fashioned and we've been bothered about its slowness for a long time. I wish you would try to get an appropriation for a new one."

The old senator looked at the commissioner blankly for a minute. Then he turned and walked out of the room. "You people are altogether too much for me," he snorted as he disappeared through the door.

A Red-Headed Congressman.

Victor Murdock is the handsome young fellow who has just been elected to congress from Kansas to represent the district left vacant by the promotion of Representative Long to the senate—the same district that looked fame for a time as the home of Sockless Jerry Simpson.

Shooting for Red Heads

Murdock is pretty sure to be pointed out in the house — first because he is young; second, because he is good looking, and third, on account of the peculiar manner of his election.

When Mr. Long retired from the house to become a senator young Mr. Murdock promptly announced himself as a candidate for the succession. It looked rather dubious at the start, for he was a new hand at it and not very well known in the district; but he hit on a scheme that proved a winner.

Murdock has a superb suit of red hair. There were 17 other candidates in the field, and one of them also had red hair. So Murdock went to him and struck a bargain. It was agreed that the two should make their canvass on the red-headed issue, and that at an opportune moment the weaker of the two should withdraw from the race in favor of the other. Murdock then set to it. He made a whirlwind campaign on the cry that the red-headed men ought to be represented in congress. He quoted statistics to show that one man out of ten had a red head, and that proportion did not hold in congress. He made an impregnable case on that issue, and the other red-headed man followed suit. The novelty of the canvass caught the fancy of the district, and when at the psychological moment the other, who was found to be the weaker, withdrew the momentum was so strong that Murdock won the nomination in a walk. Then he went into the campaign for election on the same issue, and won out again.

Uniforms at the White House.

Secretary Loeb has ordered that the door keepers at the white house shall hereafter wear uniforms to distinguish them from the crowds who frequent the executive mansion.

The Uniformed Attendant

A lot of fun is being poked at this proposition, and there has been a good deal of humorous talk about the aping of royalty and all that. But the uniforms are likely to stay for awhile, at any rate until it can be demonstrated whether they really are a good thing or not.

Away back in McKinley's administration John Addison Porter gave a similar order and the uniforms appeared in due time, but there was so much comment on them that one day they disappeared from view as quietly as they had come.

Secretary Loeb believes that this time they will demonstrate their usefulness and that before long the gossip about them will cease. He intends to give them a chance.

The uniforms are very simple affairs, hardly distinguishable from ordinary dress, except for the modest brass buttons.

Capt. Loeffler the veteran door keeper at the president's own door, will not wear a uniform, although his army rank entitles him to it; and Arthur Simmons, who has stationed himself at the secretary's door in ebony watchfulness for lo, these many years, will also continue to wear his simple suit of black. The ushers in the private part of the house, the old executive mansion, will continue to appear in [illegible]

GEOGRAPHICAL FRIENDSHIPS.

Those Which Depend Altogether Upon Being Located in the Same Neighborhood.

A true friend, of course, is one whose bodily presence, agreeable though it be, is not essential to the continuance of the relation, says the Week's Progress. Such a one we meet after a ten years' separation with as little awkwardness as if we had parted yesterday. We need not even write to each other, except as we desire to know the facts of daily progress or retrogression and satisfy our pride in the other's achievements or express our personal sympathy over his disappointments. Such friendships are few, one or two for every man or woman who is capable of deep feeling, and that is usually all. But there is a larger minor grade of friendships that are based upon propinquity. We make a chum with because we go to the same college, or travel with on the same train or boat, or stop with at the same hotel, or sit near in the same office, or chat with at the same club belongs to this geographical class. Some of him may become a deeper friend, but as a rule our relation with him depends entirely upon certain common interests, business, social or intellectual, and does not extend beyond the gratification or the desire to talk to or meet the one who will not jar. That desire, truly, is the foundation of all the common human interrelations; without it, social relations would be purely sporadic.

UNLUCKY ROYAL NAMES.

That of Peter Has Been Particularly Conspicuous for Bringing Misfortune.

The Christian name of Peter has never been fashionable among royalties. This country has never had a monarch baptized as Peter, and in other countries the Peters have been unlucky, says the London Chronicle. Peter, or Pedro I., emperor of Brazil, abdicated after an uneasy reign, and his son, Pedro II., was driven to Europe by a revolution, and died in Paris in 1891. Pedro, the Cruel, of Castile and Leon, was slain by his brother in single combat. Peter the Great, of Russia, was guilty of frightful excesses; his grandson, Peter II., reigned only three years, and died of smallpox at the age of 15. Peter III. was dethroned and strangled by conspirators. Peter I., of Servia, has already a brutal massacre behind him. John is another name avoided by royalties. We had only one John, and the experience was unhappy. In Scotland such was the popular repugnance to the name that when the son of Robert II. ascended the throne he changed his name from John to Robert. Few of the Jameses died in their beds, and the alteration to Charles was not a successful experiment. Edward, George, William and Henry have, on the whole, been fortunate names for our sovereigns to bear.

AMERICANS NOT ECONOMICAL.

Such Is the Opinion of a French Journalist Recently a Visitor in This Country.

"There is no country in the world where people are less economical and work harder than in the United States."

This is the proposition laid down by Jules Huret, the Paris journalist, who has been seeing Yankeeland through both eyes, reports the Chicago Inter Ocean.

"In France," he writes, "one sees all over the streets the sign, 'Repairing done here.' In the United States they do no repairs. When clothes, shoes or furniture have served their time they are thrown away. Machines ten years old are sold for old iron, houses are torn down to make room for more modern ones."

He notes the wide use of silk in America among men, and remarks the privileges granted by the United States to the silk manufacturers, their exemption from taxes for a certain number of years, etc.

"France, he says, would do well to emulate this example and not permit herself to be distressed, even in her silks, by this marvelous young country.

SHERIFF SAVED THE DAY.

In Order to Prevent Bloodshed He Was Compelled to Do Some Killing.

Opie Read, the novelist, was telling of his experience as a journalist in Kentucky some years ago, says the New York World.

"There was a good deal of news," he said, "such as shootings and knifings, but this news was not regarded as important and little attention was paid to it. I remember once when a local feud broke out afresh, when members of the opposing sides met at the county seat.

"There were hot words, a blow was struck, and weapons were drawn, when the sheriff interfered. He loudly announced that he would not tolerate any violence, ordered the parties to separate, and when his orders were not obeyed he began shooting.

"I forget whether he killed eight or nine, but I know that in describing the incident in my paper I commended the sheriff for his prompt action and bravery. I concluded the paragraph: 'There is no doubt but for the prompt action of the sheriff there would have been bloodshed.'"

Death and Increase.

There is one physician to each 600 inhabitants in the United States—in cities it is one to 500. Death and increase of population make room for about 2,000 new doctors a year, but the 156 medical schools are turning out [illegible] 2,000.

British View of West Point

SURROUNDINGS BEAUTIFUL AND INSPIRING AND ARCHITECTURE OF THE BEST

A CORRESPONDENT of the London Times, who recently visited the United States, has many interesting things to say about our great military training school.

West Point, he writes among other things, as its name in part suggests, is a point on the left bank of the Hudson river, about 45 to 50 miles from the sea. The point stands out well into the stream, commanding both reaches which form the angle of the river. In front of the new obsolete defenses that defend the waterway on the far bank, rise the mountains of verdure-clothed hills which finally mass themselves into the Highlands. Owing to the curious formation of the hills the Hudson here is narrow, deep and turgid, so that the race of its congested waters, if it were not for the forest setting to the background, might remind the traveler of the pent-up Nile in the Shabluka cataract. The view to the north is perfect, since the river way is clear as far as Newburg town, nestling against the mountain side and gleaming white in contrast with the forests in summer green. The landscape is like some stageland. Historic Newburg, where Washington is fabled to have refused a crown, terminates the view, but on either side of the middleway of the river great buttresses and promontories of wood-dressed rock jut out into midstream, while, almost flush with the water level on either Hudson bank, the wondrous handicraft of man interlaces with the supreme work of nature. Here tunneling some gigantic promontory, there glistening upon a treatie causeway, the railroad trails follow the line of the river in its sinuous course. Then shut the river from your view, and turn and look inland, where the cadets learn the theory of war. West Point itself is close upon 200 feet above the level of the Hudson.

But beyond it the hills rise to double and treble this height. As with the Highlands, they are densely wooded, and for the moment, as one marks the one-storied bungalows and veranda-inclosed villas of the post, one's thoughts turn to far-off India and the Himalayas. In scenery, atmosphere and surroundings, but for the Hudson, West Point is not unlike an Indian hill station.

The summit of the point is flat and clear of trees. This is the parade ground, and round it are grouped the various institutions of the academy, the quarters of the married instructors, and the barracks in which the detachments of the regular army are housed. On the river side there are several tiers of batteries. These, of course, are obsolete, but they serve their purpose in furnishing instruction schools for the cadets.

There is nothing mean about the architecture with which the United States government has surrounded its military cadets. The headquarters buildings, the riding school, cadets' barracks, library and gymnasium are all fine buildings, and to these have now been added the garrison officers' mess house and the Cullum Memorial hall, the former a beautiful clubhouse, erected at government expense, for the 60-odd officers who hold appointments as academy instructors; the latter a magnificent public entertainment hall, with spacious ballroom, theater, library and underground bedrooms, raised in the interest of the cadets and past graduates from funds bequeathed by Gen. Cullum.

The little post is beautified with other memorials. Near the flagstaff, to the north of the parade ground, stands a handsome monument to the memory of all West Point graduates who fell during the civil war. There is another monument to perpetuate the memory of the late Maj. Dale's command, which was annihilated by Indians in 1835. Dotted about the post are statues of eminent American generals, and into prominent rocks the names of famous battles have been inserted, the lettering usually being of gun metal, a trophy from that particular engagement it commemorates. Altogether, the surroundings of West Point are beautiful and inspiring; and, far removed from the evil influences of town life, the cadets find there just the necessary relaxation to save them from mental breakdown. A certain amount of social intercourse is open to them through their dancing hall. The countryside in the environs of West Point is studded with the country villas of wealthy New Yorkers. During the summer there is no difficulty in arranging partners for the dancing lessons, as all fashionable New York has fled the city to escape the heat. Thus the cadets obtain just sufficient social intercourse to make them polished gentlemen, but not enough to turn their heads.

SICKLES FOR ALDERMAN.

Famous New York War Veteran Seeks Comparatively Humble Office in New York.

Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, who has been nominated for alderman in New York on the fusion ticket, has an illustrious war record. He was born October 20, 1825 and after receiving a common school education learned the printer's trade

Then he studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1846. Next he became secretary of legation in London, later being elected state senator in New York, and serving in congress from 1857 to 1861. Entering the union army, he won promotion to a major generalship and, though he lost a leg at Gettysburg, continued in active service until 1869, when he was appointed minister to Spain. Later he served another term in congress.

BUFFALO BILL'S WIT.

Doctor Thought He Was Slightly Smart, But He Was No Match for Mr. Cody.

William F. Cody was relating a story which concerned an Indian who had met with an accident in a "Buffalo Bill" show. It was necessary to amputate the Indian's leg, and in the description of this operation Cody was interrupted frequently by a young doctor who injected technical and medical terms into the straight vernacular of the scout. He was irritated, but ignored the doctor. "A few days after the operation," continued the narrator, "the Indian learned that his leg had been burned. With a whoop he leaped from his bed and jumped upon the doctor with both feet."

"Jumped with both feet after an operation," shouted the doctor, exulting in his exposure of the great scout's absurd story.

"I said upon the 'doctor with both feet,'" explained Cody, "in order to distinguish him from the other hospital physician who had only one foot, having put the other into people's affairs so often that he lost it."

Smallest Woman in the World to Be Visited by the Stork

Chiquita, Famous Midget, Preparing for the Advent of a Tiny Human Doll—Married Under Thrillingly Romantic Circumstances.

CHIQUITA, the smallest normally developed woman in the world, is busy over the tiniest and the daintiest of laces, and the softest flannels, and sweetest and oddest little doll clothes. It is because the stork—that same long legged German fellow Herr Grimm used to tell about, with flapping wings, fluttering on the chimney tops of palaces and cottages for many a century—is preparing to pay her a visit at Springfield, O.

Only the other day the secret leaked out. Chiquita, attending a carnival in the Ohio town, tripped and nearly fell, and her physician told her she must forego receiving the public for some time.

Her boy husband—they called him a boy when he eloped with and married her, a little more than a year ago, at the age of 17—just walks about the house, rubbing his hands and smiling so pleasantly that it makes every one who sees him feel happy, too. Chiquita, who is no bigger than a doll herself, being only 26 inches tall, is so glad that it is all her doctor can do to keep her from standing on her head, a pastime she indulged in up to the time she assumed the dignities of wifehood.

Chiquita, off the stage, was known as Espiridiono Cenda. She was born in Matanzas, Cuba, in 1870, and is the eldest of five children, all others of normal size. Although she is a little more than two feet tall, she is admirably proportioned. Her hand is three inches. A finger ring three-eighths of an inch in diameter is too large for her thumb. Her head is shapely, and covered with glossy black hair reaching below her waist.

Frank C. Bostock, the animal trainer, met her in Atlanta, Go. He made her a tempting offer, and she signed a contract with him for a term of years. When Bostock opened at the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo, Chiquita was one of the chief features of the show. Up to this time she was heart whole and fancy free.

In the Bostock band was a cornetist named Tony Woeckner. He was only a lad, but he was popular. In time Tony's attentions to Chiquita became so marked that visitors commented on it, and the player folk said: "Tony is too young," and "Chiquita is too little."

One night the theater in which Chiquita played caught fire. Tony was accused of negligence and was discharged.

They decided to elope. One midnight Chiquita stole out of the theater alone. She ran to a corner, where a friend of the bridegroom-elect was in waiting. This friend, a tall man, carried her in his arms to Tony, a short distance away, in a carriage. A magistrate made them man and wife.

After the marriage a sad discovery was made by the newly mated couple.

CHIQUITA AND HER HUSBAND.

No hotel would receive them. All the clerks made the same reply:

"We don't take children."

Meantime the show people were searching for the midget. A clown, impressed into the searching party before he had a chance to remove the paint from his face, discovered Tony and thy Chiquita walking a lonely street hand in hand, in a vain endeavor to find shelter for the night. The clown picked up the bride and ran off with her to Bostock.

Her husband had many troubles trying to get her back. He tried the courts, but Bostock kept him jumping around over the country in a lively fashion. Tony succeeded in getting his wife by stratagem one night in Elgin, Ill. Before the managers knew what was astir, he had whirled her into Chicago, out of the city again, and away to New York, where restraining orders were secured by the court, and the two were not molested.

BRIDE OF THIRTEEN.

Sought a Divorce in an English Court, But the Judge Would Not Grant Decree.

One of the most remarkable stories ever told in the divorce court of London was related to Mr. Justice Bucknill in connection with the petition of Louisa Alice Weary for a decree of nullity in respect to her marriage with William Weary, of Grays, Essex. The ground of the petition was that she was induced so go through the ceremony of marriage through the fear and duress of her father, and that she did not understand the nature of the ceremony. The husband did not defend the action.

Mr. Marsham, counsel for Mrs. Weary, explained that in 1891 his client was living at Grays with her father, William Munn. She was 13 years of age, while William Weary was 14 or 15, and lived with his parents at Purfleet. It was discovered that the girl was likely to become a mother, and to avoid a scandal she was taken to an aunt in London by her father, and criminal proceedings were threatened by the police against Weary.

On her father's instructions she was married at the registry office at Grays.

In reply to the judge, Mrs. Weary said that she did not know what the ceremony was that she went through.

His Lordship—Did you know what the wedding ring was for?

Mrs. Weary—I did not. I had seen rings on people's fingers. I did not exactly know the nature of the ceremony.

The judge dismissed the petition. He could not, he said, accept Mrs. Weary's statement.

An Island Without Mice.

There is something so disagreeable to mice in the soil of one of the islands in Saint Magnus bay, on the west of Shetland, that the little pests cannot exist there. To test the truth of this statement, several mice, at various times, were taken there, but the soil proved so uncongenial that they soon died.

DOG CALLS FOR MAIL.

Goes to the Post Office Every Sunday Morning and Takes His Place in Line.

A collie dog that will go to the post office Sunday morning, take his place in line, and ask for the mail of his master is owned by Elmer E. Pyle, of Benton Harbor, Mich.

"ANYTHING FOR PYLE?"

The dog learned its trick from seeing Mr. Pyle make his way to the carrier's window Sunday morning. It is accustomed to rear up on its hind legs, place its forepaws on the shelf, and then to the carrier, who knows it, the dog barks out his want and it is quickly filled. Receiving the bunch of letters and papers, the dog trots off to his home, holding the stuff in its mouth until taken out by its master.

This is only one of the tricks of the dog, which is called Max. It will meet the carrier on week days in the street and, looking him squarely in the face, will say, as plainly as if he could speak:

"Anything for Pyle?"

If there is, the dog gets the mail and takes it to the shop where his master stays on week days.

Max's almost constant companion is a bay horse eight years old, called Jerry. The dog rides Jerry bareback, the latter seeming to have no objection. The horse has a strange fancy for the dog, and being told to kiss Max deliberately lowers its head and licks the face of the collie. Not long since the horse succeeded in pulling a board off his manger and got his head fastened in the opening. Max discovered the horse's predicament and raced off after Mr. Pyle and brought him to the rescue.

TIP PHILOSOPHY.

An Argumentative Patron Gives a Waiter Some Fine Points Evolved from Experience.

It was a new philosophy to a waiter in a Broadway restaurant, and he evidently did not understand it. The patron had finished his meal, paid his check and was disposing of his change, while the waiter lingered near with his eyes on the disappearing coins, says the New York Herald.

"Are you waiting for a tip?" asked the patron.

"Just as you please, sir," answered the waiter.

"Then I fear my pleasure will not be yours," replied the patron. "The trouble is that your philosophy is all wrong, and with wrong philosophy you are sure to fall into all sorts of errors."

"Yes, sir," said the waiter, not understanding a word.

"Now," continued the patron, "you have the tip reversed from what it should be. You put it wrong end to. I pay the proprietor for food and service and honors are easy between us. Now, where do you come in? My wants make you necessary. I really create your employment.

"Without a patron to the house you would be without a job. You are under obligation to me for making your presence here necessary, so if you put tips on a philosophical basis you should pay me. I am the reason for the proprietor hiring you."

He walked out and the waiter stood unmoved.

TALK OF THE RATTLER.

Philadelphia Zookeeper Says the Snake Sounds a Call with Its Rattles.

"What is a rattlesnake's rattle for?" said John Lover, the zoo keeper, in response to a question by a Philadelphia Record man.

"It is a call," he resumed, answering his own question. "The rattlesnake with it calls his mate. A man was telling me the other day that he studied the rattle question last year in the west. He said it is mainly as a call that the rattle is used, though different sounds can be made with it, and these sounds appear to have different meanings.

"Once this man saw seven hogs attack a rattlesnake. The reptile began to fight pluckily, and while he fought he rattled loud and long. Three other snakes came with great speed and courage to his aid. A dreadful battle followed. The snakes, though they fought well, were all killed.

"The rattle is also said to charm or hypnotize birds so that the snake can seize them easily, but in this story my friend doesn't take much stock. It's as a call, he says, that the rattle is used most—a love call, generally, with which the male snake summons his mate."

HOT-WEATHER ENTERPRISE.

How a Newspaper Reporter Worked a "Beat" on a Less Inventive Rival.

One of the most cheering sights of the day was displayed to passers-by in Park Row a little after noon, says a New York exchange. A very solemn, fat reporter came down out of a newspaper office with a camera and a thermometer. He wandered about the open space disconsolately and drippingly looking for the hottest spot. After awhile he found a handy place near the Franklin monument which seemed to be finished to receive sun rays than any other. There he solemnly set up the thermometer, waited until the mercury refused to rise any higher, and then photographed the record. Then solemnly and drippingly he retired to the picture department of his newspaper.

A few minutes later another young man, from a rival newspaper, appeared in a secluded spot in Williams street, near the bridge arches, and likewise produced a thermometer. He, however, produced a match which he lighted and held under the bulb of the thermometer while another reporter with a camera took a picture. Thus are "beats" scored by the truly great.

Lions Eat Laborers.

According to Sr. George Whitehouse, the manager and chief engineer of the Uganda railway, with the exception of a few unimportant temporary bridges which will have to be replaced by steel structures, all being within 30 miles of the lake terminus, the line from Mombasa to Port Florence is completed. Trains now run through without change of carriage from the sea to the heart of Africa, a distance of 584 miles. The same gentleman, discussing the difficulties which have to be surmounted, says: Not the least of these has been caused by the wild animals along the line. Lions very seriously interfered with the work of construction and at mile 132 once nearly brought work to a standstill. No fewer than 27 railway employes have been carried off by lions, and probably there are more of whom there is no record.

Flies in the Parlor.

"I was in water waist deep, saving my hogs," writes Mrs. Andrew Harton from her home on the outskirts of North Lawrence, to the Kansas City Journal. "I carried 12 shoats, weighing about 50 pounds apiece, into my parlor, and they stayed there four days and nights. I tied my cow on the porch, and the cow and two hogs staged there two days and nights, for the water was right up to the porch."

THE SILLY GIRL.

The Impression She Makes and the One She Thinks She Makes.

"Ah tee hee! Ah tee hee! Tackit! Tackit! Gr-r-r-."

Who has not been enraged at some time or other by that most enervating and senseless sound, a giggle? And there never is any cause for it so far as any one can see.

Some doctors say giggling is due to an affection of the nerves and ought to be treated gently, but I think it is an affection of the brain and ought to be nipped in the bud by the mother of the girl as promptly and as effectively as possible. A merry, smiling girl is a sight worth seeing, a girl with a sense of humor is a treasure, but a silly girl is a pest most people would run away to avoid if they could. The trouble is they can't always.

I have come to the conclusion that the silly girl thinks she is attractive. If she did not she would not confine her giggling almost exclusively to public places, where she can be seen and appreciated.

"Oh, I just had the silliest" was the excuse given by one schoolgirl after she had giggled through an entire performance of an eminent tragedian and had suddenly during the climax burst into such a snort that an usher requested her to vacate her seat.

"Oh, she is young. She will get over it. It is because she is so full of spirits," you hear a fond mother explain. Oh, but she won't get over it until she receives some humiliating lesson, and don't flatter yourself, my dear madam, that it is because she is full of spirits.

How inane it is to talk to a girl whose hand is always halfway up to her mouth to hide a perpetual giggle! How wearing to the nerves to have to live with her!

INEXPENSIVE FURNITURE.

Plain Shapes In Mission Style Which Will Furnish Prettily.

The plain, unpolished mission furniture has grown very popular of late, because it is artistic, unpretentious and low priced.

At first it was used mainly for smoking and dining rooms, but now a variety of shapes make it possible to use it for other rooms as well. It is particularly effective when combined with brightly colored tapestries, cretonnes, etc.

The cut shows a bedroom furnished after this fashion. The green walls have a darker green and red frieze. The windows are long, with fancy panes. The washstand is in front of one window, and the dressing table is in the alcove formed by the other. There is an art nouveau bed, and the coverlet is embroidered in green and white. The china is green and yellow, stained wood frames cover the walls, and the floor is of polished wood. A couple of easy chairs, with green and yellow cretonne cushions, add much to the comfort.

WINTER FASHIONS.

Coats Have Cape Effects—Military Shapes in Style.

Nearly all the coats are made with a cape effect on the shoulders, which gives an appearance of smallness to the waist. This cape effect is even seen on coats belonging to walking costumes, although in this sort of costume it is sometimes omitted.

The French sailor, or toque, made entirely of feathers, is very smart with a tailor made suit. The prettiest colors are cardinal red and a deep iridescent green.

Rough brown beaver-like fabrics are trimmed with strapped effects, which are very fetching. A costume of this description recently seen was ankle length, and the coat was loosely belted in with a band of oriental embroidery consisting of different shades of brown. This embroidery trimmed both the skirt and the jacket. With this was worn a flat, furry brown hat trimmed with two birds, shaded in brown and green.

All white furry French sailors are more than ever to the fore and are pretty worn with gun metal gray or black costumes.

Many of the new skirts are certainly extensively trimmed toward the base by means of fuches or tucks, while braiding in various designs and undulating bands appliqued on flounces of cloth are effective and in harmony with the sloping shoulder capes. These are flounced or ruched round the border and invariably make a dip toward the waist at the back.

The picture shows a white cloth coat trimmed with strappings put on like tucks.

HANDSOME GOWNS.

Chiffon Dresses For Formal Occasions—Rich Appliques.

Gowns of chiffon for dressy occasions are very smart, and there is a new make of chiffon which will stand a good deal of wear. It is very smart in brown shades trimmed with ecru or dyed lace to match, combined with a soft, tucked front and huge underSleeves.

Velvet bows figure largely on veiling gowns, and they are combined with rosettes and puffings of chiffon. Sometimes the huge chiffon undersleeves are tied in with velvet bows at the wrists.

Square applications of figured or plain velvet are very smart around the lower edge of a loose sack coat or a full sun plaited skirt.

Heavy embroideries of wool and chenille are used to embellish white cloth tailor made gowns and in general costumes in pale colors.

Heavy knotted fringe is still all the rage as a trimming for dressy coats and gowns.

As fashions are of the early Victorian period the fabrics of that era are revived, and we can hardly imagine an early Victorian frock without its accompaniment of taffeta ruches and velvet spots. Indeed we gladly welcome such a revival, for taffeta, let me tell you, is a worthy fabric for what may be termed the "best" frock, either for day or evening. It is substantial and its smartness undeniable, and we should be very pleased to see it enjoying a foremost place on fashion's list, giving place only, as the colder weather advances, to chiffon velours, the new fur plushes and the abnormally thick fabrics of the silkeline type.

The cut shows a crepe de chine waist trimmed with fine valenciennes insertion.

WOMEN MANAGERS

Some of Them Do Not Know How to Manage Their Own Property

"IT'S mostly a case of management in this world," remarked the wise woman.

"Of course, I see," interrupted, "you mean," snapped the bachelor. His dinner had disagreed with him, and he felt pessimistic.

"Don't let an incompetent cook put you at odds with the whole sex. But, seriously, I am willing to admit part of your statement. There are lots of women in this world who are shocking bad managers, and they ought to be ashamed of themselves."

"You might divide them into three classes—those who can't manage their personal affairs, those who can't manage their households and those who can't manage other people," growled the bachelor.

"And not a bad idea," she agreed. "Take the first class, for instance. Who is not familiar with the woman who always dashes in at the last minute, who goes through life out of breath, keeping appointments by the skin of her teeth, so to speak? She never has time to brush her hair properly, to do her accounts or to write her letters. And whose fault is it half the time? Her own. She does not manage properly. She dawdles over one thing to rush through a hundred as a consequence. And who has not met the woman whose wardrobe never 'jibes,' whose hats never match her gowns and who always has something the matter with every dress she owns? She is the woman who spends recklessly on small things and never has any money for the large ones. She will go out to buy a winter suit and happen across a millinery and neckwear sale. Result, two new hats and half a dozen 'ridiculously cheap' fancy stocks, but no suit. And she will pay $5 or $7 for tulle bows and artificial flowers to go on old gowns and then have to wear her shabby last winter's shoes. Of course this sort of woman never keeps accounts nor does she try to apportion her income in a sensible manner—that is, she may try for two or three days, but she never keeps it up."

"And the woman who can't manage her household? Aha!" chortled the bachelor.

"Yes; the woman who cannot manage her own household. I agree with you in saying 'aha!' She is a wonder. The family eats partridge one day and pea soup the rest of the week. She economizes by shaving a dollar off the servants' wages. Result, a poor servant who throws away more in one week than a decent one would in a month, and as the poor servant has no art at fixing over things the family lives on roasts, steaks and chops, while the remnants are thrown away and the bones ditto, while the soup they should furnish is bought in cans, and the bread and pastry are also purchased from a nearby expensive bakery."

"And of course the servants and the children run wild?"

"Why not? There is no routine, no fixed time for anything. The silver may be cleaned on Tuesday or on Wednesday or on any old day or not at all for that matter. And the children learn scraps of everything inside and outside school and not enough of any one thing to amount to a row of pins. They also learn to spend money recklessly and to do just about as they please until one day they are brought face to face with life and fail miserably. Then what happens? The weak, foolish, fond manager of a mother blames them for being extravagant, superficial, unreliant and lazy, all of which she herself taught them unconsciously. Good heavens! Is it just to expect a child suddenly to go in the opposite direction from the one it has been led in for so many years? Children are the raw material in a large sense."

"And the woman who can't manage others?"

"Why, she simply has not learned to deal with her own kind. People either walk over her and have no respect for her or else they quarrel with her all the time. And it is her own fault. There is a way of repelling familiarity, of avoiding the people we don't like and of attracting the people we do, of turning aside a quarrelsome disposition and of meeting an insult in a dignified manner. And if a woman doesn't know how to do these things she'd better learn. That's all."

DRESS HINTS.

The New Embroidered Collars and Cuffs—Skirt Waists.

Embroidered turnover collars are sold with cuffs to match. The latest is a besmitched effect with a black and white monogram embroidered in the center.

The wide lace cape collars are still enriched with fine embroidery and silk medallions.

Dress skirts are longer and fuller than ever for elaborate gowns, but for street tailor mades the proper length is an inch from the ground all around.

Collarless effects are still seen, but not so much as formerly.

Shirt waists of heavy linen and chevriot will be worn under tailor made walking suits all winter.

The black crepe de chine waist combined with tucked black mousseline de sole and chiffon applique is pretty and dressy as well as useful, for it does not soil and it wears forever.

Volles continue to hold first place in our favor, and in the natural course of events these have developed enormously in variety. In addition to the plain qualities, they are now to be had in spots, stripes and woven with a fancy selvage border. The last named fancy makes up charmingly in triple skirt form, the selvage occurring as a finish to each and being repeated in a radiating yoke for the corsage.

The most popular treatment for a plain voile is a sun ray plaited skirt, with a little, flat plaited bolero or blouse, the hem of the jupe frequently finished by two narrow ribbon quillings.

Hemstitched lawn and lace ruffles are quite the vogue as the finishing note to the wrists of wide open sleeves and are of peculiarly becoming genre. They are quite deep and full and tend to impart a fictitious smallness to the hand.

The cut shows a hat of gray panne trimmed with a shaded gray feather and two shaded gray rosettes.

HOME AND STREET CLOTHES

Negligees, Like Dresses, Are Made With Flowing Sleeves.

Negligees, like dresses, are made with long flowing sleeves which fall back, displaying the arm. The favorite sleeve is shirred on the upper arm and from there down becomes a full frill edged with ruching. Shirred yokes without collars are also considered smart, and in general bands of shirring are particularly good form in trimming.

Some dresses designed for midwinter have the entire lower half of the skirt made of fur and bands of heavy silk, while a similarly contrived cape with long front tabs gives an air of chic to the costume.

The ideal traveling coat is of soft silk or cloth, with a full cape reaching to the wrist. The length of the coat is three-quarters.

A fine sable stole seen recently was seven inches wide and reached to the bottom of the skirt. It was absolutely tail, the lower edge fringed with sable tails. It was worn crossed over at the waist line.

French women are fond of the quiet, small, old fashioned black and white, brown and white and dark blue and white shepherd's plaid, made with the trotteuse skirt and a little plain cloth coat of corresponding color.

The picture shows a costume of gray cloth trimmed with shirrings and narrow bands of chinchilla.

HEAVY MATERIALS.

Corduroy Is Very Smart—Brocaded Velvet Is Popular.

Nothing can be smarter than corduroy in white and in very pale champagne and tan shades.

Brocaded velvet has again come into vogue, but principally for evening coats and tailor mades. White brocaded velvet will form many sumptuous evening coats, and, combined with ermine and old lace, they will be dainty in the extreme. These brocaded velvet coats are also enriched with embroidery down the fronts and with wide sleeves.

Scalloped effects are once more seen on gowns, and tailors are using them, too, for flounces and collars. Sometimes these scallops are edged with darker piping than the material.

EVENING COAT.

Both ruchings and narrow fur trimmings are in style again, and they are really far better adapted to the present styles than heavier modes of trimming.

A pointed belt is not advisable for a short waisted figure, while to the very long, slight waist it is particularly effective. The round line preserved at the back and free from ends of fringe strands of any description, graduating into a narrow band at the side, is an attractive belt in suede, stamped leather or taffeta. It is fashioned in a half swiss point, finished by buttons on either side of a loop phase in front, which is decidedly becoming and gives a pretty line to a large waist or stout figure. The belt must be especially studied this season, when frilled shoulder tippet capes and trimmed hems to skirts promise to fill such a prominent role in the arena of autumnal fashion.

The cut shows an evening coat of white cloth trimmed with a stole of black velvet and braid.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

MODES AND FASHIONS.

The Three-quarter Cloth Coat—New Fur Stoles.

The three-quarter coat of cloth is a serviceable garment for skating, driving, etc. It is made in tailor fashion, with sleeves having stitched cuffs or else the open stitched bell sleeve and a double or single front with large buttons. The collar should be wide and faced with fur so that when drawn up around the neck it is a protection against the wind.

The new fur stoles are made so deep that they come very near being capes.

COAT OF PERSIAN LAMB.

They are much flatter than formerly and are lined with satin instead of having both sides of fur.

The regular fur capes has returned, but it is made with long pointed stole ends in front and is very full at the lower edge.

Two or three furs are frequently combined, moleskin and ermine being a favorite combination. The latter is among the season's favorites It is a fur particularly becoming to brunettes.

The picture shows a Russian blouse of Persian lamb. The toque is of the same, with a scarlet feather.

CULTIVATION OF GINSENG.

The Root Is Being Raised with Considerable Success in Central Wisconsin.

"Ginseng is being cleared out of central Wisconsin rapidly," said G. S. Banks, of Newcastle, reports the Washington Star, "but the Indians around Horicon lake still manage to find enough of it each season to get on a good drunk with the proceeds. I have never been able to learn just what is done with the root, although I know it is shipped to China, where it is used for many purposes. What disease it is supposed to cure is a mystery to me. The root when it is dried is shaped something like a small carrot. It is not the same as the Chinese ginseng I have been told, but it makes a satisfactory substitute now that the real article is all gone. At one time the woods around Newcastle were full of it, and it sold for about a dollar a pound. As the producers gradually came to realize the men to whom they were selling it were making an enormous profit, they raised their prices about a thousand per cent and then kept it going up. The demand has never lessened any, but it is probable that there will be no ginseng growing wild in Wisconsin after a few years. Some people are raising it in cultivated fields and making good profit, although the plant requires a great deal of care. What is obtained near our town is mostly sold to Chicago firms, their representatives taking a trip up the state at the proper seasons of the year."

SPOOLS MADE FROM PULP.

Material Now Used in the Manufacture of the Reels of Larger Size.

The process of making spools from pulp has been in course of development for the past two years, and many obstacles have had to be overcome before the spool was perfected. It was comparatively easy to mold the spool into the proper form, but after it had become dry and hard the difficulty was to grind or turn it into the proper size to hold the required amount of thread. This trouble has now been overcome, reports the Hartford Courant. Pulp will be used only for the large size of spools, as it is not practical to make the smaller spools of that material.

Many of the large spools are nearly four inches in diameter and up to the present time they have been made of wood. When they were first made they were turned from a single piece of wood, but it was discovered that in many cases the pressure of the thread as it was wound on the spool would push the head off the barrel, although it was the same piece of wood. In order to remedy this difficulty, it became necessary to make the large spools from two pieces, the barrel and the two heads, and when the heads were closely fitted to the barrel and glued, they were found to remain better than when they were one piece of wood.

EFFECTS OF FRUIT ACIDS.

Many Kinds of Bacteria Are Quickly Dispatched by Lime and Lemon Juices.

It is a matter of common knowledge that fruit juices exert a most beneficial effect in the treatment of scurvy and similar ailments, and their action on the typhoid bacillus and the colon bacillus, which are the cause of many forms of acute intestinal and other diseases, has been studied on a considerable scale by Dr. Rocaglioda, health commissioner of Chicago, says the London Telegraph. He finds that the juices of different species of lemons vary very materially in germicidal effect, that from some specimens requiring as much as ten per cent to kill all the exposed germs. Lime juice, apple juice and grape juice all have a more or less inhibiting effect, but the bottled grape juice sold at grocery stores gave the most conclusive results. Distilled and tap water were infected with the bacteria, and bottled grape juice added in proportions varying from one to five per cent. Examination showed that some brands had killed the germs at the end of the first minute, as did also the lemon juice of a proper strength. Strangely enough, the freshly extracted juice of the grape, prepared in the laboratory, had no effect, even in the proportion of 100 per cent.

Telegraphic Shorthand.

A complete telegraphic system of shorthand has been laboriously worked out by Mr. A. C. Barrow and named "Pentelegraphy, Section Pape." It consists in a reduction of the Morse alphabet to ten short characters or sounds, which, are so manipulated by a key as to express anything and everything by them in such a way as to give the public greater privileges, while at the same time immensely reducing the work of the telegraph operator. A set of automatic instruments is now being made which, it is said, make messages so cheap that they will be largely used instead of letters.

Rubber from Underground.

Rubber that grows underground is an interesting product of the French Congo. It is obtained just beneath the bark of several plants, the best samples being from the bush bark of the Landolphia tholloni, and it is of the finest quality. When the bark is broken the two pieces are held together by the rubber lining, which is of great elasticity.

Slaves in Africa.

Ninety per cent of the inhabitants of western and northern Africa are Mohammedans, and the principal man of note in central Africa owns slaves, his station in life being rated by the number of slaves he owns and the wives he possesses. When the girls reach the age of 13 they are as a rule wedded.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY,

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, Nov. 19, 1903.

The map of Central and South America is a kaleidoscope.

The advertiser who wishes to sell goods all the time ought to advertise all the time.

"Carrie" Nation says she has no love for Elizabeth. About the only thing that we have discovered that "Carrie" really does love is notoriety.

J. P. Morgan declares that he has no intention of retiring from business. He does not wish to run the risk of having to spend his old age in a poor-house.

Senator Cross will not be the next president of the Senate simply because he believes it beneath the dignity of his office to "buttonhole" his fellow members to secure their votes. The stand he takes should be applauded.

Grover Cleveland has been elected an honorary member of the New York Democratic Club. The only other man upon whom this honor has been conferred is Richard Croker. What a compliment to the former President!

Another family is about to remove from this city to New York, having engaged apartments there for the winter. Their only reason for leaving here is failure to hire servant girls. They are not alone in this predicament. Although good wages are paid servants in this city, there is an increasing demand which can not be supplied. The servant girl question is the paramount problem of the day.

The purpose of advertising is to sell goods. It may aim for orders direct from the consumer, for orders from the retailer, jobber or agent, or may strive to create a demand which must be supplied the consumer by some middle man. At heart, these propositions are all the same. The only kind of advertising that really advertises is the kind that takes the place of the man behind the counter or the knight of the gripsack, or the kind that helps these gentlemen to roll up bigger sales.—Printers' Ink.

The action of Councilman James K. Arnold in drawing the attention of the North Plainfield Council to the condition of affairs at Saengerbund Hall of affairs at Saengerbund Hall is commendable, and if his charges are true, and we believe they are, no time should be lost in applying a remedy. That there are frequently disorderly scenes in the place, especially when it is being used by organizations for some purpose or other, there can be no doubt. Neighbors have frequently complained of disturbances. It is all due to one cause. Liquor is sold on the premises and we doubt very much the legality of the traffic. When balls and other entertainments are given by parties who have hired the hall considerable revenue is derived from the bar privileges and this is depended upon to swell the general receipts. Just what arrangements are entered into to enable the sales of liquor to be made we do not profess to know, but the circumstances are such as to cause suspicion. Why should any social organization be allowed the privilege of selling liquor to the general public, especially when the resellers licensed by the county court are compelled to pay for the privilege? The sale of liquor should be abolished and we believe that the North Plainfield Council will do its duty in this matter, without the necessity of the county court having to take any action.

Class Entertainment.

Preparations are being made by the members of the class of 1904 of the North Plainfield High School for the annual class entertainment, which will probably be held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall or the Park Clubhouse sometime during the Christmas season. A meeting of the members of the senior class was held Friday noon and at that time Miss Ethel Daggett was chosen chairman of a committee which will be named later.

A Baptismal Service.

A large number of friends of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Trotier assembled at their home, on East Fifth street, Monday evening to witness the baptismal services of their little daughter, Mary. Henry Wierenga and Mrs. William Townley were sponsors. Among the guests was Nicholas De Stefano.

Wedded Five Years.

Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Lorino, of Plainfield avenue, celebrated the fifth anniversary of their wedding last Monday. Games, dancing and singing were the main features. There were about fifty guests present from New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Orange and Plainfield.

AMUSEMENTS.

The mere expression of his face is sufficient to convulse any audience and Francis Wilson twists that countenance of his in such shapes that the spectators become uproariously amused during the rendition of "Erminie," which is a winning attraction at the Casino. "Erminie" first made its appearance seventeen years ago and its popularity has grown apace each successive year since then. It's one of those plays which will never die, but lifts by short and you had better see it while the opportunity is given.

Charles Hawtrey has scored a great hit in "The Man From Blankley's," which is easily one of the leading attractions offered by the Metropolitan houses. As a result the Criterion Theatre is filled each night by an audience which appreciates a good play and clever acting. Supporting Hawtrey is a cast, which is hard to surpass. The night performances do not begin until 8:30, thus allowing Jersey people to enjoy dinner at their own homes before seeing the show. There's the usual matinee on Saturdays.

Miss Maude Adams, after an absence of two years from the metropolitan boards, appeared last night at the Empire Theatre, in Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's charming and tragic idyl of Spanish peasant life, "The Pretty Sister of Jose." The popular star received an enthusiastic welcome from perhaps the largest and most representative audience assembled at any premiere this season. It is a pleasure to record that she is now the picture of health, full of vitality and that while she has not lost that frailness and nervous quickness of movement and expression she impresses one with a sense of physical strength.

There are over 200 people on the stage during a performance of "The Best of Friends" at the Academy of Music. The heavy expenses to which the management is put for its production has proven to be a wise investment, the house being crowded at each performance by enthusiastic audiences. Evenings at 8. Matinees, Wednesday and Saturday.

One of the greatest hits that has ever been scored in musical comedy in this country is Klaw & Erlanger's production of Smith and Kerker's new musical spectacle "The Billionaire," in which they will present Jerome Sykes at the Grand Opera House Theatre next week. The leading roles are played by the cleverest artists in this style of entertainment. This production is gorgeously magnificent. Such a brilliant display of beautiful costumes and artistic scenery has never before been seen in a musical comedy in this country, nor has any entertainment displayed the pace at which this is presented. Talk about quick action! "The Billionaire" is a perfect whirlwind of comic incident and melody. Jerome Sykes plays "John Doe," an American billionaire who really burns money. The part is a very clever satire on the new fad of the moneyed man—that it is a disgrace to die rich.

People from all over the world who journey to New York visit Keith's Theatre. It has done more than any other institution to maintain the popularity of what is colloquially termed the "Downtown theatre district." It is in the heart of the business section and just a step from Broadway and Fourteenth street. It is easily reached from any part of the city and particularly accessible from the ferries and railroad stations, a fact much appreciated by the thousands of strangers who daily visit New York.

At Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre a magnificent production will be made of Bronson Howard's great war play, "Shenandoah." This play was originally produced some years ago at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre, where it ran an entire season. It is a play based upon actual history. The vaudeville will include Fields and Ward, the most popular of all talking comedians; Texarkanans, buck and wing dancer; Barr and Evans, comedy sketch artists; Hume, Rose and Lewis, versatile comedians, and many other vaudeville specialists.

Forbes Robertson and Gertrude Elliott made their first appearance in New York as joint stars at the Knickerbocker Theatre last Monday night in Constance Fletcher's dramatic version of Rudyard Kipling's "The Light That Failed." Both the stars and the play made a great success and will undoubtedly draw unusually large audiences to the Knickerbocker during their four weeks' stay. The play is a very powerful one and appeals distinctly to all lovers of the best dramatic art. It is well mounted and there is an atmosphere of reality about every scene and situation seldom observed in any production. Seats may be ordered by mail accompanied by remittance.

George Langer, Farmer.

Miss Hattie Lorie, of East Fifth street, has sold a farm at Whitehouse to George Langer, formerly of this city, but now of Whitehouse. The consideration was $600.

STEPPED FROM CAR AND DROPPED DEAD

Wm. H. Haynes, of Hopewell, Succumbs After Alighting From Trolley at Dunellen.

FROM HEART DISEASE

FAMILY NOTIFIED AND REMAINS IDENTIFIED BY RELATIVES.

Dead Man An Upholsterer, Place of Business Being in Brooklyn—Wife Spent Yesterday in This City With Her Sister.

After having just stepped from a trolley car at Dunellen, William H. Haynes, of Hopewell, N. J., he was stricken with heart disease. He reeled and fell dead. Dr. P. W. Brakeley, of Dunellen, pronounced heart disease as the cause of death. Mr. Haynes was an upholsterer, his business being in Brooklyn.

The body was removed to Walter G. Runyon's undertaking parlors and a telegram was sent to the dead man's relatives at Hopewell, the address having been secured from a letter in his possession which was written to him recently by his daughter.

A. C. Bond, a son-in-law, and a son of Mr. Haynes identified the remains Sunday morning. The body was taken to Hopewell. Mrs. Haynes, wife of the dead man, spent yesterday with her sister, Mrs. Conklin, of Mariners place. She learned of her husband's death during the day.

Mr. Haynes was a member of the firm of Haynes & Goodwin, with places of business at 239 Washington street and 688 Marcey avenue, Brooklyn. He was 63 years of age and had been prominent in church work.

Mr. Haynes was a son of Rev. William Haynes, a well-known Baptist clergyman of Hopewell, and he was a Mason, being a member of a Jersey City lodge. A wife, the sister of G. T. Conkling, of Mariners place, three daughters and a son survive him.

The funeral services were held from the late home in Hopewell yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment was at that place.

MISS WILSON'S RECITATIONS

ENTERTAINED A GATHERING OF WOMEN AT TRUELL COURT.

Miss Boyce, of New York, Rendered Solos, Accompanied by Miss Howard—The Programme.

Miss Jean Wilson, of Washington, D. C., entertained a large number of people Saturday evening at Truell Court with recitations. Her selections were most pleasing to her hearers, who were some of Plainfield's leading women.

Some of her selections were: "The New England Dressmaker," a humorous recitation and the "Soul of the Violin" and many others. Her range of voice is remarkable. She has the rare ability of being able to bring tears to the eyes of her hearers and in the next instant to cause them to vanish by laughter.

The drawing room was beautifully decorated for the occasion with palms, chrysanthemums and potted plants. During Miss Wilson's renditions Miss Boyce, of New York, sang, accompanied by Miss Howard, also of New York.

The Central Is Retrenching.

The Central Railroad is pursuing a course of retrenchment and the track hands are the latest to be notified of a reduction in their wages. The Central's radical system of cutting down expenses is creating great consternation and much dissatisfaction among its employes, who are at loss to account for it. It is stated that there has been but little falling off of the freight and passenger traffic of the road. It is believed that the Westfield wreck and numerous other misfortunes have so depleted the resources of the company that it will be necessary to do some hard scratching to show a surplus for dividends at the end of the year.

Improvements at Y. M. C. A.

The rooms committee of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. met Saturday to talk over plans for changes and improvements in the rooms. Several new and remodeled games have been added to the equipment of the rooms.

King's Daughters' Tea.

The City Union King's Daughters, of Plainfield, will hold its semi-annual meeting and tea on Tuesday afternoon, November 24, at 3:30 o'clock in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Class Officers.

The Freshman class of the Plainfield High School has elected these officers: President, Girth Williams; vice president, Alice Haven; secretary and treasurer, William Douglass.

PARK CLUB'S GIFT TO MR. TOWNSEND

His Fellow Members Present a Gun in Token of Appreciation of His Untiring Efforts.

MR. M'CUTCHEN'S SPEECH

MR. TOWNSEND PERSONALLY SUPERVISED THE IMPROVEMENTS.

Large Gathering of Members Witness the Presentation—Gift a Handsome One—The Social Features at the Club.

Samuel Townsend, of whom it has been said that he superintended the laying of every brick in the recent improvements made at the Park Club, was given a happy surprise by his fellow members of that organization Saturday night. A Charles Daly special, twelve bore, hammerless gun, weighing six pounds and seven ounces, was presented him as a token of appreciation for his generous services. S. St. John McCutchen, president of the club, made the presentation speech. Incidently he recited briefly the history of the club, its successes and purposes for the future and then spoke of Mr. Townsend's important part in directing the recent improvements and said that after so much labor, he believed that he should go away to some quiet spot where he could hunt something besides contractors. Then in behalf of the members presented the gun to Mr. Townsend.

The recipient was overcome with surprise and he expressed his thanks. He said that what he had done for the club was with no purpose of selfglory, but because of his deep interest in the organization. Following the presentation and response, a large number of members, their wives and friends present, personally thanked Mr. Townsend.

A small gold plate bearing the inscription "Samuel Townsend, from friends of the Park Club," accompanied the gun and will subsequently be put on the stock in place of a silver plate.

The social features at the club Saturday night were enjoyed to the full extent. There was bowling, billiards, pool, while later in the evening refreshments were served. Mrs. Henry A. McGee presided at the table and was assisted by a number of other women in serving.

COUNTRY BOY'S ADVANTAGES

SUBJECT OF REV. JOHN M'MURRAY AT MONROE AVE. M. E. CHURCH.

Minister Condemns "White" Lies—God's Rebuke to Abraham Cited.

Rev. John McMurray, pastor of the Monroe Avenue Methodist Church, Sunday night, preached a sermon on Abraham, giving a character sketch of the Father of our Faith. In his sermon he endeavored to show that the country boy has many more advantages over the city boy.

"In the city the growing boy is in a hot bed of vice and corruption," said Rev. Mr. McMurray, "while the country boy has more room to commune with nature and learns industry. That is one reason why early New England ers were such a strong sturdy race. They had strength of character and purpose borne of hard work. The preacher thought that in the future all the great men would come out of the West or middle West because of the fact that in the growing years they were away from the vice and temptation of the city."

During his sermon the pastor brought up the question: "Are 'white' lies permissable?" Abraham had told them his wife was his sister. That was a white lie because she was his half sister but she was also his wife. God's rebuke to him for thus partly falsifying shows that "white" lies are not to be spoken.

Park Avenue Baptists' Minister.

Announcement has been made that there will be a congregational meeting at the Park Avenue Baptist Church on Wednesday night, November 25, when the committee will report concerning its work regarding a new pastor for the church. It is understood that the committee will recommend the name of a minister to be called.

Freedom Castle's Rooms.

Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, is planning to move into the new lodge rooms in the Babcock building on December 1. The rooms are now being prepared for the use of the castle.

ORANGE FIELD CLUB WINS THE SERIES

Norwood Club Defeated in Third and Final Game, Score Being 21 to 0.

STORY OF THE CONTEST

FIVE TOUCHDOWNS AND ONE GOAL MADE IN TWENTY-TWO MINUTES.

The Orange Aggregation Plays All Around Its Opponents—Double Pass Successfully Worked —The Lineups.

Orange Field Club played all around the Norwood Club eleven Saturday afternoon in the third and deciding game of the series between the two teams. In twenty-two minutes of play, the Orange boys scored four touchdowns and a goal while their rivals were never within speaking distance of the Orange goal line.

The first touchdown was scored for Orange by Smith after four and one-half minutes of play. Toblin kicked off and Norwood fumbled, Smith falling on the ball for the victors. A double pass with Smith carring the leather resulted in the touchdown from which Toblin kicked the goal.

The second half was started immediately after the close of the first and was out down to seven minutes on account of darkness. Long end runs and line plunges brought the ball speedily over the line for Orange, Toblin carrying the ball for the score. More than the legitimate number of men handled the ball in bringing it out for the try at goal and the score was 16 to 0. Smith made the fourth and last touchdown. He kicked athe goal but the umpire refused to allow it owing to the fact that Orange men were offside. This made the final score 21 to 0. Quinn, the Alls center, played in that position for Norwood and Hobbie, a former Alls man, was full back. Line-up:

FARMERS AFTER HORSE THIEVES

SOMERSET COUNTY AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATION MEET AT SOMERVILLE.

Committee Appointed to Deal With the Problem—Address by Rev. H. B. Opdyke.

Horse-thieving, its prevalence in the surrounding farm country, and possible remedies, were discussed Saturday afternoon at a meeting of the Somerset County Agricultural Association in Somerville. A committee consisting of E. Myers, Rev. H. B. Opdyke and William H. Rogers was appointed to seek some means of dealing with the problem. It was recommended that in addition to the standing offer by Mr. Rogers of a $300 reward for the capture of the thieves, a further offer of $500 be made by the Board of Freeholders. Other vigilance committee swere appointed with the central one located at Somerville.

An address on "Fruits and Vegetables and Their Enemies" by Rev. H. B. Opdyke started a general discussion.

H. D. Woodland Married.

Announcements have been received here of the wedding of Miss Jane Pedrick, of Flemington, and Herbert D. Woodland, formerly of this city. The wedding took place at Flemington on Nov. 12. The groom was formerly connected with the Prudential Insurance Company but is now in business with his brother in Newark. He is the son of Hiram Woodland, who lived on Craig place and is a nephew of Henry Woodland, of Grandview avenue.

Out of the Fair Estate.

A formal revocation of the power of attorney which Mrs. Theresa A. Oelrichs granted to her husband, Herman Oelrichs, in 1897, has been filed at the office of the city and county attorney in San Francisco, at the request of Mrs. Oelrichs. It revokes the powers granted of control over all property belonging to Mrs. Oelrichs in California, and includes the estate of the late Charles L. Fair.

Smokers' articles for the holidays are to be had of H. Eggerding, Park avenue. All kinds of fine tobacco goods at reasonable prices.

HERZIG & KAPP LOSE DAMAGE CASE

Jury Returned Verdict of No Cause of Action in Breach of Contract Suit.

CLAIMED $5,000 LOSS

MAX KAHN, THE FOREMAN, MADE DEFENDANT IN THE PROCEEDINGS.

Defense Was That Plaintiff Had Violated Contract—Foreman's Rights Delegated to Another Without His Consent.

A verdict of no cause for action was returned Monday by a jury in the suit for breach of contract brought by Samuel Herzig, of the firm of Herzig & Kapp, skirt manufacturers of this city, against Max Kahn, until April 1 last employed as their foreman and designer. The case was brought before Circuit Court Judge Benjamin A. Vail to whom it was carried by common consent, although a Supreme Court case. Suit was brought for $5,000.

The firm, according to the story told by Edward Kapp, agreed on December 31 last to pay Kahn, the defendant, $50 per week as foreman and designer, the contract to continue in force one year from January 1, 1903.

Kahn worked until about one week previous to April 1 last, when he threw up the job, because, as he claimed, the company had failed to live up to its part of the contract by taking from him the right to purchase laces and embroideries used in fine work, and employing in his stead a woman, who was peculiarly adapted for that kind of work.

The defendant claims that under the contract, although not so stated in that instrument, the buying of laces, etc., was part of his duty, and that when the company relieved him of that work is violated the contract, making it null and void.

Six witnesses were examined for the plaintiff while the defendant him self was the only witness in his own behalf. The jury announced its verdict after five minutes deliberation.

It is probable that a counter-suit will be filed after January 1 next, when the contract expires, by Kahn who will claim about $1,400 damages as the result of the firm's neglect to live up to the contract.

Kahn's lawyer was William Newcorn, Esq., and the plaintiffs were represented by Winfield S. Angleman, Esq.

NO NOTICE OF DECISION

TAX COLLECTORS NOT OBEYING SUPREME COURT'S EXEMPTION OPINION.

Decision Not Yet Filed—Must Await Opinion of Court of Errors and Appeals.

The action of the Supreme Court in declaring unconstitutional the law under which firemen and veterans have been exempt from $500 taxation has created considerable confusion throughout the State. This confusion has been increased by reason of the fact that the Supreme Court's decision comes at a time when the tax bills had just been sent out.

A number of letters have been received by Attorney General Robert H. McCarter from municipal authorities in various parts of the State inquiring as to the effect of the decision upon the tax bills that had already been sent out. It was desired to know whether the exemptions heretofore allowed and included in the bills should be allowed this year or whether the full amount of taxes should be collected.

Attorney General McCarter has not yet rendered an opinion in the matter and the fact that the judgment of the Supreme Court has not been recorded leaves the law providing for the tax exemptions still in force.

The general impression is that the case, in the decision of which the Supreme Court declared the exemption unconstitutional will be carried to the Court of Errors and Appeals. As it will require six months at least to get a decision from that court, it is likely that the exemption will stand this year.

Tax Collector Frank H. Smith says he has received no official notice of decision and until he does he will not observe it.

Y. M. C. A.'S WORK FOR RAILROAD MEN

H. O. Williams, of the Association, Gives An Instructive Talk at Trinity Church.

THE GREAT WORK DONE

WHAT ONE RAILROAD COMPANY HAS DONE FOR ITS EMPLOYES.

Special Music, Including a Duet—Rev. Dr. Schenk's Sermon on "The Heavenly Vision" Listened to Attentively.

H. O. Williams, one of the railroad secretaries of the Y. M. C. A. international committee, told about his work Monday night in an interesting address at Trinity Reformed Church. Mr. Williams was at one time secretary of the local Y. M. C. A. He illustrated the helpfulness of the personal attitude which the Y. M. C. A. adopts by relating the story of the itinerant musician vainly trying by his poor playing upon the violin to earn a few pennies. A richly dressed stranger passing took the instrument from his hands and played upon it so marvellously that an immense crowd was drawn and the poor musician's pockets filled with gold.

Mr. Williams spoke in general terms of the growth in the Y. M. C. A. work and indicated how he explained specifically his own work in connection with the railroad branches of the association. The building of association rooms at railroad terminals and other places where railroad men congregate has progressed remarkably, he said, in the last few years from thirteen to fifteen have been built on the New York Central alone. He said that the railroad corporations had given more than $34000 to the work, believing in its value to their employes. The men themselves have contributed $900,000. The practical good of the work has been illustrated in the fact that where Y. M. C. A. buildings have been established for railroad men, neighboring saloons have been driven out of business.

Special music was rendered by the church choir and a duet was sung by Horace Martin and Horace Martin, Jr.

In the morning at Trinity Church, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck spoke on the "Heavenly Vision," urging upon young people the importance of making a right choice of opportunities in companionship and in their life-work.

DAUGHTER GETS ESTATE.

John Fitzgerald Withdraws Contest Over Estate of Mrs. Bridget Fitzgerald.

A suit brought by John Fitzgerald, of Jersey City, against the heirs of the late Mrs. Bridget Fitzgerald in the Court of Chancery, in Trenton, has been settled.

Mrs. Fitzgerald, a resident of Raritan, died in Jersey City, leaving an estate valued at $2,000, to her daughter, Margaret Fitzgerald, now Mrs. Frederick Schmidt, of Scotch Plains. Several minor bequests were also made to other children. No attempt was made at the time to contest the will which was probated in Hudson County. Several years ago the plaintiff brought suit to have the estate divided, claiming there was no will. The case, which was to have been fought last week, was abandoned by the counsel for the plaintiff, James J. Bergen, of Somerville.

W. R. JENNINGS' FUNERAL.

Services Held at His Late Home, Rev. Dr. Yerkes Officiating.

Many people attended the funeral services of Wm. R. Jennings Monday afternoon which was held from his late residence on Door street. Rev. Dr. David J. Yerkes officiated and during the services delivered a fine eulogy. A large delegation of the members of Warren Engine Company attended the funeral services in a body. A member of the company he has lent his assistance and interest to the North Plainfield fire service and he was regarded as a member by the firemen. The display of flowers was elaborate.

The interment was in Evergreen Cemetery, the pall bearers being J. B. Newman, Charles Stahl, Frank Kesselring, George Stewart, David Allen and Jacob Higgins.

RENTS THE TROLLEY; TERM 999 YEARS

Lease of Elizabeth, Westfield and Plainfield Line by Public Service Corporation.

TERMS OF AGREEMENT

NEW TROLLEY ROUTES FROM PLAINFIELD BEING PLANNED.

Some Shareholdess of Leased Line Had Refused to Surrender Their Stock—One Hundred and Fifty New Cars Being Built.

Because it has been unable to acquire all the stock of the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central New Jersey Street Railway Company, the Public Service Corporation has been compelled to lease the line. This it is able to do, as it secured more than a majority of stock, exchanging its certificates therefore, though some shareholders refused to surrender their holdings.

The lease has filed been in the County Clerk's office. The terms of the paper fix the time limit and covers 900 years the franchise and property of the line.

It is agreed that the lessee pay to the lessor $9,000 May 1, 1904, and thereafter make payments in November and May until May, 1913, increasing every third payment $2,250. These payments are to be made at the office of the company in Newark.

The signers of the lease for the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Railway Company are A. B. Carlton, vice president; and Frederick Evans, secretary. Those who signed for the Public Service Corporation are President Thomas N. McCarter and Secretary Frederick Evans. The lease became operative November 1 last.

A trolley man says that the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway Company was acquired by the Public Service Corporation by lease also, because all of the stock had not been surrendered in exchange for Public Service certificates. The amounts paid annually to leased companies will be called rentals, not dividends.

Five hundred and fifty new cars, to be installed when completed, on its various divisions, are now under construction for the Public Service Corporation. A few of these cars will run between Elizabeth and this city, and unlike the cars at present in use on that line these cars will have no smoking compartments. They will have improvements that are lacking in the types of cars now in use.

Rearrangement of the trolley routes has been under consideration for some time. Vice President Carlton, in reply to a question said recently, the routes would be arranged for the good of the service as soon as power and equipment would permit changes. He said the new routes might be from Elizabeth to Paterson; from Plainfield to Newark; or from Plainfield to Paterson. The Plainfield and the Paterson cars, if changes are made, may run to the Elizabeth ferry.

PLAY AT THE HILLSIDE CLUB

GOLF COMMITTEE CUP CONTEST GROWS MORE EXCITING NEAR THE FINISH.

H. R. Stockton Within Half a Point of Walter Peterson, the Leader —The Scores Posted.

There was continuation of play for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club on Saturday, when several scores were posted for this trophy. By winning first honors, H. R. Stockton is now within a half point of the leader, Walter Peterson, and the competition thereby increases in interest. Stockton posted a net score of 73. Second and third honors went to C. B. Morgan, with a net score of 76 and H. D. Hibbard who turned in an 81. The course was in fine condition and there were many players out who did not take part in the weekly competition.

Those scores were turned in for the Golf Committee cup:

H. R. Stockton, 79, 4—75; C. B. Morgan, 91, 13—78; H. D. Hibbard, 88, 7—81; E. B. Shoemaker, 102, 20—82; Walter Peterson, 88, 6—83; W. L. Gleaney, 83, 1—82; H. F. Fox, 100, 18—82.

George McIntyre and Dr. D. C Adams, of this city, left Saturday for the South where they will join J. A. Smith, also of this city, for a hunting trip through Maryland.

BOOMS LAUNCHED THROUGH THE STATE

E. C. Stokes, of Cumberland, as a Candidate for the Governorship to Succeed Kean.

MURPHY AS A SENATOR

A SLATE NOW BEING MADE TO BE BROKEN LATER.

Bob Davis Opposed to S. S. Swackhamer as a Candidate for the Leadership—James Smith, Jr., His Friend.

Those who are supporting former Senator Edward C. Stokes, of Cumberland County, for the Governorship declare that talk of his being a candidate for United States Senator is all arrant nonsense; that he does not want to go to the Senate now any more than he did two years ago, and that his inclinations all tend to the Governorship.

Some politicians are exhibiting a slate upon which are recorded the names of Edward C. Stokes for Governor and Franklin Murphy, of Essex, for United States Senator. The latter part of this ticket is not causing the John Kean camp any uneasiness, because, as they put it, it is simply out of the question to have two United States Senators from the same county, and as long as Mr. Dryden occupies the position there is no hope of another Senator from Essex.

Those who are exhibiting this slate, however, say that there is no more effectiveness in this claim than there was a year ago last winter, when Mr. Dryden was elected, despite the cry that the two Senators could not come from the same section of the State, and that General Sewell's successor should be a South Jersey man.

There is no reason, these men declare, why the two United States Senators should not come from the same county, and they go right along advocating the Governor's candidacy. They seem to believe that the result of the election has been fatal to Mr. Kean's prospects of re-election, and that the Governor's chances of succeeding him are excellent.

Robert Davis, who dominates the situation in Hudson, is represented as having no use for S. S. Swackamer, of Somerset County, who aspires to the leadership of the House. The Somerset statesman, it is pointed out, was an ardent supporter of Assemblyman John J. Treacy in his fight for the Democratic nomination for Mayor of Jersey City, and in the letter which he wrote to Mr. Treacy on the subject he had things to say against machines and bosses which were not agreeable to Mr. Davis.

Mr. Gourley, it is well known, stands very close to James Smith, Jr., and some persons think that Mr. Swackhamer is the choice of the former United States Senator. Mr. Davis has no particular affection for the Essex statesman, and the gossip that he wants Mr. Swackhamer for leader will not tend to lessen the Hudson leader's opposition to him.

Y. M. C. A. OUTINGS.

Some Good Times Planned for the Local Association's Boys.

The outing committee of the Y. M. C. A. boy's department has arranged an attractive series of outdoor events for the remainder of the month. On Saturday a visit will be paid to the farm of Dr. Coles in Scotch Plains, the rain of last Saturday having necessitated the postponement. On the morning of Thanksgiving Day, November 26, the boys will go for a cross country run at a lively clip followed by a swim and rub-down in the gymnasium. This was planned as an appetiser for the Thanksgiving dinners.

A day in the woods will be spent Friday, November 27, the boys arranging to cook their own dinners. The following day, a visit will be paid to the factories of the Singer Sewing Machine Company at Elizabethport.

Sermon to Soldiers.

If arrangements can be made the members of Company K will attend divine services next Sunday night at Reform Hall and Rev. Dr. Glasbrook, rector of Christ Church, of Elizabeth, will preach.

Rev. Mr. Griffin Arrives.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, U. S. Consul at Limoges, France, arrived home Saturday evening on the Steamship New York. He will remain with his family on East Seventh street for a few weeks.

SOMERSET'S JAIL A PLEASANT RESORT

Harry Hayes, Recaptured Here, Tells of the Conveniences Enjoyed by Prisoners.

STORY OF HIS ESCAPE

ALLEGES THAT HE KNOWS WHERE HARRY WATSON IS LOCATED.

Hayes' Wife Informs Local Police of His Whereabouts—Taken to Headquarters—Talks Freely With Daily Press Reporter.

Room and board free with every chance to engage in your favorite pastime are some of the attractions presented the patrons of the Somerset County jail at Somerville. All that inmates are required to do is to report at headquarters occasionally and spend now and then a night within its walls.

That is the sum and substance of the result of an interview with Harry Hayes, the jail breaker, in the city jail Monday. Hayes was arrested at 2:30 o'clock at his wife's home on Spooner avenue by Patrolmen McCue and Higgins and brought to headquarters in the patrol wagon. He was arrested on complaint of his wife who said that she feared violence at his hands.

Hayes was ready and willing to talk when seen by a representative of The Daily Press. Clutching the bars in the front of his cell, he spoke unrestrainedly although a trifle nervously on his eventful history of the past six months. His one concern was that Detective Totten, of Somerville, be notified in order that he might regain his liberty and a chance to resume his free and easy life at Somerville.

Hayes' practises, as he says himself, is to work all day in Somerville painting buildings, cleaning furnaces or doing other chores, and then to return at night to the jail. He has been painting the Somerville hospital during this month, he states, leaving the jail at 6 or 7 o'clock in the morning and returning at whatever hour he chose in the evening. He was granted this privilege, he says, on account of his good behavior during the first month of his two-months' sentence which will expire December 4 next.

In addition he will have ten days off his sentence because of his good conduct as a prisoner. Hayes cites his jailer, John Anderson, Detective George Totten and Miss Hay, the head nurse at the hospital.

Hayes came to this city Saturday night, according to his story, not for the purpose of intimidating his wife as alleged by her, but to obtain some winter underclothing for which he had sore need and which his kind-hearted jailers had neglected to provide. He spent the night at his home on Spooner avenue, walking back to Somerville Sunday morning, choosing to walk rather than ride in order to escape observation. His clothes were not ready for him at that time and that was the reason he returned for them yesterday noon, the rain necessitating his laying off from the work of painting the Somerville hospital. He denies maltreating his wife but admits having quarrelled with her on account of another man. His mother-in-law, he said, also entered the case to his disadvantage.

When asked about his means of breaking jail at the time he and Harry Watson, of the borough, and Daniel Cobb escaped, he said that the three had simply noticed that all the doors of the jail were wide open and had walked out. At the time he did not know who had opened the doors but he ascertained afterwards. He would not give the name of his liberator, however. "Was it the jailer, Anderson, or any of his assistants?" asked the reporter. "I'd rather not answer that," said Hayes, with a smile and an expression that were half an admission.

Hayes told The Daily Press man that if he were so inclined he could, at any minute, locate Harry Watson, who escaped with him, and who was awaiting trial on a serious charge preferred by his sister. Watson was the father of the little girl shot by Willie James, the boy betrayed, last spring.

After the brake Hayes said that Cobb boarded a passing freight for Philadelphia, and that he and Watson took a freight in the opposite direction. They went to Brooklyn and there Hayes plied his trade all the time the Somerset police were supposed to be searching for him. He returned to Plainfield with the intention of giving himself up to the police, he says, but was located by them through an acquaintance before he had the opportunity.

Hayes' original sentence was one month for stealing chickens in North Plainfield.

Hayes was again turned over to the Somerville authorities this morning to serve out the remainder of his sentence. Should he return to this city at the expiration of his term he would be liable to arrest on his wife's charge of assault.

Y.M.C.A. ATHLETIC CONTESTS

SERIES OF INDOOR SPORTS WITH SILVER AND BRONZE MEDALS AS PRIZES.

Games Will be Scratch—A List of Events and Dates of Running Them.

A series of indoor athletic contests will start at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday, December 5. The games will be run off on four evening with three events to each evening. A space of two weeks will intervene between each meeting.

Silver and bronze medals will be awarded the men scoring the highest and second best totals at each meeting and special silver and bronze medals will be given those taking first and second places in the entire series. The games will all be scratch, and the winner will be the Y. M. C. A. champion. Much interest has been shown in the contests and practise has already begun. These are the events:

December 5—Standing broad jump, fence vault and quarter-mile walk; December 19—Three standing broad jumps, standin high jump and potato race; January 2—Standing hop, step and jump, running high kick and shot put; January 16—Rope climb, running high dive and running high jump.

AMUSEMENTS.

Comparisons are unavoidable when such mark success as "Babes in Toyland" follows a record breaker like "The Wizard of Oz" at the Majestic Theatre. The thousands who were delighted with "The Wizard" were doubtful if they would ever see anything to equal that gorgeous production. They now admit that "Babes in Toyland" surpasses its predecessor in splendor, in costumes in stage settings and in music. As further proof of this superiority it may be said that the receipts at the box office are about $2,000 a week more than was taken in during the first weeks of the long run of "The Wizard of Oz."

James K. Hackett's engagement at the Manhattan Theatre in "John Ermine of the Yellowstone" will terminate on Saturday, Nov. 21, and on Monday, Nov. 23, Charles Richman will make his metropolitan debut at this theatre as a star in "Captain Berrington," an American drama of the Revolutionary period by Victor Mapes. This play is said to be one of the most stirring and dramatic seen on the New York stage in many seasons, with a powerful love interest and a most picturesque setting. Mr. Richman has been surrounded by his managers, Messrs. Weber & Fields, with one of the strongest and best-balanced companies playing today, and happily the drama furnishes adequate roles for the clever players that will be seen in it. The company supporting Mr. Richman is a large one, the speaking characters numbering twenty-nine and many supernumerary figures appearing in several scenes of the play.

LITERARY.

No Monarch is such an object of veneration by his people as King Christian IX of Denmark, the fortieth year of whose reign all Danes are celebrating this week. More than national importance attaches to the event, partly on account of the King's personal popularity and partly because he has become related by marriage to almost every royal family. There was good reason for referring to the late Queen Louise as "the mother-in-law of all Europe."—Collier's Weekly.

—The theft of forty Wyandotte chickens from Edward Schenck, of Piscataway, has been reported.

—Negley Parson, of West Seventh street, who was accidentally shot in the foot by a playmate recently, has practically recovered.

—Gilbert Murray, of West Fourth street, has recovered a valuable dog which he lost a week ago. The animal was found by a Piscataway farmer.

—Charles Robert, of Park avenue, has taken a position as manager of a livery and boarding stable in Brooklyn. He will enter upon his new duties the first of next week.

—Examinations are being held today for positions in the postal service in this city either as carrier or clerk. There are a number availing themselves of this opportunity for securing positions under Uncle Sam.

AUTUMNAL DAYS ON THE GOLF LINKS

Though Season Wanes Much Interest is Shown in Contests at the Hillside Club.

PARK'S SEASON CLOSED

THANKSGIVING DAY SCHEDULE INCLUDES PLAY FOR SEVERAL TROPHIES.

Prosperous Year for the Two Organizations—Charles A. Reed, a Star Player in Baseball, Wins Laurels in Golf.

The active season at the Park Golf Club closed with the play on Election Day and unless it should be arranged to have an event or two on Thanksgiving Day, the schedule for the season is completed. There is no doubt but what the season has been the most successful in the club's history. There has been a steady increase of interest in the several competitions and the contests have been close.

Charles A. Reed, formerly an enthusiastic baseball follower, has given up that lively game for golf and this year he finishes a winner of the President's cup with a total of fourteen points. Samuel Townsend, however, gave him a close rub, with 13½ points. For the Park Golf Club cup, scratch competition, Morgan T. Townsend won first honors and he takes the cup with twenty-two points to his credit. His nearest competitor was T. U. Dudley, Jr., who has 18½ points.

It is confidently believed that next season will be as full of interest as the present and that several attractive events will be arranged for competition among the members.

As for the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club a few more weeks will bring the active season to a close. Probably the Saturday after Thanksgiving Day will see the completion of the schedule of events. There is yet time for a change in the standing for the Golf Committee cup and there may be an exciting finish. Besides this there is the final play for the Holiday cup and the Green's Committee tankard. Like the Park Golf Club, this club has enjoyed a highly prosperous and successful season. Many new members have joined the club, while the social features have added much to the general attractiveness of the place. It is not often that two strong golf clubs can be maintained within such close proximity to one another, but this seems to be the case in this city and the borough, and thus the ancient game is made popular.

FRIENDS' CLOSING SESSIONS

YOUNGER MEMBERS OF RELIGIOUS SOCIETY GIVE ENTERTAINMENT.

Meetings in Local House Attended by Plainfield and Shrewsbury Delegates.

Prior to the closing session of the semi-annual business meeting of the Plainfield and Shrewsbury districts of the Religious Society of Friends, a social gathering was held Thursday at the meeting house on Watchung avenue, the young people of the Society conducting the programme. Almost all of the delegates were present and the evening was pleasantly spent. A literary and musical programme was rendered.

Irish selections were recited by William D. Williams and a reading was given by Miss Lila Sheff. Feats of legerdemain were performed by Leonard Gavett, which proved entertaining to young and old alike. "Temperance by Tears" was rendered by W. D. Williams. Miss Agnes Cooley recited in a clever manner "A Wry Face," which proved one of the humorous hits of the evening. A collation was served before the exercises began and among those who waited upon the tables were members of the committee on arrangements which was composed of Edith Vail, chairman; William D. Williams, Lila Sheff and Horace Vail.

The closing session was held this morning. The reports which have been read at the meetings were of a satisfactory character and show that the Society in these two districts is in a prosperous condition.

The services were concluded today. John Shotwell, of Shrewsbury, gave an address. A luncheon was served at midday.

The Dressy Man.

There is a wide difference between a top and a careful dresser. The one excites ridicule; the other wins approbation. And yet the clothes they wear may be very much alike both in cut and quality. The difference is in the men rather than in their clothing. But the divergence must be wide, for why men have nothing but contempt for the fop, while they approve and respect the man who dresses neatly and carefully.—The Retailer.

CONTEST OVER THE WILL

MISS EMELINE T. MANNING NOT SATISFIED WITH TERMS OF BEQUEST.

Mrs. Joel D. Manning Left Her Granddaughter One-Third of Estate—Reason for Contest.

Because of apparent peculiar conditions whereby she was made a beneficiary of the will of her grandmother, Mrs. Joel D. Manning, who died recently, Emeline T. Manning, the young daughter of the late Dr. Andrew R. Manning, will contest the instrument. The will is divided into three parts, giving the two daughters of the dead woman each one-third and the other third to the executrices in trust for Miss Emeline T. Manning.

According to the will this young beneficiary shall have as much of this income as the executrices believe necessary for her until she is 25 years of age, at which time she receives the principal and all of the interest. But because the will makes no provision for the marriage of the young girl before the age of 25 years a contest will be made. In case Miss Manning should marry and die before the age of 25 years and leave children, the latter would inherit nothing.

GUARDMEN MAY BE PAID

UNDER DICK ARMY BILL SOLDIERS WOULD RECEIVE MONEY.

To be Paid 43 Cents for Each Time They Drill—Features of Bill.

The officers of the Second Regiment have been informed that an effort is being made to have the new Dick army bill, which will likely be adopted at the coming session of the Legislature, so construed, that the members of the National Guard will receive government pay every time they drill.

The Dick bill provides that both officers and men shall receive pay for their services equivalent to that received by the officers and enlisted men in the regular army. The question naturally arises, does drilling constitute work under the government service? The New Jersey officers of the Guard say that it does and in this event if their contention is sustained by the War Department, privates in the five regiments in New Jersey will receive forty-three cents each time they drill, and the officers' pay equivalent to those in the regulars.

While this may be looked upon as a good feature by some of the men, it is believed that the members of the National Guard under such circumstances would be placing themselves under obligation to the call of the National government and can be sent anywhere the War Department sees fit to order them.

WILLIAM T. KIRK TO MARRY

MISS LUCY C. STEELE, OF BILTMORE, N. C., HIS BRIDE-ELECT.

Ceremony in All Souls' Church, Biltmore, Tuesday, Nov. 24—The Groom a Plainfielder.

A pleasant surprise to his friends here is the announcement of the approaching nuptials of William Titus Kirk, of West Seventh street, and Miss Lucy Cooper Steele, of Biltmore, N. C. Invitations have been issued for the wedding, which will take place in All Souls' Episcopal Church, in that place, on Tuesday evening, Nov. 24. The hour set for the ceremony is 7 o'clock.

Mr. Kirk is one of Union County's prosperous business men and active politicians and has a large following of friends. He is a contractor, iron and steel structural work being his particular business. Mr. Kirk is a stalwart Republican and some years ago was elected sheriff of Union County by an overwhelming majority and conducted his official duties with much credit to himself. During the recent campaign he was a candidate for the Assembly and his defeat was solely due to a bitter factional fight in which he was necessarily made a victim.

He is a member of the Masonic order and of the Episcopal Church. Miss Steele is a daughter of Balis Payton Steele, of Biltmore, one of the influential men of North Carolina.

Instrument for Mariners.

Mariners have been unable to determine latitude and longitude when the horizon was hidden, even though sun, moon or stars might be shining. Commander Campbell Hepworth, C. B., has now made it easy to obtain the altitude of any heavenly body without seeing the natural horizon. He attaches to the sextant an artificial horizon, which consists essentially of a contact maker operated by a plummet and so adjusted that the circuit will be closed and a bell rung when a slit of the horizon glass is in alignment with the observer's eye and the sensible horizon.

Too Much of a Strain.

A good story is told of Prof. Jebb. In the classroom immediately above his own, Prof. Veitch lectured on logic. One day the peroration of the professor of logic was greeted with such rapturous applause that it brought down some pieces of ceiling in the room below. As the bits of plaster dropped about his room, Prof. Jebb quietly remarked: "Gentlemen, our premises will not support the conclusion of the professor of logic."

King Oscar's Income.

The royal family of Sweden is a thrifty one. It has a civil list of very nearly a half million dollars from Norway and Sweden, and, in addition the king has a little more than $82,000 a year from the fund voted to King Carl XIV. and his successors. At the same time his majesty has palaces both in the city and country, in Sweden and Norway, and he owns stock in many undertakings.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week Bound Volumes' notes. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the plan being to make them authoritative reviews on the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Selection From Books Added During October.

The month's report shows a decided increase in the circulation, 314 more books were borrowed than in the same month a year ago, and 623 more than in September of this year. Ninety more borrowers were registered in October.

Next week's issue will contain a list of the best books on the building trades.

Superior to Imported Wines.

Dr. S. F. Howland, formerly of 29 West 42nd St., New York, says: I can say emphatically that the quality of Speer's wines for invalids is far better than any of the imported wines. His Port, Claret and Burgundies are extraordinary fine.

Mr. and Mrs. George Lunger, of Whitehouse, have been visiting relatives in Plainfield.

have their vineyards stocked of the same grape, the only vineyard of the kind in this country, the vines were imported and planted here over forty years ago. The Speer Port wine and Burgundy are now regarded the finest in the world, their rich, full body and high character is unexcelled. Invalids, weakly persons, especially females, and the aged are made strong and vigorous by its use, as a medicinal wine it has no equal; as a family wine it has no superior. First class physicians all over the country, here and in Europe, who have tried them recommend them as the best.

A close study by physicians on the effect of different brands of wines on the system convinces them of the superiority of the Speer Passaic wines for their patients.

"Liquid Gas."

A new illuminating material has been discovered by Hermann Blau, the Bavarian chemist. It is made from oil gas. By a process of rectification the methane and hydrogen contained in it are separated from the gas, and, by a pressure of 40 atmospheres, are reduced to the liquid form, in steel receivers. The new compound can be used in the place of petroleum, alcohol and acetylene, and it is said to give a light of a beautiful color, preferable to that of the electric light.

For His Daughters.

Bishop Potter was asked the other day what provision he had made for his daughters after his death. "I have written a book, to be published a year after I am gone, called 'What I Know of Spare Rooms,'" he said. "It's based on both experience and observation, for, do you know, it's a fact that five bishops have died since I was consecrated bishop as a result of sleeping in damp sheets while making their visitations."

Motor Cars for Uganda.

Before long a motor car will be running on the so-called roads in Uganda. Mr. George Wilson, the deputy commissioner of that protectorate, who is on his way back from England to Africa, is taking with him a 25-horsepower motor, which he intends to make use of on his tours of inspection throughout Uganda. There are now nearly 600 miles of roads in that country good enough to run a motor on.

The Sultan's Expenses.

The yearly expenses of the sultan of Turkey have been estimated at $30,000,000. Of this $7,500,000 alone is spent on the clothing of his women, and $400,000 on the sultan's own wardrobe. Nearly another $7,500,000 is swallowed up by presents, $5,000,000 goes for pocket money, and still another $5,000,000 for the table.

Deaf Mute Wins Degree.

For the first time in the history of German universities, a deaf mute has succeeded in obtaining a doctor's degree. Dr. Walter Kuntze, on whom the University of Leipsic has conferred a Ph. D., is a comparatively young man. His thesis for the degree is regarded as one of the best in recent years.

NEW TAX LAW GOES INTO EFFECT SOON

Features of Act Relating to Taxation Which Becomes Operative December 20.

MORTGAGES EXEMPT

IN FUTURE THE LAND OWNERS WILL BE REQUIRED TO PAY TAX.

Real Estate and Buildings to be Valued Separately—Life Insurance Companies, Fraternal Orders Excepted, to be Taxed Full Amount.

In the report of the State Board of Taxation recently submitted to Governor Murphy, attention is called to the fact that the new tax law, which is a revision and codification of all the old laws, will go into effect December 20.

The most radical change made by the new law is in regard to mortgages, which are not taxed at all. But as the assessor takes no account of the mortgage he makes no deduction on the land covered by it. In other words, the owner of the land pays the tax, be the premises encumbered or unencumbered. Corporations are to be taxed the same as individuals. Franchises are taxable on 2 per centum of their gross receipts, but no franchise tax is to be placed on any fire insurance or trust company taxed under the general law.

National and State banks are assessable for their real estate and the owners of stock are to be assessed for the value of their holdings, less a proportionate reduction for the real estate assessment. In the case of non-resident owners of shares the stock will be assessed against the holder in the taxing where the bank is located.

Trust companies and fire insurance companies are to be assessed in the taxing districts where their offices are located, upon the full amount of their capital stock paid in and accumulated surplus, after deducting the amount of real estate already assessed.

Life insurance companies are to be assessed and taxed upon the full amount of their property, exclusive of real estate in New Jersey, deducting the amount of their debts and liabilities. This provision does not apply to fraternal lodges and the like carried on solely for the benefit of members and not for profit. Savings banks and building and loan associations are to be assessed and taxed upon their real and personal property the same as individuals.

Power is given by this act to the State Board of Taxation by rule to direct the assessors in any taxing district to determine the true value of each parcel of real estate assessed by them without the buildings and improvements and to note the same on his list, as well as to determine and not separately the true value of every building and every structure on each parcel and to add and carry out the same as the assessed value of the parcel. This method has been applied in Atlantic City, New Brunswick, Elizabeth, Paterson, Camden, and Trenton. It has not been carried out as the board directs in Newark, Jersey City, Hoboken, Bayonne, Orange, Passaic or Bridgeton, there always being some reason why it should not be conveniently done in those taxing districts.

The State Board now intends to enforce this code of revision in every one of the districts and to use every power given by the new law to accomplish this purpose. "It is to be hoped," says the report, "that the taxing districts will co-operate with the State Board in inaugurating this most beneficial method of making the assessments."

If you have had any trouble in borrowing money, try the New Jersey Loan Company, of Newark. This concern will loan money on all kinds of household furniture.

THIS MAN BREAKS THE WILD HORSE

Daniel Conway's Brother the Official Trainer of New York's Police Mounts.

DESCRIBES HIS METHOD

BELONGS TO MOUNTED SQUAD AND IS DETAILED IN CENTRAL PARK.

Regular Rough-Rider Who Has Never Fallen From a Horse—Works Ten Hours a Day in the Saddle—Likes His Duties.

Joseph B. Conway, of New York, who has been spending several days with his brother, Daniel Conway, of 754 East Second street, is the official trainer of police mounts for the metropolitan department. His story of how horses are broken for the New York policemen is quite entertaining. From March to October he is at his task of curing the evil temper and bad manners of a troop of ill-bred animal direct from the Western plains.

The school is founded on the assumption that the ethical and social plane of civilized horsedom in a refined metropolis is of infinite elevation above the rude barbarism and rank culture of the Western plain. In less than a month after his arrival his manners are so polished that he is fit to be seen cavorting on the broad driveways of the metropolis under the imposing weight of one of New York's "finest."

From the moment of their arrival in the care the animals are taken in hand by Conway. All the pent-up spring of wickedness breaks loose the moment they touch the ground. Three or four days of dizzy railway riding has transformed mere intractiable colts in to demons of wickedness. It counts for a happy circumstance if the animals are conducted to the fold in Central Park without a horse riot in the streets.

The first efforts toward a reform are made under the greatest difficulties. No attempt is made to mount a new horse until he has first been thoroughly "broken" by the "dumbjockey." This is a saddle and a girth with a bridle attachment.

After the horse has chafed under this appliance for an hour it is removed.

A saddle is then fastened to the horse's back and the first attempt to mount him is made.

"They'll do any thing to get you off when you are once on," said Trainer Conway, after his day's work yesterday. "They'll stand on their heads, rear up on their hind legs or land you up against a fence or a stone wall. After the first few weeks the mount is easy.

"After they've been standing in the stable a day or two they're almost as hard to handle again as when they first landed. They're all stiff and ill-tempered and it takes a good long jog to take the badness out of them."

Conway is a mounted policeman detailed to this special work in the spring and summer. The supply of horses for the force is recruited each year. They are furnished under a contract for about a hundred head a year.

Conway has been on the mounted squad for several years. He is on horseback ten hours a day and is more at home in the saddle than on foot.

Rough-riding is a second nature to him and he says he has never had a fall from a horse's back when once he has actually got astride him.

RECEPTION AT ST. MARY'S.

Father Egan Entertains the Young People of the Parish.

As a token of his appreciation of the work done by the young people of his parish in raising over $1,600 as a week's run of a recent fair held for the benefit of St. Mary's Church, Father Andrew Egan tendered a reception in the parochial school hall last night.

The event proved to be an enjoyable one. Dancing was a feature of the evening, the music for which was provided by Eugene O'Hielly. During the evening refreshments were served.

Realty Conveyances.

These real estate transactions have been recorded in the County Clerk's office at Somerville for North Plainfield property: William F. McFarland to Annasetta Stratton, $1; Alfred B. Moldeneke to Charles E. Moldeneke, $1; and Richard G. G. Moldeneke to Charles E. Moldeneke, $1.

Miss Annie Barre, of Somerset street, is the guest of relatives in Somerville.

Miss Thomas, of Dunellen, has been the guest of Plainfield friends for a short time.

Herman Hansen, carpenter and builder, of Regent street, makes a specialty of doing small jobs. He also figures on large and small building contracts.

PARISH RELUCTANT TO LOSE RECTOR

Resignation Tendered by Rev. W. Vincent Dawson, Not Accepted by Congregation.

CLERGYMAN INSISTANT

ACCEPTANCE OF INVITATION TO PARISH IN ELK RAPIDS, MICH.

Another Meeting of St. Stephen's Parishioners to be Held—Session Last Night Largely Attended—St. Paul's Church is a Large One.

The members of St. Stephen's Church, Nethergood, at a parish meeting held Thursday, unanimously refused to accept the resignation of the rector, Rev. William Vincent Dawson, who recently received an invitation from St. Paul's Church, Elk Rapids, Mich. Mr. Dawson insisted on an acceptance of the resignation, and another meeting will be held on November 24, for final consideration of his request.

Mr. Dawson has accepted the call to go to Elk Rapids and he expects to enter upon his duties after the first of the year. St. Paul's parish is about five times as large as St. Stephen's.

There were about sixty-five members present at the meeting last night and Mr. Dawson presided. The rector told his people that by refusing to accept his resignation they were delaying the consummation of his fixed plans and he urged them to release him.

Rev. Mr. Dawson has had charge of St. Stephen's Church for twenty months and he feels that there is little encouragement here for him. He will leave here on January 24.

The other business of the meeting was the presentation and acceptance of the resignation of Samuel Seabury Guion and William Palmer Smith, as wardens and C. B. Morgan, A. J. Bealand W. W. Wheelan as vestrymen. Fred Herbert was secretary of the meeting. The vacancies will be filled at the meeting to be held November 24.

MRS. FROST'S TEA.

Delightful Affair in Honor of Bride Attended by Intimate Friends.

Mrs. George H. Frost, of Watchung avenue, gave a tea to a small number of friends yesterday afternoon in honor of Mrs. G. Harwood Frost, formerly Miss Evelyn Newton Lynse, of Chicago, whose marriage to Mr. Frost took place October 22. Palms and smilax were used among the decorations of the rooms. Mrs. Frost was assisted in receiving by Mrs. T. J. Lynse, of Chicago, mother of Mrs Harwood Frost, and Mrs. Saltinstall-Taylor, her sister. Others who aided in pouring tea and in receiving were Mrs. Howard Beebe, Mrs. Duncan W. Taylor, Miss Florence Huntington, Miss Marion P. Bowen, Mrs Mabel Pierson, Miss Edith K. Weston, Miss Elsie Burke and Miss Margaret Tracy.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Harwood Frost will sail for Europe next week.

Recital at Sunnyside.

Miss Harriette Cady will give a piano recital Friday afternoon, November 27, at 4 o'clock, at the residence of Mrs. Lawrence Myers, "Sunnyside," East Front street. She will have the assistance of a well-known New York soprano, who will sing French songs. The affair will be given under the patronage of many of Plainfield's best known musical women.

Not Seeking Election.

Councilman Robert L. Lee says that he is not a candidate for the presidency of the Common Council. He prefers to be on the floor.

WANTED—SEVERAL PERSONS of character and good reputation in each State (one in this county required) to represent and advertise old established wealthy business house of solid financial standing. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Aalhouse, of Trenton, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Obert, of Somerset street, have returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. George Dalley and daughter, of Whitehouse, who have been visiting Assemblyman and Mrs. S. S. Swackhamer, of the borough, have returned home.

Mrs. T. R. VanZandt, of Madison avenue, who was operated upon a week ago by Dr. G. W. Endicott, and whose condition early in the week was a cause for much anxiety, is now convalescing with excellent prospects for an early recovery.

Mrs. Robert J. Clarkson, of Essex street, is resting comfortably at Muhlenberg Hospital after undergoing a successful surgical operation.

DEMOCRATS CELEBRATE IN THEIR STRONGHOLD

Jollification at Elizabeth Over Victory Brought About by Republican Revolt.

SWACKHAMER'S SPEECH

SUCCESSFUL ASSEMBLY NOMINEES HAVE THEIR LITTLE SAY.

James C. Connolly Presides—Feasting a Main Feature of Celebration—James K. Martine Was Among the Missing.

Democratic victories in Elizabeth and throughout Union County were celebrated Thursday at a jollification meeting in Elizabeth. The Elizabeth city committee were the entertainers and their friends and the county committeemen and their friends were the guests. An elaborate banquet was served and everybody was happy. Not much politics was discussed, and needless to say, few references were made to the conditions that made possible the victory of the Assembly ticket. James C. Connolly, of Elizabeth, presided and made an optimistic speech.

Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield, delivered one of his characteristic political speeches, predicting a glorious future for the party, and insisting upon the importance of having men of character for the party representatives. The successful Assembly candidates, Charles L. Moffett, of this city; Joseph Hague, of Elizabeth, and Joseph Gunn, of Springfield, made short speeches, and Robert Swarts and others, of Elizabeth, sang.

Plainfield's representatives at the banquet, besides Mr. Moffett, were Andrew J. Nolan, Frank Shattle and Ira Hurlbut. The one thing missing to make the complete success of the affair was the absence of James K. Martine.

BANJO AND MANDOLIN EVENT

VAN EPS AND MAC CLYMONT MANAGING A PROMISED FEAST OF MUSIC.

Attraction at Y. M. C. A. November 23—Those Who Will Take Part.

A grand banjo and mandolin festival has been arranged by Fred and William VanEps and William E. MacClymont, to take place in the Y. M. C. A. Hall Monday evening, November 23 at 8:15 o'clock. Local musicians will be assisted by New York professional talent in producing what should be one of the musical treats of the year. The local end of the entertainment will be ably upheld by Fred F. VanEps, banjoist; William P. VanEps, mandolinist; William E. MacClymont, pianist, and a banjo and mandolin orchestra of twenty-five pieces.

Miss Marion Short, the well-known reader and impersonator, of New York, will present several new humorous monologues written especially for her, in addition to character impersonations, dialect sketches and readings from the beautiful authors. Malcolm Shackleford, humorist and vocalist; Master William H. Bachman, boy banjoist, and William D. Bowen, banjoist, will be other New York entertainers.

Banjos, the Misses Marie Kampman, Daisy Dunn, Emma L. Nelson, Ella E. Bates; George H. Dupee, John Valiant, Garth Williams, R. A. Osmun, Russell Gomez, L. T. Brannan, George W. Jenkins, William D. Bowen, Harry T. Snodgrass, Malcolm Shackleford, Fred VanEps.

Mandolins, the Misses Mildred Gornet, Emma L. Drell, Mildred Fedderman; Chester Briggs, Lucius Keese, John Martin, Theodore Gavett, Adolph Ganzel, William P. VanEps, Piano, William E. MacClymont. Double bass, Jacob Beyer.

Charles Meirose, of Somerville, who has been visiting relatives in North Plainfield for the past few days, has returned home.

—All city taxes not paid on or before November 20 will become delinquent and this means added cost to the taxpayer. Collector F. H. Smith reports that the taxes are coming in promptly.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 23—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—What are you thankful for?—Ps. xxxiii, 1-22.

In reading the topic it may be well to place the emphasis upon the "you," for nothing is more important in thanksgiving to God than its individual element. If the emphasis be placed upon family, church and national thanksgiving the individual may be unimpressed and the thanksgiving in vain, but if the individual is thankful for home, church and national blessings the thanksgiving of these also will be necessarily included.

The thanksgiving of the topic refers to God. What are you thankful unto God for? The justice of thanksgiving for benefits and blessings is universally acknowledged. Every human language has a word to express thanksgiving. Men are thankful unto their fellow men, and ingratitude is looked upon as one of the basest of human characteristics. How much more, then, should we be thankful to God! If human kindness meets return how much should divine kindness be met with appreciation and gratitude!

1. We should be thankful to God for His goodness. In the opening verses of this Thirty-third Psalm the poet calls for praise to God because of His goodness. "Praise the Lord." * * * sing unto Him a new song. * * * for the earth is full of the goodness of the Lord." God's goodness and mercy are everywhere manifested about us. Everything that has been made redounds to His glory. All that of the time contributes to human happiness and comfort. It is only when man abuses the goodnesses of God that His creations are harmful instead of beneficial. If we will use the world that God has made for us as He intended we shall find that we can testify with the psalmist that "the earth is full of the goodness of the Lord," and, recognizing the goodness of God, we will also admit that "praise is comely for the upright."

2. We should praise God for His power. The power of God is infinite. "He gathereth the waters of the sea together as an heap; he layeth up the depths in storehouses. * * * He spake and it was done; He commanded and it stood fast." Moreover, the infinite power of God is used for the benefit of His people. Power wrongly used is a blighting curse to mankind, but rightly used it is an untold blessing. God's power is a blessing and not a curse. He uses His power to frustrate the plans of the heathen and to the benefit of His people. Wherefore we should be glad and thankful unto God for His power.

3. We should be thankful unto God for His providence. Divine providence is national as well as individual. "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord." And surely as a nation we can claim that our God is the Lord. His providence has guided and directed us in all our history and His hand is large with blessings upon us as a nation today. Let us therefore be thankful unto Him and render unto Him praise and honor for all His benefits.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. ix, 1, 2; xxiv, 1-5; xxxiv, 1-8; xlviii, 1-14; lxv, 1-13; cvii, 1-4; cii, 1-14; cv, 1-15; cvii, 1-8; cxvi, 12-19; Eph. v, 18-21; Rev. iv, 9-11.

A Plea For Advance.

Rev. Edward Forrest Dunshee, president of the New York state union, in a recent letter to his constituents said these very pertinent things:

The keynote of the great Denver convention was "forward." Dr. Clark exhorted the hosts to continue the "advance campaign." Has your society made its proportionate gain? If not, let the effort be inaugurated at once. It can be done in the most unpromising fields, as experience has proved again and again. Let us strive for the increase last year, do it again now.

This should also be a year of advance among the local unions. One city union president said to me at Denver, "I shall not be satisfied until there are at least two societies—young people's and junior—in every available church in my district." With such an ambition in the breast of every union officer this year must mark splendid progress throughout the state.

But we shall never forget, young people, shall we, that in all our work the supreme end is the salvation of the lost? The strongest society is that which gives most of its prayer, its time and effort to the rescue of those for whom Christ died. Let us focus all our powers on this definite object and by the might of God this shall be our best year.

Expansion Its Duty.

Christ's own command to every organization, as well as to every individual Christian, is, "Go ye into all the world." Because the Christian Endeavor society has of late been obeying this command more completely and literally than ever before it has enjoyed the best year of all its history. Whether it will continue to prosper depends upon whether it continues to grow.—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark.

A Means to an End.

Teach the Endeavorers to put the larger interests of the church before the less important interests of their society. This is to be done chiefly by investing all the time that the Christian Endeavor society shall be what it was intended to be—merely the training school for the church, merely the stepping stone toward full church activity and never an end in itself.—Alton R. Wells in Congregationalist.

To Help.

Christian Endeavorers, you're organized to help, not merely to wait before the altar for the help that you can get. —Rev. Reginald John Campbell, Minister of City Temple, London.

Superstitious Extraordinary.

One of the many secret societies flourishing in Sicily is that of the "Thirty-three Belle e Il genre." It consists only of women, who celebrate their meetings thrice a week at midnight. Many strange tales are told of their power, and it is believed they can cure all maladies. They bind themselves by a terrible oath to obedience and secrecy, and the ignorant peasantry believe that oath-breaking is punished by being changed into a toad, for which reason they never harm any of these animals.

No Charge.

A group of representatives were telling stories of their experience in court when Delegate Smith contributed this incident from Arizona: Out in one of the border towns a case was in progress, one of the lawyers being an eastern man who was new to the country. "Will you charge the jury, your honor?" he asked, when the evidence had been submitted. "Oh, no; I guess not," replied the judge. "I never charge them anything. They don't know much, anyway, and I let 'em have all they can make."

Cleaning Water Bottles.

A water bottle that has become stained and dirty should have a few tea leaves and a tablespoonful of vinegar put into it and should then be well shaken. Rinse out thoroughly with clear water. If the bottom be stained it will be well to let the tea leaves and vinegar remain in it for some hours, and it may be necessary to use a bottle brush.

Rain Spots.

Rain spots on a silk dress often seem to have ruined it till it has been ironed out, when the chances are that it will look as well as ever again. The ironing must be done on the wrong side, with a moderately hot iron. A piece of muslin laid over the silk as it is ironed will prevent any possibility of its acquiring a shiny look.

The Filipinos.

Ethnologists of the Smithsonian institution have investigated the Filipinos, with results that are of rare interest to science. They have called attention to the fact that in the veins of the tribes of the archipelago flows the blood of all the races and varieties of mankind.—Scientific American.

Jet Trimming.

Jet trimming which has become limp and rusty looking may be renovated thus: Mix equal parts of vinegar and water, enough to cover the articles, and let them remain in this in a basin for 20 minutes. Take out and put in a cool place to dry.

Ghosts.

According to the English theosophist, C. W. Leadbeater, ghosts are classified in seven types. These are: Thought forms, elves, churchyard ghosts, astral impressions, double of living man, animal apparitions and the genuine ghost.

Hay Fever Accounted For.

Galoskey—A learned professor has discovered that a sneeze is the explosion of an unnecessary idea.

Petoskey—That makes it plain why some people have hay fever.—Baltimore American.

Charitable People.

The Spanish are among the most charitable people on earth. Without a special tax for the poor, Spanish communities of 50,000 self-supporters feed a pauper population of 5,000 or more.

Maidenhair Fern.

Maidenhair fern will last much longer in vases if, before it is arranged with the flowers, its stems are put into a little hot water and kept there till the water becomes cold.

Light Wall Paper.

To clean light wall papers rub the soiled spots with dry plaster of paris. When all traces of dirt have been removed dust off the powder with a soft cloth.

Cotton.

Unbleached cotton shrinks much in the washing, therefore allow an extra inch in each yard when making a garment to allow for this peculiarity.

Potatoes.

Potatoes should be peeled and allowed to lie in cold water for a couple of hours before they are boiled, for thus greater whiteness is insured.

Numbering on Houses.

The numbering of the houses in the streets of European cities did not become customary before the eighteenth century.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 23. "Thanksgiving and Personal Mercies"—Text, I Kings viii, 56; Isa. lxiii, 7; I Tim. i, 12.

"Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits!"

What baser sin can there be than ingratitude? To what evil will it not lead? And yet what grievous lack there is of real, heartfelt gratitude for the blessings so freely received by all.

At this season of the year it is customary to have services appointed for formal recognition of God's benefits to us. This is all right so far as it goes. But it does not fill all the need. Each one should at this time, and at many other times in the year, take time to think soberly of the obligations to gratitude.

Most people are inclined to wish for more rather than to be thankful for what they have.

It would not be a bad plan to take pencil and paper and go off alone and reckon up the items of common mercy for which we have reason for gratitude.

What shall we say about health? It may not be we have the most vigorous imaginable, but how much of solid enjoyment of existence has been open to me, if I would take it? What years of privilege! I am glad I am alive. I am glad I have lived. Life has been worth while. What possibilities the future holds in store for me! How shall I best use them? May the Lord direct!

What of family and friends, what of business, what of home, what of these days, this land and nation? What cause for gratitude have I that I was placed in all the ages and in all lands just where I have been? For all this I thank thee, O my God!

The fact that of Jesus Christ, the Bible, the past of things good and noble, whose record has come down to us as example and incentive to noble living—all this calls for profound gladness.

But what is gratitude? Is it merely being glad that I have so many good things? Rather it is acknowledgment of indebtedness for the mercies received, recognition of the source whence they come and determination to use them all in such manner as to glorify the Giver and benefit self and fellow men.

What value there is in open expressions of thankfulness! No sweeter music ever sung than those which are the expression of thanks to God for His goodness. Praise is fitting for us to give to God, and it is most appropriate that in public worship our adoration should take the form of ascriptions of praise to deity, in psalms and sacred songs. The very act of singing and giving thanks increases our conscious sense of dependence on the Father's mercies and brightens our appreciation of the mercies of Jesus.

There is more than this, however, in real gratitude. It flows out in consideration for others and in efforts to relieve their needs and benefit all whom we can help. We praise God most truly when we share our good things with those who have need. Jesus speaks of the cup of cold water given in His name as a precious expression of love. The world is full of opportunities for us to please the Master and show our gratitude by relief of distress and care.

Valuable as are gifts of money and material things, more valuable are the heart expressions of interest and sympathy we can give to others. The hearts of men are hungry and need feeding more than their bodies. Our best gifts are soul treasures. Loving interest in the welfare and real care for another's progress and spirit outweigh in worth all gifts of cash or material goods. Be thankful and make others glad in Christ.

The Giver of Grace.

Jesus was full of pity and compassion, the divine love manifesting itself in a free will offering for man's salvation. He was grace itself, the gift of God, and also the satisfied mind, grace personified. Grace is love, and God is love, and this is His divinest expression, and Christ is its personal manifestation. And the manifestation of grace in Jesus is the greatest and most blessed revelation of God to man. This Christ, who was pre-existent and in the bosom of the Father, declares of His own authority, and this revelation is truth. And Christ, who made grace possible to a sinful race and declares and bestows it, is Himself the Truth because of his fullness of grace and truth which He manifests in His person.—S. W. Pratt in Evangelist.

Gems of Thought.

For every good deed on earth there is an encore in heaven.

True manliness, like a lighted lamp, has a glow for every one.

PARK CLUBHOUSE'S FORMAL REOPENING

Pleasant Reception in Enlarged and Remodeled Structure.

A GREAT IMPROVEMENT

DANCING ONE OF THE FEATURES OF A WELL-ATTENDED AFFAIR.

A Description of the Alterations—Some of the Events Arranged for the Season—The Committee in Charge.

A new era dawned for the Park Club when the new buildings were formally opened Thursday, a reception marking the occasion. Nearly all of the members of the organization were present and it was a brilliant affair. The enterprise of the members gives to this community a clubhouse which for appointments and conveniences is unequalled in this locality.

No pains were spared to make the reception of the banner affair in the club's history. Clematis vines, chrysanthemums, pampas grasses and other decorations made the place attractive. With the members in joyous mood assembled the scene presented was as gay as any social event so far this season. In the rear of the ball room, upon a platform was Garland's orchestra, of New Brunswick. The stage settings were arranged to give the effect of a large floral conservatory and the effect most beautiful. The dancing, which was enjoyed after 11 o'clock, proved to be one of the features.

During the early hours of the evening the members enjoyed the various games in the men's lounging rooms. There the new additions have made it possible to add a number of new billiard and pool tables and four new bowling alleys. A noticable feature of this part of the clubhouse is the rustic English style of furniture.

The club has expended $15,000 in beautifying the house and almost the entire amount was voluntarily subscribed by the members. The stage in the main ball room will make it possible for the club to rent the place for private theatricals. The ball room will seat at least 450 people. The club plans to have music provided for dancing every second Saturday evening after December 21. Special events will be held on Thanksgiving eve, Christmas eve, before Lent and at Easter time.

The patronesses in charge of the arrangements last evening were the wives of the Board of Governors. They included Mrs. H. St. John McCutchen, chairman; Mrs. George T Rogers, Mrs. Edward H. Ladd, Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. Henry A. McGee, Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, Mrs Joseph Yerkes. Allen B. Laing and Everett Mundy were also members of this committee. The entertainment committee was composed of Mrs. Charles A. Reed, chairman; Mrs. C. W. McCutchen, Mrs. George D. Hallock, Mrs. Clifford McGee, Charles A. Reed, Everett Murray, Clifford McGee, George D. Hallock and Charles W. McCutchen. The refreshments committee was: Mrs. H. A. McGee, Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, Mrs. F. H. Ball, Mrs. Walter McGee and Augustus VanDeventer.

NEW SCHOOL LAW OPERATIVE

ACT MAKES NO CHANGES TO LOCAL SCHOOLS SYSTEM.

Supt. Maxson Receives Explanation and Instructions From the State Superintendent.

Superintendents of Public Schools Henry M. Maxson has received from State Superintendent of Schools C. J. Baxter a copy of a statement explaining the new school law and giving instructions about the same. After a very careful perusal of the new law, Mr. Maxson states that it does not affect Plainfield at all, that the plans for the new city high school and the government of all the schools can be carried out the same as under the old law.

There is only one thing concerning which there is doubt and that is as to whether the Board of Education and the Common Council will have to go back and commence anew the details of the plans for the school, including the issuing of new school bonds. When seen yesterday Mr. Maxson expressed confidence in the new law and said that he hoped there would be no further difficulty. There is one feature of the new act, that is in reference to the compulsory attendance of children at school, that is made more plain.

Wallace Brown, of Central avenue, has gone to Ithaca, N. Y., where he will spend a week among the scenes of his college days at Cornell.

CITY AND STATE GAINS BY DECISION

Firemen's Exemption Act Being Unconstitutional, City's Revenue Will be Increased.

LOWERS THE TAX RATE

INCREASES AMOUNT OF TAXABLE PROPERTY IN PLAINFIELD $103,175.

A Difference of Two Points in North Plainfield's Tax Rate Brought About by Supreme Court's Decision—To be Carried Higher.

Since it became known in this city that a decision handed down recently in the Supreme Court held that the law under which firemen receive exemptions from taxes is unconstitutional, and that the firemen, soldiers, veterans and others are not entitled to these privileges under the law, former volunteer firemen here have become greatly agitated. It is said that if no one else takes up the matter with the idea of fighting it, that the State Exempt Firemen's Association will do so.

The Supreme Court is next to the highest court in the State. If the decision is sustained this city will have $103,175 more taxable property, which would reduce city tax rate three points. In the borough it would add $1,650 to the treasury and would make the borough tax rate one or two points lower.

In speaking with a city official yesterday regarding the decision he declared that in many cases the privileges which result from the law are some times abused. In some cases there are two hundred members to a village fire department, the members living far from the headquarters, and a fire does not occur once a year. The decision means that about $9,479,000 worth of property throughout the State which is now exempt could be taxed.

MACHINE IN GENERAL USE

VOTING DEVICE A SUCCESS AND TO BE ADOPTED BY STATE.

Great Saving in Time and Money to the State—Dispatch in Making Count.

The great success of the voting machines, such as were used in this city on Election day for the first time as a test of their practical utility, has prompted Secretary of State Dickinson to recommend to the State Commission having the matter in charge to supply each voting precincs with a machine before the next election.

In no place has there been any trouble report from the working of the machine. The report which spread about a few days before election to the effect that the machines could be "worked" has been proven by the United States Voting Machine Company to have been absolutely unfounded.

The best time in getting results was from the First district, Glassborough, N. J., where less than two minutes were required from the time the polls closed until the total vote was counted, which included the dispatch containing the result of the election in that district. In North Plainfield the actual time of counting the vote was less than four minutes. At Somerville, where former President Grover Cleveland voted, the time was a trifle over three minutes.

The fear that illiterate voters would experience difficulty in operating the levers has been allayed. In one or two incidents in this city and in the borough, some trouble was experienced with one or two voters, but the difficulty lay in the explanations made by the inspectors, and not so much with the machine. By means of the machine, it is said that the entire vote of a populous district can be registered in from one to two hours. The State will be saved much money in avoiding recounts, as a recount will take but five minutes at the outside.

FOR DEED OF HEROISM, A MODEST CLAIM

D. B. Gray, a Passenger, Informs Officials That He Saved a Whole Train.

IN WESTFIELD WRECK

QUAKER CITY MAN SUGGESTS THAT HE BE GIVEN $10,500.01 AS A REWARD.

First Authentic Account of Sad Disaster Is Now Related by One Who Asks Recompense—Great Feats Performed.

Damages to the amount of $10,500.01 are what D. B. Gray, of Philadelphia, claims from the Philadelphia and Reading and Central roads in recompense for his self-styled "heroism, calmness and forethought" in saving life and property in the wreck at Westfield, January 27, 1903. Gray has just sent an open circular letter to the officials of the Pullman Company, Central and Philadelphia and Reading Companies stating his demands and giving, he claims, "the first published true account of the great railroad wreck at Westfield, N. J., on the line of the Central R. R. of N. J." Gray was a passenger on the Royal Blue train which crashed into the rear end of the local.

Gray's herculean feats as described by himself are best denoted in his itemized bill which he presents as follows:

Pullman Palace Car Co., Pullman, Ill., Dr., To D. B. Gray

To saving two Pullman Cars of Royal Blue Train in wreck at Westfield, Jan. 27th, 1903, from taking fire, at a total loss of ($31,000, at $1,000 each 3,000.00

And One Central R. R. of N. J. Pass for Life

To saving two women from plunging through the glass in doors at $2,000 each.... 4,000.00

To saving man outside, "fire on his back," 1,000.00

And One Phila. and Reading R. R. Pass For Life

To enduring groans, shrieks, yells of those burning to death, and service to injured and dying; dragging coats, etc., as explained..... No Charge

To injuries to my thumb ..... .01

Total..... $10,500.01

In further explanation of his wondrous deeds, Mr. Gray holds forth at length. He states that he was on the second vestibule car seated near the door when the collision occurred. He says that two women immediately in front of him "jumped up and made loud and most unnatural screams and ran to the door to get out." Had they got out, Mr Gray says that they would have been killed and, for preventing them from doing so, he wants $4,000. He gives a truly harrowing description of his "saving man outside, fire on his back," by beating this man on the back with his umbrella and thus extinguishing the flames.

The here becomes the fact that he had no shovel with which to throw snow on the blazing cars. This is how he saved the Pullman cars: "I said to the men who were with me 'Heave-a-boy you men—let's move these cars and save them from being burnt up,' and one man replied, 'All the men in Westfield could not move the train.' 'Away with you,' I retorted and to the rest, 'Let us go down to the first Pullman car in the rear.'"

Basket Ball Dates.

The date for the basketball game between the local Y. M. C. A. team and Passaic Y. M. C. A. at Passaic has been changed from January 27 to 29 at Passaic's request. The Plainfield game will be played December 31 as announced. Two games with the New Brunswick Association have been arranged by Director Heywood, one at New Brunswick December 9, and the return game in this city January 11.

HENRY C. SQUIRES HOST OF THIRTY-FIVE SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS.

Hope Chapel People Listen to Address of Rev. Mr. Zelie—The Programme.

The Sunday-school teachers of Hope Chapel to the number of thirty-five were entertained at the home of Superintendent Henry C. Squiers, of Watchung avenue, Saturday night. Mrs. L. S. Howard gave a few amusing readings from Kate Douglass Wiggin's latest work "Rebecca of the Sunnybrook Farm."

Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Church, made an interesting address. An encouraging letter from Mrs. A. B. Lewis, one of the teachers who has been seriously ill for the past two months, was read by Mr. Squiers. The programme was closed with the singing of "Blessed Be the Tie That Binds," with William M. Runyon accompanying on the piano.

ACCUSED LAD DISAPPEARS

JOSEPH TAYLOR, WHO IS SAID TO HAVE TAKEN MONEY HERE, IS WANTED.

Said to Have Stolen From H. K. Trumpore, of Somerville—Story of Boy's Career.

Joseph Taylor, who is accused of having stolen some money from Neuman Brothers ten years ago, has disappeared from Somerville where he was employed by H. K. Trumpore, the Prohibition party's recent candidate for the assembly, and the fact that a considerable sum of money disappeared at about the same time, has been reported to the police. He escaped punishment for his alleged theft here and subsequently became sick and half clad when Trumpore took him to his home where he was cared for until he regained his health. Believing the wayward lad had reformed, Trumpore gave him another chance.

His employer recently became dissatisfied with the collections in the country districts and started on an investigation. He discovered that his trusted clerk had given receipts for $100 in small accounts to customers and had failed to turn in the cash. When Taylor was confronted with the evidence of his guilt he is said to have broken down and made a confession. Trumpore decided to wait until he made further investigations before causing the man's arrest and taking advantage of the lull in the impending storm the clerk took a speedy departure. It is understood that the fellow has kept a large part of his funds secured at the expense of his employer and has gone to Philadelphia.

NEWSPAPER MEN TO ORGANIZE

MEMBERS OF THE 'FOURTH ESTATE' IN UNION COUNTY GATHER.

Twenty-Six Men Representing the Fraternity Take Part in the Discussion—Another Session.

Newspaper men from all parts of Union County met in the Lyceum theatre building in Elizabeth Saturday afternoon for the purpose of organizing a county press association to include in its membership all men resident in Union County actively engaged in the work. There were twenty-six delegates present and the meeting was an enthusiastic one. Joseph D. Louden, editor of the Elizabeth Journal, was chosen chairman and Ralph L. Morrow, city editor of The Daily Press, secretary. W. W. St. John, editor of the Elizabeth Evening Times, explained the object of the meeting and gave some ideas concerning feasible plans of organization. In the discussion which followed remarks were made by the majority of those present, and finally a motion made by John J. McGowan, of the Elizabeth Journal, that a committee be appointed to formulate a scheme of organization was unanimously adopted. The temporary officers were made ex officio members of the committee, which consists of Messrs. St. John and McGowan, of Elizabeth, Charles B. Morse and Ralph L. Morrow, of Plainfield, H. S. Barnes, of Rahway, J. W. Cliff, of Summit, J. A. V. Hankinson, of Westfield, and John A. Potter, of Cranford. The committee will report at a meeting to be held in the same place on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 28.

REV. DR. SNODGRASS RESIGNS

PASTOR OF FIRST M. E., IT IS REPORTED INTENDS TO LEAVE.

It is reported that Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. Church, tendered his resignation at the third quarterly conference of the church on Wednesday evening, and it is said that the formal letter has been placed in the hands of a special committee. Dr. Snodgrass was not at home today and in answer to questions a member of his family said he does not care to say anything about the matter, but confirmed the rumor that such action had been taken by him.

Henry A. McGee, a member of the official board, said that it was merely a formal resignation, such as is customary in the church, the pastors serving from year to year only, and that there is nothing in the report that Dr. Snodgrass is going to leave. Dr. Snodgrass has been pastor of the First M. E. Church for seven years.

NO CAUSE IS KNOWN

Serious Run on Pennsylvania Trust Company at Reading.

CLAMORING DEPOSITORS ALL PAID

Trouble Is Ascribed to Actions of Malicious Persons Desiring to Help the Banks—Clearings Same as Usual—Will Give Necessary Aid.

READING, Pa., Nov. 18.—A serious run was started yesterday on the Pennsylvania Trust company, the cause of which the company's officials say they cannot understand. There had been a number of withdrawals of deposits during the past few days, and when the bank opened a long line of depositors pressed forward for their money. This was especially noticeable of depositors in the savings department of the bank.

Every facility was offered by the bank officials for the quick payment of the clamoring depositors, and all were paid as rapidly as possible. All were assured that the bank was perfectly solvent and had ample funds to meet any demands. To further emphasize this claim the bank was kept open until 4 o'clock, one hour beyond the customary closing time.

It was the general opinion that the worst of the run was over. The bank officials, however, say they will continue today and at all times to promptly return the money of all dissatisfied depositors. About $100,000 has been paid out.

The officers ascribe the run to malicious persons. To allay the fears of depositors the company has published a statement which covers a period of nine years. During that time, the statement said, the assets have increased from $896,858 to $2,782,281, the deposits from $276,355 to $1,776,851 and the capital surplus and undivided profits from $332,655 to $521,460.

George Brooke, president of the bank, and several directors during the day endeavored to restore confidence among the depositors by assuring them that the institution was in a sound financial condition and that the directors were fully responsible for the safety of the deposited money.

The following notice was also posted in front of the building:

"The Pennsylvania Trust company is not only solvent, but strong financially and able to pay to all demanding depositors the amounts of their deposits and will do so as fast as the clerks can pay out. There is absolutely no reason for any alarm on the part of the company's patrons."

Late in the day the Reading clearing house met and decided to extend the Pennsylvania Trust company all financial assistance it needed.

WANT TO ARBITRATE

Great Chicago Trolley Strike May End Today.

CARS RUN UNDER STRONG GUARD.

Mayor Harrison Hopes For Settlement Soon—Bill Has Been Filed to Cancel Franchise, Claiming That It Has Expired.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Peace negotiations looking to an amicable settlement of the struggle between the management of the Chicago City railroad and its striking employees have been begun here, and the indications are that both sides to the controversy will agree to submit their differences to arbitration.

After a conference, which lasted several hours, between Mayor Carter H. Harrison, the officials of the company and the special aldermanic peace commission appointed by Mayor Harrison at the direction of the city council, followed by another meeting in which President Mahon of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railroad Employees and his legal advisers took part, Mayor Harrison declared that the outlook for a settlement of the strike by arbitration was decidedly flattering.

He declined to enter into the details of the discussion that took place, but it is said that a further conference with the railway officials was arranged for today.

Despite the promising outlook for a peaceable ending of the trouble in the near future the management of the road will today renew their efforts to break the strike. An effort will be made this morning to open another of the branches of the system. The attempt will be made on the electric line running through Indiana avenue, and, if successful, will make a total of three branches that have been opened for traffic since the inception of the strike.

Other important developments in the strike were:

A bill filed in the superior court asking that a receiver be appointed for the Chicago City Railroad company and challenging the company's right to operate its lines, on the ground that its franchises expired last July and that the ninety-nine year act claim is invalid.

Five trains, consisting of a grip car and "trailer" each, operated on the Cottage Grove avenue cable line under guard of 1,000 policeman.

Twenty-five cars operated on the Wentworth avenue line under a guard of about 400 policemen.

A crowd of strikers attacked a wagon bearing provisions for nonunion men which was bound for the Archer avenue car barns. The crowd cut the horses loose, overturned the wagon and threw the contents into the river. By the time the police arrived the mob had scattered.

Colorado Strike Will Be Solved.

PUEBLO, Colo., Nov. 18.—Officials of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company assert that the coal miners' strike in Colorado cannot long be settled, officials in their favor by aid from the steel and iron works men who have been paid off here and who are going to the coal mines. Men are now leaving Pueblo on every train to go into the idle mines. Officials of the company state that they will now soon have plenty of coal and that they will altogether ignore the miners' union.

Ten Per Cent Reduction Affects 2,000

MILLBURY, Mass., Nov. 18.—Notices of a reduction in wages to take effect on Monday next have been posted in the Whitin cotton mills. What the new schedule is to be is not made known, but it is understood that the reduction will amount to practically 10 per cent, as is the case in other places where the policy of retrenchment has been begun. The Whitin mills are four in number and employ a total of 2,000 men.

First English Settlement in 1607.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—A memorial was laid before the house by Speaker Cannon in the form of a joint resolution passed by the Virginia legislature inviting the people of that the three hundredth anniversary of the first English speaking settlement in America at Jamestown, Va., would be celebrated by a naval, marine and industrial exposition at Hampton Roads, Va., beginning May 13, 1907.

Her neck had been broken, and the coroner's jury has returned a verdict of murder. William Myers has arrived here and identified the body as that of his wife, who disappeared from her home several weeks ago. Myers is a wealthy German farmer.

The Strike at Meriden.

MERIDEN, Conn., Nov. 18.—Aside from the arrival of a few more new workmen, Greeks and Italians, there were no new developments in the strike situation here. Police escort was given the nonunion workmen; but, though hundreds of people lined the streets at noon and night to look at the newcomers, no sign of disorder was shown.

The Diphtheria Epidemic.

GEORGE THATCHER IN BANKRUPTCY

Minstrel Man, Formerly of This City, Financially Embarrassed.

PLAINFIELD CREDITORS

LIABILITIES MENTIONED IN PETITION AGGREGATE $1,488.

Debts Contracted Between 1893 and 1899—Member of Thatcher, Primrose & West—Money Loaned Him.

George Thatcher, the well-known minstrel man, for many years a resident of this city, has filed a petition in bankruptcy in New York with known liabilities $1,488, and three other claims whose amounts are unknown. The creditors are Emma West, executrix of the West estate, of Bensonhurst, $808; W. H. A. Cronkhite, of Little Falls, $300, money loaned; Weber & Erskine, $125, merchandise; Lanahan Brothers, Baltimore, $150, merchandise; James B. Guthrie, of this city, $65, merchandise; Frank Linke, of this city, $10, merchandise; John Rice, an actor, for services, amount unknown; Strobridge Printing Company and the Cincinnati Job Print, amounts unknown, for printing in 1895.

The debts were contracted between 1893 and 1899. Mr. Thatcher filed the petition in bankruptcy on account of a judgment obtained against him by Mrs. West, widow of his former partner, in the firm of Thatcher, Primrose & West, for money loaned to him five years ago by Mr. West.

Mr. Thatcher now resides at No. 3 West 101st street.

T. C. BIRD BURIED.

Funeral of Postmaster's Brother Attended by Large Number of Friends.

The funeral services of Thomas C. Bird, brother of Postmaster E. H. Bird, were held Sunday afternoon from the home at Gallia, Somerset County, Rev. Mr. Walton, pastor of the Mt. Horeb M. E. Church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Gibbs, pastor of the Baptist Church, being in charge. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends.

Mr. Bird, who was 51 years of age, was born at Gallia and always lived there. He had been in poor health for some time and had about completed plans to accompany his brother on a pleasure trip to South Carolina, when taken ill with grip and bloodpoha.

The interment took place in the cemetery at Gallia and six cousins of the deceased were pall-bearers.

The bearers, relatives of Mr. Bird, were A. I. Coddington, Jr., Raymond Coddington, David Coon, Arthur Coddington, P. M. Coddington and Clarence Coddington.

SUDDEN DEATH OF WM. R. JENNINGS

Retired Blacksmith Expires in a Chair at His Home in Duer Street.

A VOLUNTEER FIREMAN

MRS. ISAAC BROKAW AT HER BROTHER'S SIDE WHEN HE DIED.

Born in the Jennings Homestead, Where the Jackson Building Now Stands—Leaves a Wife, Three Daughters and One Son.

William Rufus Jennings, a retired blacksmith, and fireman, suddenly expired while sitting in a chair at his home on Duer street Friday night shortly before six o'clock. Death was due to heart trouble. Mrs. Isaac Brokaw, who was at her brother's side when the end came, was overcome with grief and a physician had to be called in to revive her.

Few people in this city did not know Mr. Jennings. Each morning he was to be seen taking his daily walk in the borough and city. He had been enjoying good health up to the time of his death and the only complaint he made was just a few minutes before the end came when he said he found difficulty in getting his breath. While a fan was being secured for him, the man expired.

He was born in the Jennings homestead, which was located on the corner of Front street and Madison avenue, where the Jackson building now stands. For many years he conducted a blacksmithing business at that spot. He retired from active business about twenty-five years ago.

His great hobby was the volunteer fire department. When the Plainfield Engine Company, No. 2, in this city was in its prime Mr. Jennings was prominently identified with it. When the volunteer companies disbanded Mr. Jennings transferred his allegience to the Warren Engine Company. Although he was not on the roll as a regular member he was considered as such by the firemen in North Plainfield, and in the parade recently held at Somerville he rode behind the engine in a Warren uniform. The members of that company will attend the funeral services in a body.

He is survived by his wife, Delia Mills Jennings, of South Lancaster, Mass., and three daughters, Miss Jennie P. Jennings, Mrs. Alfred P. Meredith and Mrs. Olga Dodd, of Newport, R. I., and one son, William N. Jennings, who lives in Connecticut. He was the last of three sons. Three sisters survive him. They are Mrs. Isaac Brokaw, Mrs. Catherine LaFountain and Miss Sarah F. Jennings.

The funeral services will be held from the house Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock and the interment will be in the Evergreen Cemetery.

ANDREW VANDERBEEK BURIED

PRIVATE FUNERAL SERVICES HELD, REV. DR. YERKES OFFICIATING.

Friends Given an Opportunity of Viewing Remains—Interment at North Branch.

During Friday afternoon an opportunity was given persons to view the remains of Andrew Vanderbeek at his late home in West Front street, and a large number of the older residents availed themselves of it. Friday night at 8 o'clock a private service was held for the immediate relatives. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor emeritus of the First Baptist Church, was in charge. He spoke of his relation and acquaintance with Mr. Vanderbeek during the past forty years, of his active work in the church and Sunday school and of his upright and steadfast character and of his untiring efforts in the cause of religion.

There were several floral tributes sent by relatives and friends. Saturday the remains were taken to North Branch, where a short service was held in the afternoon. The interment was at the above place.

Amateur Dramatics.

The A. E. Willard Dramatic Club has been invited to give a performance of the "Last Days of Pompeii" to Passaic next month for the benefit of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian Church of that city. The club will sing the opera "Faust" some time during the winter and will begin rehearsing a week from next Monday.

Men's Supper.

The men of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church have completed arrangements for their annual supper and entertainment to be given in the parlors of the church next Monday night. The men are to give the affair without the assistance of women.

PARK CLUB'S SHORT BUT EVENTFUL STORY

Organized in March, 1901, It Has Grown to be a Social Centre for Plainfield Folk.

C. W. M'CUTCHEN'S GIFT

HE AND OTHERS HAVE MADE NEEDED CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE CLUB.

Membership Roll Contains 175 Names—Foster Milliken Father of Organization—List of Officers and Members of Board of Governors.

Club life in Plainfield has had its part in building up this city. To some extent it has been the club which has made this community as local city of homes. It is the club which promotes sociability among the residents of a place and a sociable community is bound to be popular with commuters. For that reason, to a greater or less degree, Plainfield has grown until today it is the Queen City of New Jersey. As the city grows the clubs grow until today commuters have their social organizations there they can take their families in the evening, to meet their neighbors and spend a few hours away from dull business cares, in bowling, playing pool, billiards or social intercourse among fellow commuters and their families.

The Park Club takes a leading position among the various social organizations in this city. Although situated in North Plainfield, it is supported by men of prominence in both city and borough. It has grown from an organization of Washington Park residents to a club whose doors are open to people from both sides of "the brook," with a membership limited to 175. Recent additions have made the building one of the finest appointed structures of its kind in this part of the State. Being a family club—a club where a man may take his wife and daughter and enjoy his evening cigar or his game of billiards or bowling—it has been fitted up with conveniences with this end in view. Although many thousands of dollars have been recently expended on the building, the club finds itself with a practically new clubhouse and entire paid for by cash subscriptions.

A sketch of its history shows how this club has risen to a place of prominence in this community. The club was started in 1901. A few Washington Park people talked of the desirability of such an organization which would bring the people of that part of the town into closer social intercourse. Accordingly steps were taken with a view to seeing what could be done. At first there was only a small number of people interested and it began to look as though the project was doomed to drop. The expense of maintaining an organization of that kind was figured up and it was thought it would be too great and the promoters became discouraged with the lack of enthusiasm in the proposition.

Foster Milliken is probably due the credit of having put the plan on its feet. It was he who, in the face of discouragements and drawbacks, worked out the project and placed it upon a solid financial basis. He set about gathering subscriptions to bonds and finally perfected an organization. The original building was erected by the Washington Park Improvement Company, which concern owned the land. It was planned that if only fifty members could be secured the club would be a paying organization. The most that could be secured was about thirty. It seemed at that time as though it would be impossible to get fifty members, but Mr. Milliken devoted more energy to the matter and finally contracts were awarded for the erection of the building.

It then became a question of how to run the club. The first meeting was held March 10, 1901. An election of officers took place on October 9, these being the first officials of the new club: President, Samuel Townsend; vice president, George T. Rogers; secretary, William L. Saunders; treasurer, George P. Dupee, and members of the Board of Governors: Foster Milliken, S. St. John McCutchen, W. J. Boome, Augustus VanDeventer and Henry A. McGee. The charter members: Foster Milliken, W. L. Saunders, William White, C. W. McCutchen, W. J. Boome, George Dupee, R. M. Day, S. St. J. McCutchen, M. S. Taylor, Samuel Townsend, Charles A. Reed, J. G. Peck, H. A. McGee, H. D. Brewster, E. A. Overton, G. T.

KING'S DAUGHTERS' CONVENTION HERE

City Union Proposes to Bring About a State Federation of the Organization.

MISS RAFFERTY'S IDEA

LARGELY ATTENDED MEETING OF UNION AT CRESCENT AVE. CHURCH.

Rev. John Sheridan Zeile Offers Prayer—Tea a Feature Socially —Reports Read by Various Officers of the Union.

It is probable that there will be a State convention of King's Daughters in this city at some time during the winter, possibly in January. The gathering will be for the purpose of organizing a State federation of King's Daughters. The matter was brought up yesterday afternoon at the semi-annual business meeting of the King's Daughters Union of the city at the Crescent Avenue Church. Miss Susan Rafferty, who is State secretary of the King's Daughters, spoke at length in advocacy of the movement. State federations of the organization already exist in many States.

Yesterday afternoon's meeting was opened by Mrs. Dorsey Hyde, the vice president. After prayer and scripture reading by Rev. J. S. Zeile, of the Crescent Avenue Church, the reports of the King's Daughters camp on the mountain were read and indicated a flourishing condition of affairs. Mrs. F. M. French reported for the committee on additions and repairs to the camp and Mrs. W. L. C. Glenney spoke of the important work accomplished by the nurses. For the camp committee, Miss Helen Phillips read the report.

Tea was served by the Loyal Daughters and Silver Cross Circles of the order. Those who presided at the tables were Mrs. Paul Brown, Mrs. Dorsey Hyde, Mrs. Frank M. French, Mrs. T. J. Dudley and Miss Walbridge. They were assisted by Mrs. Edward Wilson, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. Edmund Wright, Mrs. Fred Ball and the Misses Valiant, Milne, Ball, Vandeventer, Suffren and Phillips.

MISS MOULTON'S MARRIAGE

POPULAR YOUNG WOMAN WEDDED TO DAVID B. MELICK.

Miss Edith Belle Moulton, daughter of Mrs. Margaret M. Moulton, of 439 West Fourth street, and David B. Melick, were married Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother in the presence of the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends. The home was decorated with palms and Southern smilax and in the parlor, where the ceremony was performed, the couple, unattended, stood beneath a white bridal bell.

Rev. Dr. David J. Yerkes, pastor emeritus of the First Baptist Church, and the bride's pastor, performed the ceremony, assisted by the groom's pastor, Rev. P. M. Doolittle, pastor of the Reformed Church at North Branch.

The bride's gown was a dark blue peau de soie, trimmed with white Irish crochet and point applique over white satin, and she carried a bouquet of white carnations. Her traveling gown was of brown zibeline.

A supper was served during the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Melick left for Norfolk, Va., where they spend two weeks. After December 15, they will reside at North Branch. The groom is superintendent of a large creamery at that place.

The bride has been in the employ of H. W. Marshall, of East Front street, as bookkeeper, for six years. She is a member of the First Baptist Church and active in the Sunday-school. She was the recipient of a large collection of gifts of value, including a silver tea service from Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Marshall, and a handsome pair of Rose blankets from the employes of Mr. Marshall. There were many other *gifts of both use and ornament, attest*ing to the esteem in which both the bride and groom are held.

I. C. T. Monthly Reception.

The monthly reception and dance of *the I. C. T. Club will be held tomor*row night in the club rooms. The committee is George B. Case, chairman; Burlin Banks, Raymond McVoy, Edmund Texier, Lemuel Texier.

—Neuman Brothers' store will close Thanksgiving Day. All orders should be in the hands of the clerks this afternoon.

NO ACTION ON RECTOR'S RESIGNATION

Congregation Postpones Consideration of Rev. Wm. Vincent Dawson's Letter.

NEW VESTRY CHOSEN

G. H. DUPUY AND JAMES H. BUCKLEY ELECTED WARDENS.

Vestrymen Will Act on Resignation —Rev. Mr. Dawson Presides at the Meeting — Alfred Lacey Acts As Secretary.

The election of two wardens, senior and junior, and seven vestrymen, was the principal business transacted at a meeting of the congregation of St. Stephen's Church, Ravine road, last night. It was expected that the resignation of the rector, Rev. William Vincent Dawson, would be acted upon, but it was not. The matter will be brought before the new vestry, at its first regular meeting, the time to be decided upon later.

Rev. Mr. Dawson presided at the meeting last night. Alfred Lacey was the secretary. G. H. Dupuy was elected senior warden and James H. Buckley junior warden. These persons were elected vestrymen: Fred Hebert, Hugh H. Knox, Adam Hill, William Wood, Alfred Lacey, William Bennett and William A. Lord.

It is likely that next Sunday announcement will be made for the vestry meeting and then action regarding the rector's resignation will be taken.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS' CONCERT

GLEE CLUB'S ENTERTAINMENT IN THE FRANKLIN SCHOOL BUILDING.

Franklin School hall held one of the largest assemblages of the season last evening when the members of the High School Mandolin and Glee Club gave an entertainment for the benefit of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association. It was a success from the time the first curtain call until the last dance which closed the evening's entertainment.

The first number by the Glee Club was an opening chorus entitled "Let the Hills Resound," by Richards. The members of the club are Miss Wilhemina Patton, Miss Helen Robins, Miss Gladys Bigelow, Miss H. Mae Batchelor, Miss Marguerite Pierson, Miss Frances VanDeventer, Miss Carrie Mulford and Miss Mabel Maxson, accompanist; Francis K. Anderson, VanWyck Brooks, George L. Babcock, Harold Brownell, Harold C. Fenno, Charles P. Titsworth, Harry G. Thompson and Leon A. Walters.

"Sam Weller," a dialogue by Francis K. Anderson and Leon A. Walters was humorously rendered. A banjo and mandolin duet entitled, "Dreamy Eyes," was given by Theodore Gavett and Garth Williams. The time was well kept and they were encored several times. Charles Potter Titsworth and the Glee Club rendered the base solo entitled "The Students Lament," a descriptive selection which caused much applause.

The second part of the programme proved to be quite as entertaining as the first. It was a cleverly rendered "farce comedy, O-P-E-A," entitled "A Manager in Trouble." These taking part were: Miss Wilhemina Patton, soprano; Miss H. Mae Batchellor, alto; Leon A. Walters, tenor; and Charles Potter Titsworth, base. This was a laughable sketch portraying German, Irish, and other characters.

A mandolin selection by Chesterton Griggs was very well received and "Shoogy Shoo" a discriptive recitation by the Glee Club brought forth much applause. The programme closed with a chorus, entitled, "The Red and Blue," by the Glee Club.

After the musical programme had been rendered dancing was enjoyed. The arrangements and entertainment committee consisted of: Lucius T. Koons, chairman; Miss H. Mae Batchellor, Miss Olive L. Bogardus, George L. Babcock, Leon A. Walters and Charles P. Titsworth.

Funeral of Lewis Bruker.

The funeral services of Lewis Bruker, whose death occurred at Bordentown last week, were held yesterday from the late residence at that place. Morris C. VanArsdale, of this city, a former employer of Mr. Bruker, attended the services.

BOYS' BASKET BALL GAMES

"YALE" DEFEATED "PRINCETON" AND "COLUMBIA" TROUNCED "HARVARD."

Yale defeated Princeton, 6 to 0, and Columbia, Harvard, 5 to 2, yesterday afternoon in the Junior basket ball league of the Y. M. C. A. Each of the four teams has won a game. Summaries:

Yale—Alpaugh and Briggs, forwards; Heath, centre; VanArsdale and Leggett, guards. Princeton—McClintock and Line, guards; Ward, centre; Martin and Taylor, forwards. Score, Yale, 6. Goals from the floor, Alpaugh, Heath, 2.

Columbia—Hodge and Bacon, forwards; Freeman, centre; Stern and B. McClintock, guards. Harvard—Deane and D. Doeringer, forwards; Laughlin, centre; Patterson and C. Doeringer, guards.

Score, Columbia, 5; Harvard, 2. Goals from the floor, Hodge, Stern, Deane. Goal from foul, Freeman.

WESTFIELD GIRL WON MEDAL

ORATORICAL CONTEST UNDER AUSPICES OF TEMPERANCE WORKERS.

An oratorical contest and entertainment was given in the W. C. T. U. rooms, last night, under the auspices of a number of temperance workers. The programme opened with a violin duett by George Spear and R. W. Barnes, after which there were vocal selections by the Watchung Quartette.

Miss Edgar, of Westfield, won the medal contest for the best recitation, the prize being presented by C. M. Raybert. The judges of the contest were C. M. Raybert, Andrew M. Wilson and Ephraim Ashton.

A feature of the evening was a vocal solo by William Jaffery. There was also vocal selections by George Belcher and a quartette from Westfield. Another contest will be held after New Years, to be followed by a contest for a gold medal among those who have won silver medals.

ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH EUCHRE

WINNERS IN PROGRESSIVE GAME AT SAENGERBUND HALL.

The Holy Name Society, of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, gave the annual euchre and reception last evening in Saengerbund Hall. There were almost three hundred people seated at the tables. The affair was for the benefit of St. Joseph's Church. These were the prize winners:

Miss Nellie McGrath, sofa pillow, first prize; Mrs. C. P. Guinee, comb and brush tray, second prize; Miss Mamie Richardson, Miss Margaret Duffey and Mrs. John Carney; Patrick Nugent, bronze ink stand, first men's prize, W. O. Phillips, picture, second prize; John Haines, album, third prize; Francis J. Biats, Walter Shea and John Cairns, Jr. No list was kept of the prize winners by the committee and only a partial list of the winners is given.

The committee in charge of the arrangements was: Mr. and Mrs. A. E. LaPorte, Mr. and Mrs. James Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Kenney, James Daly, John McCullough, William Daly, William McCullough, Robert McCormick, Thomas Meany, James Hurley, Jerry Callahan, Robert Hamilton, Jr., and Frank Meany.

Traveled 18,684 Miles.

The adventures of Mr. Harry DeWindt, who lectures at the Casino next Monday night upon his perilous journey, "Paris to New York, Overland," were truly remarkable and equal those of Stanley, the African Explorer. It covered a distance of 18,684 miles, lasting 365 days and was made by land, with the exception of thirty three miles across the Behring Straits. It began at Paris, and continued through Berlin, Moscow and Warsaw to Irkutsk, on the Siberian railroad. From there on a horse sled two thousand miles were covered to Yakutsk, and from that place by reindeer sleds another six hundred miles.

By arrangements with the American authorities in Washington the party were picked up in August by the revenue cutter Thetis, which landed them on the American shore at Cape Prince of Wales. This trip of thirty-three miles was the only one by boat. From Cape Prince of Wales in Alaska they travelled to Nome City, and thence to New York.

HAPPILY MARRIED TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Utzinger Celebrate Their Wedding Anniversary.

MANY GUESTS PRESENT

COUPLE BORN IN GERMANY, CAME HERE THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO.

Rev. George Bowers, Who Officiated at Wedding, Conducted Marriage Service Again, Assisted by Rev. George Hauser.

Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Utzinger, of Grandview avenue, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, Tuesday, in a pleasant manner. The home was decorated with palms, plants and flowers. There were nearly eighty guests present from this city, Elizabeth and New York.

Rev. George Bowers, of Warrenville, who performed the wedding ceremony twenty-five years ago in this city, was present and he again conducted the ceremony, assisted by Rev. George Hauser, formerly of the German Reformed Church, but now of New York State.

Mr. and Mrs. Utzinger were both born in Germany and they have lived in Plainfield about thirty-five years. They have three sons, John, Albert and Christopher. During the celebration last night there was a programme of music and supper was served. A large collection of silver presents were received.

ODD FELLOWS HAVE BIG TIME

PLAINFIELD LODGE, NO. 44, ENTERTAINS QUEEN CITY LODGE, NO. 226.

In honor of the reopening of their rooms in the Babcock building Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, entertained the members of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, at a banquet and entertainment last evening. From a social standpoint it was a great success, there being at least two hundred people present, some of them being from out of town.

The hall was decorated specially for the event. Insignas representing different features of the order were hung conspicuously about the room. John Becker, the district deputy, made an address of welcome in which he reviewed briefly the events of the history of the local lodge. The members of the Queen City Lodge were cordially received.

Albert Barber, as master of ceremonies, announced that the lodge had arranged for an elaborate programme. This consisted of song, recitation, comic sketch and vaudeville acts by out-of-town artists. It was an entertainment rarely seen in a lodge room and each act and speech made by the artists brought forth much applause.

Some of the officers of the lodge made short addresses which were followed by an elaborate repast which was served in the banquet hall. This proved to be one of the most enjoyable parts of the evening's programme.

After the banquet a social hour was enjoyed during which the members of both lodges enjoyed an informal smoker. The committee in charge of the arrangements consisted of the officers of the Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, of which Stephen A. Schlief was chairman. When the lodge completes the furnishing of the rooms they will have one of the most handsomely furnished rooms in this city which are used for lodge purposes. Representatives of lodges in Bound Brook, Somerville, Westfield, New Brunswick and Elizabeth, were present last evening.

Masque Ball.

The Cotillion Club will hold a cotillion at the Casino New Year's Eve. It will be a masque ball and will be rare, leadest with many novel innovations. The committee in charge of the arrangements is E. T. Barrows, L. G. Timpson, L. E. Waring, T. W. VanBoskerck.

Miss Ford Dead.

Miss Mary L. Ford, aged nineteen years, daughter of James and Virginia Ford, died last night at her home, 830 Richmond street. The funeral services will be held from the late home Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

The Grandest Fair.

"The Fair," outfitters for men, women, misses, children and infants, will open for business at 10 o'clock on Saturday, in the Babcock building.

W. T. KIRK MARRIES A SOUTHERN GIRL

Plainfield Contractor Weds Miss Lucy Cooper Steele, Daughter of Belle P. Steele.

WEDDING AT BILTMORE

ASHVILLE FOLK THRONG ALL SOULS' EPISCOPAL CHURCH EDIFICE.

Groom a Prominent Business Man Here, Who Has Figured in Politics—Bride a Trained Nurse—To Reside Here.

William Titus Kirk, of West Seventh street, this city, and Miss Lucy Cooper Steele, of Ashville, N. C., were married last Tuesday at 7 o'clock in All Souls' Episcopal Church, Biltmore, N. C. The wedding was celebrated in the presence of a large gathering of society people.

The bride is the daughter of Belle Payton Steele, of Ashville. She is a trained nurse and was formerly connected with Miss Foote's Directory in New York. The groom is widely known in Plainfield and Union County for his political activity and success in business.

Mr. Kirk is a native of Cornwall, Orange County, N. Y., where he was born in 1864. He is the son of John M. and Elizabeth Kirk. His education was received in Friends Seminary, New York City, and Friends Academy, Glen Cove, L. I. He studied law for three years in the office and under the direction of Luke A. Lockwood, leaving to form a business connection with the German-American Insurance Company of New York. He then entered the employ of William Brothers, iron contractors.

Mr. Kirk has been most prosperous since establishing his business in Plainfield as contractor principally for iron and steel structural work. He has lived in this city since 1883. In November 1896 he was elected sheriff of Union County by 4500 votes, receiving 2300 votes out of 2000 in this city. During the recent campaign Mr. Kirk was a candidate for the assembly but was defeated owing to a bitter factional fight between Elizabeth and Plainfield Republicans.

Mr. Kirk is a Mason and is connected with other social and fraternal organizations of the city.

ALLEN J. SQUIER, A GROOM

MISS MARY ALICE M'CANN HIS BRIDE AT CHURCH SERVICE.

Miss Mary Alice Clair McCann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCann, Sr., of West Third street and Allen J. Squier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Squier, of this city, were married last Tuesday at 6 o'clock in St. Mary's R. C. Church by Rev. Father Andrew F. Egan, pastor of the church assisted by the curate, Rev. Father Delahanty.

Miss Mary Smith rendered the wedding march from Mendelssohn softly upon the organ and Miss Anna Daly sang the words. The bride was attired in a gown of white crepe de chine trimmed with point lace and hand embroidery. She carried a large bou*quet of bridal roses. Miss Mamie* Neafsey, of Elizabeth, the bridesmaid, wore a gown of white crepe de chine trimmed with old point lace and Renaissance lace. Charles McCann, Jr., was the best man.

A reception was held at the bride's home. A supper was served at which almost seventy-five friends were present from this city, Elizabeth, New York, Somerville, Raritan and Washington, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Squiers left for Washington, D. C., where they will spend a few weeks. Upon their return they will reside here.

At the Casino.

The celebrated Filipino band, six in number, all performers of merit, both musically and acting, will be a leading feature in the great bill of refined and high class vaudeville to be presented at the Casino tomorrow afternoon and evening, Thanksgiving Day, and three other splendid acts are promised in the appearance of Belle Gold, song and dance artiste, Estelle Pickens, "coon shouter" and the Harrington society sketch artists. The bill in its entirety will be good and first class and will be found worthy of patronage. Tickets and reserved seats for matinee and night can be had at Armstrong's.

THANKSGIVING DAY'S GOOD PROGRAMME

Attractions Offered for Tomorrow in City and Borough Various and Many.

SERVICES IN CHURCHES

FOOTBALL, GOLF, PAPER-CHASE, BIRD SHOOT AND OTHER SPORTS.

Good Bills at the Casino and Y. M. C. A.—A Corner-Stone Laying—Corner-Stone Laying by the Hebrew Congregation.

The opening of the holiday season begins tomorrow with Thanksgiving and a varied programme of events is presented for the entertainment of all. This is one day in the year when nearly everyone tries to eat turkey at the home fireside and exchange reminiscences of bygone days. It has generally been reported that turkeys will be high in price, but this will not prevent the bird from occupying a prominent position on the dinner table.

Tomorrow morning there will be several Thanksgiving services. A Union service will be held at the First Presbyterian Church at 10:30, when Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, of the Congregational Church, will preach the sermon. At the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church the pastor, Rev. John Sheridan Zeile, will preach to his own congregation, while in all the Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches, the usual services will be held in the morning. Other services will be held at the Calvary Baptist Church in the morning and at the Ms. Zion A. M. E. Church in the afternoon at 3 o'clock.

There will be several football games during the day. In the morning the Orange Field Club eleven will play Somerville and in the afternoon the Mohegan Club, of Brooklyn. The Alls Club will play the famous "Has Beens" in the morning on Crescent Oval.

In the way of golf there will be plenty of attraction at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, where several events are scheduled throughout the day. There will be social features also.

One of the important events of the day will be the laying of the corner-stone of the new temple, the Congregation Children of Israel, of Plainfield. These exercises will be held at 3 o'clock on New street near West Front street, where the building is now in course of construction. Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis will make an address and the mayors of the city and borough will be present. This will be followed with a banquet in Saengerbund Hall and a dance in the evening.

The Independent Gun Club, of North Plainfield, will enjoy itself at the annual king and queen shoot on the Maple avenue grounds, while at Woods Clubhouse near the Driving Park, there will be a pigeon shoot, a pig chase and general field sports.

There will be plenty doing at the Y. M. C. A., where a turkey dinner will be served at 6 o'clock. In the afternoon there will be a basket ball game in the gymnasium and in the evening there will be the Star Course entertainment, a strong attraction. An excellent vaudeville programme will be presented at the Casino both afternoon and evening. The T. A. B. Society will hold a social and dance in its hall on West Fourth street in the evening, while Central Lodge, No. 45, A. O. U. W., will provide an entertainment and repast for its members and friends in the evening. Notwithstanding that there is much going on in a general way many private entertainments at home have been arranged and with clear, cold weather a very pleasant Thanksgiving should be the lot of all. Not the least of the events is the annual dinner to be given to the children at the Children's Home at 1 o'clock. No one will enjoy this occasion more than the happy children and a fine programme has been arranged for them.

Thanksgiving Day services at St. Stephen's Church, Netherwood, will be: 7:30 Holy Communion; 10 o'clock, Matins.

The circulating department of the Public Library will be closed. The reading room will be open from 3 until 6.

A paper chase on horseback will be held at 12:30, corner Park and Prospect avenues.

The members of the local druggists' association met last night to discuss the matter of closing their stores to-

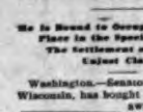
COMING OF CONGRESS

Timely and Interesting Gossip at the Nation's Law-Makers.

PLACE OF SENATOR SPOONER

He Is Bound to Occupy a Prominent Place in the Special Session—The Settlement of Just and Unjust Claims.

Washington.—Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin, has bought a summer place away up in the tip of New Hampshire. It is in the wilds of the town of Pittsburg, which occupies all of the bulge in New Hampshire that extends north of Vermont boundary and which is very much the largest town in the state territorially.



A Landed Proprietor.

The place is 600 acres of woodland with a farmhouse; there are no neighbors within five miles and the land is worth less than $10 an acre.

He bought the place so as to be out of the world for a little while every summer, but he has had the liveliest kind of a time denying the rumors that have gone out about it. In the first place it was announced that he had bought the entire town, which would have made him a landed proprietor with 350,000 acres in his possession. Then it was declared that he was going to establish a game preserve, and he received letters from all over the United States, at the rate of half a dozen a day, offering him all sorts of animals and birds to stock his place with and making all sorts of offers. The thing got to be a nuisance.

As a matter of fact the senator's estate is about as modest an affair as anybody could ask for. His live stock consists of two cows and one horse and he keeps a hired man. When he looks out of his window just after the first frosts come in early September he sees miles and miles of the most beautiful forest colors to be found in the world, and in the midst of such delights he loafs and invites his soul.

The senator has one of the most beautiful places imaginable at Madison, Wis. If it were only a little farther out of the town he would never think of living anywhere else even for a few weeks in the summer.

Position of Senator Spooner.

Senator Spooner is bound to play a very conspicuous part in the congress which meets the second Monday in December. All the legislation that is likely to come up is just of the kind that he is especially interested in and in regard to which he has already done important work. The Cuban reciprocity legislation which will take up and much of the special session grows out of the Platt amendment which he had much to do with and which he helped Senator Platt to frame. Another interest in congress is sure to take up the question of the Panama canal, which is now being handled by the administration in accordance with the terms of the Spooner act passed last winter. Another question which will disturb the activity of legislation will be that of the coastwise trade of the Philippines, a question arising under the Philippine government act which Spooner had much to do with framing.

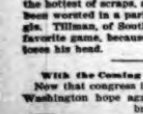
In short, there is hardly any question that can come up without touching Spooner at some point, for more than any other man in the senate it has been his fortune to have drawn bills which have been enacted and which settled great legislative problems.

Spooner is believed by many to be the most useful man in the senate. He is called in more frequently than any other senator to unravel snarls of legislation and to frame up bills which will furnish some compromise that would meet the difficulty. Yet Spooner is not by nature a compromiser. He is dashing, eloquent and pugnacious, and he is the hardest proposition to tackle in congress when it comes to a rough and tumble debate. He is always good natured, never loses his temper, even in the hottest of scraps, and has never yet been worsted in a parliamentary wrangle. Tillman, of South Carolina, is his favorite antagonist because Tillman always loses his head.

With the Coming of Congress.

Now that congress is coming back to Washington hope again animates the breasts of the army of hangers-on about the capitol who live from year to year in the never-dying expectation that some time or other they are going to have the rights which they have claimed.



The Claimant Who Won

There is nothing more pathetic anywhere, wrecks of manhood who haunt the corridors of the house and senate waiting for the session that will never be [illegible] congress grants a claim. Generally the congressional favors are bestowed upon the most worthy. There are exceptions, but they are few. There is a hard thing to say, but it is true nevertheless. It has got to be so that the most meritorious claims are those which can command the least influential support. Sedulous and merit too often go together. The cases that get through the most quickly are those championed by prosperous attorneys who have a close acquaintance with the men who control legislation.

Not long ago a noted lobbyist died in Washington. He had no occupation except the railroading of bills through congress. He was a large, ignorant, vulgar creature, whose principal characteristics were a capacity for making money and a genius for displaying it. Yet this man had among his close companions all but a few of the most conspicuous members of the lower house. He had weekly dinners at his house which contained one of the finest dining rooms in the city. At these dinners a certain group of representatives were always present. They came early and stayed late. When Tom Reed left congress and it was time to choose a successor it was found that every man who was in the list of those mentioned was among the lobbyist's most constant guests. He never lost one of his cases.

Just Claims Laid By.

On the other hand there was old Billy McGaraban, who trudged the corridors of the capitol for a generation with a claim which was as just as the moral law. Everybody knew that it was just, but it was for so large an amount and old Billy had been at it so long that congress got into a habit of ignoring it. The bill passed the house several times. But never but once did it pass both houses and senate in the same congress. When finally it passed both house and senate it was promptly vetoed by President Harrison in a message in which he said: "It has not been possible for me to make such an examination of the history of Mr. McGaraban's claims as would be necessary to form an intelligent judgment as to its merits and just extent." And all the bill did was to submit the title of poor old Billy's land grant to the courts of private land claims. He was justly entitled to millions and he died a year or two later in the charity ward of a hospital fighting cheerfully up to the last.

That is not the worst of it. Congress not only refuses to submit to the court of claims, created for the purpose, claims which cannot be adjudicated in any other way; but in cases which have been passed upon by the court of claims it refuses to act. Claims involving millions of dollars which the court of claims has passed awarding them, come to claimants still remain unsatisfied, because congress refuses to make the necessary appropriations, while the claimants to whom the money is legally due are living in Washington in poverty and often distress.

There is no creditor quite so merciless as the United States government and no debtor quite so unscrupulous.

Tennis Court at the White House.

Just back of the executive offices at the white house a tennis court has been one of the finest to be found anywhere. The ground is as hard and smooth as a floor and it is inclosed with a high wire netting, which, however, does not conceal the court from the street.

Here three or four days in the week the president plays tennis with one or two chosen companions. His favorite antagonists are Commissioner Garfield and Commissioner Cooley, the young New Yorker, who has just taken a place on the civil service commission. Both of them are fine players, Garfield especially, and they go at it with a vim.

The president generally picks one of them for a partner and the two play against the other. Occasionally the president takes one side of the net by himself. In this case he has the odd points of the game as the others are and he is a little heavier on his pins, but he plays powerfully and plays to win.

It is one of the most interesting sights in Washington to see this tennis game going on in the afternoon between four and five o'clock after the grist of visitors has been ground out.

Tennis is not so popular among public men in Washington as it was a few years before the butter, eggs and golf craze into vogue. It is growing again in esteem. When Olney was secretary of state under Cleveland he was regarded as the best player in Washington and it was the only form of exercise he took. Senator Lodge is also a fine player, though he seldom gets a chance. Ever since he was old enough to straddle a horse he has been addicted to riding, and he has the best seat of any public man in Washington.

MEN FROM THE FARM

They Have Hoped Materially to Make Chicago Great.

COUNTRY BOYS IN THE CITY

Are to Be Found in All Callings and Are Successful—Foundation of the City's Prosperity Is the Farm.

Chicago—It is the boy from the country that has made Chicago. It is the energy of the boy from the small city, the smaller hamlets and the farms of both east and west, that has developed the resources of this metropolitan giant. What they have done, they are still doing. It is the country boy who is making Chicago bigger and of greater commercial and industrial importance.

Made Money in Restaurants.

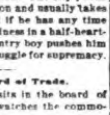
Look at the list of successful merchants, of manufacturers, of bankers, and in fact the successful men in all lines, and you find a predominance of men from the country. I do not propose to write of the men who have grown great, but of the men who are growing, the middle class of merchants and manufacturers, the men who are but climbing to the top of the ladder of success.

Let me cite an example. In 1893 a young man from a small town in Illinois was attracted to Chicago by world's fair opportunities. He had conducted a small restaurant in his home village, and he entered the restaurant business in a small way in the city. In a short time his small restaurant had grown to large proportions. He expanded and soon had two, three, half a dozen restaurants. To-day he is rated as a millionaire. He has a fine home on one of the fashionable boulevards, and over that home reigns the country boy's sweetheart, now a prominent leader in metropolitan society.

That country boy is to-day employing several hundred city-born men who have let opportunities slip through their grasp while they stood on the street corners to "guy" the new arrival from the country. He took to business first, and business took to him. The city youth reverses the operation and usually takes to society first, and if he has any time left devotes it to business in a half-hearted way, and the country boy pushes him to the wall in the struggle for supremacy.

On the Board of Trade.

The visitor who sits in the board of trade gallery and watches the commotion and excitement of the pits during a busy trading hour would not imagine it a favorite place for the boy from the country. But it is. Many of the most successful men of the board are country born. They have "grain in the blood," as one novelist puts it. They are natural experts at estimating values and grading. They acquired the foundation of the schooling on the farm where the grain is grown, and understand conditions.



The Country Boy on the Board.

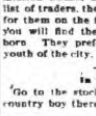
I know one old gentleman on the board whose opinion is sought many times each day. He is a successful operator on the board. He has made a fortune of enormous size by his knowledge of conditions, but his greatest interest is seemingly in the Indiana farm on which he was born. He is more farmer than successful operator in appearance. He has never learned the trick of wearing creased trousers; he does not keep abreast of the times in the styles in coats and cravats, but every move he makes is watched eagerly by his competitors on the board.

I know two young men who but recently became members of the board. They are the business partners of a city-bred man who is the father of several sons of better than voting age. The father needed new and young life in his business, and to get it he picked the boys from the country, and not his own sons. The energy of the boys from the country, together with their ability, is pushing the firm to the top.

Take almost any of the big grain commission houses and run through their list of traders, the men who buy and sell for them on the floor of the board, and you will find the majority are country born. They prefer them to the insipid youth of the city.

In Society.

Go to the stock yards. You find the country boy there buying horses, cattle, hogs and sheep because he knows the business from the ground up. Go to South Water street and you find him in the butter, egg and produce district. He understands it; he was born in it; he offers the hardest kind of competition to the city man engaged in the same line.



A Horse Show Leader.

But he is not only cutting in the commodities of the [illegible] He is found in the LaSalle street offices; he is [illegible] departments in the State street stores; he is selling goods on the road for the wholesale merchants, and in the majority of cases his boss is a country boy also. Marshall Field will give the boy from the country the preference in his establishment, all else being equal. Field understands their value. He knows what a farm training is good for. He has one himself. Running the streets of a city at night does not tend to produce valuable help. The country boy is at home in bed about the time the city youth begins his night of amusement, and he goes to the store or office the next day with a muddled head because of a night of sport.

Chicago society is a country society. For that reason Chicago readers can enjoy McCutcheon's cartoons of Bird Center. They do not look upon them as caricatures of the village, but as pictures of their early days. Chicago society has not yet reached unto the third and fourth generations which bring with them shiftlessness and foolishness. It is a society of business men and well-balanced women. The recent horse show was the crowning social event of the year in the city, and a glance at the list of leaders and box holders shows that one-half or more of the names there were those of country-born and raised men and women. Their sons, and their sons' sons may deteriorate, but the fathers are the mainstay of a great city.

Strength of Chicago Banks.

Compared with Wall street Chicago is but a mere dabbler in stocks. Her foundation is builded upon something far more substantial than fictitious values of industrials, and the continued drops in the price of these so-called securities has had but little or no effect upon the western metropolis.

Chicago Banks Are Strong.

No less an authority than the Wall Street Journal pronounces Chicago banks the soundest financial institutions in the country. And why? Because the Chicago banks find more substantial investments for their funds than is afforded by watered stocks. United States steel common offered no attractions to the Chicago bankers in comparison to grain, cattle and all the other products of the western farms.

Individually the Chicago banker is not averse to taking a flyer at the stock market, but not with the funds of the institution over which he presides. He has remained true to his obligations, and the result has been that the community—and by community is meant all of that great west of which Chicago is the center—has not suffered for a lack of available funds for legitimate business purposes.

The recent failures in the east and the financial excitement in St. Louis caused not so much as a ripple on the financial sea in Chicago. The banks here are filled to overflowing with the savings of the laboring classes, and the laboring classes are content to let it remain there.

The squeezes in the stock market have had no effect upon Chicago as a community. Individually some of its people have been caught for considerable losses, but the prosperity of the city as a community is based upon the products of the farm rather than upon the stock valuations of scheming syndicates.

The boy from the farm is building Chicago, and the products of the farm are financing Chicago

Graft.

When Mayor Harrison began the campaign against graft by his announcement that in the City Hall he uncovered a seething pot of infamy and shame for several departments of the city government. In the mind of the public there have already been numerous convictions for fraud in these lines. The building inspector's office, the department of public works, the health department and the police department have their quota of grafters, it seems, but will be culprits be caught, or will the whole affair be whitewashed over, and the guilty escape for lack of evidence?

The conviction of a grafting official is a hard matter to accomplish. His victim is, not as a rule, innocent, and not willing to take chances on entangling alliances in a court of justice. The police have found a profitable field among the gamblers in the loop district, and these poor wretches well know that if they appear against the police they must either convict the men who have extorted money from them or must be prepared to suffer greater persecutions from their tormentors in the future. The class of citizens of the population have but little faith in the justice of the courts.

Grafting propensities are found among others than city officials. Restaurant and hotel proprietors suffer from it constantly, and it is claimed that practically one-third of their legitimate income goes into the pockets of their employes. Waiters find many ways of flicking from their employes, and eternal vigilance is necessary to prevent the thievery extending to disastrous proportions.

Energy in Rádium.

According to the Anglo-Indian Review, it having been calculated that the energy stored up in one gramme of radium is sufficient to raise 500 tons weight a mile high, an ounce would therefore, suffice to drive a 56-horse-power motor car at the rate of 40 miles an hour around the world. The calculator evidently confused intrinsic energy with capacity for transforming energy.

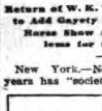
SOCIETY IN GOTHAM

The Season Has Opened Unusually Early This Year.

GOELET-ROXBURGHE NUPTIALS

Return of W. K. Vanderbilt Promises to Add Gayety to the Season—The Horse Show a Feature—Problems for the Divorced.

New York.—Not often in recent years has "society" begun its season so promptly as now it is beginning.



The Procession.

No one could afford missing the wedding of May Goelet to the tall duke of Roxburghe (pronounced Roxboro), though there are many complaints of Mrs. Goelet's "thoughtlessness" in fixing a date so unfashionably early as November 16. A pleasurable blip of gossip was added to the interest of the occasion by the story that "Bobby" Goelet was opposed to the match his mother had arranged for his sister. The Goelet family is of late years scarcely known in New York, whose real estate built up that great fortune. Is it something to remember to have been married in the same month with an American countess? It would seem so. Not in ten years has November seen so many fashionable marriages as were scheduled for the present month.

Tracy Dows, ten years out of college and already a member of nine fashionable clubs, is to wed Miss Alice Olin, a member of a stylish but not too rich Hudson river family. Chauncey Depew's man has already wedded a poor girl, a trained nurse who saw him through typhoid fever while he was in Harvard. As the son of "Rockefeller's banker," the president of the great National City bank, Mr. Stillman will be a conspicuous figure in finance, and perhaps later in society.

A Seven Years Siege Lifted.

Many things conspire to make the season promise gayety. For one, the seven years' siege of gloom upon the most beautiful house in New York is lifted by the return of W. K. Vanderbilt and his bride to the great mansion that has stood blank windowed ever since the divorce that set free the wife of the richest Vanderbilt to marry a Belmont.

The Vanderbilts Are Builders.

The house is from designs by Richard Hunt. It is more than 20 years old, but quite in the present mode. It is cast in the form of a medieval chateau, Blois or Chenonceaux, for example; and in interior fittings, beauty of appointments and fitness for its purpose it is not surpassed by any of the newer and larger houses, though, for that matter, few are larger.

The Vanderbilts all have what Lombroso would call "megalomania." W. K. Vanderbilt not only had this vast mansion on Fifth avenue to shut up when his affairs went wrong, but the famous Marble Palace in Newport has been a white elephant ever since, and he has just finished in the new "Idle Hour" on Long Island one of the most magnificent country places anywhere in the world.

The late Cornelius Vanderbilt erected the greatest city house in the country—at least the most costly, owing to its character and situation. Its cost of nearly $8,000,000, including land and fittings, is really disproportionate to the fortune he left his widow.

Cornelius Vanderbilt had no very notable country place, and his Newport place is surpassed by perhaps half a dozen others. But George Vanderbilt established in North Carolina a great country place in America, with 120,000 acres of land, which is now to be turned over to a sporting club.

The young W. K. Vanderbilt has established on the edge of the city an estate of 1,000 acres at a huge cost, and is now engaged in trying to narrow a three rod public road to one rod and to wrest a lake away from the township that owns it.

The Coming of the Horse Show.

Once in town, the society element will hardly leave it before the horse show in the latter part of the month—the one great exhibition of new gowns to which the public has admittance at a price.

Hail the Horse Show.

Mrs. Robert Goelet is in town for the marriage festivities of her niece. She is the Mrs. Goelet whose yacht, the Nahma, has for years been known in European waters. It was the Nahma that was stopped by Turkish guns at the mouth of the Dardanelles three months ago, but was afterward permitted to sail on to Constantinople with the apologies of the sultan. Mrs. Goelet has done no entertaining since the death of her daughter Beatrice, whose face and perhaps whose name will be familiar three centuries from now, though she died as a young girl. It was she whose portrait by Sargent, named simply "Beatrice" without the final name, was the sensation of a picture exhibition a dozen years ago, and was probably Mr. Sargent's crowning masterpiece up to that time. With a demure and innocently sweet expression the little girl stood with folded hand just beside a stand on which perched a gorgeous green parrot. As Sargent is the one living painter whose pictures we know will be increasingly famous for a century or more to come—it may be true of others, of him it is undoubted—the claim of the little Beatrice to a reasonable share of immortality transcends that of many give statesmen and scholars and men of wealth who today loom big but are doomed to speedy oblivion.

Genius works its marvels still, after all.

The Claus of the Divorced.

The gathering of the social clans upon a scale not often paralleled brings up the old question: "What shall we do with the divorced ones?" It is awkward.

The Divorcee.

Mr. Vanderbilt, for instance, with his brand new bride—how can he long pervade New York's social world without meeting Mrs. Oliver Belmont, who was once Mrs. Vanderbilt, and to whom he behaved in the matter of their divorce with such chivalry as made him long the most popular of all the family? And how will people like Mrs. Astor, connected by blood and marriage with parties on both sides of long-continued feuds, continue the strain of trying to keep themselves out of hostilities?

Of course there are rumors of peace where there is no peace—of hurried "reconciliations" by Mrs. Vanderbilt, the dowager lady of Cornelius, with young Mrs. Cornelius, who was a Wilson and a niece of Mrs. Astor. But we have heard these stories before. More real prospect of peace comes from another direction.

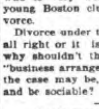
It remained for the Kemps, or rather the ex-Kemps, to set an example which may or may not lead to the white doves of peace folding their weary wings for a longer stay.

Mrs. Kemp was "Baby Belle" Nelson. Arthur Kemp was a member of an old Philadelphia family, rather quiet, as Philadelphia families fortunately are. They were married in 1896, divorced in 1902, and in 1903 are still the best of friends. Not that they often meet; that is arranged for them. But not long ago in Newport they did meet for half an hour or so of chat as amicable as two friends can have. Both are expected to remarry, Mr. Kemp the widow of Hugh Tevis, of California, who is very wealthy; Mrs. Kemp a young Boston clubman, himself a divorce.

Divorce under the circumstances is all right or it isn't. In either case why shouldn't the companions in a "business arrangement" or in a sin, as the case may be, make the best of it and be sociable?

Wall Street and Society.

Will the heavy slump in Wall street securities lessen the furious pace of society?



The Dilemma.

I hardly think so. True, it has been a "rich men's panic," but it hit mainly only one class of rich men. Men like the Vanderbilts, whose wealth is in railroad stocks and bonds, are many millions poorer than they were a year ago if they had to sell out at market rates. But they do not have to, as while their dividends are paid with pleasing regularity. In the case of Rockefeller and the "Standard Oil crowd" the impression grows that they have picked up good bargains at low prices and are not worrying. Even Morgan, though hard hit in his sorest spot, his financial prestige, is not much hurt in his pocket. The rich men who have suffered are plungers of the Pittsburg type and others who have gambled with the "sure thing" of dividing watered stocks and selling them to the public while the public had an appetite, went on gambling in the blissful belief that the appetite would continue. They have lost heavily, some nearly all they had, and others have suffered heavily a host of comparatively poor "investors." But the solid old houses, the Speyers, the Kuhn-Loebs, the Mortons, are impregnable as ever. They do business; they do not gamble. They are not doing much business as they were; that is all. And of course the Astors and Goelets and other houses that hold mainly real estate, or who invest and whose society "leaders" leave not much time for gambling in stocks, of course, have not burned their fingers much.

It isn't pleasant for a man who had $10,000,000 worth of stocks to have them shrink in nominal values to $7,000,000. But after all, here is Vanity Fair.

RASCALLY REYNARD

The Naturalist Tells Bits of History of His Tame Fox.

How "The Sprite" Revenged Himself for the Impudence and Inquisitiveness of an Old Man—How He Lost His Mate.

Readers of this series may perhaps remember "The Sprite," one of the three little fox cubs which I dug out of a burrow last April, when tiny, with yet blind and woolly. The little fox is still a guest of mine, and, [illegible] has long since lost all appearance of a puppy, he is [illegible] mischievous as ever.

For a long time the young fox had the run of the house, but [illegible] came a time when, in the interests of humanity, we decided that [illegible] must no longer [illegible] "The Sprite" had stood [illegible] It is a question whether [illegible] have been a roof for any of us. The neighbors, good-natured as they were, had got into the habit of returning their chickens every night [illegible] reditrix, and it was not for "The Sprite" at "tattoo" were "accounted for" in just one way. So we built a large cage of wire and wood, out in the garden, and into it we put "The Sprite" with a pretty little yellow-haired vixen to keep him company.

Among the many to whom the young foxes were objects of interest were some hens which used to stray into the garden and stare rudely through the netting. The vixen, like the little lady that she was, paid no attention to these vulgar fowls, but "The Sprite" chafed under the insult, which he frequently sought to wipe out, only to be reminded that he could not jump clean through a thick wire netting. So he gave it up, and bided his time. The hens became bolder and bolder, and strutted more and more forth, close beside the cage, twisting their saucy necks that they might see the better. One morning the boldest of these fowls was walking past, and "The Sprite" was nowhere to be seen. It may have been irresistible curiosity which prompted the hen to find out just where he was, but at any rate, in that evil hour she thrust her head through the netting. It never came out again. There was a flash of red, and the fox was wiping out all insults. The little lady came together with a "click," the black front legs straightened out like ramrods, and had the hen's neck been made of wire cable he would have had the whole of her.

That bit of revenge, sweet as it was, but gave him an appetite for what was to follow some weeks later. I am in the habit of taking him for a walk, and out of respect for my neighbors' poultry I take him on a chain. On the morning of Labor day I opened the cage door as usual, with the chain in my hand, but before I could put it on, he slipped past me and out into the garden. As though he had been planning it for a week, he ran directly for my nearest neighbor's hen yard, with a good sprint in his legs. Doing the best bit of sprinting he has done for some years. It was no use; "The Sprite" knew his advantage, and even turned to laugh in my face. In another moment he was over a wall, and in the midst of a covey of well-grown chickens, which scattered like skittles before a "ten-strike." But they were not quick enough for the fox, who had one of them in his teeth even as I came up with him. My presence did not disconcert him in the least, either; he kept his presence of mind, in spite of my shouts and the noisy cackling of the hens. Of course, he dodged me; but even as he did so his mind was strictly on the business in hand. He glanced quickly about, as much as to say, "Is there any more around here while I'm at it? Oh, yes, here's one;" and before I could turn he had another victim, and away he dashed with the two in his mouth. Back he went into my garden, and round to his own pen, where he dropped long enough to bite the chickens till he was sure they were dead.

After this all went well with the foxes until about three weeks ago, when I was called away from home and left an assistant in charge of the cages. Two nights later my neighbor's wife called to say that our foxes were in her yard. Mrs. Baynes went over, and in the dim light saw the forms of both foxes on top of the hen house, the roof of which was low enough for them to jump upon. She called "The Sprite" and he followed her back home without giving the least trouble, but when she returned for the vixen the latter had run off into the woods.

"The Sprite," until now so lighthearted and happy, was almost heartbroken. Night after night he howled incessantly, and he cared little for his food. So genuine was his grief that we got another mate for him. She arrived yesterday, and last night, for the first time since his bereavement, he did not sadden us with his pitiful howls.

ERNEST HAROLD BAYNES.

A FREE FIGHT

Women Stopped It

THERE was a new baby in the roadside house. Its mother was a sweet, plump girl, only nineteen. Its father kept a grocery next door to his home on the country road, and, more's the pity, a whisky saloon was attached to the grocery. The young father was one of his own best customers in the drinking sense. Neighbors gathered in the evening to "make Zeef treat off his daughter." Zeef was only too willing. Then a high official of the country "treated," too, and round after round of the maddening, burning whisky was swallowed. The official had a loaded pistol in his hip pocket. Among those "drinking off Zeef's daughter" was a big, red haired son of Mars with all the belligerency of the Martian temperament.

Presently howls, shouts, oaths, roars like those of an enraged bull, all mingled with the shrillest, most painful screams that ever pierced human ears, filled the air around that country whisky shop. The jumbled uproar sounded as though at least ten drunken lunatics were murdering one another. There never was din more infernal.

Three ladies, city women spending autumn days in that unpeaceful rural neighborhood, heard it. They were in a house near the saloon. It was odd, but the first thought of all three was one that never entered the mind of even the new baby's father. They looked at one another and said:

"They'll kill that poor woman and the baby, too, with their devilishness."

The girl mother lay upon her bed, with her hand on the baby's downy head, and heard it all and knew her husband was in the fray. Finally one of the three ladies rose and with a warlike mien marched into the highway and forward the battle ground.

"I can't stand this," she said.

Without a word the other two followed, not large women, but valiant in the strength of their cause. In this free fight the principal belligerents were the baby's father and the big red haired son of Mars. They were clawing and cuffing each other like two drunken tigers, as they were, though they were in God's image. The commander of the squad of three women dashed in between the baby's father and the red haired man. The red haired man, not knowing it was a woman who rushed in, turned and gave her a grip by the arm that made her howl with pain. His little son had hold of the red haired man's right leg, and the boy it was who emitted the fiendish screeches that sounded like a steen steam whistle gone crazy.

"POPPER! POPPER! COME AWAY HOME!"

"Popper! Popper! Come away home!" he screamed. Several country canines barked their best and loudest, scaling all the notes in the dog gamut.

After the momentary interruption at it again went the new baby's father and the redheaded man. In between them sprang the second of the squad of three city ladies. The third one grabbed the squalling boy by the neck and dragged him loose. She shook him.

"Shut your mouth! Shut up, I tell you!" she said. The boy shut.

Meantime the second member of the woman squad had seized the big red haired man by the arm and was reasoning with him, asking him if he wanted to kill the young mother and her baby. He protested, with drunken tears in his voice, that he didn't, that he would die a thousand deaths himself first. The red haired man was a brave chap, chivalrous to women.

The second and third members of the feminine squad of three conveyed the red haired man home, one holding each arm, and was that he stayed there—actually stood guard over him and talked him sober—till there was no more danger of his running back and renewing the fray. The fight, that might have resulted in murder, was ended. When it was over "he leader of the feminine squad for the something in her hand. She looked at it. It was Zeef's shirt, torn off his back, slit and rent from top to bottom. Moreover, it was nearly folded up. Over, when or where she got it, above all, how it came to be carefully folded, the commander can not tell to this day.

The next morning the baby's mother said: "It was all that Bink's fault, so it was. He bit poor Zeefie first. Besides, it's always customary for a man to get drunk when his first baby comes."

Velvet Gowns With Two Bodices, Renovating and Sleeves.

Although dress is still costly, a woman if she uses common sense need not buy as many costumes as formerly. For instance, take the velvet calling costume. This can have a second bodice made to wear with the one skirt in the shape of an evening blouse made with transparent neck and flowing chiffon or real lace sleeves. For day wear with this same costume there can be a blouse waist unlined and trimmed with embroidery applique.

Wide belts of moire are very smart just now, and one can be made to do duty with several costumes. They are made on a boned foundation, with small rosettes and a fancy buckle.

Fancy stoles in fichu shape renovate many an old fashioned costume. They are made in all sorts of combinations and present an excellent opportunity for the utilizing of remnants. They are mostly trimmed with tiny ruchings of chiffon and taffeta or narrow bands of mink and sable.

The large chiffon undersleeves are also prime factors in the renovating of an old dress, for tight sleeves may be cut short and widened by the addition of bands or figurings of velvet.

Skirts are much fuller around the feet, and the additional width in some times gained by setting in fancy pieces in the way of trimming.

The picture shows a gown of gun metal broadcloth trimmed with black and white embroidery.

MATERIALS AND MODES.

Spotted Velvet — Plush Revived. Heavy Lace to Match Gowns.

Ecru, cream and string colored lace is embroidered with black spots to give it character. The most popular trimmings are those which can be divided into parts to be used as tabs, scrolls and irregular motifs.

Spotted velvets make smart tea gowns and blouses or form charming home and visiting gowns for the dainty woman.

To be smart a woman's costume should be as far as possible of one shade. Gun metal gray, for instance, is worn with squirrels, and sables harmonize beautifully with brown cloth.

Plush will be used in many ways, and beaver plush is greatly in demand for smart millinery.

The new chiffon velvet makes ideal velvet gowns because it is so light in weight. It is very expensive and therefore not likely to become common.

Very heavy lace of the Paraguay or cicuy type is used both on costumes and on millinery, and it is dyed to match the material.

Lace hats in brown or black have a velvet border to match and are trimmed with velvet and steel ornaments and large plumes.

Trained skirts are no longer modish, but smart gowns have long skirts, with the length falling mostly round the back and sides and the front certainly an inch longer than is actually required. Walking skirts are quite distinct in style and have an all round appearance, but only for country wear do they perfectly clear the ground.

Burnt orange appears on many costumes of browns, and it is especially suited to this color.

The illustration shows a black and white chiffon waist trimmed with jet.

FASHION CHATTER.

Some of the Popular Things For Women's Wear.

Waists we must have anyhow, and it is a good thing for many of us that shirt waists hold their popularity so long, as in this way one skirt may be made to do double duty, for waists wear out much faster than skirts.

But with a pretty silk waist for evening, a velutina one for street, a flannel one for the house and perhaps one or two others of vesting or thick washable stuff a woman can get along with fewer skirts and look quite as pretty. The waists are, generally speaking, not so full with a pouch, and those are much more elegant for the difference.

There are some really beautiful French and Scotch flannels intended expressly for shirt waists. They are in all the fashionable colors and designs and are made up quite simply, with a few tucks or gathers at the shoulders, and are, as before, drawn to the front in a modified blouse shape. Some are worn with pointed belts, but the majority have straight ones, plain, draped or embroidered. Some of the fine ones are very beautifully devised, with all sorts of arrangements to make them handsome, and these are made of the richest of silks and satin. Leather belts are very fashionable, but they are extra fine. Some are of plain leather, bound on the edges and stitched, while the others are of the best patent leather. Gun metal buckles are much liked for this kind of belt, but some have silver or gilt buckles.

Gun metal in dress material, silks for ties, velvets for hats and in buttons is exceedingly fashionable just now. Shirt waists have decorations made of bands of velvet ribbon, and on these are set several handsome buttons of this metal. These buttons are made in different shapes and sizes, some being oval and others pointed at the ends. These are called olives. They are showy, and when in steel set on a dark and rather dull color they light it up wonderfully.

One of the waists in the illustration shows the olive button down the front, with a row of fancy castle braid on each side; also on the cuffs and collar. This braid is offered in all the combinations of color of the season and in very many really artistic designs. Some of them are as fine as lace and, being made of silk, give an effect not obtained by any other trimming, this being partly due to the fact that it is so flexible that sharp corners can be turned and many new arrangements made which would not be possible with ribbon or with lace alone.

Among the stuffs made almost exclusively for the shirt waist is a new material in the flannel order which, it is claimed, will not shrink in washing. This is a great drawback in most flannels. It is produced in all the colors now in vogue in designs suitable for the material, but it has not struck me as being very pretty.

For evening wear there is a great variety of silks and china crapes, and some of the new mohairs are pretty enough to be used for this purpose. The liberty silks, taffetas, bleached pongees, some brocades and some china crapes are adapted to the making of evening waists for theater and informal occasions where full dress is not required. They are made on the same lines as those here shown, but lace and embroidery and fancy stitches, fine castle braids and fancy buttons are all applied as trimming.

While I was trying to find out all I could about waists I saw some garments intended for the intimacy of one's own room, and, though perhaps they are out of place here, yet I shall mention them. One was a wrapper in soft red de laine, with a small red dot on a gray ground. The gray was that known as French, and the red was crimson. The back of the dress was made in princess shape, while the front hung loose from a lace yoke to the feet. On the shoulders were caps of the white lace and cuffs of the same to the bishop sleeves. Around the bottom of the dress were five rows of very narrow black velvet ribbon, with large medallions of white lace placed over them all around. At the throat there was a dainty looped rosette of velvet ribbon, with twelve single ends of the ribbon in varying lengths, none shorter than six inches nor longer than twelve. At the end of each was a tiny bow with ends of the same ribbon. A rosette of long and narrow velvet loops is worn in the hair with this pretty home gown.

A neat little negligee of polka dotted silk extended several inches below the belt, where it was plainly hemmed. The belt was of ribbon to match the dot, and the cape collar was bordered top and bottom by a row of black lace insertion, as was also the neck finished it. The sleeves were rather narrow bishop shape, with lace bands.

DRESSMAKING HINTS.

Very Full Skirts the Rule Now—The Empire of Black.

The smart tailor made skirt for street wear just clears the ground all around and tilts up a trifle at the back. These skirts are very full at the foot, but when worn they hang beautifully and are easy to walk in.

Spotted taffeta makes pretty afternoon and evening gowns. Oriental satin is particularly smart in deep cream color combined with a trifle whiter shade of chiffon and pearl ornaments.

Many skirts now hang in full gathers from the waistband and are simply trimmed at the bottom with five bands of ribbon, with insertions of lace between.

ERMINE TURBAN.

Pinked ruches of taffeta bring us back also to the 1830 styles.

Enormous quantities of material are needed for the new models, and the redingote and pelisse of old are being revived.

The loose, graceful flowing sleeve is the feature of nearly every up to date evening gown.

Cordurays in black, brown, white and deep shades of gray will all be very smart for walking costumes.

Moleskin plush is used for hats to go with the fur.

The kilted walking skirts are only held down for a short distance, after which they are allowed to flare.

The cut shows a smart ermine turban trimmed with a jet buckle and a black aigret.

WHAT IS WORN.

Cross Over Capes—New Marie Antoinette Waistbands.

Pale lavender is one of the most popular shades for evening wear, and royal blue is also often seen.

The new cross over pelerines are becoming to slender figures; but should be avoided by those with any tendency to plumpness.

Almost anything is smart in the way of trimming from suede kid bands to ribbon ruching. The latter is now being revived after several years of plain effects.

The Marie Antoinette waistbands are greatly in demand and when properly toned and trimmed with tiny bows and buckles they form the greater part of the trimming of a blouse bodice.

Rosettes and cockades figure on the new belts, as they do on the new millinery.

A blue cheviot walking costume seen recently had a wide cape made with a trimming of knotted fringe. The coat had a little vest of orange panne embroidered in black and a deep blue kid belt having a gold buckle.

Bands, or, rather, corselet, effects are seen on many short and jaunty fur coats.

Spangles are quite the thing for evening wear. When combined with hand painted chiffon they give quite a dainty effect.

Pannes are also used, as well as satins in all kinds of new, makes, described by the manufacturers as "with soft finish"—that is to say, duchess satins of old are now made to supple that you can, as the saying goes, "pull them through a ring." These lend themselves admirably to the gaugings, tuckings and plaitings which the fashion of the hour demands.

The picture shows a smart cape and muff of silver fox. The hat is of velvet, lined with tucked chiffon and trimmed with a bird.

MENIAL LABOR.

Lady Debaters Discuss It in the White Owl Club.

It was high tea and society day in the White Owl club. The topic for the high debate was, "Resolved, That better treatment should be accorded to women who perform menial labor."

Mrs. Sparkill opened the ball by saying the ladies to debate each for herself what menial labor is. She herself, Mrs. Sparkill, found that in general menial labor for women was supposed to be cooking and all kitchen work, house cleaning, scrubbing and washing and ironing.

Miss Burdley objected to classifying cookery among menial works. She had been attending cooking school, she said, and if ever there was anything that might be called a fine art and aesthetic

"I BLISTERED MY HANDS BOTH TIMES."

it was the preparation of slightly, hygienic and appetising food for the civilized human palate. When a lady—a lady, mind you—trained for her occupation, wearing an immaculate blue cotton gown and white apron, prepares in a clean, bright kitchen whose pots and pans shine like silver a tomato salad garnished with boiled egg and parsley or sends to the tea table angel cake that even angels might be glad to get, why, "I should like to ask, Mme. President, if this is menial labor? In my judgment, no—a hundred times no! It is an occupation that belongs to the realm of art."

Then Mrs. Whackley rose. She said:

"The first speaker classes house cleaning and that kind of work with menial labor. Now, I wash my own dishes and can sweep, dust, clean woodwork—yes, and wash windows better than anybody I have ever hired to do it. May I ask if there is anything more artistic when it comes to that than brilliantly burnished glass windows that let all the light through and when the sun shines just right on the cross panes scatter the rays and break them into prismatic colors glorious to behold? When you can pass your fingers over the window casings without getting them soiled with dust, when there is not a scrap of lint upon your rugs or in the corners, when you have wiped and polished your furniture till you can see yourself in it, is that menial labor? I find a little kerosene dropped upon the dust cloth"—

Down went the president's gavel. "Out of order," called the president.

"Well," continued Mrs. Whackley, who had the name of keeping the neatest house of any of the club members, "I only meant to say when I forgot myself that in my opinion house cleaning as well as cookery should be elevated from menial labor to the realm of art—industrial art, anyhow."

The White Owls evidently agreed with her, for all of them except one applauded her with enthusiasm. The one exception next obtained recognition and said she disagreed with the other speakers. Cooking and house cleaning were menial labor. But only for those who have not brains to do anything better. She held up a pair of puny, fleshless, useless looking hands.

"The Creator has appointed us all to our own spheres," she continued in a sort of weak, piping, effeminate voice. "Now, I never did any manual labor in my life, never expect to do any. Twice in my life I have swept a room or tried it, and both times I blistered my hands and had to lie down an hour or two."

"Dear, dear!" said some of the Owls in a whisper.

"I'd be ashamed to tell it," whispered Mrs. Whackley almost out loud, and several ladies nodded agreement. They did not applaud the speaker.

"I don't know why washing and ironing should be called menial labor," said the member who superintended the laundry class in a housekeeping school. "There's our head washerwoman. She never had the training we give our girls now, but she is just the cleanest, most fastidious creature. You should see the snowy linen, the shining garments, she turns out. She takes as much pride in them as any painter did in a piece of his picture. She is keeping her two children in school by her labor and is just as neat in appearance and refined in her manners and as gentle as any patroness of our housekeeping school. She's a regular old glorified wash lady."

Again the White Owls applauded. Mrs. Keturah Straightback, chairman of the executive committee, closed the discussion, as follows:

"Madam President, all I have to say is this: Where labor is rightly performed and in the right spirit there is no such thing as menial labor."

And all the Owls applauded frenetically.

UP TO DATE MODES.

Some New and Suitable Fabrics For Dressy Gowns.

A favorite mode of handdressing coiffeurs in having the hair waved loosely and dressed low at the back of the head, with a tiny wreath of flowers at one side. Another novel style consists in dressing the hair high and surmounting it with a velvet black or velvet bow and a bird of paradise plume sweeping right down to the decolletage.

What are called the Louis styles are much in evidence. These fashions are very rich and are suited to dressy occasions, carriage wear, etc. A carriage costume made of rich velvet, the cost cut three-quarter length and the lower puffs of the sleeves made of rich lace with a jabot of the same at the throat, is smart and has a distinguished air all its own.

Chiffon and chiffon velours, crepe de chine, soie de chine and satin oriental are among the dainty fabrics which make up so prettily in the new full dress designs. Taffeta, too, is used in a softer make than it used to be and is helped out by the addition of much chiffon.

Redingotes are being revived, and the big French houses are showing several made of taffeta. These do service for many occasions. As a carriage wrap the redingote is charming.

The picture shows a costume of moleskin cloth trimmed with velvet.

DRESSY GOWNS.

Velvet Costumes Are to Be Very Popular This Winter.

Handsome velvet gowns are among the smartest things this winter. Usually a gown of this sort is quite expensive, and as a result it is often made to do duty both for day and evening wear. A long, well cut skirt accompanies two bodices.

Embroideries are seen a good deal on princess frocks. The shoulders are kept very wide, the effect being attained by the addition of a fichu composed of folds of velvet, fur, lace and taffeta.

Formerly only light shades were used in the evening. Now one sees a great many dark shades as well. Cloth gown for evening wear are also smart, and they are lightened in appearance by the addition of pieces of real lace, gold and silver embroideries, etc.

Dyed lace is now a feature of many of the smartest gowns. Worth is using a good deal of silver with blond lace, and the heavier makes are dyed to match the new shades of royal blue, golden brown, etc.

Most of the gowns have very high collars, which have to be cut with the greatest care.

The new chiffon velvet is finer and closer than padne, but as yet is too expensive to use very liberally. The little tassels of silk are replaced by larger ones, in which chenille is conspicuous, and long fringes of chenille and ball pompons of the same are used both on fur and plush and are shown in mole gray, seal brown and black.

The cut shows a chiffon evening gown trimmed with narrow ribbon ruching.

THE NEW WOMAN

Notes of Her Progress

A VIVID illustration of the influence of mind on body was cited to me lately. There is a lady who has had many troubles in the course of a long life, and, like many of our sex, she has made the most of them. Her husband broke her heart, killed long since every spark of affection for him, though she still tolerated him around. Her children turned out badly, too, and her health was wretched all through her earlier years. There were years when she had to support her whole family, husband and all. She was, however, endowed with remarkable commercial ability and was able to feed, house and clothe them all. Still her life in those years was bitter, bitter, with nothing that the old time woman was taught to believe was everything to "females," as we used to be called. Those dark days are now over for the lady I am telling you of. The wheel of fortune turned and brought her a beautiful home, with hired people to work for her. The domestic happiness she believed in in her early married life is denied her, it is true, but she has almost everything else that makes life worth living and an intellectual, resourceful mind besides. She ought to be happy, and she did at length learn to be measurably so as the troubled past disappeared farther and farther in the background. But my lady is one of those who keep nothing to themselves. They must turn themselves inside out to every friend. She met one day an acquaintance who seemed sympathetic and poured out the whole black story of her sorrows. As she did so it became so vivid to her mind that she seemed to be living it over again—the sorrow, the shame, the despair. It had all happened twenty years before, yet next morning my lady was ill in bed, unable to rise. The recounting of her troubles had really thrown her into downright illness that lasted a considerable time. Now, don't tell your troubles to anybody if you want to keep your health. Don't even think of them yourself. Put them wholly out of your mind and think of something else, something bright and cheerful.

In Boston a unique enterprise has been started by Christine Brown, Abby Morton Dias and others. An organization called the Emerson Union For Ideal Culture has opened classes whose members will be educated to evolve the "divine within," spirit. This means, according to the promoters of the union, a development of the highest ethical, aesthetic, spiritual and physical capabilities of the human being. An important part of the teachings will be on the subject of "Healing and Harmony Through Music," which the Emersonian folk advocate. People outside of Boston may belong to the organization.

The British Woman's Emigration association is doing great good in sending poor English working girls to Canada to grow up with the country, to northwest Canada, as in all the happy new countries, the hired girl is somebody treated usually as a member of the family. From April to the middle of October parties of respectable girls sail from England to Canada in charge of a matron who looks after them on the voyage. In Canada they are on their arrival forwarded to good homes already waiting for them. There they are respectfully treated and get good wages. Many a girl is thus saved from starvation and worse in British cities.

If any young lady whom you know is about to be married impress on her with all earnestness the necessity of beginning right with her husband in financial matters. While she is still able to influence him, even before marriage if possible, let her gently but firmly induce him to give her a regular money income, so much of his earnings as shall be hers for regular and dead sure. It is the only way.

If I were down south and could get hold of an old fashioned water mill that could grind out the southern cornmeal that northern folk know nothing about I should make as much of this meal as I could and set up a trade in something it north. Northern people do not know how delicious hot corn bread, have no idea how delicious it is, do not even get the right kind of meal to make it of. A fortune might be made by a woman enterprising enough to ship real southern meal north, especially if instructions for making bread the southern way went with each package. The pure food people in the north might take up the matter.

Wood for major general? Well, any old stick will do.

Cleveland has returned from Virginia with thirty-two brace of duck. The Old Dominion State always was kind to him.

A grocer who was anxious to work up a tea and coffee trade decided to sell a certain quantity of tea at a slight loss in order to have a basis for an effective advertisement, says the Philadelphia Record. He took considerable space in a leading newspaper and told in it why he offered the tea at a lower price. The result was his tea and coffee trade was doubled in value and the advertising increased his general sales.

Some one suggests that the Central road change the name of the "Netherwood" station in order to avoid confusion, which it now makes. "Netherwood" is a part of the city, but by the way it is advertised many people not familiar with this section consider it a distinct place. Frequently the headline, "Netherwood, N. J.," appears in New York and other out-of-town papers. Sometime ago the Central wisely changed the name "Evona" to "Clinton Avenue Station." Its other stations within the city limits are "North Avenue" and "Grant Avenue." It has been suggested by a correspondent that the company designate the one in the east end, "Netherwood avenue" station, or "Belvidere avenue" station.

JOHN H. FRENCH DIED SUDDENLY

Attacked by Apoplexy at 10 o'Clock on Tuesday and Died at 11:30.

MANY RELATIVES HERE

HAD RETIRED FROM ACTIVE BUSINESS SEVERAL YEARS AGO.

Was Associated With His Father, Phineas M. French, and Also His Brother, Theodore F. French, in City Mills—Died at His Home.

Returning home from a visit among friends in the business section of the city on Tuesday, John Henry French, one of the best known residents, passed away at 11:30 o'clock. Death was due to a stroke of apoplexy suffered an hour before death occurred. Mr. French was fifty-nine years of age. He was born in this city and lived here all his life.

He is survived by his wife and two brothers, Theodore F. and Louis M. French, and a number of half brothers and sisters who are: William A., David, Mrs. Sheppard, of Forestville, N. Y.; Mrs. J. C. Smith, of Orange; Mrs. George H. Whitney, of this city; and Miss Harriet A. French, of North Plainfield, and two daughters, Miss Mary French and Mrs. Luella Dudley, of Boston. Edward V. French, the architect, of this city, is his son.

Mr. French was well known here as a lover of horses. He has a collection of clippings about famous horses which is perhaps one of the most complete in the country. He was interested in the Mountain Park Inn project and was associated with his father and brother in the milling business, when the City Mills were running. He had been retired from active business for several years.

Seventh-Day Baptists to Meet.

A three days' session of the New York and New Jersey Seventh-Day Baptist Church will begin at Shiloh on Friday. This is an annual meeting and is largely attended. Among those who will go from Plainfield will be Rev. G. B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, and Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis.

Husking Bee.

Miss Margaret Randolph, of New Durham, gave a husking bee at her home Saturday, the affair being attended by a large number of young folks from this city. Dancing was a feature, music being furnished by Eugene O'Reilley.

Whist Club Organized.

A whist club has been organized by Miss Phelps, of the Plainfield Business College, and meetings are held every two weeks. The club already has a good membership.

Appointment Confirmed.

The appointment of Dr. P. W. Hensley to succeed himself as postmaster at Dunellen, has been confirmed by the Senate.

MEN SERVE DINNER AT THE SEVENTH-DAY

Thanksgiving Day Menu Enjoyed at Largely Attended Church Entertainment.

IN PURITAN COSTUME

REV. DR. A. H. LEWIS READ AN APPROPRIATE PAPER DURING AFFAIR.

The Enterpean Glee Club Renders Selections — Church Suitably Decorated—Committees in Charge of Arrangements.

Many persons who are members of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church in this city enjoyed a genuine New England Thanksgiving dinner served by young men attired in the costume of Puritans. The effect was at once novel and pleasing. It was arranged for the purpose of raising money for the Ladies' Aid Society.

A musical and literary programme was rendered after the supper. In the church parlors tables were arranged ladened with tempting New England dishes appropriate to Thanksgiving as observed by the Puritan. The guests were waited upon by an efficient corps of young men all attired in Puritan knickabockers and broad collared jackets of black material. The waiters were: George Clark, George Babcock, Charles Titsworth, Paul Westphal, Charles Nagle and James Pope.

The decorations in the dining room were unique. Appropriate sentences were printed on white placards. Some of these were: "Please do not forget to tip the waiters as that is their only income," "George Clark, Our Guiding Star," "Ira West, the Decorator," and other roasts on the members of the various committees. Fully a hundred people were served with dinner.

The social time after the dinner took place in the church and a musical and literary programme was rendered. Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis read a selection, "The Old Time Post," and the Enterpian Glee Club, composed of Sidney B. Titsworth, L. T. Lewis, Elmer Cutting and Maxwell Honeyman, sang several selections which were well received. Special features of the programme were the instrumental selections by William Rogers and J. H. Mosher.

Various committees of the Young Men's Association of the church, under whose auspices the affair was held, had charge of the entertainment and supper: Entertainment — John Hiscox, chairman; W. P. Mosher, William Hubbard, Henry M. Maxon and Dr. O. B. Whitford; refreshments —Clarence Rogers, chairman; William Rogers, L. Ford, Frank Hubbard, John Mosher and Harry Case; decorating—Ira West, chairman; Nathan Wardner, Asa Randolph, Louis Rogers, Mr. Fairchild, Orra Rogers and Valois St. John. Some of the decorations in the church and in the parlors were suggestive of a Thanksgiving harvest. Pumpkins, bundles of hay and agricultural implements lent realism to the decorations.

AMUSEMENTS.

If the New York critics are to be believed, another tremendous hit has been scored at that home of big productions, the Broadway Theatre, New York. This time it is that incomparable artiste, Fritzi Scheff, in a bright new comic opera called "Babette." The critics are unanimous in the opinion that Miss Scheff is the one real sensational success of the season and declare with enthusiasm that no such first night has been seen in New York in many years. The New York Herald said the morning after the first production: "This opera "Babette" was presented in New York for the first time on Monday night and made an instant triumph with public and critics." The Sun said "the attractions of 'Babette' are many and captivating." The World said "Fritzi Scheff sang like one possessed." The American said "the audience arose to their feet shouting bravos, and cheering." The News said "Fritzi Scheff and 'Babette' are destined to a long and prosperous run on Broadway."

Reception to Bride and Groom.

Mr. and Mrs. George Moorhouse, of McKinley place, gave a reception to their son, William H. Moorhouse, and his bride, at their home, on Saturday night. The nearest relatives and friends of both bride and groom were present from New York, Long Island, Rutherford and Plainfield. The bride wore her wedding gown of cream veile. Dancing was the feature of the evening, while graphaphone selections by John Hall, of Netherwood avenue, were enjoyed, as were also piano selections by Miss Flora Moorhouse.

Henry Trottner, of New street, will spend Thanksgiving with his sisters, Miss Bessie Trottner and Mrs. Alfred Gottlieb, of White Plains, N. Y.

BETHEL CHAPEL'S TWENTIETH YEAR

Nineteenth Anniversary Celebration in One of Crescent Avenue Church Missions.

COLORED CONGREGATION

MRS. STEPHEN A. GINNA'S EFFORTS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE MISSION.

The Pastors Who Have Served the Flock—Features of Yesterday's Exercises—Rev. John S. Zelie Made An Address.

The members of Bethel Chapel yesterday celebrated the nineteenth anniversary of the founding of the chapel with special services in the afternoon. The little church was filled with members and friends and the music was a special feature.

Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, the mother church of the mission, made a few remarks as did William D. Murray, Leander Lovell, Stephen A. Ginna, superintendent of the mission, F. B. Andrews, superintendent of Warren Chapel and Mr. Strong, superintendent of the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school.

Miss Grace Carroll and Mr. Thomas, the tenor soloist, of the Crescent Avenue church, sang and Miss Carrie Elliot presided at the organ. A new carpet was used for the first time.

Bethel Chapel is the outgrowth of the workes performed in his city by Mrs. Stephen A. Ginna among the colored people. She organized a sewing society and each week a large number of colored women gathered at her home. Class for the study of the Bible was formed and finally it became necessary to rent a class room. The room soon became too small and the matter was brought to the attention of the people of the Crescent Avenue Church. Dr. Houser's German Reformed Church occupied that corner and it was decided to open the edifice as a colored mission. Seventeen years ago it became necessary to erect a new building and the present structure was built. Rev. F. D. Tildon is the third minister which has presided over the little church. Rev. T. H. Lee, was the first and later W. A. Alexander, now of Brooklyn and Mr. Tildon who has been there seven years.

The celebration was conducted in the evening with a praise service at which time some of the older members told of thier spiritual life in the church since it was organized.

PETERSON'S FIGHT FOR CUP

STILL LEADS FOR GOLF COMMITTEE TROPHY OFFERED AT HILLSIDE.

Roger F. Murray, who won first honors for the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, on Saturday, appeared as a new factor in the competition. He turned in a score of 79 and in winning the first three points he now has a total of five Walter Peterson still holds the clear for the trophy. This competition closes next Saturday.

The remaining points were divided between L. E. Calkins and C. B. Morgan, each making a net score of 80 These scores do not materially change the general standing in the competition.

These scores were posted for the Golf Committee cup:

Roger F Murray, 89, 10—79; L. E Calkins, 84, 4—80; C B. Morgan, 92 12—80; E. R. Shoemaker, 105, 20—85; Walter Peterson, 93, 6—86; H. D Hibbard, 97, 7—90; H. R. Stockton, 98, 4—94.

TO BETTER CONDITIONS.

Conference on Child Labor to be Held by Consumers' League.

The Consumers' League of New Jersey has sent out invitations to a conference at the Free Public Library, Newton, Dec 4, at 8 o'clock in the afternoon, in the interest of the fight to strengthen the child labor law in the State. The purpose of the gathering as set forth in the invitation, is threefold: To discuss the feasibility of forming a permanent child labor committee to carry on a campaign of education and investigation, as far as possible, through organizations interested in the welfare of children; to ascertain what are the most desirable legislative measures to urge at the present time, and to discuss ways and means of agitating such as may be decided upon.

Secured Permanent Home.

Mr. Davidge, who has occupied for the past year the house of Mrs. Weir Lewis on Rockview avenue, has recently purchased the handsome property of Mrs. Morgan S. Taylor, on Rockview Terrace, where he will take up his residence after some improvements are made.

CHILDREN TO ENDOW A CRIB IN HOSPITAL

Little Ones Give an Entertainment to Raise Funds for the Object.

KNOWN AS BUSY BEES

A NUCLEUS FUND OF $50 RAISED LAST NIGHT.

Features of Affair Given at the Home of L. B. Woolston—Those in Charge of Various Attractions—Drills Given.

For the purpose of raising an amount sufficient to endow a children's crib at the Muhlenberg Hospital and to form a nucleus for a fund with which to provide for the patients confined in the crib, twenty-five children, ranging in ages from four to sixteen years, held a fair last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Woolston, on Fairview avenue. The net proceeds will amount to $60, which is much more than the children anticipated. The patronage was generous and good prices were secured for the articles on sale.

The children, under whose auspices the fair was held, are banded together as a sewing society known as the "Busy Bees." In the decorated parlors of the house a number of booths were arranged which were presided over by members of the society. Among those in charge were: Tea table—Miss Edna Hyatt, Miss Gertrude Berkham, Miss Ruth Wheeler, Miss Margaret Woolston and Miss Bessie Smith, with Mrs. Maurice Audsley, chairman; candy—Miss Marjory Hyatt, Miss Helen George, Miss Bernice McClintock, Miss Marion Phillips, Miss Hazel Hyatt and Miss Lydia Thorp, chairman; fancy table—Miss Ethel Fowler, Miss Laura Woolston and Miss Ada Smith; flowers—Miss Mildred Burnett, Miss Elsie Schwed, Miss Lydia Audsley and Miss Margaret Ewart, with Mrs. W. A. W. Burnett, chairman.

A feature of the booths was the Christmas tree, the donations on which were gifts from the merchants in this city. This was in charge of Miss Marjory Hyatt, Miss Helen George, Miss Bernice McClintock, Miss Marion Phillips and Miss Hazel Hart, with Miss Lydia Thorp, chairman. Miss Maria Woolston and Mrs. M. H. Ewart were the committee in charge of the whole affair.

An entertainment lasting half an hour was held preceding the sale of the articles. This consisted of drills and Mother Goose pantomimes by the children in charge of the various booths. They were drilled and made proficient in their parts by Mrs. Ewart, Mrs. Burnett and Mrs. Audsley. Miss Clara VanFleet was the pianist for the evening. In the chancing off of the quilt L. B. Woolston won the prize.

OLDEST MASON IN JERSEY

WM. GODBER, OF NEWARK, INITIATED IN ST. JOHN'S LODGE IN 1843.

In honor of William Godber, the oldest living Mason in point of membership in New Jersey and perhaps in the country, a reception was tendered by St. John's Lodge, No. 1, Free and Accepted Masons, of Newark, in connection with a celebration of past masters' night at their rooms last week. A token was presented to Mr. Godber, who has been in Masonry and a member of the lodge for sixty years.

Mr. Godber received his first degree in St. John's Lodge November 15, 1843, and a week later became a full-fledged Mason. In the following year he was elected tyler of the lodge and served in that capacity for seventeen years. During that time he never missed a meeting, and, in fact, has, with the exception of nine months spent in the volunteer service during the Civil War, attended every session of the lodge since then.

Three years after entering the lodge, Mr. Godber became a member of Union Chapter No. 7, Royal Arch Masons, of Newark, and ten years later was accepted into the Ancient Order of Scottish Rite Masons. He has been a member of the Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine for a number of years, being attached to Mecca Temple of New York City until the institution of Salaam Temple in Newark, when he was transferred to the local temple.

Mrs. Williamson's Position.

Among the positions which will be open to appointment by the Governor at the beginning of the new year will be that of Mrs. Emily H. Williamson, of Elizabeth, as member of the board of managers of the Home for Feeble Minded Women. It is likely that she will be reappointed. Mrs Williamson is well known in this city.

An Entertainment Given the Members and Friends of Monroe Ave. M. E. Church.

PROGRAMME PRESENTED

REV. JOHN M'MURRAY, THE PASTOR, GAVE AN INTERESTING TALK.

Singing of Quartette a Feature of the Affair—Edward H. Beckman, the President, Made the Address of Welcome.

Rejoicing in having passed through twelve successful years the Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue Methodist Church last night celebrated the event with song, music and speech. There were about seventy people present, all members of the League and their friends.

A feature of the evening was the singing by the male quartette composed of John W. Dash, John C. Osborn, David W. Jones and Jean C. Babcock, accompanied by Miss Daisy Honston on the piano. They were encored several times and were loudly applauded. R. M. Sorser led in prayer in which he asked for a continuance of the success of the league and for Divine help in continuing the spiritual helpfulness in the work. The president of the league, Edward H. Beakman, in a short address welcomed the visitors and the members and reviewed briefly the records of the past dozen years. Rev. John McMurray, the pastor of the church, made a few remarks outlining his talk upon the motto "That is to be rather than to seem." He emphasized the value of the power of personality.

A social hour was spent after the programme and refreshments were served by the committee which had the arrangements in charge. It has been customary to invite the various districts in this vicinity to the anniversary celebrations but on account of the recent Methodist rally held in the First Church recently, at which time the Epworth Leaguers of the Monroe Avenue Church took a prominent part in the entertaining of the delegates, it was decided to make the celebration this year an informal one.

The committee in charge of last evening's programme consisted of the Cabinet which is composed of: President, Edward H. Beekman; first vice president, Miss Georgia E. Beekman; second vice president, Miss Anna Stafford; third vice president, Mrs. Walter T. Manning; fourth vice president, Walter M. McGee; secretary, Miss May Canborn, and treasurer, Clarence Brouard, and superintendent of the junior league, Miss Charlotte Aldrich.

A PRIMARY ENTERTAINMENT

LITTLE ONES OF FIRST BAPTIST SUNDAY-SCHOOL RENDER PROGRAMME.

The younger members of the First Baptist Church Sunday-school presented an entertaining programme in the lecture room of the church, Saturday afternoon, the proceeds being for the purpose of giving the primary department a Christmas entertainment during the holiday season. Mrs. J. A. Powlison, as superintendent of the Primary department, had charge of the programme, which opened with a piano solo by Miriam Hall. After reciting the Twenty-third Psalm in concert the class sang "Little Lights."

Recitations were given by Florence Neal, Ralph Smalley, Alfred Hafner, Elsie Moore, Dorothy Hall, Belle Godown, Elsa Haffner, Margret Donnell, Lawrence and Edna French, Emilie Compton and Lester Chandler. A song, "Little Chinese," was rendered by Arthur Murray, Bessie Carson, Violet Cronce and J. Harold Martin. There was also a sunbeam song by the class, and a lullaby song, with solo part by Lillian VanWinkle "Come Boys Come," was the title of a song given by Elmer and Lawrence Farnoch.

An amusing part was a dialogue entitled "Countin' Under Difficulties," by Violet VanWinkle, Leora Henry, Russell Miller and John Frank. A feature of the programme was a mandolin solos by Russell Miller, accompanied on the piano by his mother, Mrs. Dudley Miller.

After the entertainment tea and wafers were served to all present by a committee of teachers. A snug sum was realized from the entertainment.

Match Caused Blaze.

Roy Hafner, the young son of John C. Hafner, of Central street, struck a match in the parlor of the home Saturday afternoon. The head of the match flew off and landed in a lace curtain setting fire to the light material, before the blaze was put out the curtain was destroyed and the carpet and furniture damaged to the extent of $50.

RURAL FREE DELIVERY FOR SCOTCH PLAINS

Suggested That Postoffices at Scotch Plains and Fanwood Be Abolished.

SAVING TO GOVERNMENT

SOME PREFER RURAL SERVICE FROM PLAINFIELD OFFICE.

Office in Scotch Plains Fifty Years Ago and Fanwood Office Thirteen Years Ago Said That Government Rule is Violated.

Residents of Scotch Plains have been doing a lot of thinking, it is said, since the announcement came that a rural free delivery route is to be established from Plainfield, to include the southeastern part of Fanwood and a large portion of Terrill road. They cannot see why their rural neighbors should be given the benefit of mail delivery at their homes while they, many of them, are obliged to journey a mile or more to the postoffice for their mail.

It is thought that the result of this sentiment may in time be the abolishing of the postoffices in Fanwood and Scotch Plains and the delivery of two or three mails a day from the Plainfield office. This, it is claimed, would save money for the government, the expense of running the two postoffices *being much less than the cost of car*rier service would be. In addition the added convenience to residents in having their mail delivered at their doors is an important consideration.

The Scotch Plains postoffice was established fifty years ago and that at Fanwood in 1895. An interesting fact about the two offices is said to be that they are situated within a mile of each other in violation of one of the postoffice regulations.

ORANGE FIELD CLUB WINS

THE RAHWAY AGGREGATION CRUSHED, SCORE BEING 16 TO 0.

Orange Field Club on Saturday afternoon defeated the Rahway football team by a score of 16 to 0. The Plainfield team was too strong for the visitors who were unable to make any headway. J. Tobin kicking off to Rahway. The O. F. C. held Rahway for downs and forced them to kick. Hamilton got the ball. Plainfield played line hits to within twenty yards of Rahway's goal, and Rahway then held for downs, similar treatment being given the visitors. Rahways kicked, Tobin getting the ball on forty yard line, with five more minutes to play. Smith made 25-yard run and Sherwin was shoved over line for a touchdown. Smith failed to kick goal. Smith kicked to Rahway and O. F. C. held for downs, carrying the ball to 40-yard line Time. Score 5 to 0.

Rahway kicked to Plainfield. Cumberson took ball for 10 yards. Plainfield made steady gains until Rah*way's 35 yard line was reached.* Rahway held locals for downs. Rahway kicked, Hamilton getting the ball. Sherwin played round end for run with Smith for interference, carrying ball to 1½ yard line of Rahway, a run of 88½ yards. Sherwin played for tackle. Smith again failed to kick goal. Smith kicked to Rahway who fumbled. Rahway held for downs. O. F. C. had ball when time was called. The line-up:

COLUMBIA'S SOPHS TOO MUCH FOR ALIS

Plainfield Aggregation No Match for New Yorkers, Score Being 17 to 0.

REVOLVING PLAYS MADE

BULKLEY'S GREAT RUN FOR TOUCHDOWN IN THE SECOND HALF.

Cathcart's End Runs a Feature of the Play—The Steady Plunges of the Columbia's Weakened Alls' Line—A Costly Fumble.

The Columbia University Sophomores ripped up Alis' line for three touchdowns in Saturday's game on Crescent Oval, the final score being 17 to 0. Columbia outweighed the local team and had the benefit of greater experience. The play was characterized by considerable snap and dash. Post and Willard, of Columbia, are members of the "varsity scrub eleven," and Whitney and Caboone, of Alis, were substitutes for the regulars at left guard and full back.

Post did some grand work for Columbia, scoring the first touchdown by steady plunges for long gains principally through Egan, of Alis, who was a mark for Columbia's attack during the greater part of the game. The touchdown was scored after three long runs through Egan, the last one for twenty yards. Short line plunges by Post netted the second touchdown near the end of the first half, which ended with the score 11 to 0.

In the second half the play was most of the time near the centre of the field. Bulkley, of Columbia, captured the ball on a fumble in the middle of the field and ran the length of the gridiron for the touchdown shortly before time was called. Columbia's gains were made chiefly through revolving plays on guard and tackle. For Alis, Cathcart's end runs were the feature. Line-up:

Columbia, '06, 17—Ulman, le; Mactin, lt; Knox, lt; Ebling, lg; Prothro, c; Dixon, rg; Rich, rt; Schoonmaker, re; Schultz, qb; Bulkley, lhb; Willard, rhb; Martin, rhb; Post, fb.

Alis, 0—Cathcart, re; Wilson, rt; Egan, rg; Pike, c; Caboone, lg; Mc Naughton, lt; Meeker, le; Phillips, qb; Waltman, rhb; Hardcastle, rhb; Whitney, fb.

Touchdowns — Post, 2; Bulkley. Goals from touchdowns — Schoonmaker, 2. Referee—Davis. Umpire—Landers. Linesman—Carter. Time—20 min. halves.

HIGHWAYMEN AT GARWOOD

ALEX. WOIDT KNOCKED SENSLESS AND RELIEVED OF $25 SATURDAY NIGHT.

Alexander Woidt, of Garwood, was knocked senseless and robbed of $25 Saturday night shortly after 10 o'clock. Woidt, who is general manager of Walker's grocery store in Garwood, shut up the shop and started for his home a block away. He had gone about 200 feet when someone tripped him and struck him with a heavy instrument on the head.

Woidt was relieved of his wallet containing $25 but a smaller sum in another pocket, as well as his watch, ring and other jewelry, was untouched. It was discovered later that the horse and wagon driven by Martin Givvens, for Walker's grocery, had been taken to Cranford, and it is thought that this was done in order to prevent Givvens from returning to the store in time to interfere with the robbers.

Woidt was unconscious for three hours. He was attended by Dr. R. S. Sinclair, of Westfield.

AMENDMENT NEEDED IN BOROUGH LAWS

Effort Being Made at Trenton to Bring About a Change in Present Act.

IN RECORDER'S COURT

RIGHT OF APPEAL FROM DECISION OF BOROUGH COURT DEMANDED.

Present Acts Permits Only a Writ of Certiorari — Senator Childs and Assemblyman Swackhamer Backing a Bill.

A recent case in the North Plainfield borough court has brought to light a peculiar condition of affairs which is considered should be remedied by an act of the Legislature so as to insure justice to all who may be arraigned before a borough recorder. The law as it stands at present makes the decision of a recorder final and consequently a poor man, who can not afford to pay the cost of certiorari proceedings, has to abide by the decision of the magistrate who may be biased, although his innocence might be clearly shown in the court proceedings.

Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, who has had some experience with the borough law on this particular subject, fought hard for a change in the law when he was in the Legislature. It passed the House but was smothered in the Senate where Senator S. S. Childs worked equally hard for its passage. Mr. Swack*hamer says that he intends seeing how* the members of the Legislature stand upon the subject and if it is possible he will try to have some changes made in the law which will give the poor man as well as the wealthy man, some chance of securing justice.

In explaining the law Mr. Swackhamer made the statement that the act should be changed so as to give a man an opportunity of appealing the case or a trial by jury, both of which are denied by the present statute. A man who has but little knowledge of law and who might be swayed by prejudice, is sometimes liable to give a verdict which will stamp a defendant as a criminal all his life while he may be perfectly innocent but cannot afford to spend the $100 necessary to take out certiorari proceedings to carry the case to a higher court. The Supreme Court won't consider the evidence in such cases but will only pass upon the legal points of the case in question.

These same conditions hold throughout the county and State. The very fact that a man unversed in law, elected to the position of recorder by vote of the people in every way unqualified to fill such a responsible office, shows conclusively that a prisoner brought before him on a criminal or technical charge, should have some opportunity of appealing his case.

MORE HONORS FOR MR. HALL

YOUNGEST SON OF MRS. F. H. HALL WINS P. G. SCHOLARSHIP.

John Howe Hall, who is taking a post-graduate course at Harvard University, has just been awarded the Gorham Thomas scholarship for 1903 4. Mr. Hall is the youngest son of David Prescott Hall and of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of this city. He graduated from Leal's School in 1899, and completed his course at Harvard in three years, winning in the fourth year the degree of M. A., which will not be conferred, however, until next June, as it is not the custom at Harvard to confer two degrees on the same person in one year. Mr. Hall is a member of the Harvard track team and won his "H" last spring in the dual games with Yale, at New Haven.

Nichols-Phelan.

A number of Plainfield people attended the wedding last evening of Walter Coon Nichols and Miss *May Roberts Phelan, sister of Edwin For*rest Phelan, of New York, at Holy Trinity Church, 129 street and Lenox avenue. Mr. Nichols is the elder son of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Nichols, of New York, formerly residents of Plainfield. The house decorated and arranged by former Mayor W. L. Sanders, of Rockview avenue, was built by Mr. Nichols and occupied by him until business interests caused his removal to New York.

Brooklyn Pastor Here.

Rev. Edgar S. Kilpatrick, pastor of the Washington Avenue Baptist Church, Brooklyn, occupied the pulpit of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, Sunday, preaching strong sermons, morning and evening.

Clergyman Encourages Temperance.

"Temperance" was the subject of a stirring discourse by Rev. E. Vivian Stevenson, the rector, at Grace Episcopal Church Sunday evening. The rector discussed the subject freely.

MISS YERKES WEDS DR. PAIGE

Dr. H. Worthington Paige, Takes Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes' Daughter As His Bride.

QUIET HOME CEREMONY

FATHER OF BRIDE OFFICIATED, ASSISTED BY REV. DR. CHAMBLISS.

Groom a Practising Physician and is Attached to New York Medical College and the Flower Hospital Staffs.

An interesting event of Thursday was the marriage of Miss Grace Yerkes, youngest daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. David J. Yerkes, and Dr. H. Worthington Paige, of New York, which took place at the home of the bride's parents at 7:30 o'clock. The affair was extremely simple and quiet, their being no special decorations and the bride and groom were both unattended. The guests present included just the immediate relatives on both sides, with the exception of a very few friends.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes, father of the bride, and pastor-emeritus of the First Baptist Church, performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chamblin, the pastor elect of the First Baptist Church. Congratulations followed, after which a wedding supper was served. Upon the completion of a pleasure trip, Dr. and Mrs. Paige will reside in New York, where the groom is a practicing physician. He is also on the staff of the New York Medical College and the Flower Hospital, and lectures at both of these institutions.

The bride was born in Plainfield and has always lived here. She has been actively engaged in the work in the church of which her father was pastor for forty years, and she has a large circle of acquaintances. She was the recipient of a large collection of handsome and valuable gifts, including a cut glass fruit bowl of the Valkyrie pattern from the Young Ladies' Missionary Society, of the First Baptist Church, of which the bride was a member.

L. C. T. CLUB'S ANNUAL FAIR

V. W. NASH, JR., AND HIS ASSISTANTS WORKING HARD OVER SCHEME.

*It is time the good people of Plain*field began to save their nickels for there is a big time coming between November 30 and December 5. That will be the week of the I. C. T. Club second annual fair and the preparations this year are for the most elaborate series of entertainments the club has yet given. There will be dancing every night and something special besides.

From four to five booths will be presided over by the fair friends of the club members and will contain for sale everything that the seeker after bargains can desire. There will be a fishing pond, "satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded," over which Matthew D. Sweeney will preside. It will be the great privilege of all who attend to take a chance on a valuable painting, guaranteed the genuine article, presented the club by the artist.

The committee is V. W. Nash, Jr., chairman; Arthur Caleen, Harry Flannery, Burlin Banta, Raymond McVoy, Joseph Robinson, Lennox Taylor, Edward Taylor and George Coon. A selection of the music for the fair will be made at an important meeting of the club tonight. Action will also be taken on the resignation from the presidency of the club of V. W. Nash, Jr.

ROBERT GOLDSACK MARRIED.

Quietly Wedded in Westfield, Miss Stram Being the Bride.

Announcement was made today that Miss Anna Elizabeth Stram, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Stram, of Wilson avenue, and Robert Goldsack, of this city, were quietly married last Friday night at the Presbyterian Church parsonage, Westfield, by the new pastor, Rev. Mr. Stone.

The bride is a sister of Mrs. Charles Parkhurst, who was recently married. The groom is a substitute letter-car*rier at the local postoffice, and at* present holds a position as clerk at Wilson's grocery store in the West End. The couple is well known in this city and are now receiving the congratulations of their many friends.

Alleged Burglar Released.

Christian Sorensen, who was arrested in North Plainfield on a charge of entering a house with intent to commit burglary, has been released from custody on bail by the Bayonne police.

PARK CLUB'S SHORT BUT EVENTFUL STORY

Rogers, R. H. Cook, A. E. Fabey, W. W. Howland, B. A. Hegeman, B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Augustus VanDeventer, Rev. M. E. Dwight, George G. Evans, H. P. Reynolds, D. G. Brokaw and Edward Loomis.

The club was opened in Feb. 1892. It was then seen that the club would be popular and the applications began to pour in. Although fifty was the limit of capacities of membership, applications were received in a short time, making the number one hundred. And still its applications came in.

After the first year all the indebtedness was paid off either in cash or through the sale of the bonds of the first issue, all of which were not disposed of. These sold rapidly. Plainfielders became interested in the club and many applications from this side of the brook were received and it soon became apparent that the limit would again have to be increased in order to receive some of the many applications. This was done and today there are quite as many Plainfielders who are members of the club as North Plainfielders.

The club continued to prosper and two years ago it was seen that additions would have to be made to the building in order to increase the facilities for the enlarged membership. This was discussed. Although the financial condition of the organization was excellent the cost of the proposed improvements were more than the club was able to bear. It was then thought a "rivalry to make the proposed additions and improvements more modest. There was no doubt but that greater improvements were needed but the committee was handicapped by finances.

Charles W. McCutchen, who was one of the first members of the club and who took an active interest in the organization from the first, came to *the aid of the committee with a gen*erous affair. He said that if the members of the club would raise half the cost of the improvements first sug*gested he would give the other half.* It was stipulated that the gifts must be in cash. The members set to work but although they labored hard they were not successful in securing the desired amount. This stipulation was made so that when the improvements were completed the club would not be handicapped by debt.

Plans were drawn and bids were received. The plan seemed to be doomed when Mr. McCutchen again came to the assistance of the committee with an offer ever more generous than the first. He said that if the members would raise a certain sum he would give the rest. This they succeeded in doing and the new clubhouse was assured. Many people subscribed and today the club has one of the finest clubhouses in this part of the State.

The Washington avenue building has been entirely renovated. The old bowling alleys have been taken out and four new and improved alleys have been installed. The billiard room has been enlarged and new tables installed. A large social hall is now one of the features of the building. These features assure a position for the club in the social life in this city, of unequalled prominence.

The coming winter promises to be marked with a number of dances and entertainments which will bring the club prominently before the people of the community. Beginning this week music for dancing will be provided every night and every evening. On Thanksgiving Day, Christmas and Easter formal dances will be held. A dance for the junior members of the club is to be the New Year's eve attraction. On December 6 a smoker is to be held. A stage in the social hall will allow for amateur productions of the first class.

So popular has the club became that the membership limit has been increased to 175 and even with such a large number of members new applications are continually being received so that the limit has almost been reached.

In connection with the improvements which have just been completed the building committee is deserving of special mention. Samuel Townsend, the chairman, has taken an active interest in the work and the recent presentation of a gun to him by the members of the club in appreciation of his work in connection with the recent additions, showed the gratitude of the members to Mr. Townsend for his keen interest in the welfare of the organization. Associated with him on the building committee were Charles W. McCutchen, F. H. Ball and Allen B. Laing.

The board of governors are S. St. John McCutchen, president; George T. Rogers, vice president; Allen B. Laing, secretary and Nelson A. Miller, treasurer; E. H. Ladd, Jr., H. A. McGee, C. Everett Murray, Joseph B. Terhune and Samuel Townsend.

C. W. Evanson, of Vice street, has gone to Virginia on a hunting trip.

WEDDED FIFTY-EIGHT YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. L. Smalley, Sr., Observe the Anniversary of Their Wedding.

PARENTS OF THE MAYOR

QUIETLY CELEBRATED OWING TO MR. SMALLEY'S ILLNESS.

Have Eight Children—Mr. Smalley a Strong Republican — Opposed His Son in Battle for the Annexation to Union County.

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Smalley, Sr., Thursday observed in a quiet manner the fifty-eighth anniversary of their wedding at their home, 22 Craig place. The event was quietly celebrated owing to the illness of Mr. Smalley, who has been confined to his bed for seven weeks. Only the members of the family were permitted to see him. A family reunion had been planned sometime ago in accordance with Mr. Smalley's wish, but when he did not recover as the day approached, it was decided to forego a formal celebration.

Mr. Smalley was born eighty-five years ago in Martinsville but later moved with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Smalley, to Stirling where he was raised on the old homestead farm. There he met his bride of fifty-eight years ago and they were married by Rev. J. T. English. Mrs. Smalley was Miss Phoebe Jane Irving, daughter of a well-known farmer of Stirling. Soon after their marriage they moved to North Plainfield township and were among the first settlers in what is now the borough. They built the second house on Craig place when that thoroughfare was still a narrow lane. Aside from being a member of the town committee he never occupied a political office. Mrs. Smalley has been a prominent member of the First Baptist Church.

They are the parents of Mayor Newton B. Smalley, David C. Smalley, *William L. Smalley, Jr., A. I. Smal*ley and Jed. M. Smalley, Mrs Anna J. Cadmus, Mrs. David W. King and Miss Elizabeth Smalley.

He conducted a butcher shop on West Front street, near Somerset street, twenty-five years ago. Some time ago he retired from business on account of infirmity brought about by old age. Since that time he has been living quietly at home, however, taking a keen interest in the affairs of city and borough. As regards the annexation question it is interesting to note that he was bitterly opposed to it and cast a ballot against the scheme, although his son, Mayor Smalley, was one of its strongest advocates.

TROLLEY ROUTES FROM PLAINFIELD

Distance, Rates of Fare and Time Consumed in Making Various Trips.

TROLLEY EVERYWHERE

NEW LINES, PARTICULARLY IN NEW JERSEY AND PENNSYLVANIA.

Growth of Systems and Incidental Recent Improvements—Particulars About Trolleys Generally in This Country.

Within twelve months the electric railway systems of the Middle Atlantic States have grown to more than twice their importance, through the completion of a few links which permit continuous trips of much greater latitude than ever before. The next year or two will show a still greater increase in the importance of electric railways through the completion of still more links in the mighty chain which will soon extend from the Atlantic coast to the Mississippi River, unless all plans fail.

The fastest time made in New Jersey is made by the Trenton and New Brunswick and Trenton, Lawrenceville and Princeton railroads. Both of these roads have cars scheduled faster than the fastest time made by at least seven of the steam railroads of the State. Both are built on private right of way under a steam railroad charter, and the conditions are favorable to high speed.

The roadbed of the New Jersey lines, aside from that laid upon some of the streets, does not compare very well with that of the Pennsylvania roads, as a whole, but it is improving. The best piece of track laid upon any street in either New Jersey or Pennsylvania is that built by the Princeton Street Railway Company in Princeton, N. J. It is laid with trilby rails, set upon heavy ties, and the whole embedded in concrete upon a massive foundation. A solid brick pavement, cemented, keeps the water from ever reaching the ties, and as a consequence the life of this track will be almost perpetual. The builder estimated that it would withstand constant usage steadily night and day for thirty years without repairs. It is the only electric railway in the State without a curve of any kind. It is operated by the Trenton, Lawrenceville and Princeton Railroad under leased rights.

Three years ago, when the late Albert L. Johnson came into the Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey trolley field as promoter of long-distance, high-speed lines, his theories were ridiculed by old electric railway men, yet the same principles have been applied to the situation with most satisfactory results all around.

From New York to Philadelphia, to Wilmington and Brandywine, Del., and Kennet, Pa., was scarcely thought of three years ago. From New York and Newark to Philadelphia, to Allentown, Easton, Bangor, Delaware Water Gap, Manch Chunk, Tamaqua, Williamsport, Scranton and Carbondale would have been considered a dream two years ago.

From Newark to York, Me., is the longest ride now possible, and this has a short break, which is being filled in rapidly. Going in the opposite direction, via Philadelphia, Reading and Lancaster can be reached, and next year Gettysburg and its famous battlefield will be among the possibilities. Washington, D. C., is but a couple of years away, and that may also mean Richmond, Va.

Easton, Pa., can soon be reached direct from Newark, via Morristown and Lake Hopatcong. The Morris County Traction Company is at work on a part of its line, which is eventually to extend from the suburbs of Newark to Lake Hopatcong, where connections will be made with the Easton and Washington Traction Company, whose line will extend all the way from Lake Hopatcong to Easton, with allied lines to Delaware Water Gap.

The opening of the Trenton and New Brunswick Railroad, a year ago, meant more to the electric railway interests than would appear at first sight, as it completed the connection between the North Jersey, New York, New England systems, and those of South Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Despite the many changes and delays, thousands of persons have made the trip from New York to Philadelphia during the last year. It is believed that twice as many people have gone to Philadelphia as have gone east of Philadelphia. This does not necessarily mean that the Philadelphians are less ambitious to adopt innovations than their Jersey neighbors, but rather the facilities at the starting terminals have been in favor of the Newarkers and New Yorkers.

This will be overcome very shortly by the completion of a single break between West Palmyra and Dudley, on the Camden and Trenton Railway. At present the best connections are made by ferrying at Burlington to Bristol, so crossing the Delaware at Trenton on the lines of the New Jersey and Pennsylvania Traction Company to Morrisville, where connections are made with the Philadelphia, Bristol and Trenton Railway.

The following schedule giving the miles, place, time and route in order, applies to Plainfield and was correct on November 1:

0, Plainfield, .00, trolley to Dunellen; 3, Dunellen, .30, change; 7, Bound Brook, .55, Middlesex and Somerset Co.; 14, New Brunswick, 1:35, Trenton and N. B. line, change; 51, Interstate Fair Grounds, 2:50, buy ticket to Trenton; 54, Trenton City Hall, 3:07; change West street line; 55, Trenton (Chalfonte), 3:15, change N. J. and Pa. Traction Co.; 56, Morrisville, 3:30, Morrisville, local line; 66, Bristol, 4:00, Phil., Bristol and Trenton line; 72, Torresdale, 5:00, change Frankford line; 77, Frankford, 5:20, change Phila. Rapid Transit; 87, Philadelphia, 6:20, change Market street.

54, Trenton City Hall, 3:07, take Stanton street car; 56, Trenton (Stanton street), 3:20, change Camden to Trenton; 78, Palmyra, 3:20, change Penn. R. R.; 86, Philadelphia, 6:15, change at Camden to Jerry.

54, Trenton City Hall, 3:07, take West State street car; 55, Trenton (Calhoun street), 3:15, use transfer change; 77, Newton, Pa., 4:10, change Newton street R. R.; 91, Doylestown, Pa., 5:00, change Willow Grove line; 109, Willow Grove, 5:50, change Phila. Rapid Transit; 115, Philadelphia, Market street, 7:05, change here.

The fare to Philadelphia over the first route is ninety-five cents; over the second route, $1.30, and over the third route, $1.15.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the merits of a book or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

BREAKING OF DOGS

The Skill Cannot Be Acquired from the Reading of Books.

A Trainer of Dogs Points Out Some of the Most Glaring Errors Which Prevail in Fitting a Dog for the Hunt.

It is often said that half the books that are written telling how to break a dog to hunting are untrue, and that the other half are written to prove them so. If there be a measure of accuracy in the statement, it must be concluded that the way to learn to break a dog is upon the field under the tutelage of a competent dog trainer. It is not necessary to teach a pointer or setter to point in a room before introducing it to game. This is so because the young dogs of these days, if well bred, at least, point naturally, and the last thing any dog ought to be taught is to point to order. If his breaker knows the better when the dog should point, the obvious thing to do is to leave him in kennel, and go shooting without him. This is not only true of private breaking. It is true of field trial breakers. Indeed, one of the most successful owners asked me this season how it happened that a certain field-trial breaker's dogs always have a good deal of false point, or creep, as he called them. Of course, I did not know, but it often happens that a man who habitually has false pointers is one who only half trusts his dogs' noses, and tries to supplement their olfactory powers by his own supposed sense of knowing, by the manner of the dog, more of the locality of game than the dog knows himself.

Nearly all the writers upon shooting make this mistake. The instant a dog begins to draw, up goes an arm, and "Have a care" or a "To-ho" is uttered. This is all wrong; no dog that is broken upon a proper system is the better for "Have a care." He may be doing one of two things: either he is trying to catch the birds himself, and deserves more drastic treatment, or else he is trying to make sure whether they are there before he points them. Caution him, and he will false point, and learn two bad things—first, to rely upon his breaker to tell him when to point; and, secondly, to point before he is sure of game, that is, to false point.

When he has been "To-hoed" into these bad habits, take him home and shoot him, for he is quite useless. This may seem a harsh thing to say, but it is not only that a false pointer is himself useless, but that he spoils every dog that is hunted with him; for the best dogs are soon put off their backing if they are hunted with a false pointer.

I do not suppose a protest in a newspaper will serve to put an end to the erroneous bookish education of the teachers of the shooting companions; but the trainers who are most successful in public do not go about with windmill-like arms, cracking dog whips, or shouting "To-ho." They simply trust their dogs to show them game, and for the most part the dogs respond, and are found worthy of the trust reposed in them. For my part, I would never flatter or fuss a puppy while on the point, until the game was up, or I had seen it on the ground. Remember that until one of these things has happened the point may be at a lark, a hedgehog, a field-mouse, or nothing whatever, and flattery, on the supposition that he is pointing game, will make him commit the same error at the next opportunity.

The greatest trouble in all breaking is to undo the errors previously taught, possibly by inadvertence, probably by a wrong system, and this double pointing will generally last through life if the breaker begin by encouraging it. Although, as I have said, the text-books make these bad blunders, and the majority of breakers follow them, the field trial winning companions; but yet they know no more than the artists of a hundred years ago knew, for these men did not make the blunders of the moderns.

The simple way of breaking dogs is to talk to them as if they were children, and to prevent them from doing wrong as often as is possible. It is wonderful then what a very few minutes in the day will accomplish; but if, on the contrary, dogs are started wrongly, and have to unlearn, they will not be ready to start the right way until their first lessons are quite unlearned, a process that may take ten times as long as the whole business of teaching would have taken if a proper start had been made.

CONTINENTAL CHAPTER, D. A. R., ELECTION

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall Again Chosen President of Plainfield's Organization.

THEATRICALS PLANNED

ENTERTAINMENT TO BE GIVEN CLUB FOR WASHINGTON ROCK FUND.

Play to be Produced in Park Clubhouse by Society Folk—Fund Now Amounts to $250—Mr. Saunder's Offer.

Continental Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at its annual meeting, has re-elected its officers for the ensuing year, with the exception of the secretary, Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell, who resigned on account of her having planned to spend the winter in New York. In her stead, Mrs. Norman W. Curry was chosen. The present officers are: Regent, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall; first vice regent, Mrs. Philip VanRensselaer VanWyck; second vice regent, Mrs. Charles P. Leggett; registrar, Mrs. David Chickering; treasurer, Mrs. Stephen Strothers. The board of managers consists of Mrs. Isaac Field, Mrs. J. Kirkland Myers, Mrs. David Hall Rowland, and Mrs. Frederick G. Meade.

The idea of giving theatricals in the Casino has been abandoned by the chapter, and in all probability such an entertainment will be given in the Park Club's house. The new stage recently erected in the clubhouse is admirably adapted for such purposes. William L. Saunders, who has recently figured in society dramatics, has consented to arrange the proposed affair, the receipts of which will be devoted to the Washington Rock memorial fund. There is $250 in the treasury credited to this scheme and it is likely that $1,000 will be needed. The design of the memorial has not been agreed upon as yet.

Invalid and Sacramental Wines.

Speer's Unfermented Grape Juice is pure, natural juice not cooked. It is made from fresh Tokay Grapes. Much used for Churches evening parties and invalids who are opposed to the use of stimulants.

Kindly take notice that Ely's Liquid Cream Balm is of great benefit to those sufferers from nasal catarrh who cannot inhale freely through the nose, but must treat themselves by spraying. Liquid Cream Balm differs in form, but not medicinally from the Cream Balm that has stood for years at the head of remedies for catarrh. It may be used in any nasal atomizer. The price, including a spraying tube, is 75 cents. Sold by druggists and mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York.

John Henderhot, of this city, has returned from a visit with relatives at Annandale.

Arthur Meiroy, of this city, has been spending several days with friends at Norton, N. J.

have their vineyards stocked of the same grape, the only vineyard of the kind in this country, the vines were imported and planted here over forty years ago. The Speer Port wine and Burgundy are now regarded the finest in the world, their rich, full body and high character is unexcelled. Invalids, weakly persons, especially females, and the aged are made strong and vigorous by its use, as a medicinal wine it has no equal; as a family wine it has no superior. First class physicians all over the country, here and in Europe, who have tried them recommend them as the best.

A close study by physicians on the effect of different brands of wines on the system convinces them of the superiority of the Speer Passaic wines for their patients.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Now that the smoke of baseball has cleared away, and the players have returned to their winter quarters, says a prominent Chicago sporting editor in reviewing the work of the past season the fans are beginning to make comparisons and talk learnedly of the season's work, and of the records made by the various ball-tossers.

Sam Leever

The great pitchers get as much attention as anything else in the baseball line, and the discussion of alabmen's merits is always a hot one. The season just ended was a pitchers' year, and consequently there is great food for verbal battle. Every fan in the land has some pitcher in mind who is the best of them all, and can adduce the finest kind of arguments in support of his position. Many can see only Cy Young. Others pin faith solely to Joe McGinnity. Others idolize Christy Mathewson, and others cling to Deacon Phillippi. You can't convince any of them that his man could possibly be outclassed, try as you will.

As a plain, hard fact, there were several great pitchers this season, men who stack up so evenly that nobody could differentiate between them. Circumstances, surroundings, style of play of the teams, all those things must be counted in, and when all these points are considered the fair-minded man should admit that, great though his own favorite might be, there are others who, on the same teams, would have averaged just about the same in games won and runs allowed.

In considering National league pitchers the Pittsburg champions hardly figure. Pittsburg won by team work and by batting, not by the work of boxmen. This is proved by the fact that the Pirates had a lot of pitchers, and used them all, not relying on any one, two, or three of the number. No Pittsburg pitcher was worked as often as Mathewson, McGinnity or Taylor. The great Pittsburg team could muster up with Veil, Wilhelm or Kennedy on the firing line and get away with games just as if Leever or Phillippi were doing the day's stunt. Leever and Phillippi are grand slabmen and rank with the best—probably are good as the best—but it is unfair to call them the very finest, for the team that backed them was the real thing.

New York depended mainly on Mathewson and McGinnity, and this pair stood among the topnotchers in effectiveness, endurance, percentage of victories—everything that makes up the winning twirler. Chicago developed about the best left-hander in either league—Jake Weimer. Weimer was there with everything all season long, and seems to have a shade, small but perceptible, on the other great left-handers of the year—Hahn, Plank, White and Waddell. Wicker, of Chicago, was a great game winner, but the luck was always with him.

In all-around service and genuine skill the five best pitchers in the National League seem to be Leever, Mathewson, McGinnity, Philippi and Weimer. If any team could bunch these five, what aggregation could stand against them?

Rube Waddell was the most dazzling pitcher in the American league, but not the most effective. Tom Hughes and Cy Young won games by the ton, but it was the team behind them, as in the case of Pittsburg. Both are fine men, but either would have pared so well in any other club. Boston pinned more faith on its pitchers than did Pittsburg, but the Somersets never let confidence in the boxmen slacken up their team work and general hustling.

Bernhard, of Cleveland, did grand work, but was out of it half the season. Plank and White, both left-handers, pitched with great ability. The work of Sudhoff was one of the most remarkable features of the American league campaign. Moore did excellent work, but was out of it part of the summer. It seems impossible to even select the best five among the American league pitchers, owing mainly to the fact that several of the best, after making great records, were retired for various causes, so that there was no chance for them to have had slumps of their percentages. Possibly Hughes, Young, Sudhoff, Waddell and White would be as good a quintette as could be selected, and such a bunch of five would be tough game for any team to go against.

Three world automobile records have been broken by Barney Oldfield at Denver. The five-mile record of 4:54 was lowered to 4:43, the ten-mile record reduced from 9:43 to 9:24½, the 15-mile from 14:35 to 14:24½. Oldfield held the old records.

At the Pare des Princes track at Paris Tommy Hall, an English cyclist, has broken the cycling record for one hour by covering 54 miles and 535 yards. The previous record, 52 miles and 918 yards, was made October 18 by M. Dangla.

The wrestling match for the championship of the world which took place at Pittsburg between Tom Jenkins, of Cleveland, O., and Dan McLeod, of Canada, was won by Jenkins, he taking first and third falls.

Tyson Hamilton, formerly of Mattituck, L. I., one of the best-known athletes and baseball players of the old days, is dead. He was a member of old Atlantic baseball team.

Thomas T. Reilly, a junior at New York university, broke the college shotput record by hurling the iron missile 46 feet 2 inches.

SCHOOL TEACHERS IN GREAT DEMAND

Superintendent of Schools C. J. Baxter Tells the Aims of the State Board.

NORMAL SCHOOL'S WORK

NEW JERSEY'S EXCELLENT SCHEME FOR LICENSING TEACHERS.

Severe Examinations Are in the Interests of Those Who Take Them—Schools Compelled to Obtain Teachers From Other States.

"Is it the policy of the State Board of Education to administer the school affairs of the State in the interest of Normal graduates and to shut out all those who are not so fortunate as to hold Normal diplomas?" is a recently received query at the office of the State Department of Public Instruction at the State House, and the following letter from State Superintendent C. J. Baxter, formerly of North Plainfield, is the reply thereto:

"I greatly regret to note that you have most erroneous impressions as to the motives that influence the State Board of Education in its administration of school matters in New Jersey. Educational standards are rapidly advancing and there is a constantly increasing demand for teachers who are either professionally trained, or who, through scholarship and experience, have attained a high order of efficiency.

"Because of this demand our Legislature in March, 1903, authorized the building of a new Normal School at a cost not to exceed $300,000, and an appropriation of $135,000 for improving the facilities of the very excellent New Jersey Normal School that has long been in operation. Local school boards are, through the New York teachers' agency, procuring many normal graduates from other States. On November 1, 1902, I asked one of the employes of this office to ascertain from our records how many normal graduates had been obtained from New York State alone during the preceding twelve months, and was surprised to learn that the number was 195 and that seventy-seven college graduates had been added to our teaching force during the same period. The demand for a higher general standard of qualification is most pronounced and must be met. Under existing conditions, those who hold low or lowest grade of county certificates have poor prospects of securing employment unless it is generally understood that such certificate is a guarantee of some degree of attainment. Therefore the examinations to which you so strenuously object are really in the interests of those who take them.

"As you are well aware it is both the privilege and the duty of each local board to employ the highest order of talent in the schools under its supervision, that the funds placed at its disposal makes available. The State Board should be neither praised nor blamed for not controlling a matter that is not under its jurisdiction. In the employment of teachers the authority of the local board of education is paramount. It is, however, the policy of the State Board to maintain a fair and open field, and give all high orders of qualification, no matter how obtained, an even chance.

"All teaching is important, and the highest order of talent is none too good for the humblest school. The notion that almost any one can teach primary pupils is a heresy of the past that has fortunately been outgrown, and which will never be revived. The foundations of an education are laid in the primary school. No greater skill, knowledge and resourcefulness are needed in any of the higher grades than in the primary. Recognizing this fact, the board has formulated and established a system of licensing teachers that will ever redound to its credit and which will be instrumental in advancing the educational interests of the State. The examination required for the lowest grade of certificated is part and parcel of that required for the next higher, and so on until such grade is obtained as secures relief from all further examinations, if a teacher so desires. This makes it necessary for a teacher to take an examination in any of the prescribed subjects but once. No other State in the Union has so fair and so excellent a scheme for the licensing of teachers as New Jersey.

"Though it is almost commendable to be interested in one's friends it should ever be remembered that our public schools are established and maintained by the State incidentally for its own protection and welfare, and directly for the benefit of the children of the State.

"State Superintendent."

CHURCH AND STATE AT CONSECRATION

Distinguished Prelates and New Jersey Officials See Dr. Lines Made Bishop.

IMPOSING PROCESSION

GOVERNOR MURPHY AND CHIEF JUSTICE GUMMERE AT THE SERVICE.

Eight Bishops Take Part in Ceremonies—The Bishop of Albany Preaches Sermon—A Brief Sketch of Dr. Lines.

Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, rector emeritus of Grace Episcopal Church, was among the Plainfield clergymen attendant at the services of consecration of Rt. Rev. Edwin Stevens Lines as bishop of the Episcopal Church in the diocese of Newark at Newark last week. The ceremony itself was conducted by eight bishops. At the head of the procession was Rev. Dr. W. Welles Holley, of Hackensack. After him came the bishop-elect, vested in the rochet, or white under-vestment of his office, and supported by Rev. Dr. Samuel Hart and Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., his accompanying priests. Then followed Rt. Rev. Dr. Cortlandt Whitehead, bishop of Pittsburg, Rt. Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, of Central Pennsylvania, who were the only visiting bishops not having a part in the service; the presenting bishops, Rt. Rev. Dr. Leighton Coleman, of Delaware, and Rt. Rev. Dr. Chauncey Bunce Brewster, of Connecticut; the preacher, Rt. Rev. Dr. William Croswell Doane, bishop of Albany; the two consecrating bishops, Rt. Rev. Dr. John Scarborough, of New Jersey, and Rt. Rev. Dr. Henry Codman Potter, of New York, and the presiding bishop, Rt. Rev. Dr. Daniel Sylvester Tuttle, of Missouri, who is also presiding bishop of the general church. Rt. Rev. Dr. William C. Doane, of Albany, preached the consecration sermon.

The imposing ceremonies were witnessed by Governor Murphy, Chief Justice Gummere and other officials prominent in State and Nation.

The new bishop was born at Naugatuck, Conn., November 23, 1845. His parents were Henry W. and Harriet B. Lines. He prepared for college at the Episcopal Academy at Cheshire, Conn., was graduated from Yale in the class of 1872, and later from the Yale Seminary and the Berkeley Divinity School. He was married May 4, 1880, to Mary Louise Morehouse. They have two sons, Edwin and Harold. He was ordained a priest in 1874. His first charge was in Christ Church, West Haven, Conn., where he remained five years. He entered upon his duties as rector of St. Paul's Church, New Haven, in 1879.

ILLUSTRATED TALK ON FLAG

REV. ERWIN DENNET LECTURES AT THE PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH.

A finely illustrated lecture on "The Flag" by Rev. Erwin Dennet, of Brooklyn, provided entertainment for a large audience at the Park Avenue Baptist Church last night. The affair was under the direction of Watsecover Circle, King's Daughters. Mr. Dennet's lecture was strongly patriotic in tone and dealt chiefly with the Spanish and Philippine wars. William Jeffery sang several patriotic songs, accompanied by Miss Elma Runyon. Superintendent George E. Hall had charge of the slides and at the end of the lecture threw on the screen photographs of the church and of Miss Hawkins, assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school. These were highly appreciated. Mrs. W. S. Laurie was chairman of the committee in charge and was assisted by Miss Cora Brokaw, Miss Florence Hawkins and Miss Myra Runyon.

Miss Martha Force Weds.

Miss Martha H. Force and Alfred A. Pradhon were quietly wedded Thursday evening at the home of the bride, in New street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational Church, in the presence of the immediate relatives. The wedding had been planned for Thanksgiving Eve, but as Mr. Pradhon being unexpectedly ordered West on a business trip, necessitated an earlier date.

Society Cotillions.

Arrangements are now being made for three cotillions to be given during the winter at the Casino. The first one will be on New Year's Eve, the second on Tuesday night, February 9, and the third on Easter Monday night, April 4.

To Erect a Dwelling.

John C. Traynor, of Orchard place, has received permission to erect a frame dwelling on Grant avenue. The permit was issued yesterday by Building Inspector T. O. Donne.

DEMOCRATS CELEBRATE THEIR BIG VICTORY

Assemblymen-Elect of Union and Somerset Counties Making Ringing Speeches.

GIFT TO H. W. MARSHALL

IS ASSEMBLYMAN SWACKHAMER LOOKING FOR SEAT IN CONGRESS?

James E. Martine Contributes to the Feast of Oratory—Big Crowd Present at Successful Affair—Refreshments Served.

Right heartily did the Plainfield Democrats rejoice and make merry last week in their club rooms on East Second street in celebration of the victory of the party's county candidates. Right royally were they entertained with speech and song and sketch, and with a right good will did they attack the feast provided for their refreshment. The jubilation was attended by a crowd that packed the hall to the doors. It was undoubtedly the best attended Democratic meeting in Plainfield in many years.

In the speech of the evening, Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer joked his hearers into a good humor and then instilled into their minds some of the orthodox Democratic doctrine on the tariff question. He told what he would do if he were a member of Congress. The tariff as "the creator of trusts framed for the few and cause all of the evils that exist in the country today" received a characteristic raking over. Mr. Swackhamer's reference to what he would do if he were sent to Congress was regarded as significant by many of his hearers.

Others who talked were the assembly candidates, Joseph Gunn, of Springfield, and Charles L. Moffett, of this city, who thanked the Democrats for their support and promised faithful service for the people they represent and James E. Martine, who predicted a great Democratic future according to his custom. F. J. Reville presided.

The entertainment and smoker was most successful. After the overture by O'Reilly orchestra, P. J. Reville made the address of welcome. A pleasing incident on the programme was the presentation to H. W. Marshall, treasurer of the club, of a handsome silver cigar lighter and cutter suitably engraved. The gift was in return for Mr. Marshall's valuable services as treasurer of the club during the past three years. The presentation speech was made by J. H. Hillman and Mr. Marshall responded.

Most of the vaudeville stunts on the programme were by New York talent. William F. Doran sang comic song and gave Irish recitations. Davin and O'Niel sang a coster song and did some acrobatic and dancing acts that caught the crowd.

One of the evening's hits was made by Rafael Troice in a tenor solo, "Down on the Farm," for which he was heartily encored. John Morar, of this city, also sang a solo. Coon songs and ballad solos were given by John M. McGartland.

On the committee in charge of the celebration were P. J. Reville, chairman; J. V. F. Dilts, Victor Troice, Joseph Harrington and James J. Kane.

MISS DAISY ADAMS WEDS

JOSEPH F. BERG, JR., GROOM, AT A QUIET HOME CEREMONY.

Miss Daisy Jean Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Adams, of Netherwood avenue and Joseph F. Berg, Jr., of Prospect avenue, were married November 18 at the home of the bride by Rev. J. P. Taylor. The wedding was a quiet home affair. Miss Grace Berg, sister of the groom, was the maid-of-honor and Cortland Parker Adams, brother of the bride, was the best man. The wedding march was played by Fred Adams, a brother of the bride, of Newark. The house was prettily decorated with flowers which gave it an attractive appearance. After a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Berg will make their residence in this city.

SWACKHAMER MAKING NAME AS AN ORATOR

North Plainfielder is Much Sought After for Democratic Political Gatherings.

HIS RECORD AT TRENTON

HOLDS HIS OWN IN ARGUMENTS ON THE FLOOR OF THE HOUSE.

Great Demonstration Accorded the Assemblyman at Plainfield Democratic Club's Jollification—Extracts From His Speech.

Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, of North Plainfield, whose re-election to the lower house of the Legislature was due solely to his admirable work in the last regular session of that body, has probably jumped into public notice quicker than any other man in this vicinity for many years. Few people in this city or in the borough realize in what high esteem the man is held throughout the State, particularly in his own party. Although a new member among the lawmakers last year, he was really the leading Democrat on the floor and his combats, both as regards oratory and logic, reflected great credit on Somerset County, which he has the honor to represent.

Mr. Swackhamer is the great democratic drawing card wherever he goes, where wit and oratory is wanted. The other night at the Plainfield Democratic Club's jollification he made the hit of the evening, and it may not be amiss to reproduce extracts from his speech. Here are some of them:

In the course of his remarks last night at the Democratic rally held in Plainfield, Mr. Swackhamer said: "I was highly gratified with the election of my friend, Charles L. Moffett and his colleagues from Union County to the State Legislature. I know these gentlemen to be men of marked abilities, and better than this, they are men of moral rectitude and integrity of character. It is easy for a man to go upon the stump in a political canvass and tell the people that if elected, he will seek to subserve their highest interests, but in too many cases this pledge is repudiated after the aspirant has reached his political goal.

"The people of Union County are to be congratulated that these representatives possess that high type of manhood and that patriotism and zeal which insure faithful and conscientious public service. A public servant is rightly measured by what he does; it is not his pledges, but his performances that determine his right to the confidence and the favor of his fellow-men. It is the man who is fearless in the discharge of his duties, who commands the respect and affection of his constituents. And for my part, I would rather have a man stand alone in the right, than be with a multitude in the wrong. There is no reward like the consciousness of an obligation conscientiously and faithfully, whether in public or in private life; and I am persuaded that when my young friends have served their first term in the Legislature, guided by the single purpose to represent their county and State to the utmost of their ability, that the people of Union County will say to each at the following election: 'Well done thou good and and faithful servant.'

"Alexander Pope has said 'That an honest man is the noblest work of God,' and no where is he more in demand than in the public service. It was my privilege to meet such men last winter at Trenton, both among the Democrats and Republicans, and many Legislative evils were defeated by their combined efforts.

"I would say to the young men of Union County what Shakespeare makes Cardinal Woolsey say to Cromwell: 'Be just and fear not; let all ends thou aimest at be thy Country's, thy God's and truth's.'"

FRANK LEVERS MARRIED

MISS IRENE LA MAIR BRIDE AT QUIET HOME CEREMONY.

Miss Irene LaMair, daughter of Mrs. Lawrence Fahn and Frank Levers, of North Plainfield, were married Nov. 19, at the home of the bride on Reividere avenue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. Montgomery Downey, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, at 8:30. The attendance was large and the display of flowers was elaborate.

Frank Schock was best man and Miss Viola Levers maid of honor. John LaMair and Frank Dentz were ushers. After a short wedding trip the bride and groom will make their residence in this city. They received a large number of handsome and useful presents.

The Misses Ellen and Bessie Hall, of South Branch, have returned home after a visit with friends in this city.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 25, "The Use of Prayer"—Text, Luke x, 2; Heb. iv, 16; Jas. iv, 8; Col. i, 9.

It sometimes seems as if we thought the chief object in praying is to get things we want. We need only consider a little to see how far this is from the truth.

We know we do not need to plead with God to make Him willing to be favorable to us and grant the things we need. Teasing is not the nature of true prayer. Yet importunity and persistency are not forbidden and may at times have prevailing power.

The real nature of prayer is soul union with God. It is the means by which we come to have the mind of Jesus. It is talking with the Lord. It is more than words, deeper than speech It is soul language often too deep for words. It is heart desire, it is longing of spirit and hunger, craving of the inner life for refreshment from the Father of Spirits." It may become agonizing in its intensity, but with never a thought of merit in its exercise. It is heartbreaking longing for love and peace and the will of God. It is the homesickness of a soul in wilderness wanderings.

What is its use? To bring the soul in touch with its Saviour; to bring the lost child to the arms of its Father. It is to give peace to the troubled, sin cursed spirit and pour floods of light upon the perplexed life. It soothes the sorrowing heart with conscious nearness of a sympathising Saviour. It gives strength for endurance and bearing the ills and burdens of life.

It opens the mind to the influence of the Holy Spirit until new things are seen with startling distinctness. The mind is elevated above the petty and accustomed things of daily life until it seems as if one was in a purer atmosphere, where things stand out more clearly. The things which ought to be done are startling in their distinctness. The relation and worth of things show so differently than before. The conviction of duty to do is so strong that all doubt sinks from thought. The ways and means rise to view as we never saw them before. We look at matters from a different point of view than we have ever regarded them before. The mind has risen into the light His will in a way that He does not reveal it to the world. We know He has spoken to us. We are more conscious of His meaning than we are of the meaning of a friend when he speaks to him face to face.

Deeper still in our nature is the glow which warms to the depths all our nature, makes us glad and resolute and confident.

This is the courage that is counterpart of knowledge. We see and we feel and we resolve.

What is the use of prayer?

It is the means by which God speaks to us and works in us.

It is the means by which we are not stronger in Christian life and more fruitful is because there is so little of real prayer in our lives.

We need not more saying of prayers, but more of praying.

The world has never seen a great soul who has not been a prayerful one.

Talk less with men and more with God, then shall we be better men and do God's work more effectively.

The Everlasting Arms.

One of the sweetest passages in the Bible is this one: "Underneath are the everlasting arms." It is not often preached from, perhaps because it is felt to be so much richer and more touching than anything we ministers can say about it. But what a vivid idea it gives of the divine support! The first idea of infancy is of resting in arms which maternal love never allows to get weary. Sick room experiences have taught many of us when we have seen a feeble mother or sister lifted from the bed of pain by the stronger ones of the household. In the case of our Heavenly Father the arms are felt, but not seen. The invisible secret support of the soul in its hours of weakness or trouble, for God knoweth our feebleness. He remembereth that we are but dust.—T. L. Cuyler, D. D.

The Still, Small Voice.

There is a voice, unheard by the natural ear, which speaks to human beings louder than the buzz of social conversation, louder than the tumult of the market place or even the roar of cannon in battle. It is a voice which the deaf can hear and which the strongest of men cannot destroy. It is called "the still, small voice," but its stillness and smallness are really the greatness and omnipotence and power. All men have heard it, though all have not understood it nor yielded to its demands.—Michigan Christian Advocate.

Thrift and Covetousness.

Thrift does not covetousness. The hand of the diligent maketh rich. He that gathereth in summer is a wise son. But covetousness, no matter how much is gained thereby, tendeth only to poverty. Diligence may enrich the soul, but covetousness leave it barren as an alkali desert. Thrift tendeth to prosperity, covetousness to moral blight. The one is under the smile of God; the other is under His ban.—United Presbyterian.

Religion.

Religion is no laggard or stern monitress waving you from enjoyment; she is a strong angel leading you to noble joy. The Bible is not a book of repression and prohibitions; it is a book of kindling inspiration.—Canon Farrar.

His Will.

The heart that trusts forever sings
And feels as light as it had wings;
A well of peace within it springs;
Come good or ill,
Whate'er today, tomorrow brings,
It is His will.

—Isaac Williams.

People Believe the Place Cursed and Hold the Deserted Location on the Crest of a Beautiful Hill In Superstitious Awe.

There is something majestic, and grand, and picturesque, but awful and awe inspiring in piles of ruins which speak of former symmetry and order, and life and activity. It is long enough ago—1887—since the destruction of the Italian town of Bussana by earthquake to have the harrowing bloodiness of the human tragedy enacted there during the midst of the carnival festivities of the Riviera towns lose its keenness and permit a visit to the deserted town without that shock to human sensibilities which comes when a catastrophe is young. Nature is always kind, even in her destructive awfulness, and her convulsive moods are followed by her gentle touches which obliterate the signs of human suffering and distress and gives in picturesque ruins and beauty the fallen walls of homes and the dismantled churches.

Bussana is perched upon the crest of a hill which is a spur of the Piano del Carparo. It is impossible for anyone who may be impressionable to lovely scenery not to be impressed by the beauty of these mountains, and, until a closer inspection dispels some illusions, not to feel a little envy for the people who have built their villages amid such delightful surroundings and have perched their dwellings on such charming sites. Small towns dotted among the hills are visible on every side far and near, and the leaves of the trees of their numerous olive orchards add a soft and exquisite green to the otherwise vivid coloring of the panorama.

A mile or more further along this road a small town can be discerned hanging on the precipitous side of the hill and having for its nearest outlook the valley below, and beyond that on the rising ground the town of Poggio built in a similar position on the opposite hill. This is Bussana; and of all the towns to be seen from this point of view none has a more delightful situation. The church stands towering above the surrounding houses as do the churches of all Italian hill towns, forming focal points for travelers approaching them from any of the passes through the mountains.

At the present day, however, as one draws near to this attractively situated place, basking in the sunshine, and radiant under the blue Italian sky, its strange silence and its lonely aspect become noticeable, and then the fact becomes apparent that this place is not now a town, but merely the skeleton of one; that its church is but a gaunt shell, and its houses but heaps of rubbish; that it is only a deserted ruin, a town wholly abandoned to prowling animals and to desolation. The sensation produced on climbing for the first time up its winding main street, which is the only one that can now be traversed, is a sensation of weirdness similar to that produced by a walk through Pompeii and Herculaneum. There are never any attempts to rebuild the town. The inhabitants who escaped injury fled, and many of them, although property owners in the place, never returned even to visit the ruins, for ever afterwards they considered the town accursed, and were held in it superstitious awe. The first shock of the earthquake which destroyed the town was felt at between 5:30 and six o'clock in the morning and was of sufficient force to awaken the inhabitants. Child only in their night garments, the people rushed out panic stricken into the streets, and it was fortunate that they did so, for if they had not left their houses the loss of life would undoubtedly have been much greater than it was, as the first shock was followed by another of equal duration, but far more destructive. It was this shock that brought down the majority of the houses in the small seaport town of Diano Marina, burying in their ruins hundreds of the unfortunate inhabitants.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 25—Comment by Rev. S. B. Doyle. Topic.—A missionary study of India.—Zech. viii, 1-7.

India from many standpoints is a most interesting country. Naturally "every prospect pleases," for India is blessed with the gorgeous beauty of the tropics. The political history of India is also most interesting. The native races were subjugated or driven out by the Aryan invaders who reached the banks of the Ganges about 1500 B. C. The government has been at different times under the control of Alexander of Greece, Darius I., the great moguls and the British. In 1612 the East India company of England established its trading post at Surat, India, and by the close of the century had founded establishments at Bombay, Calcutta and Madras. In 1757 the English post at Calcutta was taken by Nabob Surajah Dowlah of Bengal. It was recaptured by the English, and the East India company gradually extended its authority over all India. After the sepoy mutiny, an insurrection of the native soldiers in 1857-58, the government of India by act of parliament was taken out of the hands of the East India company and vested in the English crown, and the king of England is now also the emperor of India.

Under the English government great changes have taken place in India. Life and property are now secure, railroads extend in every direction, the chief cities are united by telegraph, fleet of steamers ply the Indus and Ganges and public schools, colleges and newspapers have been established. As a result of the introduction of European science and civilization many old superstitions are being undermined, even that of the caste system is breaking. India is therefore ripe for the gospel. The giving up of the old will be followed by an abandonment of all religion unless the new and better way is at once effectively presented to the people.

India has been the birthplace of two heathen religions—Brahmanism and Buddhism—and nowhere perhaps have the terrible effects of heathenism been more forcibly demonstrated than here. The caste system has been a curse to millions, and Buddha, the enlightened, brought not the true light to the darkened lives and homes of India. Here, as nowhere else perhaps, womanhood has been degraded, and the cries of the thousands of little widows of India appeal to all Christian women for their sympathy, prayers and help.

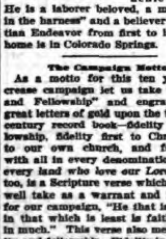
Missions in India have been conducted for many years. The difficulties in the way have been great and discouraging at times, and yet nothing is impossible with God. Good fruit has been borne. The sepoy uprising, which cost the lives of missionaries, proved a blessing in disguise. Again "the blood of martyrs is the seed of the church," and in the last half century has witnessed great Christian progress. In recent years there has been a movement of the pariahs, or outcasts, toward Christianity, and thousands of them have withstood a good confession for Christ. Thus in India the prophecy is being fulfilled, "Behold I will save My people from the east country." What can we do to bring about its still greater fulfillment?

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. xi, 11, 12; xliii, 5-7; lii, 7; Ezek. xxxvii, 21, 22; Matt. ii, 1-12; xxviii, 19, 20; Acts i, 1-11; xiii, 44-52; Rom. x, 9-15; Rev. xxii, 17.

Colorado's State President.

Two things have recently served to bring Colorado into prominence in the Christian Endeavor world. One is the Denver convention; the other is the splendid gain of 15 per cent in membership in the last six months. To the indefatigable efforts of State President H. R. Chapman is due in no small part this last achievement.



H. R. CHAPMAN.

He is a laborer beloved, a man "long in the harness" and a believer in Christian Endeavor from first to last. His home is in Colorado Springs.

The Campaign Motto.

As a motto for this ten years' increase campaign let us take "Fidelity and Fellowship" and engrave it in great letters of gold upon the twentieth century record book—fidelity and fellowship, fidelity first to Christ, then to our own church, and fellowship with all in every denomination and in every land who love our Lord. Here too, is a Scripture verse which we may well take as a warrant and incentive for our campaign, "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much." This verse also means fidelity and fellowship. Fidelity in little duties brings mighty increase, constantly larger numbers and larger fellowship—fidelity and fellowship in strenuous Christian endeavor.—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark in President's Annual Address at Denver Convention.

No Age Limit.

I have no use for a uniform age line in Christian Endeavor. It is a crude and mechanical device. Only let the older members not take the time or the duties of the younger members. Let them understand that it is their chief business to develop the younger members, to set some one else at work and seek constantly to pour a fresh stream of life into the society and to remember that no one who is an earnest Christian is too young, too ignorant, too backward, to be developed by active membership.—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark.

ATTRACTIONS BOOKED FOR THE CASINO

Organizations Now Using the Popular Resort for Various Purposes.

SORTS OF AMUSEMENTS

LARGE NUMBER OF DANCES ARRANGED TO TAKE PLACE.

Lectures to be Given—The Gymnasium—Society Functions—Club Meetings and Musical Affairs With Varied Programmes.

The Casino, under the management of Mase Edwards, has become the most popular resort of society in the city. The Monday Afternoon Club, composed of many leading women prominent in religious, literary and musical pursuits, meets every other week on Monday afternoons.

A fully equipped gymnasium has been installed by Miss E. B. Hartridge, the new principal of the Randolph-Cooley School, and the afternoons of every Tuesday and Thursday and also Saturday mornings are devoted to gymnastic and callisthenic exercises of school pupils under the direction of Miss Nellie Haile. Wednesday afternoons are devoted to dancing classes by Miss Marian Hartley. Mrs. Ella Westcott, of Somerville, has a dancing class every Tuesday evening. The Saturday Night Bowling Club, made up of former members of the Union County Country Club, meets every Saturday night for play in bowling, billiards and pool, so that without other events, the Casino is a busy place

Many social and society functions, meetings and the like are held during the week, and several semi-private receptions have already taken place. The Retail Clerks' Association, the Criterion Club, the Norwood Club, the Willard Dramatic Club, and other organizations have all prospective dates in the future, and the Princeton Glee Club will give a performance under the auspices of the Alumni in this city, followed by a dance and reception Friday, December 11. The society cotillion dances begin Thursday, December 31st, New Year's Eve. This, the first of the series, will be a bal masque, for which great preparations are being made and which, it is said, will surpass anything of the kind ever given here.

The other cotillion dates are Tuesday, February 9th and Monday, April 11th. A novel affair—a young woman's leap year party—is being arranged for New Year's night, given by young women of the younger set, to be managed and controlled exclusively by them. In the way of public amusements, there will be high class vaudeville performances Thanksgiving Day, Christmas and other holidays, excepting New Year's Day. Harry DeWindt, the noted traveller and explorer, will deliver details of his hazardous journey, "Paris to New York, Overland" and Siberia, Monday, November 30th, and on Monday, December 14th, "Wagner and the Bayreuth Festival performance of Parsifal," a unique descriptive entertainment of superb views and music, will be presented by Mrs. Charles W. Rhodes, assisted by Adolph Gose, of New York, concert pianist. Some amateur dramatic performances will also be given by the Willard Dramatic Club and the Leal's School boys, and other negotiations are pending.

KURZHALS-JONES NUPTIALS

WEDDING CEREMONY AT THE BRIDE'S HOME, REV. MR. N'KELVEY OFFICIATED.

A quiet home wedding was that of Miss Katherine A. Jones, of West Second street, and Albert F. Kurzhals, also of this city, last evening, at the bride's home. Miss Irene Russell was the maid of honor and John V. Emery was the best man. Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey officiated.

The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of relatives and friends of the bride and groom. The display of presents showed a large number of useful and ornamental gifts. Following a short honeymoon they will return to this city where they will make their residence.

Returning Home.

Mr. and Mrs. John Abbott, of West Front street, who have been abroad for some time, will sail for home on December 16. They expected to start November 16, but owing to the illness of Mr. Abbott the return journey was delayed.

Mrs. Edward Devine, of Somerset street, is now able to sit up, following an severe illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fulton, of Brooklyn, are guests of Mr and Mrs. E. W. Mills, of West Front street.

BOROUGH FIREMEN SAVE A HOUSE

Quick Work Prevents Total Destruction of Louis Bimble's Residence.

EARLY MORNING BLAZE

TOTAL LOSS OF HOUSE AND FURNITURE AMOUNTS TO $500.

Fire Was on Harrison Street—Good Work of the Department—Chas. Keller's Narrow Escape.

In an early morning blaze in North Plainfield at the corner of Harrison and Cedar street, the borough firemen saved the house and furniture of Louis Bimble from total destruction in a fire caused by spontaneous combustion in a closet where some rags and a feather bed were stored.

Louis Bimble, Jr., and Charles Bimble awoke about 5 o'clock this morning and found the room filled with smoke. Below stairs the roar of flames was distinctly heard. They called aloud and awakened the entire family and an alarm was turned in. The entire rear of the house was enveloped in flames and the occupants of the place, clad in clothing consisting of overcoats and wraps over their night robes, made an attempt to save the furniture.

The members of the West End Hose Company, whose headquarters was only half a block away, arrived on the scene in quick time but the flames seemed to be eating their way through the frame structure with the speed which bid defiance to the efforts of the firemen.

The water as it dashed against the building was transformed into ice which made the work all the more difficult for the firemen. Their coats were frozen stiff and more than once they had narrow escapes from being injured by falling. Former Chief Charles Keller, while standing on the roof of the house directing a stream of water, slipped on the ice covered roof and began to slide towards the edge when he managed to catch hold of a loosened shingle and thus saved himself.

The loss to the property will probably amount to $600. The property and furniture were insured until two weeks ago when the policy expired. The building is owned by Herman Hansen.

RECEPTION TO NEW PASTOR

THE MEMBERS OF CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH GREET REV. AND MRS. ZELIE.

More than 600 people mostly members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church were present at a reception given in the church chapel Thursday to Rev. and Mrs. John Sheridan Zelie. It was the first formal reception to the pastor since his installation.

Rev. and Mrs. Zelie received from 8 to 10 beneath an archway of smilax in a chapel decorated beautifully with palms and other potted plants, with a color scheme of green and white. Refreshments were served in the parlors downstairs. Piano selections were rendered by Miss Carrie Dewey. Among those present were members of the Crescent Avenue Church's three missions, Warren, Hope and Bethel Chapels.

The general committee in charge of the affair included Mrs. Scribner, Mrs. Milliken, Mrs. I. C. Pierson, Mrs. I. L. Miller, Mrs. Charles Wright, Miss Julia Ketcham, Miss Hattie Goddard and Mrs. L. M. Lovell.

LITERARY.

Pictorially, the December Red Book is a gem among magazines and a noteworthy improvement over its own earlier numbers. The most conspicuous feature is an insert supplement, "The Dying Year," posed and produced for the magazine by Stein of Milwaukee, who combined the camera and crayon in the artistic work. Sixteen portraits of beautiful women in color printing are a feature, eight of diplomatic and social leaders of Washington, and eight of beautiful women of the French Capital. The illustrations for the stories themselves are of unusual merit, and the cover which encloses the magazine is a Christmas Eve picture of marked beauty.

Mr. and Mrs. Peabody, of South Branch, have been visiting Plainfield relatives.

Edward Newton, of the Hotel Kensington, has been off on a successful hunting trip.

Miss May Brower, of Albert street, will give a reception Thanksgiving Eve in honor of her guest, Miss May Haslewood, of Brooklyn.

BROOKSIDE GUN CLUB A YEAR OLD

Brief Story of the History of Scotch Plains' Shooting Organization.

OFFICERS OF THE CLUB

WEEKLY SHOOTS HAVE PROVEN SUCCESSFUL AFFAIRS.

Arthur Hazkard is Secretary and Treasurer—Organization Now on a Sound Financial Basis—A Good Five-Man Team.

One of the youngest, but at the same time one of the most flourishing gun organizations in this section of the State, is the Brookside Gun Club. The organization has only been in existence thirteen months, having celebrated its first anniversary in October, but in that time it has increased in number and now its membership includes some of the noted crack shots of the State.

At the close of the baseball season in 1903, a number of fans who had been following the fortunes of the local ball team, faithfully each week got together and decided that inasmuch as baseball was to be laid aside for the winter some other sport would have to be taken up to while away the usual Saturday half holidays. A gun club was the thing decided upon. Many of them had never owned a gun, let alone done any work at trap shooting. This fact did not deter them. The necessary firearms and ammunition was procured and the following Saturday found about twelve members out ready to be initiated into the art of clay bird shooting.

The success of the weekly shoots soon became an assured thing and it was decided to meet and perfect an organization. At this meeting Arthur Hazkard was elected secretary and treasurer, and Junius Johnston, John Schmidt, Edward L. Hand, Phillip Jahn and George Johnston were named as a board of directors. This was really the birth of the Brookside. As soon as the organization was perfected others were desirous of identifying themselves and today the membership is very encouraging. Last season the members had no protection from the weather, shooting in the open. So when the present season was started it was decided to build a shed for the storage of the club's stock and for protection for the members during the biting cold of winter. A shooting platform was erected, running out from the shed. These improvements have put the club on a good sound basis and from the present outlook the organization will remain a permanent one.

In the meantime the members are meeting regularly and are improving in their work at the traps, so that today the club is able to pick out a four or five man team that can keep the head of the trap shooters busy.

DR. YERKES' LONG SERVICE

HONORED PASTOR OF THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH FORTY YEARS.

The recent election of Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss to succeed Rev. Dr. David J. Yerkes, who served the First Baptist Church as pastor for forty years, recalls to mind many tender recollections among the members of the church and congregation. It is a peculiar fact in this connection that but a very few members of the church now living have had any other pastor than Dr. Yerkes and during his forty years' service they have become endeared to the venerable man, having learned to love and admire him for his sterling qualities. It is not the privilege of many ministers to serve one church so long, and in Dr. Yerkes' service there is a record to be proud of. That he has served his congregation faithfully and well is known, and throughout his long pastorate he has always held the highest respect and esteem of his fellow townsmen. The majority of the members of his church were baptized by him and a large number have been married by him. It is gratifying to Dr. Yerkes to be able to see some of the fruits of his labors following after an extended ministry and in the choice of Dr. Chambliss as his successor he is more than pleased. He has known Dr. Chambliss for several years and has always admired his ability. In the choice of one so capable for the position Dr. Yerkes rejoices with the other members of this church.

JAMES E. MARTINE FOR WM. R. HEARST

Says the Editor and Congressman Represents the Ideal Political Doctrines.

CLEVELAND, A DEAD ONE

STILL LOYAL TO HIS OLD FRIEND, WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

Former Orator Willing to Take the Stump for Hearst, Whom He Admires Greatly—Thinks New Yorker Would be a Winner.

Farmer-orator James E. Martine, the most optimistic Democrat in seven States, is William R. Hearst's champion in Union County, and he announces his willingness to devote some of his time in eulogizing the editor and congressman provided he is nominated by the Democratic National convention to oppose President Roosevelt at the next election. He declares that the chief difficulty is in securing Hearst's nomination, which he believes will be bitterly opposed by the moneyed interests of Wall street.

To a reporter for The Daily Press, the Plainfield Democrat said yesterday: "It would be easy to elect Hearst, but hard to get him nominated in the first place. I believe that Hearst through his journals teaches the ideal political doctrines, and he comes nearer to representing the views of the masses than any other American living. Of course my friend Bryan would be my choice if his nomination and election were within the range of possibilities but they are not. If I could choose a president, Bryan would be the next man in the White House. As for Cleveland, he's a dead duck—deader than those he shoots at. Cleveland doesn't represent the party's teachings and is out of harmony with the common people. Yes, say I'm for Hearst."

HIGH SCHOOL DEFEATED.

Cranford Team Wins on Gridiron by Score of 6 to 0.

WILL PROBE IN CUBA

Senate Committee Investigating Charges Against Wood.

MAY ADJOURN UNTIL MARCH SIXTY

Subcommittee Will Inquire Personally at Havana into Accusations Made by Major Rathbone as to the Conduct of the General.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Two sessions were held by a subcommittee of the senate committee on military affairs, which is investigating the charges against General Leonard Wood, nominated by the president to be major general. An adjournment was taken until Friday, when Major J. R. Rancie will be the first witness.

It was stated at the close of the last session that probably more than two weeks would be occupied in hearing the witnesses the committee already has determined to summon. Then, if as generally believed a committee is named to go to Cuba, an adjournment probably will be taken until some time next March, which is considered the best time to visit the island. Opponents to the confirmation of General Wood openly express the opinion that the military affairs committee will report the nomination favorably to the senate, but decide that when this course is taken some charges will be presented to the senate which the committee has excluded from the testimony.

From the attitude of senators opposed to the confirmation of General Wood it is certain that a demand will be made for the appointment of a subcommittee to go to Cuba to inquire personally into several of the charges. Major Rathbone has reiterated his determination to go to Cuba at the same time for the purpose of pointing out sources of information which form the basis of many of his charges.

WOOD'S ACCUSER.

Major Rathbone Asks the Senate For Prompt Action.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Major E. G. Rathbone, who was convicted in Cuba on charges involving his administration of postal affairs in Cuba during American occupation of the island, has sent the following letter to the senate committee on relations with Cuba:

"I beg to call your attention to the fact that immediately upon my release *under my bond by reason of the gen*eral amnesty act passed by the Cuban congress I came at once to the United States and filed a petition with congress asking for a thorough investigation of all my acts in Cuba.

"No action has ever been taken by your committee, so far as I know, except to furnish General Wood copies of the papers and documents filed by me and to receive his reply to the charges contained therein.

"I have filed with you a reply to General Wood, and I now renew my request for early action.

"I submit that as an American citizen I am entitled to a full and exhaustive investigation by a proper tribunal of my own countrymen."

President Will Attend Funeral.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the funeral of the president's uncle, James K. Gracie, in New York next Friday. They will leave here in a private car attached to the 12:10 a. m. train over the Pennsylvania railroad Thursday night and upon their arrival in New York will go to the residence of the president's sister, Mrs. Douglas Robinson, in Madison avenue. After the funeral services the president and Mrs. Roosevelt will return to Washington.

Another Vanderbilt Heir.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Congratulations are pouring in on Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., at their home, 23 East Seventy-sixth street, because of the birth of a daughter. All afternoon servants were bustling to and fro with messages for the intimate friends of the family announcing the arrival of another heir.

Fierce Fighting at Warmbad.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—A dispatch to a news agency reports desperate fighting at Warmbad, Great Manaqualand, German Southwest Africa. The rebels captured the town, killing four Germans. Subsequently the German field force of 150 men succeeded after a severe struggle in expelling the rebels and reoccupying the town.

Fossil Was Badly Beaten.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 25.—Favorites took four of the six races at Oakland. Veterin, in the fourth race, was the only favorite to win. Fossil, the heavily played favorite, was badly beaten. Burton, who pulled him up near the finish, was suspended by the judges for two weeks.

Work For General Davis.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25. — Major General George W. Davis, retired, who has just relinquished command of the forces in the Philippines, is likely to be appointed a member of the Isthmian canal commission. He was a member of the original Isthmian canal commission.

Fort Arthur Opened.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 25.—Port Arthur is now open as a trading port. Ship dues and commercial duties will be levied in accordance with the governor's order.

CAPTURED THE CITY

Santo Domingo Surrendered by President Woe y Gil.

GERMAN WARSHIP USED AS REFUGE

Foreign Ministers Were Asked to Intervene, but Revolutionists Would Accept No Terms Short of Complete Surrender.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—Dispatches received from Puerto Plata via Cape Haitien say that the city of Santo Domingo has been surrendered to the revolutionists and that President Woe y Gil and his ministers have taken refuge on board a German warship.

Great enthusiasm prevails throughout the country at the success of the revolutionists.

A cablegram received from Minister Powell announces that the president of Santo Domingo has surrendered the city to the revolutionists. The articles of capitulation are being drawn up.

President Woe y Gil requested the ministers of the United States, Belgium, Haiti and Spain to intervene in behalf of the government. The insurgents refused to accept the terms offered and demanded the immediate capitulation of the city.

United States Minister Powell informed the revolutionary chiefs that periodical revolutions ought to cease, because they interrupted commercial relations with other countries and augmented the debt of Santo Domingo, which was without means to pay foreign creditors. The minister said further that these periodical revolutions endanger the peace of his government and of the governments of other nations and that the present revolution if continued would imperil the sovereignty of Santo Domingo.

Kischineff Chief Had No Orders.

VIENNA, Nov. 25.—In the trial at Kischineff of persons connected with the massacres of Jews the court absolutely refused to permit the mention of the names of any persons not actually accused, even when witnesses for the defense represented that the prisoners were the tools of more intelligent and responsible agitators whose names they offered to give. The military commander of the district testified that he had a garrison of 5,000 men in Kischineff, but took no action because he had no orders from the governor. When, however, he feared the *massacres would spread to the Chris*tian population he then used his troops and speedily restored order.

Colonel Sawyer Dead.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 25.—Colonel Nathaniel P. Sawyer, former postmaster of this city, banker, manufacturer, politician and adviser of a governor and a president, is dead here. Colonel Sawyer was a close friend of the late Governor Andrew G. Curtin and of President Andrew Johnson. During President Johnson's visit to this city, previ*ous to his impeachment, he was assail*ed by a mob, who threw eggs and vegetables. Colonel Sawyer, the president's host, became a national figure by his efforts to apprehend the rioters. He was seventy-four years old.

Silverman on Trial.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 25.—After the prosecution had rested in the trial at Lake George of William Silverman, charged with the murder of his sister, Mrs. Rachel Kugel, insanity was pleaded in defense. Dr. Everett H. Pomeroy of Chicago testified that, in his opinion, Silverman is suffering from progressive dementia and that he was irresponsible at the time of the murder. The case will probably go to the jury today.

Lincoln Volunteer Dead.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 25.—Captain George G. Boyer, a survivor of the "first defenders," which were the first troops to enter Washington on the call of President Lincoln for volunteers at the beginning out of the civil war, is dead here. Captain Boyer served a term as commander of the Pennsylvania department, G. A. R.

Strikers Assaulted Girls.

HAZLETON, Pa., Nov. 25.—The Duplan Silk mill, where about 250 of the 400 employees went on strike because of a misunderstanding as to wages, has been closed down indefinitely by the company. Manager J. F. Spillman and some of the girls who continued at work were assaulted by strikers as they neared the plant.

Young Corbett and Hanlon Matched.

CHICAGO, Nov. 25.—A dispatch to the Record-Herald from San Francisco says Young Corbett and Eddie Hanlon have been matched to fight there Dec. 29. The men will meet at 129 pounds at the featherweight championship of the world, the battle to be twenty rounds.

HARRY WERNER, VICTIM.

ALEXANDER KILPATRICK VAINLY ENDEAVORS TO SECURE ARREST.

Check Signed by "Elmer E. Oliver," of Rahway—Policeman's Excuse Description of the Man for Whom Warrant Was Issued.

Can an officer of the law, merely because he has no warrant, rightly refuse to arrest on suspicion a man accused by reputable citizens of crime? That is a question that Patrolman Saunders, the colored cop of the local force answered in the affirmative Thursday night by declining to place under arrest a man accused of forgery and for whom a warrant had actually been issued.

On Friday, November 18, a check was presented to Harry Werner, the West Fronx street clothier, in the ordinary course of business, which was signed by "Elmer E. Oliver," of Rahway, and made payable to "Frank P. Ritter." It was drawn on the National Bank of Rahway. The man who presented the check said he lived in Cranford and worked for Oliver, of Rahway.

The forgery was discovered by Mr. Werner by presentation of the check at a local National bank. With Patrolman McCarthy, of the local police force, Mr. Werner went to Rahway to investigate and discovered that Oliver, a coal dealer of that place, knew nothing of the man or the check. A warrant for Ritter's arrest was then issued from Justice Huff's court.

Then came the chance to arrest "Ritter" and the policeman's neglect to take it. Alexander Kilpatrick, a clerk in Werner's store, had waited upon Ritter at the time the check was passed and in going home Thursday evening recognized the fellow and began to shadow him. From Park avenue he pursued the man until he boarded a car for Westfield and Elizabeth. He then went in search of a policeman. Finding Saunders on North avenue, he told the patrolman the facts of the case, including the fact of the issuing of the warrant and requested him to arrest the man. Saunders stopped the car which "Ritter" had boarded, looked up his *man, had him pointed out by Kil*patrick, stepped off the car and told the conductor to go ahead.

In explanation of his conduct, Saunders told Kilpatrick that he could not arrest the man because he had received no orders from headquarters and had no warrant for his arrest. He telephoned to headquarters but could learn nothing from Sergeant Frederickson.

"Ritter" is said to be a man of twenty-two to twenty-five years of age, about five feet, five inches in height, smooth-shaven, with light hair, well dressed in dark clothes, and when seen Thursday night, wore a dark overcoat.

In His Air Sketch.

Assemblyman Swackhamer delivered an address before a jollification of Union County Democrats at Plainfield, Wednesday night, indicating his desire to go to Congress, and Farmer Orator Martine was on hand and delivered one of his famous orations. It was therefore entirely superfluous to state in the news item giving the details of the feast "that a vaudeville performance was presented during the course of the evening."—Newark Evening News.

Good Entertainment.

The Thanksgiving night's entertainment at the Y. M. C. A. will be by S. M. Spedon, of New York, well known throughout the country as a sketch artist and entertainer, and Willard and Marler, instrumentalists and vocalists of a high order of ability. The event will be the second in the star entertainment course.

DAUGHTERS OF THE CROSS' DELIGHTFU. TEA

Annual Affair at the Home of the President, Mrs. Samuel St. John McCutchen.

IN AID OF CITY UNION

ENTIRE MEMBERSHIP OF CIRCLE CONTRIBUTE TO MAKING IT A SUCCESS.

Sale of Fancy and Useful Articles—Those Acting as Committee—One Hundred Patronize Affair—Gave Entertainment.

A most successful tea and sale under the auspices of the Daughters of the Cross was held yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6, at the home of the president, Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen on Myrtle avenue, North Plainfield. It was the annual affair held for the purpose of raising money with which to assist the City Union, King's Daughters, in its noble work. The home was decorated with flowers and many plants, while a large display of carnations and roses made a very pretty show.

There were fully one hundred guests present during the set hours, and nearly all of the thirty-five members of the Circle assisted in making the affair a noteworthy one, like all previous ones. Mrs. McCutchen received and she was assisted by Mrs. F. H. Hall, the vice president; Mrs. W. W. Haviland, Mrs. John Fray Goster, Mrs. E. P. Goodwin and Miss Rafferty.

Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. George T. Rogers and Miss Florence Marsh were in charge of the dining room, receiving the guests, while Mrs. John Clapp, Mrs. Alexander Milne and Mrs. Griscom presided at the tea table. Assisting them as waitresses were Miss Sophie Barlow, Miss Helen Phillips, Miss Adelaide Ball, Miss Underhill, Miss Elsie Brokaw, Miss Belle Milne, Mrs. William McCutcheu, of Plainfield, and Miss Elsie Keys, of Elizabeth.

In addition to the tea there was a sale. One corner devoted to the sale of fancy and useful articles was in charge of Mrs. Charles H. Lyman. The cake table was presided over by Mrs. J. P. Northrop, while Mrs. George D. Hallock took charge of the candy table. Each of these three women had other members of the Circle assisting them.

Miss Griscom and Miss Norma Northrop were in charge of the sale of carnations and roses. Everything offered for sale was disposed of at good prices and a net profit of $140 is assured. The Circle has pledged a certain sum which is to go toward the support of the King's Daughters city nurse and this amount will be taken from the sum made yesterday, while in addition to this the Circle performs much charity work, which comes under its own personal notice.

WM. B. ACKOR WEDS.

Miss Mattie Kuehn Bride at Ceremony in Murray Hill.

Miss Hattie Kuehn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kuehn, of Scotch Plains, and William B. Ackor, of North Plainfield Township, were quietly married at the home of Mrs. M. L. Decker, a sister of the bride at Murray Hill, Saturday at noon. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Dr. Jett, of St. Lukes Episcopal Church, Murray Hill. Ephraim S. Ackor and Miss Tillie Kuehn were best man and maid of honor, respectively.

A short wedding trip will be enjoyed, after which they will return to Washingtonville, where they will make their home.

The Old Place Leased.

Solomon Danzinger & Brothers, who conduct in Elizabeth a business of ready-to-wear goods for men and women, the store being known as "The Fair," have leased of Woodhull & Martin, the firm's old store in the Babcock building, the lease to run until the expiration of Woodhull & Martin's term.

Sunday-School's Contribution.

The Sunday-school of Trinity Reformed Church has sent two well-filled boxes of clothing, wearing apparel, candy, toys, games and the like to two Reformed Church Sunday-schools in Oklahoma—one at Cloud Chief and one at Lone Tree.

Traynor's Pony.

Thomas Traynor, of Somerset street, who has recently returned from Ireland, where he has been visiting relatives, brought with him a Welsh pony of exceptionally small size. He was compelled to $25 duty on the animal.

Married Quietly.

Miss Louise Walgreen, of Park avenue, and William Pine, of Clinton avenue, were married Saturday evening at the parsonage of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church by Rev. John Sheridan Zelie.

ORGANIZED AID'S REVIEW OF YEAR

Officers Elected and Timely Addresses Made at Annual Meeting of Local Society.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

MISS VAN BOSKERCK PREDICTS MANY IMPROVEMENTS FOR THE FUTURE.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson Scored Liquor Traffic—Henry M. Maxson Re-Elected President—The Annual Reports.

The annual meeting of the Organized Aid Society, held last night in the Sunday-school room of the Crescent Avenue Church, was addressed by Rev. W. J. Nichols, of the Charities Aid Association of Brooklyn. Mr. Nichols spoke of the importance of the work of organized charities stating that their aim is to help the poor to help themselves, to give them aid and still allow them to hold their self-respect. The harmfulness of indiscriminate charity be illustrated by showing that 20 per cent. of the inmates of a Massachusetts penitentiary are there as the result of having received misdirected financial aid.

Miss Sarah VanBoskirk, general secretary of the local Organized Aid Association, announced that during the year 784 applications for help had been received including 80 new applications. There were 221 individual cases treated. In referring to what had been accomplished by organized charity in Plainfield she mentioned the helpful effects of watering the poorer streets of the city during the summer; detailed the excellent work done by the King's Daughters baby camp; and revealed the fact that Plainfield really has a slum quarter presenting an important charitable problem. She spoke particularly of "Paradise Alley" near Richmond street and portions of West Third street as needing the care of the city authorities. A city park and playground and a public bath are institutions that Miss VanBoskerck said were bound to come to Plainfield at some time in the future. She advocated a woodyard and lodging for the benefit of tramps who apply for aid at night.

Henry M. Maxson presided over the meeting and stated that the organization was prosperous. Officers elected for the ensuing year were: President, Henry M. Maxson; vice presidents, John D. Miller, Mrs. J. K. Myers and Mrs. Fred O. Mead; secretary, William S. Tyler; treasurer, Boardman Wright.

It was announced by Hugh J. Fox, secretary of the State Charities Association, that the New Jersey State conference of Corrections and Charities, would be held February 18 to 20 at Atlantic City and the local organization was urged to be represented by one or more delegates.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson scored the liquor traffic in a few brief remarks. A. C. Nickerson, of the district committee, read a report. The report of the treasurer, Boardman Wright, showed a total received during the past year of $1,875.81; expended, $857.76; invested, $998.75; leaving a balance on hand of $19.30. Reference was made to the bequest left the organization by Miss Howe to the amount of $1,000. It was expected that Fred W. Wynes, secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, would speak, but another appointment prevented.

Rural Delivery's First Day.

The inauguration of the rural free delivery mail service, yesterday, began under favorable auspices. The carriers, Leslie Tingley and James Lambert, started out at 7:30 o'clock in the morning and completed their duties within the prescribed time. Nearly everyone along the routes was pleased with the arrangement and it bids fair to be a great success.

Dance at Park Club.

There will be a dance at the Park Club Saturday night under the auspices of the entertainment committee. The club is now the centre of social activities and nearly every night the pretty clubhouse is crowded with members, their wives and friends.

Where Is Its Destination?

The Charles P. Sebring house still stands on the banks of Green brook, no recent attempts having been made to place the dwelling on the lot selected for its permanent occupancy.

—A number of young people from this city attended a country dance held last night in Jacob's Assembly Hall, Elizabeth.

FREEDOM CASTLE LOWERS PORTICULLIS

The Golden Eagles Appropriately Mark Occasion of First Meeting in New Hall.

GOOD ENTERTAINMENT

WIVES AND FRIENDS GUESTS OF PROSPEROUS FRATERNAL ORGANIZATION.

Grand Vice Chief Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan Made An Address—"Rooney's Restaurant," a Farce, Which Scored a Hit.

Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, held its first meeting last night in the new Odd Fellows' Hall, Babcock building, and the occasion was marked by an entertainment for the members, their wives and friends. The utmost capacity of the rooms was fully tested. A. C. Hoagland was chairman of the entertainment committee and the programme as well as the feast which followed were arranged satisfactorily.

The first part of the programme consisted of a piano duet by Miss Ida M. Tallamy and Robert Humpston; trombone solos by Kenneth Shupp; a short address by Grand Vice-Chief Dr. J. Hervey Buphanan; a song by Master Harold Willard; recitation by Miss Viola Leivers; German dialogue by Frank Finnigan; vocal selections by Miss Mears; recitation, "Cab Life in the City," by Mrs. A. E. Willard; musical sketch by Frank Finnigan and Joseph Loughead; a bass solo by William Tallamy, violin solo by Martin Korff and a vocal duet by Miss Tallamy and B. F. Tallamy. This part was concluded with the singing of illustrated songs by William Jeffery and a butterfly dance by Mrs. A. E. Willard.

The last part of the programme consisted of a farce, "Rooney's Restaurant," in which these took part: Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Willard, Miss Ethel Reynolds, Mortimer Slater, Walter Emmons, George P. Bird and Frank Finnigan.

After the entertainment all adjourned to the banquet room, where an abundance of good things were served by the Knights. An informal programme of music and a social time was then enjoyed.

HOPE CHAPEL Y. M. A. ACTIVE

MUCH BUSINESS TRANSACTED AT THE MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT.

During the regular monthly meeting of the Hope Chapel Y. M. A., last night, membership propositions of Leonce Texier, Hugh Sweeney and Edwin Texier were received. Manager J. Fred Wharton is negotiating with several out-of-town basket ball teams, and will have a team at the chapel next Tuesday night to play the Hope five. It was voted at the meeting last night to hold a special "grievance" meeting in the chapel next Tuesday night. Any member who has received a bill that is in any way incorrect they can see the following committee at the chapel on the above date: William N. Runyon, chairman; V. W. Nash, Jr., and Thomas Chamberlain. The resignation of George Whitley was not accepted.

An entertainment will be given in the chapel next Tuesday night, refreshments will be served. The committee in charge of this affair is George Firstbrook, chairman; Alfred Berry Marsh and Matthew D. Sweeney. The next minstrel rehearsal will also be held on that evening. The new shuffle board, which has been purchased by the Y. M. A., will be in use by Saturday.

Criterion Club's Officers.

The Criterion Club elected these officers last night: President, Albert Clark; vice president, Clarence Brokaw; secretary, John P. Hall; treasurer, George Pope; sergeant-at-arms, George Graves. The club has a membership of twenty-four. The first dance will be held some time during January.

Veterans to Elect.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 37, G. A. R., will elect officers at the meeting to be held Tuesday night, December 8. The installation will take place early in January.

Ministers to Meet.

The Plainfield Ministers' Association will meet in the parlors of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church on Monday afternoon, December 14.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe and Her Descendants.

NO HOME FOR THE NURSES

MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL LACKS SUFFICIENT FUNDS TO ERECT HOME.

As yet the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital has not secured a sufficient sum of money to erect a new home for the nurses in the vicinity of the new hospital. There are about sixteen nurses who will have to be provided for near the hospital and present arrangements will not permit their being cared for at the new building. Just at present the board is in a quandary, not knowing what the result will be. It would not be practical to have the nurses remain in their present home after possession of the new institution is taken, yet some arrangements will have to be made that will be convenient and comfortable.

JUNIOR LEAGUE CONTESTS

"HARVARD" AND "COLUMBIA" LEAD IN Y. M. C. A. BASKET BALL GAMES.

In the Junior Y. M. C. A. basket ball league, "Harvard" defeated "Princeton" 7 to 1 yesterday afternoon and "Columbia" beat "Yale" 6 to 0. Harvard and Columbia have now won two games and lost one, and Yale and Princeton won one and lost two. Next week Harvard will play Yale and Princeton Columbia Summary:

Harvard—Doane and C. Doeringer, forwards; Lambert, centre; K. Doeringer and Gavett, guards. Princeton—Taylor and Bird, forwards; Martin, centre; F. McClintock and Line, guards.

Columbia—Woodbull and Morris, forwards; Freeman, centre; B. McClintock and Becon, guards. Yale—Briggs and Leggett, forwards; Heath, centre; Denton and Leland, guards.

Whist Club's Contest.

The Tuesday Evening Whist Club met last evening at the home of the Misses Saunderson on Fairview avenue. Miss Olive Houston, of Bound Brook, and Miss Anna Hoffman, of Westfield, were prize winners. John Laughlin, of Cranford, won the consolation prize. At a late hour refreshments were served and dancing was enjoyed.

Three Iconoclasts.

The case against Frank Meener, Richard Bird and Fred Guinn, charged with making mince meat of a number of valuable hats belonging to Robert Leland, W. S. Decker and others has been adjourned until Tuesday, December 9 in the city court.

MRS. JULIA WARD HOWE AND HER LINEAGE

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of This City, Inherits Her Mother's Great Talents.

SKETCH OF THE FAMILY

PLAINFIELD MEMBER ACTIVE IN MANY WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS.

What Mother and Daughter Have Written—Grandson's Work at Harvard—Some of Mrs. Hall's Recent Books.

The family group pictured in this paper today presents members of four generations in a distinguished lineage, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, now in her eighty-fifth year, beloved author of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" whose pen has been wielded and whose voice has been raised throughout her long life in the cause of humanity; Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of this city, whose useful work as a lecturer and writer has brought her wide notice; Mrs. Hall's son, Henry Marion Hall, of Orange, and his wife who was Miss Alice Haskell, of Boston, and their little daughter, Julia Ward Howe Hall, the pride of her great-grandmother's heart.

Julia Ward Howe, the central figure of the group, has had an active career during the past year in spite of her age. She has addressed audiences frequently in Maine and recently at Dover, N. H. She spent Thanksgiving Day in Gardner, Me., at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Laura E. Richards, the author of "Captain January" and other well-known books, the latest, "The Golden Windows," illustrated by Mrs. Richards' daughter, Julia Ward Richards. The following day Mrs. Howe presided over a meeting of the Authors Club, at Wellesley, Mass., an organization of which she is president.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of this city, has always been a worker in the interest of womankind and has held numerous offices of distinction. She is at present regent of Continental Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. She was a charter member of the Monday Afternoon Club of this city and its second president. As chairman of correspondence for New Jersey of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, she served six years,

REFORM CLUB'S NEW OFFICERS

INSTALLATION CEREMONY SCHEDULED FOR JANUARY 7 AT REFORM HALL.

These officers were elected at last night's regular monthly business meeting of the Reform Club: President, W. C. Smith, Sr.; first vice president, B. W. Hand; second vice president, Edward J. Smith; financial secretary, Charles H. Stephens; treasurer, J. W. A. Banerraehs; recording secretary, E. P. T. Smith; chaplain, Eden Boice.

One new members was admitted into the club. A committee was appointed to make arrangements for the installation of the officers on January 7 when a special programme of music and speech-making will be presented. Special invitations to attend will be extended all the ministers in town.

WOMAN'S TITLE TO CITIZENSHIP

SUBJECT OF ADDRESS TO BE MADE BY MISS HARRIETT MAY MILLS.

Miss Harriett May Mills, who will lecture on "Woman's Title to Citizenship" Friday afternoon at the house of Mrs. David P. Hall, of Madison avenue, is an organizer of woman's suffrage associations for New York State. She has been at work in New Jersey during the past three weeks closing her labors here this week. At Trenton an address by her resulted in the organization of an association with twenty-five members and at Short Hills she influenced the institution of an organization with twenty members. She has spoken at Orange and this week makes addresses at Nutley and Elizabeth besides Plainfield.

In her speech Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Hall, Miss Mills will endeavor to increase the interest in woman's suffrage and add to the membership list of the Woman's Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield. Miss Mills is a graduate of Cornell University. The lecture will be followed by tea at 4:30 o'clock.

Elizabeth's Postoffice.

There is a strong probability that the land on Broad street, between Washington street and Elizabeth avenue in Elizabeth, and on which the Lyceum Theatre now stands may be purchased by the United States Government as a site for the new postoffice to be erected in Elizabeth. Elroy & Drake, who are now running the Lyceum, have a ten years' lease on the building, which is owned by W. G. Peckham, of Westfield.

DIPHTHERIA CASES ON THE DECREASE

Plainfield Board of Health in Monthly Session Hears Several Encouraging Reports.

INSPECTION OF DAIRIES

EIGHTEEN SAMPLES OF MILK ANALYZED BY HEALTH OFFICER THURLOW.

Thirty-Three Births; Fifteen Marriages and Thirteen Deaths During November—The Permits Granted Applicants.

A notable feature of the reports presented at the December meeting of the Plainfield Board of Health, held yesterday afternoon, was the marked decrease shown in the number of cases of diphtheria, there being twice the number reported in October as compared to November. Those cases reported were of a mild form and the Board feels that any spread has been checked.

There were 154 visits made to houses infected with contagious diseases, twenty-three dairies visited. Two hundred and twenty-five were the total number of inspections of all kinds made during the month. Eighteen samples of milk were analyzed, all of which proved to be of fairly good quality.

The work of the garbage collection and disposal is progressing. The committee appointed by the Common Council at its last meeting met with a similar committee from the Board of Health and plans were adopted for a thorough investigation of the subject and a report will be presented in the near future.

The statement of mortality for the month of November last compared with the preceding month and the corresponding month of 1902, the death rate being computed on the estimate of a population of 16,000, shows that the rate is below the average. Last month the total number of deaths was 13, the annual death rate per thousand, 13.5. The deaths included eleven males and seven females. There were three under one year, two between one and five years and four over sixty years. During November there were fifteen marriages and thirty-three birth certificates received.

Permits were granted to these applicants: Fernanda Brown, Peter Robinson and Walter Ingraham to collected garbage and to T. L. Marle to sell milk. Joel Codington's application for a permit to sell milk was refused because his stable and dairy does not yet comply with the regulations of the Board of Health.

OUSTING ASSESSOR HUBBARD

RUMOR THAT PLACE WILL BE GIVEN TO AN ADMINISTRATION MAN.

According to well-defined rumors Joseph A. Hubbard, who has served Plainfield as an assessor for thirty-six years, will be retired, and Harry B. MacDonald, a resident of the Third ward, will be appointed in his place. This change, it is said, is a result of the recent election and the position is to be given to Mr. MacDonald for services he performed at that time in helping the "Melting" faction. It has been understood that Mr. Hubbard has been and is a Kean man.

Mr. Hubbard, when seen yesterday by a representative of The Daily Press, expressed no surprise over the rumor, declaring that he had board of it since election. He said that not a word had been mentioned to him about the change. He expressed willingness to retire if asked to do so, but disliked being retired under the circumstances mentioned.

The tendency seems to be to get younger men in the Board of Assessors. If Mr. MacDonald is appointed the Board will be composed of Harry C. Runyon, Harry C. VanEmburgh, Harry B. MacDonald and Charles H. Hand.

Kicked by a Horse.

John Marshall, of West Fourth street, while unharnessing a horse last night, was kicked in the forehead and knocked unconscious. He was attended by a physician who at first thought the young man had received a fractural skull. Marshall was taken to his home where he is still confined.

—William Addis, health inspector, has reported to the police that someone has been stealing the milk from his back porch every morning.

HARMONY REIGNED AT DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES

County and City Committeemen Chosen in the Several Wards to Represent Party.

NOLAN HITS AT MOODY

PLAINFIELD WORKER SAYS COUNTY CHAIRMAN IS BEING USED.

J. V. F. Dilts Defeats Herbert W. Stover for Place on County Committee—Officers at the Several Primaries.

Democratic primaries were held in the various wards in the city last night for the purpose of electing county and city committeemen, the only contest being in the Third district of the Second ward between Herbert W. Stover and J. V. F. Dilts. Stover received five votes and Dilts twelve.

The result of the primaries in the various wards was as follows: First ward, First district, county committeeman—Andrew J. Nolan; Second district, W. T. Banks; city committee—First district, Vincent L. Frazee; Second district, P. B. Goodfellow. Officers—V. L. Frazee, chairman; W. T. Banks, secretary; Clarence E. Teel, judge; and John Rafferty, inspector.

Second ward, First district, county committeeman—Frank Shattel. In the Second district there was a contest between Herbert W. Stover and J. V. F. Dilts. Dilts won by seven votes. City committee—First district, Joseph Harrigan; Second district, Victor Troyce. Officers—J. D. McAleer, president; Victor Troyce, secretary; F. W. Yates, judge; and C. A. Sturtevant, inspector.

No primary was held in the Third ward.

Fourth ward, First district, county committee—John Casey; Second district, Clarence Waldron; Third district, Ira G. Hulbert. No city committeemen were elected. Officers—Thomas Case, chairman; C. A. Shannon, secretary; Ira G. Hulbert, judge; and James Kane, inspector.

In speaking of the result of the primaries, Andrew J. Nolan said this morning: "The result is as expected. If those few so called Democrats who persist in criticising and continually finding fault with whatever is done by those who give their time, to the cause, would push forward the work of the Democratic party in this city by joining the organization, better results would be accomplished. When they do that they will be the first to be rewarded and pushed to the front in the organization. The interference of the chairman of the Democratic County Committee, is to be condemned. He is used by a few Republican city politicians who are not pleased with the people in control of the Democratic party in this city."

BEZETT A SMASHER.

Man Who Looks Like "Peace Be With Thee," Haled to Police Court.

Louis Bezett, of East Second street, a colored man bearing a striking resemblance to John Alexander Dowie, was arrested on complaint of his wife, charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct, breaking down doors and furniture and otherwise misconducting himself. "Peace be with thee," said the City Judge, when the colored "Elijah" was introduced to him this morning. "Peace be multiplied," said the colored man whose features were formed in the mold of the "prophet." The judge told the prisoner to be less faithful in his imitation of Zion methods of persuasion in the future and the incident was closed.

New Vestry at Grace Church.

These wardens and vestrymen were chosen at a parish meeting of Grace Church, this week: Senior warden, D. Ivins; junior warden, Marion S. Ackerman; vestrymen, Julius E. Erickson, Lewis G. Timpson, Edward H. Booth, W. B. Gough, Orville Waring, Arthur Masters and C. E. Brooks.

Plainfield Eagles to Parade.

Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, has received invitations to be present tonight at a fair which is being given this week by the New Brunswick lodge. A parade of the organization will take place through the principal streets of New Brunswick.

—Mrs. Clara E. Naylor, of Orange place, has received from Building Inspector T. C. Doane permission to erect a from dwelling on John street.

FORBIDDEN MARRIAGES.

Amended Law in Michigan Specifies Distinctly What Relations Are Prohibited.

Under the amended marriage law of Michigan the marriage of "cousins of the first degree" is prohibited, and it will become the duty of the county clerk to ascertain whether such relationship exists between the candidates for marriage, reports the Detroit Tribune.

The law which is now amended to include first cousins specifies distinctly what other relatives, in law or consanguinity, are prohibited from wedding with each other, and to make positive that no illegal marriage occur through his fault, the careful county clerk, before issuing a license, should inquire:

"Is this woman your mother, grandmother, stepmother, grandfather's wife, son's wife, grandson's wife, wife's mother, wife's grandmother, wife's daughter, wife's granddaughter, or your sister, brother's daughter, sister's daughter, father's sister, or mother's sister, or cousin of the first degree?" Reversing the sexes the same questions apply to the woman. It is recalled that Rev. Father Ternes, of Detroit, one day had a room full of lawyers busy searching the authorities to discover whether a man could marry "his widow's niece." The investigation had proceeded some time when it suddenly struck one of the "learned counsel" that a wife could not be a widow until her husband's death, and the laugh was on the lawyers.

PROPER AUTOMOBILE TEST.

Trip Made by Two Men from San Francisco to New York Without Accident.

A new transcontinental record for automobiles has been established by two men who drove a comparatively small machine of American make from San Francisco to New York, says the Brooklyn Eagle. They left the former city on June 20. They arrived here muddy, tired, but not materially the worse for their uncommon experience. They averaged about 80 miles a day. They crossed mountains. They traversed deserts. They trundled over all kinds of roads in all sorts and conditions of weather. And through it all their machine met with no serious mishap, a fact which will help reduce the automobile joke of the funny papers to its proper level of inconspicuity. Once before the continent was crossed by an automobilist, but he did not make as good time as did these two people. This most recent test of endurance is worth a great deal more in the development of the motor car than all the homicidal road races that have ever been arranged in Europe or elsewhere. Eighty miles a day is not a high average, and it could doubtless be bettered by larger cars and by more reckless drivers, but it is fast enough to show what the automobile is capable of in the way of endurance. And endurance, or the capacity to wear well, not speed, should be the first essential in the construction of a motor car.

INDIAN NATION IS NO MORE.

Last Chief of the Once Great Cherokees Has No Chance to an Empty Honor.

The last Cherokee election has been held; the last chief of the Cherokee nation has been elected, and now a nation no longer but in name—swallowed up by the great American union, its name and identity lost forever, reports the Kansas City Journal. Monday, August 3, 1903, will be a memorable day in Cherokee history. The sun rose clear and shone with resplendent beauty over the Cherokee land, from the plains of Kansas on the north to the hills and woods of Arkansas on the south.

All was quiet and busy among the Cherokees that day, for it was their last tribal election. There were two candidates for chief, one representing the so-called progressive party and the other the nonprogressive element, mostly the fullblood Indians, to whom it was a solemn occasion. All day long from morn till sunset the battle of the ballots went on, each side striving for mastery; and when the sun went down that night the star of Cherokee tribal government had set forever—the progressive party had won, and the last hopes of the fullbloods had vanished. Henceforth they would be subjected to the white rule, and as a nation and separate people realize that they no longer existed.

Longest Baseball Throw.

The longest distance a man has ever thrown a baseball is a little more than 381 feet. The record for women was held, until recently, by a Vassar champion, who threw a ball 181 feet. There has now arisen in Tacoma, Wash., a young woman who has thrown it 264 feet. Anatomists have frequently explained that the formation of a woman's shoulder-blades prevents her from throwing straight and far; but the Tacoma record, 264 feet, is just about the distance from the deep outfield to the home plate. Evolution seems to be at work producing shoulder-blades that will enable the American girl to share the delights of the national game.

Can't Blame Him.

A German actor has been sent to jail for getting off stage jokes about the emperor. If they were anything like the American jokes printed in the Chicago Record-Herald, we can't blame the emperor for shutting him up.

A Sure Cure, But—

A Kansas man could not eat because he had dyspepsia, so he fasted in order to relieve himself of the disease. The treatment was a success, remarks the Chicago Tribune, but the patient died of exhaustion.

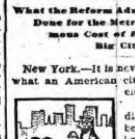
GOSSIP OF NEW YORK

Political Problems in the Present Tangled Municipal Campaign.

HARD TO PICK THE WINNER

What the Reform Administration Has Done for the Metropolis—Enormous Cost of Running a Big City.

New York.—It is never safe to predict what an American city will do in an election.



Father Knickerbocker's Test

I shall think it is discouraging if the best government a large American city has ever known is snuffed out next Tuesday for what would probably be the worst.

The fusion administration of New York for two years has been not only the inspiration of our own citizens, but a topic of interest abroad. It is a standard of American progress. It followed upon the foul bad years of Van Wyck, as corrupt as Oakey Hall's term under Tweed, and even more indecent morally. The same people who were behind Van Wyck are behind McClellan. Theirs is a campaign for the looting privilege of a great city, carried on under the name of the democracy, because democracy happens to be the ruling political faith here.

Yet two-thirds of the officials, high and low, under fusion, are democrats; and, win or lose, something like 100,000 democrats will vote the fusion ticket. Whether it proves its epitaph or the prophecy of two years more, I am going to write something about this great work which has so encouraged municipal reformers everywhere.

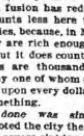
In the first place, fusion has reduced taxation. That counts less here than it would in some cities, because, in Manhattan at least, few are rich enough to own real estate. But it does count. In the outer boroughs are thousands of house owners to any one of whom a reduction of 20 cents upon every dollar of taxation means something.

The way it was done was simple. After Tweed had looted the city the legislature put upon it severe sinking fund provisions, so that it could not default its debts and shame America before the world. But as the city grew the sinking fund provided more money than was necessary. By 1928, when many of the bonds mature, we should have had $300,000,000 more than enough to meet them.

It was a simple matter to reduce the sinking fund payments to the sums now seen to be necessary. It gave the city a breathing space.

Vast Plans for Improvements.

Lower taxes do not mean less money spent. It is impossible to spend less, with every department stripped to the bone. In the street cleaning department, once the city's pride in the noble Waring's day, there were not horses and carts to take away refuse, and collections were wee, a behind when the new government came in. Tammany had done nothing for the schools, nothing for the police and the firemen—except to sell them promotions for $2,500 per step. As no city in the world pays such salaries to its servants, promotion is not worth the price. Under Tammany it was paid.



The New York Schoolboy

Next year the city will spend upon schools more money than the state of Pennsylvania did in census year; more money by $10,000,000 than London; more money than 15 middle and southern states from Delaware to Kansas and from Virginia to Florida combined did in 1890. In addition it will sell $8,000,000 worth of bonds to build new schoolhouses. London has 300,000 more pupils under public charge, but everything is done there upon a cheaper scale. Yet five years ago, under a Tammany superintendent, Jasper, New York's schools were among the poorest in the country. They are not yet what they should be.

The Homes of the Very Poor.

I have said that in Manhattan few can be home owners. New York was two centuries ago eminently suited by contrast with London. Its people were better fed, but even worse housed. One could not say of New York, as was said of old York, in England, that no-third of its people were habitually underfed, but they were badly housed. To-day by a law which is scrupulously enforced, not one tenement can be built in New York in which every room does not have a full stairways, the courtyard must be of certain dimensions, increasing with the height of the building, and must have an "inner court for trees." The "air tenements" are as light to darkness contrasted with the old. Besides this the department is to compel owners of old tenements to improve them at a cost which may reach $12,000,000, to make them fit for habitation. When this work is completed New York will still be a crowded city, but it will be healthily housed.

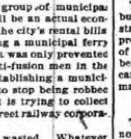
The commissioner of this new department, the enthusiast over drains and shafts, this connoisseur of smells, is that Mr. De Forest, member of an old New York family, aristocrat of the aristocrats, with whom Rodyard Kipling was a guest when he nearly died of pneumonia while in New York. There was no corresponding department under Tammany. Those charged with something like its duties were headed by common "grafters" who did not enforce even the easiest laws we had. Thousands of tenements were built worse than they need have been. Now they must be altered at great cost.

The people must live in tenements. There are only 17,000 real estate owners in Manhattan and the Bronx. Only 150 dwellings have been built on Manhattan island in a year. They cost over $11,000,000. You can figure out what chance the average man has of owning the average house.

The Vast Scale of City Expenditures.

Everything New York does is upon the gigantic scale. It is the penalty, in part, of its greatness.



Courteous to the Pauper.

Columbia college has just bought a little field to add to its campus. It cost $2,500,000. The city had to pay $5,000,000 for its $35,000,000 subway before it was planning costly additions. It is spending $40,000,000 upon bridges as fast as labor unions and material makers will permit. It is planning a $40,000,000 group of municipal buildings which will be an actual economy, so great are the city's rental bills It is boldly planning a municipal ferry to Staten island. It was only prevented by the votes of anti-fusion men in the legislature from establishing a municipal lighting plant to stop being robbed by a gas trust. It is trying to collect the back taxes of street railway corporations.

All this is not wasted. Whatever government New York has beginning next January will get the benefit of this monumental and basic work of city expenses.

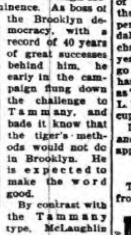
It is interesting to note into how many directions the stream of enthusiasm was directed. The health commissioner was a former Tammany official—one of those quiet fellows that every department must have to do the work. As head of the department he has lowered the death rate amazingly, stamped out smallpox, which Tammany let in, has established the inspection of milk farms and tackled the big problem of consumption.

The charities commissioner is a famed expert in his line. He treats the city's unfortunates with something better than kindness. He is courteous. He has even changed the old names. No one lives in an "almshouse" now. Softer titles are used. No one is a "pauper." These people are well fed, the hospitals well looked after.

Mayor Strong, elected by the anti-Tammany forces in 1894, had only one great city department specially presided over by Col. Waring. The present street cleaning commissioner, Dr. Woodbury, was the man who turned Santiago from a pest place into a healthful city. He has raised his department to a higher pitch of perfection than even Waring; but in a group of 20 strong administrators his achievement no longer monopolizes attention.

The Position of Hugh McLaughlin.

The campaign has thrust Hugh McLaughlin into prominence. As boss of the Brooklyn democracy, with a record of 40 years of great successes behind him, he early in the campaign flung down a challenge to Tammany, and bade it know that the tiger's methods would not do in Brooklyn. He is expected to make the word good.



Hugh McLaughlin's Parade

By contrast with the Tammany type, McLaughlin is impressive. No one but himself knows how old he is, but it is nearer 80 than 70. He is erect and vigorous, fond of fishing, busied often in whittling out boats for his favorite grandchildren. For ten years Mr. McLaughlin has been interviewed. Of late he has talked copiously and in parables. When the reporters went to see him about the Tammany threats they found him one day fussing about his little garden.

"Why do you come to me?" demanded the old man, straightening up and holding a withered flower stalk in his hand. "I'm much like this plant. I'm nearing the winter of my life, and there is not much left for me on this earth. I'm tired and weary and touched by the winds of autumn."

And with this poetical apostrophe in their notebooks he pitched in and gave Brooklyn an exhibition of able-bodied politics that it will not soon forget.

OWEN LANGDON.

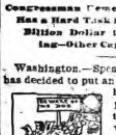
TOLD IN WASHINGTON

The Talk of the Times in the National Capital.

APPROPRIATION CHAIRMAN

Congressman Hemenway, of Indiana, Has a Hard Task Before Him—The Billion Dollar Congress Coming—Other Capitol Gossip.

Washington.—Speaker-to-be Cannon has decided to put an Indiana man at the head of the appropriations committee to become the watch dog of the treasury.



The Watch Dog of the Treasury

It will be no unusual thing to see a Hoosier occupying this position. With very brief intervals one of them has served as watch dog ever since the civil war. Generally to be sure the watch dog has been a member of the minority. This was the way with Holman, of Indiana, whose persistent reiteration of the simple words, "I object," gained for him the title of the "Great Objector." Holman, during the course of a long career in the house, prevented the passage of more appropriations than any other man before or since and it is doubtful whether even an Indiana watch dog can hope to equal his record; but Representative Hemenway—that is the name of the man selected by Mr. Cannon for the thankless job—will have a chance to use the pruning knife on far bigger bills in the aggregate than Holman ever dreamed of.

Holman has been dead now nearly ten years, after serving in the house of representatives for over 30 years. He lived long enough to see the fateful day on which the appropriations of the government crossed the line that justified the appellation of the "billion dollar, congress."

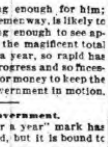
That was crushing enough for him; but his successor, Hemenway, is likely to stay in congress long enough to see appropriations run to the magnificent total of a billion dollars a year, so rapid has been the march of progress and so fixecant is the demand for money to keep the machinery of the government in motion.

Cost of Government.

The "billion dollar a year" mark has not yet been reached, but it is bound to come unless the country stops growing.

It makes no difference whether republicans or democrats have control of the appropriations is steady and inevitable.

It costs more to run a country with 80,000,000 people than it cost to run a country of 30,000,000 people 40 years ago, and the best that congress can hope to do is to watch with lynx-like eyes all the items of expenditure, so as to save all the money that is possible. That is the business of the appropriations committees of the house and the senate, and it is a business that keeps them thoroughly occupied from the beginning to the end of a session.



Congressman Cannon

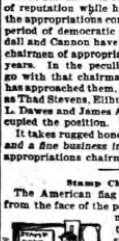
"Uncle Joe" Cannon, who has been chairman of the appropriations committee in the house for the last ten years has combined the qualities needed in just about the right proportion. He has been watchful and economical without failing to understand the needs of the country's growth, and while Uncle Joe has hurt the feelings of a great many members and caused countless heartburnings by his rigid scrutiny of money bills, he has contrived to keep the respect and admiration of the house so that both republicans and democrats look up to him as straight and square.

Sam Randall had much the same kind of reputation while he was chairman of the appropriations committee during the period of democratic ascendancy. Randall and Cannon have been the two great chairmen of appropriations in the last 40 years. In the peculiar qualities which go with that chairmanship nobody else has approached them, although such men as Thad Stevens, Elihu Washburn, Henry L. Dawes and James A. Garfield have occupied the position.

It takes rugged honesty, great courage, and a fine business instinct to make an appropriations chairman.

Stamp Changes.

The American flag is to be removed from the face of the postage stamp. Not many people realize that it is on the stamp, and few people have ever given the matter a thought. But the flag is there and it has got to go.



The Stamp Department's Troubles

The post office department got along for over a hundred years without printing a representation of the stars and stripes on a postage stamp. Finally some collectors and some other people made so much talk about it that it was determined to give them the flag. So when the new issue was put out about six months ago a design was adopted for the two-cent stamp which showed Stuart's portrait of Washington with a draped flag on either side. The name "Washington" appeared beneath the bust, together with the date of the birth and death of Washington.

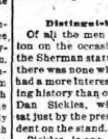
Strange as it may seem, ever since the stamp was given to the public the department has been receiving inquiries as to who was intended to be represented by the portrait, although it is a copy of the most familiar of all the portraits of Washington; while others came from others against put ing the name of the first president beneath his portrait on a postage stamp, though none is needed. The most general complaint, however, was that the lettering was too small to be read without a magnifying glass, while the nose of the father of his country displayed a wen only red.

Altogether the complaints were so many that the stamp was condemned and a new one will take its place in a few days. The new stamp will represent Stuart's Washington, with a shield for a background, and with the lines so delicately shaded as to dispel the impression of infirmity.

Distinguished Old Soldier.

Of all the men who came to Washington on the occasion of the unveiling of the Sherman statue there was none who had a more interesting history than old Dan Sickles, who sat just by the president on the stand.



Gen. Dan Sickles

Sickles is one of the few men now living who has a public record that dates back before the civil war. There is nobody left in either the senate or the house who held a public office of any consequence prior to 1861, and few men are left anywhere either in public life or out of it. Sickles was a member of the New York legislature away back in 1847, and he was a member of congress from 1857 to 1861. That was before he became a soldier.

It was before he became a soldier, too, that the incident happened which gave him a national notoriety of a not very creditable sort. He was broken who shot down Phillip Barton Key just before the war for a cause which justified the shooting in the minds of those who understood the circumstances and of the jury which brought in a verdict of acquittal. The tragedy occurred just in front of the house which was soon afterward occupied by William H. Seward, on Lafayette square, in which James G. Blaine died 20 years later, and which has since been torn down to make way for the Lafayette opera house.

It might have been thought that such a tragedy would bring to an end the public career of the man who was responsible for it; but not so with Sickles. He had his military reputation in the civil war, then he went to Spain as American minister and since then has been a member of congress and sheriff of New York. He is 78 years old now and as vigorous as a man of 50—for all his wooden leg.

Gathered About Sherman.

The Sherman statue celebration brought to Washington a greater number of distinguished survivors of the civil war than will probably ever get together in one place again. For the list of great commanders is yearly becoming smaller and smaller. Only two army commanders of the civil war survive—Schofield and O. O. Howard, and besides these two there are only three surviving corps commanders, Gen. Sickles, who commanded the Third corps; Gen. Grenville M. Dodge, of the Sixteenth corps, and Gen. James H. Wilson, of the Western cavalry corps.

All of these commanders were in Washington, and they had with them many of the officers who served under them.

Of all the number the sturdiest in physical appearance is Gen. Grenville M. Dodge, of Iowa, who is president of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee, and who, as chairman of the Sherman statue committee, presided at the unveiling ceremonies. Gen. Dodge, with his great bushy head and stocky build, looked younger by ten years than some of the officers of the later day army who grouped about him in uniform. He is as fit, physically to take command of an army as scores of officers 20 years his junior, and he is as active a captain of industry now as he was just after the close of the war, when as chief engineer of the Union Pacific railroad he supervised the building of the road across the continent. Dodge bids fair to be the last survivor of the old guard of civil war chieftans, and when he goes he is pretty sure to be commemorated by a monument here in Washington, since he has just supervised the construction of a memorial to his old commander.

LOUIS A. COOLIDGE.

A Dog of Many Colors.

A dog in Belfast, Ireland, which belongs to a dyer, being naturally white, takes any other color easily, and now he gets a dip in one vat and then in another, and he forms a sort of canine advertisement.

This dog was in use in the days before photography, and was quite unconscious of his distinguished condition, come up to other dogs wagging his yellow head and green tail, and the way that those dogs, after regarding him out of the corners of their eyes, tuck their tails between their legs and "scoot."

American College Yells.

The American college "yell" is something Europeans, and particularly Englishmen, never get used to. Their colleges have no "yell," and the Englishman does not see the fun of it at all. On the contrary, more than one learned professor has endeavored to prove that the yell is an Indian war-whoop

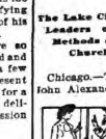
DOWIE AND CHICAGO

What He Has Accomplished in Twelve Years' Time.

IS NOW AFTER NEW YORK

The Lake City a Favorite Center for Leaders of Strange Religions—Methods of the Denominational Churches Are Changing.

Chicago.—The crusade which Dr. John Alexander Dowie led from Chicago to New York is probably the most spectacular affair of its kind in the religious history of the world since the days of the Crusaders.



"Peace be to This House."

Despite the fact that a majority of his first New York audience refused to hear him through his first sermon, it is scarcely too much to say that Dowie, in the end, will capture New York just as he has Chicago. His strong, not to say strange, personality, together with a never-ending perseverance, will win in the end, and when the last meeting has been held, the last tract distributed, there will be hundreds of converts in Gotham. That is what happened in Chicago, and the Chicago sinner differs but little from the Gotham sinner.

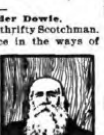
What a difference between the entrance into New York and the one he made 12 years ago into Chicago. To this city he came unheralded and alone, save his family. There was no glitter of gold to push open the doors of great auditoriums; there was no blare of trumpets to attract public notice to him. He secured a small building on Sixty-second street, on the South side, and there opened what he now terms Tabernacle No. 1. In that little building he preached the Gospel much as any other minister might have done. He was not Elijah the Restorer then, only plain Rev. John Alexander Dowie, with no denominational ties to bind him.

It is from that little tabernacle that the Christian Catholic church has grown until its membership extends through every state in the American union, and embraces people of every nationality in the world. And this in 12 short years.

John Alexander Dowie.

Dowie by birth is a thrifty Scotchman. He gained experience in the ways of the world in Australia, where he labored as a Congregational minister before coming to Chicago.

As a religious organizer and leader of men he has had no equals in this country, unless it be Joseph Smith or Brigham Young, of the Mormons. As a man of shrewd business ability he is head and shoulders above either of these. For his business projects he has drawn to him support from many of the master minds of the country. Neither the public nor his own followers are taken into his confidence to such an extent as to permit them a view of his accounts, or the knowledge of from where he secures his funds. But a few days ago a Chicago newspaper man was given a glimpse of his books under promise of secrecy, save in the way of generalities. That man says if the books of Zion should become public property their contents would startle the nation, and intimates that the names of men of enormous means are to be found in them.



Dr. Dowie

Forty-two miles north of Chicago Dowie has built a city of from 7,000 to 10,000 people. In it he has established a number of industries, and these industries have paid dividends. What these dividends have been paid from the public do not know. Dowie claims they are paid from the earnings, his enemies claim they are paid from the tithes collected by the church. Interest on the investments are guaranteed up to 12 per cent., and every guarantee has been met thus far. Deeds for the land upon which Zion City is builded are made out in Dowie's name. The people have builded homes upon these lots, which have not yet been fully paid for. It takes faith to do this, and there can be no question of the faith Dowie's followers have in their leader.

That Dowie has grown wealthy ever he does not deny. He is surrounded by every comfort money can purchase, has a beautiful summer home in Michigan, has the finest horses and carriages, the best servants.

A City of Queer Religions.

Dowie says that when he dies 95 per cent. of his wealth is to go to the church. This will be a big fund but five per cent. to his family. He claims that he is now the heaviest giver to the church funds, and points to several noble buildings in Zion City as personal contributions.

In this regard he differs from many of the religious organizers who have invaded Chicago and proven a center for queer religious cults. Sweinfurth, of notorious memory, threw a cloak of religion over his operations, which resulted not only in financial loss to a number, but in the disruption of families and the loss of reputations. Cyrus Teed and his Koreshian society, operated under the guise of religion. Teed, however, was a bungler. He extorted a hypnotic influence over the weak-minded, but could never reach the men of exceptional brains. To investigate him I at one time spent a week in his so-called home of the faithful, and was astonished to find how little it took to capture the unwary. One family in particular that I remember was from Iowa. It consisted of father, mother and daughter, a beautiful girl of some 20 years. They had owned a good farm near the Missouri river, but sold it and turned every cent of their earthly possessions into Teed's hands. The daughter I heard of afterwards. Here was too bright a mind to be so blinded by a religious imposter, and she left him to marry a workman in one of the manufacturing plants in the city.

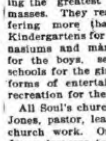
Another instance was that of a mysterious stranger, a swarthy East Indian, who claimed to be the possessor of the secret of life and death, and buried his operations under a religious mantle. When he left the city he took with him the dollars of many a society woman of feeble mind and long purse. They had been his special prey.

No city in America has given room to so many of these strange "isms" as has Chicago, and the field seems not to have been overworked as yet.

Denominational Methods.

Though the "isms" and fakes attract unwarranted numbers, the regular denomination churches of the city seem not to be greatly affected by them. Occasionally the newspapers will chronicle the defection of some man or woman of unusual prominence, but they are exceptional cases. The majority of the converts to the various "isms" come from the unregenerate who have known no creed or religion save in a general way. They are a religion unto themselves until they meet and take up with a mind stronger than their own.



The Regular Churches Hold

But while the denominational churches of the city hold their own, they are changing in methods. To-day it is the institutional church that is attracting the greatest attention from the masses. They reach the public by offering more than Sunday sermons. Kindergartens for the very young, gymnasiums and manual training schools for the boys, sewing and cooking schools for the girls, lectures and other forms of entertaining and instructive recreation for the parents.

All Soul's church, Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, pastor, leads in this class of church work. Once each week Mr. Jones lectures to the mothers on the care and instruction of children from the Bible standpoint. His congregation are now building a new church, which is more like a large clubhouse than anything else, and which is expected to become a center of moral training when completed.

Other churches have invaded the slums with their missions, in which the preaching of the Gospel of Christ is but a feature of the work that is being done. Others hold open air meetings to attract the nonchurch going public. One of the Baptist churches of the city has introduced the automobile as a means of transportation for the messengers of the Gospel. The automobile carries a small organ, and goes from street corner to street corner with its devoted workers. It is in line with the new methods of denominational work.

Stages Changes.

Beautiful golden hair will no longer secure a chorus girl's position. Now it by must be black, or at least a dark brown, for the blond girl is out of fashion, and the brunette is in.

The Brunette is in Vogue

Stage fashion change in color every three or four years. For a time every stage setting will have gold, red, bronze and auburn predominant colorings. Now the public have tired of these, and the managers are turning to darker shades, and the girls must correspond. That is why the brunette is in fashion again.

New York sets the pace in things theatrical, but Chicago follows a close second, and with Chicago becoming more and more a producing center for spectacular musical comedies, in which the chorus girl reigns as queen, it is strictly interested in this change from blond to brunette.

There are girls, few to be sure, who refuse to change their hair to suit every whim of the manager. There are old-time favorites in Chicago who were forced onto the vaudeville stage as a result of the demand for blonds. The new change will bring these favorites back to legitimate houses, where it is expected their presence will draw crowds of old admirers.

There is much in the ballet to the manager. George Ade's plays, with the possible exception of the Sultan of Sulu, were handicapped by homely girls, while Baum's spectacular production, the Wizard of Oz, which had such a great run, did not have a single homely girl in it. One people like a pretty face on the stage.

OUR CHICAGO LETTER

Why First Impressions of the City Are Not Pleasing.

SEEN FROM A CAR WINDOW

The Railroads Run Through the Poorer Sections As a Rule—The Work of Some Finding Associations and Kindergartens.

Chicago.—First impressions are lasting ones, we are told, but if the first impression of the tourist coming into Chicago by any one of its 26 lines of railway, is to be the impression of the city that remains in the visitor's mind, then Chicago is poorly advertised.

The First Glimpse of the City

For reasons almost unexplainable a railroad right of way through a city seems to attract to it the least that is attractive of the city. Chicago is no exception to the general rule, and what is seen from the car window as the trains rush through the city is not the attractive boulevards, the beautifully kept parks, the handsome residences or the mammoth office buildings, but the squalid hovels of the poor, the warehouses, the coal yards, the dirt and grime of the manufacturing districts and the long lines of cars in the railroad freight yards.

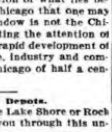
It is unfair to judge Chicago by this first glimpse of it from a car window.

Following the elevated right of way of the Lake Shore and Rock Island roads especially that section of it from Forty-third street into the depot at Van Buren street, one can see but little that is not disgusting. Littered back yards of frame hovels greet the eye with scarcely an interruption. Unwashed windows, unkempt children, untidy women, the scum of a great city, the breeding place of vice and crime follow in an almost unbroken line for many blocks, though broken here and there by the new civilization, the new development that is invading these districts in the shape of factories, mission, schools.

Other railroads enter the city through much the same sections. They differ but little in general appearances. None are a worthy representation of what lies beyond them. The Chicago that one may see from a car window is not the Chicago that is attracting the attention of the world with its rapid development of culture, intelligence, industry and commerce. It is the Chicago of half a century ago.

At the Depots.

Though either the Lake Shore or Rock Island may carry you through this unwashed district, they leave you at the end of your journey at the borderland of a fairer scene. You emerge from the train immediately into the heart of the business district right at the head of La Salle street with its long lines of towering buildings, its throb of active life, its mazes of people.



Depot Surroundings

Within five minutes of time you have passed through the scraggly, struggling western village, with its cheap buildings its scenes of debauchery, into the metropolitan city, the second in America, the fourth in the world.

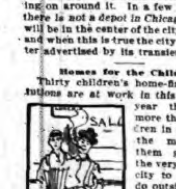
If you wish to form your first impression at the door of the depot it may or may not be a pleasing one, depending entirely upon what road you have traveled on, and at what depot you have arrived. All of them are at the edge of what is best in Chicago, though some are yet a block or two from it, but towards them all the old town is giving place to the new city.

Come in at the Grand Central station for instance, and you are surrounded by the cheap saloon, the cheap hotel, the business house of the cast-off clothing merchant, but the new, the real, Chicago is not far away. You see it towering before you a block down the street, you see workmen busy putting it nearer the doors of the depot in the shape of great office and wholesale buildings going up. Another year or two and the mammoth depot will be surrounded by buildings that will dwarf it in appearance. It is the new Chicago replacing the old in the depot districts.

The Pennsylvania lines are to spend a million and more on a new depot that it may keep pace with the development going on around it. In a few years more there is not a depot in Chicago but what will be in the center of the city's activity and when this is true the city will be better advertised by its transient guests.

Homes for the Children.

Thirty children's home-finding institutions are at work in this city. Last year they placed more than 600 children in new homes the majority of them going from the very poor in the city to the well to do outside of it.



Looked a Mother's Care

The task the officials of these societies have set for themselves is not in all ways a pleasing one to them. They meet witness many a sorrowful parting must listen to the tale of many a heart ache, must console, advise and plan.

Distress hovers constantly over the slums of the city, and first among the sufferers are the children. Mother or father is stricken, and preserving the home ties is no longer possible. The little ones must be given up, must seek foster parents who teach them to forget the past, to forget the existence of the mother who has nursed them.

The hard part comes when the officials must explain these things. The poor do not understand them. It is not so hard to part with the children when there is a possibility of reunion again when circumstances make it possible, and to them must be told the sorrowful fact that when once the little ones have passed from their care they are gone forever. The telling of it changes many a parent's mind, and a new struggle is made to keep the family intact, and the little ones under the home roof.

These little unfortunate waifs of the city are sent into all the surrounding states. They find home and love in the villages of Iowa, on the farms of Wisconsin and of Illinois.

Nor is the society's work done when the new home is found. The officials must keep in touch with the child to see that it is properly cared for, that its foster parents do all they have promised to do for it. The fact that not in one case in 50 is there a necessity of taking the child from its new parents speaks well for humanity.

There is seldom a time when the supply of children in need of homes exceeds the demand from those who wish to adopt them.

The Kindergartens.

The public and mission kindergartens have done more to prevent the breaking of the home ties of the poor than any other one agency. They have opened a means of caring for the little ones at least a portion of each day when the parents must be away at work. They have done even more than this, for they assist in the character building of the child. If the kindergartens never did more than this they have justified their existence.

In the Kindergarten

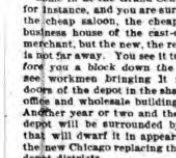
On Thirty-first street, along a right of way over which the railroad trains go thundering into and out of the city, there is a mission kindergarten in which half a hundred little tots are cared for every day. Here the hard-working mother leaves her little one with the assurance that it is safe while she is at work. At the Armour institute mission but a few blocks away is another of the same class into which pour each day the offspring of every color and nationality known to the human race.

It is not so much how to feed and clothe them, as how to care for them during the working hours, that sends the children into the hands of the home finding societies, and the kindergartens are solving this problem for the parents, and preventing the breaking of home ties. The children are found in these a new means of reaching the people of the slums. They form the nucleus of a Sunday school, of a mission church. They are a new element in the home mission ary work.

That there is more to this kindergarten teaching than the mere amusing of the children a few hours each day is shown by the fact that it takes more effort to secure a kindergarten teacher's certificate from the board of education than it does to secure a fifth grade teacher's certificate for the public schools, though the salaries paid are by no means commensurate with the training required. Fifty dollars per month is considered fair pay for a kindergartner, and many of the under graduates of the training schools are working for $20 per month and less.

Cupid at Church.

The cool nights of autumn have filled the churches on Sunday evenings—with lovers.



Cupid Goes to Church

Church attendance goes by seasons in the city. Late spring and early fall is the favorite time of the rich to go to church. It is then pleasant weather to drive and they ride in their places of worship in their carriages. The cool nights of late autumn tempt another element into the churches. The bracing air lures the young people, who seek the seclusion which is not possible in the modern city flat, to a walk. But the bracing air becomes a chilly air at love's pace, and the open doors of the churches offer a retreat where the lovers may sit together, even if they may not talk, and talking is unnecessary at such times anyway.

Cupid leads these young people to the churches, but the churches themselves hold many of them for years, and marriage fees accrue to the pastors when the wedding day comes around.

The pastor of a modest little church pointed out to me recently a half dozen or more of his congregation who were first led to his church doors by Cupid. They became interested and regular attendants, and a part of them now have children in his Sunday school.

The cold of winter sends the poor to church in large numbers. To them it means warmth of body, at least, and a saving of their own coal. Two things much to be desired. It is to the mission churches that the poor go, and the missions do a wonderful work among them.

ORIGINAL EFFECTS.

They Are Thoroughly Characteristic of the Winter's Gowns.

Much originality is displayed in the cut of evening cloaks, and some pretty ones are made of white or of light gray cloth.

The fichu once more appears on evening gowns and takes the place of the berths.

The smarter evening dresses are pulled off at the shoulders and have short draped puffs with long tabs.

Children's dresses are particularly becoming just now, as they are made with kilted and full effects, and the materials themselves are devoid of stiffness.

Velvet ribbons of different widths are used in trimming the little waists and skirts, and the latter are often shirred on cords around the hips.

Many of the new tailor made coats have wide cuffs filled in with a double row of full chiffon ruffles.

The new muffs are flatter and more supple than ever, and some of them have a narrow shirred in effect at the top in contrast to the wide bottom.

Collarless effects are still seen, but mostly on lace and jet gowns, which are used for theater and informal dinner wear.

The illustration shows a novel evening coat made of gray cloth and trimmed with bands of sibeline and venetian lace. It has the new surplice effect.

Steel and Jet Combined With Silver. Drooping Plumes.

Steel and jet are combined with silver to make most effective evening gowns. They have petticoats of black chiffon and sometimes touches of beautifully tinted old lace.

Three-quarter coats are the smart thing for winter wear. They have cape effects of fur, and bands of this are skillfully applied on the skirt.

Gowns entirely composed of perpendicular shirrings are dainty made of spotted mousseline de soie trimmed with fine lace.

Plumes drooping on the hair at the back are a prominent feature of the present millinery.

Very attractive evening sleeves consist of a tight fitting upper cap, from which hang on a chiffon foundation countless small ruffles reaching a little below the elbow. Each ruffle is edged with narrow trimming to set it out.

Many up to date skirts show a double or triple flounced effect, and these are most becoming to a slender figure.

A great deal of fine venetian lace is being used on evening gowns for berthas, straps, revers and hip yokes.

The cut shows a sibeline suit having a triple skirt. The blouse has tucked sleeve puffs, and the entire costume is trimmed with narrow pipings of velvet.

The hat worn with this is trimmed with a bird laid flat on the crown.

INDEPENDENCE OF WOMAN

Its True Significance

THE Golfrille Debating club was in full session. The subject of the day was written in bold letters where all could see—"The Independence of Woman."

"Oh, for goodness' sake!" ejaculated Senator Crackerjack, one of the guests of honor, as he settled himself comfortably in his chair and prepared to take a little nap on the sly.

But the senator was not destined to get as much sleep as he expected, although he did manage a short snooze while old Mrs. Peterkin held forth for half an hour in a rambling way, first starting in with a doleful account of the ancient wrongs of woman and then branching off on some pet educational hobby of her own until the president managed to round her up and give Miss Susan Strongmind a chance.

Miss Strongmind was short as to hair and long and lank as to figure. Her voice was what is known as a female baritone, and she had a tendency, in stage parlance, to rant. For three-quarters of an hour she waved her long, skinny arms like windmills and shouted statistics at her hearers. She spoke of the glorious future of woman, the glorious right she had of earning her own living, of standing alone, of thinking and acting like a man.

When the applause had in some measure subsided, Miss Commonsense arose in her turn.

"Madam president and ladies," she began, "for my part I don't take any stock in the independence of woman at all."

"What!" shrieked fifty excited women.

"No," returned Miss Commonsense dryly. "It's a fake until woman's own nature changes—that is," she corrected, "the nature of the average woman."

"The average woman," Mrs. Commonsense went on, "is merely an imitator, and she no more dares depart from the beaten track of custom than she dares wear a gown three seasons out of style. When the fashions say huge puffed sleeves and tight chokers in the way of collars, down free and independent woman rebel? Not she. She groans in spirit, but she wears the things if she doesn't have to go too heavily into debt to get them. When a woman flouts her reputation or chances to come down in the world how many free and independent women stand by her? Not many. They can't afford to imperil their own social position. What would other women say? And how many free and independent women marry without love just for the sake of a home and so that they won't have to enjoy for an indefinite time the free and independent right of earning their own living?

"Women have made one great stride. The daughters of the house have learned that something is expected of them as well as of the sons of the house. The old way was for one man to slave day and night to support three or four women while they stayed at home indulging in fancy work and gossip like perfect ladies. The new way is for each girl to help according to her talent, and all are content in their ambitions and their evenly distributed weight of labor.

"I have no respect for the girl who will neither marry nor support herself, she who leans heavily on a hard working father and demands her share of good things in this world. I have still less respect for a sister who will cripple the life of her brother in this way—just because she isn't used to doing anything, and she either won't use the brains she has or won't cultivate any.

"Independence of woman! Oh, yes, it is indeed a grand thing, a great change from the weak, tearful state of mind which admitted but one hope in this life, a lucky marriage. But independence doesn't rest on the right to work, the right to have a latchkey or any other peculiar right. It means, above all, the honest, plucky, original spirit that enables a woman to live her own life and say her own say according to the dictates of her own heart and her own conscience."

Mrs. Commonsense sat down amid a subdued murmur, and, to his astonishment, the senator found that he was wide awake and had actually listened to every word.

SMART TRIMMINGS.

Little Touches Which Add to the Effect of a Costume.

Silk tassels are used as trimming on many cloth tailor mades, on the skirts as well as the coats.

Slippers of brocade and tapestry are the latest for home wear. Gold and silver tissues are utilized for evening slippers. They are most becoming to a small foot, but they look best with all black or all white toilets. The stockings should of course match the shoes.

Velvet appears on nearly every winter gown, and corduroy velvet has been revived, but it lacks the richness of real velvet, and for that reason it will not be used for dressy wear.

Fancy applications—squares, lozenges, rings and diamonds—are in great demand, and into these are introduced touches of turquoise, pale green, poppy red and silver.

Oriental designs are great favorites, and collars and cuffs of these are seen on many cloth tailor mades which are otherwise quite plain.

Shirred effects are becoming more and more popular and are adding to the fullness of the skirts.

The picture shows a white crepe de chine waist trimmed with chiffon embroidery. It has a very smart tucked cape effect.

THE WORLD OF FASHION.

Vogue of Embroidery—Shades That Are Much Worn.

This is an embroidery season. A great deal more of it is used than of lace, and the leading dressmakers are using a great deal of the oriental type.

Bright touches of color are especially smart on the dull brown and gray gowns, and they give the necessary relief to serges and cheviots.

All the red shades, from old rose to cherry, are much more worn, and beautiful calling and reception gowns are made in them. These gowns are trimmed with rich embroidery and old lace.

Taffeta, formerly considered an "old" fabric, is now much used for young girls' gowns. The newest are the figured silk shot browns, reds and blues, and on these the large black spots are most effective. There are also lilac dresses made of spotted all black silk trimmed with black velvet and relieved by a wide handsome lace collar.

The walking skirt is here to stay, and nothing can equal its smartness when properly cut and trimmed with strappings of the cloth itself or of velvet.

Touches of very light colored cloth appear on the coats and bodices of dark toilets, and many skirts of fine black silken voile and black taffeta are being prepared for the winter season. These are frequently inlet with black lace to wear over white or colored slips, and a good many in black crepe de chine are decorated with very lace motifs. Some new French models have silk fringes worked into the insertion lace, and these are generally employed on double or triple skirts or on those in tunic fashion.

The illustration shows a novel brown cloth trimmed with black velvet. The wide frill of yellow lace at the sleeve is one of the smartest ideas about it. The hat is of black velvet, velvet, and it is trimmed with a tea pink ostrich plume.

LADY ARNOLD.

The Japanese Wife of Author of "The Light of Asia."

Some three years ago Japan seemed to have a wonderful fascination for Sir Edwin Arnold, K. C. I. E., C. S. I., fellow of Bombay university, of Royal Asiatic society, officer of White Elephant of Siam, Rising Sun of Japan, second class of Imperial Medjidie, third class Osmanieh, commander of Lion and Sun of Persia, author and journalist. He praised the gentle, courteous manners of the little brown people of the Empire of the Rising Sun. He rejoiced him in the artistic atmosphere of the chrysanthemum land. He wrote poems concerning the Japs. One was about a Jap girl so very taking that "they called her honey sweet." Finally he did his part of the editing of the London Daily Telegraph at the long range of the other side of the world in Japan.

By and by it was whispered out loud that this soaring literary kite with the tremendously long tail of titles had fallen in love with a little Japanese girl and that this romantic attachment explained things. But the pretty Jap girl was his ward, friends said. At length, however, there was no doubt that the famous literary man was in love with the Jap girl.

Now, this susceptible old boy had been twice married previously. The first Mrs. Arnold was an Englishwoman, Katherine Elizabeth Biddulph, who died in 1864. After mourning duly the poet comforted his widowed heart by marrying Fannie Channing of the family of the Channing who founded Unitarianism in America. Arnold cherished all the devotion of a genius, a poet and an enthusiast for his lovely American wife. She died in 1880, a year after Queen Victoria knighted her husband for his distinguished literary services.

After her death Edwin Arnold, already steeped to the lips in oriental theosophies, wrote more and more concerning the far east and its beauties and glories. At length in 1897 Sir Edwin Arnold's friends may or may not have been surprised at the announcement of his marriage at the age of sixty-five to Tama Kurokawa, the little Japanese girl, very pretty and gentle and very young. Thus did Sir Edwin prove his devotion to the fair sex by taking for his first wife an English girl, for his second an American and for his third a Japanese, and we may hope the famous British light of literature has yet many years before him in which to live, work and love. Why not? Women eventually will not find fault with him for his perennially youthful appreciation of their sex.

Sir Edwin Arnold's third wife is not a whit behind the other two in admirable characteristics. Lady Tama Kurokawa Arnold is beautiful, so striking and charming in appearance that she looks like a little cameo of a woman. She speaks English fluently; no doubt her husband taught it to her. The Japanese who has adopted western ways is far more like a Frenchman than an Englishman or American, and tiny Lady Arnold has much of the Frenchwoman about her in her liveliness and artistic taste in dress. She gowns herself exquisitely, and her costumes are greatly admired. But about her there is what the Frenchwoman lacks—an atmosphere of gentleness and sweet temper which is, in truth, almost peculiar to the Japanese woman. White men who have taken the small brown women for wives generally seem well satisfied with their choice.

Lady Arnold is a social favorite in London. She is at once intellectual and sympathetic. There is something childlike and trustful in her character, as with most women of her race. They seem somehow to take it for granted that every one is their friend and none would do them harm. The shameful way in which this sweet confidence has been abused in many instances is little credit to the white man.

The Japanese women are really remarkable. A chance, a little bit of an opportunity, was all they needed. They are brilliantly intellectual. The woman's university of Tokyo is turning out graduates as scholarly as those of any woman's college in America. Hundreds of Japanese girls, too, are now in the United States training themselves professionally to go back home and give good tidings to their sex. They have a fine conception of art, in which few American women equal them. And when they adopt western dress! If you were in Paris and watched the carriages driving along the Champs Elysees and through the Bois de Boulogne you would find among the costumes most looked at and admired those worn by Frenchified little Jap women.

NEW FASHION WRINKLES

Whalebone in Evening Gowns—Fur and Chenille Effects.

The majority of skirts look better when worn with a pad at the back. There is nothing more ungraceful than a flat skirt in the back. It gives the effect of the neck running into the heels.

Smart Paris dressmakers are introducing a little whalebone into the slips of evening gowns, and the old fashioned stiff muslin flounces are also being used to hold the fullness out.

Very frilly taffeta petticoats are the proper thing. They are made with innumerable flounces and frillings and bold out the bottom of the dress very well.

Buttons are becoming more and more popular, but there is danger in using too many of them, and a wise dressmaker will use discretion. Buttons of fur and of feathers are among the very latest novelties.

ERMINE STOLE.

Notted effects as well as chenille are very smart on dressy gowns, and shirred bands add fullness to crepe de chines and veilings. The most up to date skirts are as full in front as they are behind.

The cape effect has not lessened a bit in popularity, and some very smart waists have the effect of being entirely cape, with undersleeves of plaited chiffon.

In the sketch there is an attractive stole of ermine, white chiffon and lace applique.

Deep Shades Used a Great Deal. Suede Kid on Tailor Mades.

The plain fur stole has given way to the fancy design inserted with ermine or lace and steel ornaments.

A burgundy shade bordering on the purple is beloved by French tailors, and on this side smart flower hats are seen of it.

Feather hats are all the rage. The plumage used is composed of small feathers which are molded neatly into French sailor or turban shapes.

Many of the new millinery shapes have the trimming almost entirely under the brim.

In general the deeper shades of red are more used than the brighter ones.

HAT MADE OF FEATHERS.

and they are more universally becoming as well.

Dull browns and myrtle greens make ideal tailor mades for the fair haired girl.

Suede kid and various kinds of leather and of military buttons are used on the strictly tailor made costume.

The newest kid belt is crinkled and fastens with a heavy buckle of oxidized silver.

Turnover collars of the quaintest embroidery are features of all the smart morning gowns.

The many new tones of red so favored by Parisians will certainly be worn here, and quite the newest of these is a rich wine shade with deep tones, which is at its best in silk-line and rough textures. This shade is becoming to both blond and brunette and, trimmed with black, is very stylish and not at all bright or assertive in color.

The picture shows a French tailor hat made out of brown and corn plumage.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Ed... and ...roprietor

Thursday, Dec. 3, 1903.

Hope Santa Claus will bring Plainfield some money to enable it to have the street sprinklers at work all the year round.

Let the North Plainfield Council at its next meeting abolish the privilege of allowing liquor to be sold in Saengerbund Hall.

The fact that the Republican political brigands in Philadelphia are fighting refutes the story that the Quaker City is a dead town.

Oh joy! How happy the mountain lion would be if he knew that it took 500 men to protect the strenuous one from a few fanatics in the heart of a large city.

In knitting a pair of socks it takes all the stitches to count for anything—it's the same way with advertising—it's all the ads together that count. —White's Sayings.

If the report is true that Andrew Carnegie is to start a newspaper he has at last found a medium which will enable him to accomplish his cherished desire to die a poor man.

Yes, gentle reader, there is some contrast between the statesmanship of the editor of the Commoner who is now in England and that of the Great Commoner whose bones rest there.

Governor Odell is now "in" in New York's Republican camp—on paper. But those who imagine that Roosevelt is a kingmaker in political affairs will find their beliefs badly shattered when the wily old "boss," Tom Platt, finds it's time for something to be done.

A newspaper bureau recommends as a topic for a story "Are All women liars?" and suggests that members of the fair sex be invited to discuss the subject. A pessimistic friend advises that a list of contributors for this topic be selected at random from the directory, but as there is no iron grating on the office door we'll be forced to forego the pleasure.

"Senators met and adjourned" is a headline to which the newspaper reading public is becoming accustomed. We hope their salaries are being paid regularly, inasmuch as they do make an appearance in Washington, for a glance at the roll of members convinces us that there are at least three among the number who can not live on their general income.

Freeholder, who supplies the New York Press with 'hot air" paragraphs on Jersey political affairs, says: "MacMurray, the Republican leader in Plainfield, is taking a new interest in State politics. The three incidental Democratic Assemblymen of Union look upon him as a wonder, as well they may, because it was through the magic of MacMurray's generalship that they became the "Relief Corps" of the Assembly of 1904. MacMurray is a potent force, however, and just brainy enough to make "yearlings" out of the trio that, in his point of view, became the same to an end."

MacMurray's generalship, it is true, had much to do with the election of three Democratic Assemblymen in Union County, but MacMurray is not powerful enough to make "yearlings" of these men if Plainfield's wishes are again frustrated by the Elizabeth people in the next Republican County convention.

A corporation that will raise the price of its commodity twelve times in as many months and then declare a dividend of $44,000,000 is unworthy of enjoying any legal rights and should be crushed in the interests of humanity. It is a blot on any educational institution to receive any share of these ill gotten gains, and Chicago University and other seats of learning, standing as they do for the advancement of man, should decline the contributions of Rockefeller, who has been enriched through the machinations of the Standard Oil Company. It is hard, indeed, to believe that this merciless trust proposes to conduct its business abroad on the same lines as has characterized its existence in this country. The Newark Sunday Call makes this just criticism of the concern:

"The history of the Standard Oil Company now being revealed in McClure's Magazine is a story of outrage and wrong which has no likeness since the days of the robber baron. What this terrible band of millionaires has done in this country is now being repeated abroad, with the wretched peasantry of Italy, Austria and France, who are being made to pay their poor earnings to increase the profits of these conscienceless spiders of finance."

James Besson, of, Newark, was in town yesterday on business.

AMUSEMENTS.

Klaw & Erlanger's wonderfully spectacular Drury Lane production of Gen. Lew Wallace's "Ben Hur" will end its long run at the New York Theatre Saturday evening, Dec. 19, and will be followed Monday, the 14, by Bertha Galland in J. Fred Zimmerman's production of "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall." The remaining performances of "Ben Hur" at the New York Theatre represent the last times this remarkable play will ever been seen in New York. Seats may be ordered by mail.

"The County Chairman," the Thanksgiving offering at Wallack's Theatre, New York, will hold the stage of that favorite playhouse until after the holiday season is over. "The County Chairman" is the first play without music to be presented by Henry W. Savage; but it employs the services of more persons than most opera companies. There are more than a score of speaking characters in the comedy, and in some of the scenes one hundred and fifty men, women and children take part. For these rousing ensembles the great organization has been carefully drilled by George F. Marion to do most effective work, and the action and tableaux are fairly startling in their realism.

There is no falling off in the size of the audiences at the Academy of Music where "The Rich Friends" is the drawing card. Seldom has there been a better production during recent years at this popular show house and the management is reaping a rich harvest at the box office.

"What's the matter with Susan" has nothing to do with "How old is Ann" as it is the title of one of the best plays on the Metropolitan boards. Alice Fischer is in the leading role and the show is drawing crowded houses nightly at the Bijou. Order seats by mail enclosing check.

Charles Richman is starring in Victor Mapes' patriotic love drama "Captain Barrington." It is absorbingly interesting and is having a successful run at the Manhattan theatre. It is well to order your seats in advance. Address the box office, Manhattan theatre, Broadway and 33d street.

Good news for school children, their parents, relatives and friends, is contained in the announcement of the Majestic Theatre in New York that Klaw & Erlanger's of "Babes in Toyland" will be given during the Christmas holidays. Scores of letters have been received by Manager Flaherty asking him to give extra matinees during the holidays and he finally decided to concede to the requests though daily matinees have never before been given by a first class New York Theatre. There will be the usual matinee on Wednesday, December 25, an extra matinee Christmas Day, the regular matinee Saturday, December 26th, and a matinee each day the following week. Tickets for the extra matinees will be on sale after December 1st.

RARE PRINTS EXHIBITED

COLLECTION OF VALUABLE ENGRAVINGS SHOWN MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB.

Features of the meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club Monday afternoon at the Casino were the reading of selections from "She Stoops to Conquer," and an exhibition of Boydell-Shakespeare prints, numbering over sixty large engravings loaned by Mrs. Kenyon of the Plainfield Seminary and Miss Loyd, of Washington avenue.

These reprints from the English engravers were formerly owned by Dr. Spooner, who resided in this place some years ago and after whom Spooner avenue was named. Buying the plates abroad, Dr. Spooner had them reproduced in this county at great expense, and these pictures loaned for the exhibition are a part of a collection, the full number of which is one hundred.

Miss Kenyon gave a brief but interesting account of the Boydell-Shakespeare Gallery and the reproduction of the prints, with pleasant reminiscences of Dr. and Mrs. Spooner, well known to older residents of the town.

INSTALLATION OF PASTOR.

Plainfield Ministers to Take Part in Institution of Rev. E. F. Loofboro.

Rev. Eli F. Loofboro, who has been acting as pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, of New York, succeeding Rev. George B. Shaw, who is now pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, this city, will be installed pastor of the New York church Saturday morning. Among those who will take part in the installation services are Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, Rev. George B. Shaw, Rev. L. E. Livermore and Rev. Dr. A. E. Main, the latter of Alfred University, New York. Dr. Main will preach the installation sermon.

A new flag walk has been la i adi front of Mrs. W. S. Stevens' property on North avenue.

H. REEVE STOCKTON WON GOLF TROPHY

Walter Peterson Beaten in Competition for Golf Committee Cup by Over a Point.

THE SEASON CLOSED

FINAL STANDING IN CONTEST AT HILLSIDE OF MORE THAN USUAL INTEREST.

W. L. Glenney Won First and Mr. Stockton Second Honors in Saturday's Play—H. D. Hibbard Finished Third.

H. Reeve Stockton is the winner of the Golf Committee cup at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. This was decided on Saturday in the final play for the trophy. For a number of months past Walter Peterson held the lead for the cup, finally securing twenty-two points, a half point over Mr. Stockton. But as Mr. Peterson failed to get a point during the past two or three weeks his chances for winning the event were considerably lessened, while those of his nearest opponent were gradually advancing.

This competition has excited unusual interest throughout the season and many players engaged in the weekly play. With Saturday's play the active season ends at the club and the house is now closed for the winter. The golf links, however, will be kept open during the good weather, giving enthusiastic members a chance to continue their favorite game. The past season has been a successful one in every respect and in the various competitions more than ordinary interest has been shown.

In Saturday's play, W. L. Glenney won first honors with a net score of 77, H. Reeve Stockton was second with an 81, while H. D. Hibbard finished third with an 82.

These scores were posted for the cup:

W. L. Glenney, 78, 1—77; H. Reeve Stockton, 85, 4—81; H. D. Hibbard, 80, 7—82; W. B. Shoemaker, 104, 20—84; A. E. Barckley, 113, 27—85; Walter Peterson, 94, 6—88.

The total number of points received by the five leading contestants for the Golf Committee cup are as follows:

	Points
H. Reeve Stockton	23½
Walter Peterson	22
W. L. Glenney	21
H. D. Hibbard	10 1-2
Frank O. Reinhart	9½

UNION COUNTY PRESS CLUB

TITLE OF NEWSPAPERMEN'S ASSOCIATION LAUNCH WITH LARGE ROLL.

The Union County Press Club was formerly organized at a meeting held in the Lyceum theatre building, Elizabeth, Saturday afternoon. A constitution was adopted and officers elected for the ensuing year. Those chosen were: President, Joseph Lowden, editor of the Elizabeth Journal; vice president, H. S. Barnes, editor of the Rahway Democrat; secretary and treasurer, Ralph L. Mershon, city editor of the Elizabeth Daily Press.

The board of governors consists of W. W. St. John, editor of the Elizabeth Evening Times; Charles B. Morse, editor of Compressed Air; John A. Potter, editor of the Cranford Chronicle, and Henry S. Altai, of the Elizabeth Freie Presse. President Lowden announced that he would appoint these as members of an enrollment committee: G. A. V. Bankinson, editor Westfield Leader; J. W. Clinton, editor of the Summit Herald; Thomas Muir, Plainfield Courier-News, and Messrs. Barnes, Potter and McGowan. One member to represent New Providence on this committee will be appointed at the next meeting.

There was a large attendance at the meeting which was quite enthusiastic. It is believed that there will be sixty members in the organization before Jan. 1.

By resolution the club congratulated Edward K. Drake, of the Elizabeth Journal, on his having reached his sixty-third birthday.

Married in St. Joseph's.

Miss Mary Connolly and John Brennan, of New York, were married Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. Joseph's R. C. Church, by Rev. Joseph Miller. The best man was a brother of the groom, Michael Brennan, of New York, and the bridesmaid was Miss Hannah Connolly, sister of the bride, of this city. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Brennan left for New York, where they will reside.

Played in Big Game.

Richard McCullough, of North Plainfield, witnessed the football game at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, on Saturday afternoon between the Army and Navy teams. His son, a student at Annapolis, played on the Navy squad.

JR.O.U.A.M. LISTENS TO REV. DR. SCHENCK

The Members of the Order Gathered in Trinity Church Hear Appropriate Sermon.

IMMIGRATION QEUSTION

BELIEVES THAT SOME FEDERAL STATUTES DO NOT AFFORD PROTECTION.

Good Things Reserved to be Enjoyed in Heaven—Patriotic Hymn Sung—Good Music—Solo by Miss Bennett.

Benevolent, Somerset and Franklin Councils, all of this city, and Twilight Council, of Scotch Plains, attended Trinity Reformed Church in a body Sunday and listened to an able sermon preached by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck. The members met in their council chambers and marched in and out of the church uniformed in the regalia of their order. Yesterday was set apart by the order throughout the State for attendance at special church services.

Dr. Schenck referred to immigration, in the course of his remarks, advocating its further restriction and stating that many of the Slavs, Huns, Poles and inhabitants of Southern Europe are unfit for the reception of liberty and its kindred blessings in this country, and for the working out of the great problem of the nation, that of the government of, by and for the people.

Dr. Schenck's subject was the goodness of God which is laid up in reserve. He spoke of the goodness which was laid up by the Creator in the world prepared for man. The universe was made for man's coming and his needs were anticipated. We will never know, said the speaker, what sufferings our fathers endured in laying up for us in reserve liberty and kindred blessings. Nor will we ever know what Christ suffered for the redemption of humanity.

The goodness of God was further illustrated by reference to the fact that he has man had need of light, he was *given the candle. When that be*came insufficient, oil, which had been laid up in reserve through the ages, was discovered, and, when that in turn became inadequate to man's needs, the force of electricity was unfolded to him. The storing up of coal in reserve and its discovery was given as a further example. The best things of all, said Dr. Schenck in conclusion, are kept by God in reserve in Heaven.

"My Country, 'Tis of Thee" was sung by all at the close of the services.

Special music was provided by the church choir, and Miss Florence Bennett sang a solo.

Hope Preparing for Christmas.

Those committees have been appointed for the Christmas entertainment at Hope Chapel: Entertainment —Ira W. Travell, chairman; the Misses Marie Newman, Grace Hazen, Margaret and Eleanor Vandeventer, Mary Dennis, Alice Lansing, Grace Burke and Mr. and Mrs. Noble King; decorating — John Cose, chairman; George Firstbrook, Benjamin Evans and Thomas M. Muir.

FUNERAL OF MRS. STILLMAN

REV. DR. A. H. LEWIS AND REVS. G. B. SHAW AND J. S. ZELIE OFFICIATE.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Mary Starr Stillman, who died on Wednesday last, were held Saturday afternoon from the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, on East Seventh street. There were a number of floral tributes.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, formerly pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, who knew the deceased for many years, was in charge of the services, assisted by Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor of the above-named church, and Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church. Dr. Lewis made a few remarks regarding the exemplary Christian life of Mrs. Stillman and spoke of her many excellent qualities and devotion to her church, her religion and those near and dear to her.

During the services the Lotus Glee Club sang Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," and "O, Beulah Land."

The interment was made in Hillside cemetery.

Gift to Frank Hedden.

Frank Hedden, of East Fourth street, has received a barrel of oysters and six red head ducks as a gift from Captain Frank Sutton, of Barnegat.

Seeley's paper mill, which has been closed for several days, while necessary repairs were being made to the boiler, resumed operations again Monday morning.

STRUCTURE TO BE USED BY EPISCOPALIANS LARGER THAN ST. PATRICK'S.

The Plans Submitted by Tracy & Swartout — Description of the Buildings—Some of the Firm's Work.

Evarts Tracy, of this city, a member of the firm of Tracy & Swartout, of New York, is receiving congratulations on the great honor paid to that firm by the diocese of Colorado. In an international competition for a design for the Denver Cathedral, in which fifteen firms of architects figured, Tracy & Swartout received the first award and their plans will be used in the erection of a cathedral, which will be larger than St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York City.

The design submitted is Gothic in type and in some features bears resemblances to the cathedrals at Peterborough and Ely, England. The whole structure will be constructed of gray stone. It will have two large west towers and one great central tower. To the left of the chancel will be the chapter house and the dean's house as well as cloisters, and to the right of the chancel will be a lady chapel and other cloisters. At the foot of the nave to the left will be a mortuary chapel and to the right a baptistry.

The Denver Daily News says:

"There never was really any question as to what plans we should choose," said Bishop Olmsted last night, "as those submitted by the architects who proved to be the successful ones were so superior in every way. Our choice was unanimous, and we are glad to know that those of the clergy who saw the plans were of the same opinion. This fact is of no small importance, for if we have a design which is universally admired it will be much easier to raise money to build it. I am confident the design we have choosen will meet the approval not only of the Episcopalians of Denver, but also of the citizens generally. Our consulting architect, Mr. Walsh, says that the completed cathedral will be, beyond doubt, the bandsomest building in America.

"We chose these plans because they seem to combine beauty and utility more than any of the others. They were readily and immediately desired by all who saw them, and there was almost no discussion in regard to the matter except in the way of admiration. The cathedral in which we shall build will have artistic beauty, dignity and grandeur, and will form an education in church architecture for the entire West. I am sure it will be the pride of Denver, as well as of our church, and I feel deeply the privilege and honor of participating in its building.

Tracy & Swartout designed the new Muhlenberg Hospital in this city, the Yale Club in Forty-fourth street and the Hotel Webster, in Forty-fifth street, New York, are samples of their work.

MEMORIAL TO YOUNG MURPHEY

During the opening exercises at the Plainfield High School, this morning, Principal I. W. Travell presented be*fore the pupils* a large picture purchased by the school to be a memorial for Douglass Murphey, who died on May 6.

The picture is about three by four feet in size, and is a photograph of the bas-relief tablet, "Death Staying the Hand of the Sculptor." This tablet was executed by Daniel Chester French, and adorns the pedestal of the monument standing over the grave of the sculptor, Martin Milmore, who is best known for his Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument on Boston Common.

The photograph represents the Angl of Death, draped in flowing robes, with face partially hid in the shadow of her enveloping hood, bearing in the right hand a branch of poppy, and with the left hand outstretched to touch the hand of a youthful sculptor. Unaware of his visitor, the sculptor is busy with mallet and chisel, fashioning a new work from the block of marble before him.

The picture is artistically framed, and bears an inscription tablet containing the words, "To the Memory of Cadet-Major Edgers Douglass Murphey, Jr."

Mr. and Mrs. John Agar, of Elizabeth, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Voorhees, of the borough.

PLAINFIELD IDEAL AS SUBURBAN TOWN

Handsome in Appearance and Modern in Improvements—Attractive to Home-Seeker.

FACTS AND FIGURES

ARTICLE IN CURRENT ISSUE OF CENTRAL R. R. MAGAZINE REPRODUCED.

Finely Macadamized Streets—Sewage Disposal Plant—Storm Sewers—Excellent Fire and Police Departments.

The Suburbanite, a magazine issued monthly by the Central Railroad, has as the feature story for its December number an article on Plainfield, which is accompanied by many handsome views of the city. The story was written by Ralph L. Morrow, city editor of The Daily Press, and is reproduced in detail:

"Frequently alluded to as 'New York's bed room' and 'commuters' dormatory' Plainfield, whose inhabitants speak of it as the 'Queen City,' is undoubtedly one of the handsomest as well as one of the most modern of the metropolitan suburbs. It should be distinguished from North Plainfield which is a separate municipality, but not for any purposes of comparison inasmuch as the latter community is but an expansion of Plainfield proper. A narrow brook, hidden by bridges, geographically marks the dividing line.

"Situated at the foot of the Watchung mountains and possessing exceptional natural beauty, Plainfield has been made particularly attractive. Wide streets, bounded on either side by good pavements, along which are well trimmed trees, and fine dwellings, many of palatial proportions, enhance its appearance, making it a superb place of residence, not alone for the commuter and the retired man of means, but for those engaged in business there. Its citizens point out the fact that the homes are, with few exceptions, surrounded by lawns, the double building being almost entirely tabooed. Appreciating its value as a place of residence, a large number of New York business men, bankers, brokers, lawyers and manufacturers have settled there, and the social life is worthy of mention.

"On all sides there is plenty of room for building purposes and new homes are constantly being erected to supply the demand. Those rapid additions are particularly noticable, although Plainfield is not and does not claim to be a 'boom' town, and neither is its neighbor, North Plainfield. Much pride is taken in the schools and the standard of course of instruction, the corps of instructors and the buildings are not out-ranked in New Jersey, which is celebrated for its public school system. The kindergarten and the high school are features. Approximately $80,000 is raised annually for public educational purposes. The Irving, the Franklin, the Washington, the Bryant, the Lincoln and the Stillman buildings are models in architecture. An appropriation of $125,00 has been made and the plans accepted for a high school building to be centrally located. In the high school military instruction is made a feature and the drilling of the uniformed cadets is a branch in the students' athletic training. In North Plainfield manual training is a part of the school curriculum, both boys and girls being instructed in various arts. In this connection mention should be made of the local trolley service, its branches covering both city and borough and connecting with lines to Elizabeth on the one side and Somerville and New Brunswick on the other.

"There are thirty-eight miles of macadamized streets in the city and nearly twenty more in the borough, many of them ending in macadamized country roads, where the driving is charming. There is a complete sewage disposal system, the plant costing approximately $250,000. The septic tanks and contact beds have a capacity of 1,000,000 gallons a day and are located to the southwest of the city, in an unpeopled section. Altogether there are thirty-one miles of sewage pipe in operation and more is constantly being added. In the central part of the place, particularly in the business section, there are perfect storm sewers, nearly five miles of piping being in use, which carry off all surface waters. The electric light and telegraph wires are all underground. One telephone system connects nearly 1,400 homes and business places. Two telegraph companies have offices in the business section, and branches throughout the city and borough.

"The postal service is excellent, the main office having a branch in North Plainfield, and at frequent intervals during the day there is a free delivery and collection to all parts of the two municipalities. Rural free delivery and collection to covering a territory of forty-eight square miles is established December 1. There are over thirty churches and missions, the principal denominations including Episcopal, Presbyterian, Baptist, Methodist, Roman Catholic, Reformed and Congregational, having handsome houses of worship.

"Police protection in Plainfield is second to none in the State, in addition to a regular force of twenty roundsmen and patrolmen, there are a number of watchmen who patrol the residential sections at night, and in the borough there are a number of special marshals. Plainfield has a police patrol wagon and a system of police alarm. The paid fire department consists of 13 regular men, 38 call men, improved apparatus and appliances and three fire houses. In addition the borough has two companies housed separately. The annual appropriation for the department is $35,000, that for the streets being $24,000 and for the police, $17,000. The board of health employs a chemist, who devotes his entire time to the city's service, and an inspector. There is a municipal isolation hospital in addition to Muhlenberg Hospital, whose board of governors is composed of commuters. The new Muhlenberg Hospital is being built at a cost of $81,000, voluntarily subscribed.

"The Young Men's Christian Association is prosperous. Its ornate building contains a gymnasium, swimming pool, reading rooms and auditorium. Another attraction is the Plainfield Public Library and Art Gallery, centrally located. The Daily Press and the Plainfield Courier-News are evening home papers and the Constitutionalist and North Plainfield Review are published weekly. There are two banks and one trust company and a savings institution, and several good hotels. Nearly every fraternal order is represented there. The Masonic order has the finest home in the State in which is quartered two lodges, a chapter and a commandery.

"The Plainfield Seminary and the Randolph-Cooley Collegiate School, both for girls, and the Leal's School and Harned Academy for boys are private institutions for the training of the young. Outdoor sports are much in favor, there being several good baseball teams and tennis clubs as well as two golf associations. The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club has an eighteen hole course and its membership of 300 is largely made up of commuters and their family as is the Park Golf Club. The Park Club, another organization, pays particular attention to tennis.

"Plainfield, connected with New York, by fast expresses, attached to several of which are club cars, is a queenly city. It is one of the chief points of interest along the line of the Jersey Central and should by all means be visited by home seekers."

STUDENT PREACHES SERMON

HENRY PEARCE DELIVERS DISCOURSE AT HOPE MEMORIAL CHAPEL.

One of the largest congregations of the year at Hope Chapel Sunday greeted Henry Pearce who had charge of the services. It was Mr. Pearce's first sermon since he has taken up his theological training in Union Theological Seminary. He has been a member of Hope Chapel from boyhood and is a graduate of the Plainfield High School and Union College.

Mr. Pearce spoke of the "Importance of Thinking," taking his subject from Philippians, iv, 8. He said in effect: "A man sooner or later will act his thoughts. He who thinks constantly of evil will do evil things, and he who makes a practice of thinking good things will inevitably express his thoughts in actions." Mr. Pearce's methods of dealing with his subject brought high praise from his hearers who predicted for him a bright future.

WM. FISHER BURIED.

Funeral of Plainfielder Who Was Foreman of Telegraph Company's Lines.

The funeral of William M. Fisher, brother of Mrs. William Culbertson, of 159 Crescent avenue, who made his home with the latter during the past year, took place Saturday, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, of the Congregational Church, officiating at the services. He died at Belvidere, N. J., on Tuesday.

Mr. Fisher was born in Phillipsburg, N. J., forty-two years ago. For eighteen years he was a foreman for the Postal Telegraph Company, having charge of the company's lines at Boston and in several New England States. He left Plainfield ten days ago to visit friends at Belvidere, and his health, which was poor, rapidly grew worse.

Famous Missionaries His Subject.

William D. Murray will speak on "Famous Missionaries" at the Y. M. C. A. men's meeting next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Trinity Church choir will provide music. Miss Florence Bennett will be the soloist.

BOARD CONSIDERS PARENTS' COMPLAINTS

Dr. Cooley Tells the Borough School Trustees That Citizens Are Indignant Over Affairs.

VACATION PERIODS SET

QUESTION OF BUYING DRAWING INSTRUMENTS AGAIN AGITATED.

Miss French and M. K. D. Heucker Selected as Teachers—Warrants Drawn—Condition of the Finances.

The dates for the vacations for the school year, the matter of the new school buildings which will be found in another column, and a protest against the present system of accommodating pupils in stores and halls were features of the meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Education last Monday.

Dr. Cooley, as chairman of the building committee, stated that complaints are getting more numerous regarding the school accommodations in the borough. Parents have complained about having their children kept in the basement class room of the Watchung School and they object to sending their children to the store and hall rooms on Somerset street. The chief objection to both places is that the ventilation is poor.

Two lots of land were offered by John Valiant, chairman of the finance committee. The president and district clerk were authorized to pay a $3,000 note with interest. Another resolution was passed authorising the President and Clerk to sign warrants on the $1,700 loan and pay the interest on the same and to draw a warrant for $2,800.90 to meet the expenditures for the month. Itemized these expenditures are: Library, $3,963; general fund, $2,390.99 and manual training, $370.45. The cash on hand is now $5,211.53.

President Joy, of the teachers' committee, reported that Miss French has been secured to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Miss Pimm, of Elizabeth, and of the appointment of M. K. D. Heucker as successor to Mr. Bauerhire, who resigned to take a position in the Greater New York schools. Chairman Samuel Townsend, of the truancy and grievance committee reported that he believes it is possible to secure a nurse for a reasonable salary to act as school inspectress of all cases where children have been sent home afflicted with vermin or skin disease. The matter was left to him for further investigation. The reply of the Plainfield Board of Education to the proposition made by the borough Board to consolidate the high school system of borough and city, was received. The City Board stated that the matter would be considered by that body when the work on the new school building was actually begun.

County Superintendent of Schools H. V. Kreps invited all the members of the Board to be present at the meeting of members of the Boards of Education of all cities and boroughs in the county. The meeting is to be held in Somerville, Saturday, Dec. 12.

Superintendent Homer J. Wightman submitted dates for the closing of the school for vacations during the school year. They are: Christmas vacation, school closes, Wednesday, December 23 and reopens, Tuesday, January 5; closing for the Easter vacation on April 3 and re-opening on the 9, which will bring commencement day, June 17. This arrangement gives the pupils one more day of school than that of last year. Mr. Wightman asked for an expression of the Board on whether or not it was desired to take part in the New Jersey State school exhibit at the St. Louis Exposition. The matter was referred to the President with power. The board debated at some length on whether or not to purchase one more set of mechanical drawing instruments so as to do away with all partiality. On account of the lack of appliances, only the children of well-to-do parents can take up the course of mechanical drawing as they can afford to procure drawing instruments. Those who can not afford to buy them are obliged to do without this most important course. One member objected to purchasing the additional number of sets on the ground "that it will leave nothing in the appropriation at the end of the year." On voting it was found that six were in favor of partiality and five were in favor of keeping down the expenses so as to make a "good showing" at the end of the year rather than give all the pupils an opportunity of receiving instruction in all the branches of the school. While the debate was in progress one member of the board declared that he would not be in favor of allowing a few favored pupils the use of the building, lights, appliances, etc., unless all the pupils could do so because, he said, "it was in opposition to the whole plan of public instruction."

HARRY DE WINDT'S PERILOUS JAUNT

Instructive Lecture Given in An Entertaining Way by a Noted Traveler.

GRAPHIC DESCRIPTIONS

STRANGE STORIES OF DISTANT LANDS RELATED AT THE CASINO.

Plainfield Public Failed to Take Advantage of Rare Opportunity to Hear An Able Man Tell of Wonderful Journeys.

Judging from the amount of hardship that Harry DeWindt underwent in his trip "Paris to New York, Overland," the engineer who would attempt to span the space with railroad lines would be up against the biggest problem of the ages. Mr. DeWindt described his travels to an audience at the Casino last night that numbered about forty, where the quality of the lecture and the name of the lecturer should have brought out a crowded house.

Mr. DeWindt is an agreeable talker. He relates his tremendous experiences in a simple, matter-of-fact way but withal graphically and with a grace ful diction and a slight accent that charms.

Mr. DeWindt left Paris December 19, 1902, arriving in New York in August more than eight months later. He covered 18,484 miles by land and 23 miles across the Behring Straits by water. Some of the more interesting statements of the traveller in the course of his remarks may be stated simply:

Moscow, in Mr. DeWindt's belief, is the most beautiful city in the world.

The journey of eleven days from Warsaw to Irkouts by the Siberian railway could be accomplished in four as the American train travels.

The soil in Irkouts, Siberia, is frozen to a depth of 600 feet.

The body of a girl exhumed near Irkouts three years after burial was in the same condition of preservation as three days after burial.

Criminals arrived at Irkouts after a three years walk across the snowy wastes from Russia.

In Yakouts snow-blindness is almost universal.

There is a striking and inexplicable similarity between the languages spoken in Yakouts and European Turkey.

The average temperature is 78 degrees below zero.

At one of the settlements for Siberian exiles, Mr. DeWindt and his party were the first visitors from the outside world in thirty years.

Natives of most of the settlements consisting of two or three huts live in most horrible squaler.

The most ominous thing about Siberia is the terrible silence, the stillness that overwhelms and drives men mad.

In one settlement of fourteen Russian exiles, two were guilty of crime.

No one ever returns from exile.

More than one-third of the exiles kill themselves.

By one of the political exiles Mr. DeWindt was commissioned to deliver a letter of an anarchistic nature to a person in Paterson, N. J. The letter, needless to state was never dellivered.

PROSPEROUS ORDER.

New Jersey A. O. U. W. Makes No Assessment for December.

There will be no beneficiary assessment in the A. O. U. W. for the month of December. The financiers of every lodge in the State have been notified by Grand Recorder J. H. Lippincott, of Camden, that there is a sufficient amount in the treasury to warrant an omission of the month's assessments. This is the third month in the present year that the Workmen have omitted their assessments, indicating the great prosperity of the order in New Jersey.

PLAINFIELD BOWLERS WIN.

Local Team Victorious in the First of the State Contests.

SCHOOL BOARD WANTS $25,000 STRUCTURE

Borough Board of Education Considers Proposition of Erecting New Building.

SEVERAL SUGGESTIONS

PROPOSITION TO BUILD TWO STRUCTURES IN DIFFERENT PARTS.

Dr. Cooley's Views—Plot Smalley Offers in in Prideville—Public Meeting of Taxpayers to Take Definite Action a Probability.

"Shall the new borough school building be placed on the French property at the upper end of Grove street?" That is the question which will be submitted to the taxpayers of North Plainfield at a mass meeting to be held sometime between the first and tenth of January. After sitting in executive session until midnight the North Plainfield Board of Education last night voted to submit that lot to the voters as being the most desirable one of any under consideration.

The matter now rests with the building and grounds committee to secure an estimate on an eight room school building and as soon as this is done to call another meeting of the Board at which time the cost will be considered and a date set for the public hearing. The building will cost approximately $25,000.

Dr. H. H. Cooley, E. A. Overton and Mr. Murray comprise the grounds and building committee, to whom all inquiries should be directed.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, offered a large piece of property which he owns in Prideville, provided the Board erects in that part of the borough a suitable school building to accommodate the smaller children in that vicinity. The proposition was subsequently considered in executive session.

The Mayor appeared before the meeting principally for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the Board has considered the idea of bringing up the matter of a new school building at a public meeting at which all the North Plainfield tax payers can be present and have a voice in the question. Mayor Smalley says that he would like to see the new school building erected in the western part of the municipality. He suggested the French property on Grove street as a site. It seems that the Board has had this site under advisement and has decided that that lot will be too small for the purposes. The Mayor declared that a school building does much in building up a community and will improve the tone and general character of the vicinity where it is located, citing the Watchung school as an instance.

Dr. Cooley, chairman of the building committee, said that the conditions show that the school building is needed more in the eastern side of the borough. Mayor Smalley offered a lot in the rear of the West End Hose Company's house on Harrison street, which fronts on another thoroughfare, and erect another school building of the same size in another part of the borough where the number of children and the greatest growth is perceptible. If objection was made to the location of a school in Prideville, the mayor suggested that the school building be erected on the lot opposite the Park Club building.

WARREN'S NEW DRUM CORPS

FIRE LADDIES HAVE A FIFE AND DRUM ORGANIZATION—PRACTICE NIGHTLY.

The members of Warren Engine Company are making elaborate preparations for the opening of the new engine house in the borough, which will take place shortly after January 1. A fife and drum corps is being organized among the members and each evening the members gather in the new building and practice on the flute and snare drum. Clerk Conover is the drum major; Joseph Newman, band master; Lambert B. Bodine, captain; James Walker, bass drum, and William G. Debele, symbols. Other members in the drum corps are George Schlereth, William Day, Richard Kenny, Lewis Clark and George Stewart. Captain William B. Smith will have charge of the drilling.

becoming vice president of the State federation after its organization and afterwards a director and chairman of the department of education. She is at present correspondent for the Club Woman, a New York paper published in woman's interests.

Mrs. Hall was president of the State Woman's Suffrage Association for eight years, retiring in 1900 and becoming an honorary president, an office which she now holds. She is also president of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield and is serving her eleventh term as president of the Branch Alliance of Unitarian Women.

With her sister, Mrs. John Elliott, who writes under the pen name of Maude Howe, Mrs. Hall has combined to write the story of "Laura Bridgeman, Dr. Howe's Famous Pupil and What He Taught Her." Dr. Samuel G. Howe, Julia Ward Howe's husband, was the first to bring light to the mind of the blind deaf-mute. He fought, in addition for the Greeks in their war for independence and was a leader in many great enterprises. Among those who have commented favorably on the educational and literary value of the "Story of Laura Bridgeman" are President Roosevelt, Secretary John Hay, Henry VanDyke, Dr. Edward Everett Hale, William Dean Howells, Bishop Potter, of New York; Prof. Justin H. Smith, of Dartmouth College; Pres. W. H. Harper, of the University of Chicago; F. Marion Crawford, Senator George F. Hoar and many others, including the editors of important periodicals. The work is illustrated by John Elliott, husband of "Maud Howe." It has been published in England and is now in its third edition.

Other books by Mrs. Hall are "Social Customs," which the "New York Critic" said was the best work of the kind which had come under its notice, and "The Correct Thing," a manual of etiquette. She has also made numerous contributions to newspapers and magazines. She has lectured for the past fourteen years before clubs, schools and colleges, one of her most popular subjects being personal reminiscences of distinguished people whom she has met at the home of her mother.

Henry Marion Hall, who appears in the picture, is one of five grandsons of Julia Ward Howe who are undergraduates at Harvard. Mr. Hall received his degree in '99 and is now an instructor of English at Cartaret Academy, Orange. He was one of the ten strongest men in Harvard University when an undergraduate, and always taken an active interest in athletics. He is said to resemble strongly his grandfather, Dr. Howe.

John Howe Hall, another son of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, graduated last June from Harvard. He was a member of the Harvard track team and this year won the Gorham Thomas graduate scholarship. He is studying to becoming a mining engineer.

LITERARY.

The December magazine number of The Outlook contains much of special importance and interest. Perhaps the most prominent feature is the first instalment of Mr. Jacob A. Riis's series of articles on the Presidents, to be called "Theodore Roosevelt the Citizen;" the illustration includes a new portrait of Mr. Roosevelt drawn by Mr. George T. Tobin from a photograph taken for The Outlook by Mr. Arthur Hewitt. Other illustrated articles of note are Mr. Hamilton Wright Mabie's "The Land of Scott;" Mr. Norman Hapgood's elaborate review of Morley's "Gladstone;" "In the Three Greatest Libraries," by Dr. James H. Canfield, of Columbia University, and "The Books of a Season," in which Mr. Lovett's review and estimate of the season's literature which is included in this issue as being the Fifteenth Annual Holiday Book Number of The Outlook.

IDEAL MODERN MAN, A SUBJECT OF TALK

Rev. A. C. McCree Discusses Subject at Reception Given by Grace M. E. Y. M. A.

THE VIEWS OF OTHERS

S. S. SWACKHAMER TELLS WHAT HE CONSIDERS THE PERFECT MAN.

Young Men's Association of the First M. E. Church Entertained —Vincent Sokol's Violin and Piano Selections.

The Young Men's Association of Grace M. E. Church, last Friday entertained the members of the Young Men's Association, of the First M. E. Church. The evening was pleasantly spent in listening to speech, musical selections and a general discussion of interest to those present.

A feature of the evening's programme was an address by Rev. A. C. McCree, of Ridgewood. The subject of his remarks was "The Ideal Modern Man." He held that the world is constantly growing better and that drunkenness and profanity is on the decrease. This is apparent, he held, on every side. There is less drunkenness on the streets and the consumption of liquor was on the decrease. In 1840, he said, the consumption of intoxicating liquors per capita was five quarts. Today it is the same. Large number of foreigners are constantly coming to this country and most of whom are drinkers of intoxicating beverages. He said that the public sentiment against profanity has been the means of discouraging it to a large extent.

The business man, in the speaker's opinion, is the ideal man of the hour. It is not the warrior, not the collegiate, and not the man of letters, but the man who produces something by his actions in the world of today. The fighter, the theologian and the student do not occupy the commanding and exalted position, but have given way to the everyday business man.

The talk was followed by a discussion participated in by Stephen Togwell, Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, Rev. Dr. W. O. Snodgrass and John Valiant, and the pastor, Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp.

After the addresses, violin and piano selections were rendered by Vincent Sokol, during which refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

The committee in charge of the arrangements consisted of Andrew Lukins, John Valiant, Julius J. Stahl and William Warren, the president of the association, who presided at the evening's meeting.

ATTRACTIONS AT WOOD'S.

Many Events to Please the Crowd at the Old Campbell Clubhouse.

Thanksgiving Day was celebrated at the old Campbell Club House on the Metuchen turnpike all day Thursday. A special list of attractions were arranged by L. D. Wood, the proprietor. In the pig chasing contest Robert T. Burns, of Dunellen, won the pig and in the pigeon shoot, Harold Snyder, of this city, won the prize, a $5 gold piece for shooting the largest number of birds. He shot twenty-two out of a possible twenty-five. There were numerous other events to make the day pass pleasantly. A large number of people were present from this city, New Brunswick and Dunellen.

T. A. B. Event.

The annual Thanksgiving reception and dance of the T. A. B. Society of St. Mary's Catholic Church was held Wednesday evening in the society's hall on West Fourth street. There was about three hundred people present and the affair was a great success. The committee in charge of the affair composed, Richard Birmingham, Thomas Carty, George Somers, John Longworth, Thomas O'Keefe, Clarence Waldron, Michael O'Keefe, William Owens and Clinton Shannon. Refreshments were served.

Proud Distinctions.

Harvey K. Dosné, son of Chief of the Fire Department T. O. Dosne, has been winning much distinction by his work in his class as well as in athletics in Rutgers College, New Brunswick. He has been elected vice president of the Sophomore class and in a recent athletic contest won a handsome medal for being the victor in a 120 yard dash.

Thanksgiving at Muhlenberg.

Thanksgiving Day was observed in a quiet manner at the hospital. The patients who were forced to remain at the institution were remembered with good things.

—The glee, banjo and mandolin clubs of Princeton University will give a concert at the Casino on Friday night, December 11.

—Miss Lillian Mesroll has given up her position as saleswoman in one of the local stores and accepted a similar position with a dry goods firm at Somerville.

MISS KIZZIE DeMOTT, A BRIDE

MARRIED TO J. RAYMOND LAMBERT AT HOME CEREMONY.

Miss Kizzie DeMott, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry DeMott, and J. Raymond Lambert, both of North Plainfield, were married last Thursday at the home of the bride, Rev. Edwin L. Earp, pastor of Grace M. E. Church, officiating. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of friends and relatives of the couple.

Belle DeMott, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Miss Addie Giddis, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Miss Mattie Perrine, of Martinsville and Miss May Conroy, of the borough, were flower girls. Clifford B. Everett, of Westfield, was best man. The ushers were Clarence Line, cousin of the groom and Dr. E. A. Giddis, a cousin of the bride. The bridesmaid was gowned in white crepe de chine, trimmed with white applique. The maid of honor wore white silk organdie trimmed with white silk applique. The flower girls wore white mulle over white satin. They carried carnations.

The house was decorated with green and white with honeysuckle and smilax entwined. The bride was given in marriage by her father. A wedding supper was served at a late hour after which Mr. and Mrs. Lambert left for Washington, D. C. where they will spend their honeymoon. Upon their return they will reside in North Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Lambert received a large number of gifts. The bride's gift to her maid of honor was a ring set with an emerald and pearls. The groom presented stick pins to his best man and ushers.

MARRIED AT THE RECTORY

MISS AMY DELANOIX, OF THIS CITY, BRIDE OF E.B. SMACK, LONG BRANCH.

Miss Amy Delanoix, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Delanoix, of East Seventh street, and E. Boyd Smack, of Long Branch, were married Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the rectory of St. Joseph's Church, North Plainfield, by Rev. Father Miller. The couple was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Greer, of Grove street.

After the wedding an informal reception was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Greer, and later the bride and groom left for New York. They will live at Long Branch, where Mr. Smack holds a position as a church organist. The bride is a soprano of much note. She took a leading part in "The Pirates of Penzance," given in the Casino several months ago. Mr. Smack and Mr. Greer are cousins.

HONEYMAN - SMITH WEDDING

MISS MINNIE SMITH BECOMES WIFE OF ALBERT DARBY HONEYMAN.

Miss Minnie Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Smith, of 345 Watchung avenue, and Albert Darby Honeyman, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Newton Honeyman, of 339 East Second street, were quietly married Thursday morning at 10 o'clock at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. George W. Taylor, 344 East Second street. Only the immediate relatives of the couple and a few intimate friends were present.

Mrs. George W. Taylor was matron of honor and George W. Taylor was best man. The ceremony was performed by the groom's pastor, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed Church.

Miss Ada Wilbur, of Fisher's Island, N. Y., presided at the organ and she rendered Schumann's "Traumerei," and the Mendelssohn wedding march.

The decorations in the parlor and hall were green and white, while in the dining room, the prevailing colors were pink and white. At noon a sumptuous dinner was served to the bridal couple and guests and during the afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Honeyman departed on an extended wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside at 339 East Second street.

The bride has been in the employ of Hill & Shupp's for several years. The groom has been in the employ of the Standard Oil Company for a number of years. He is a member of Trinity Reformed Church. A valued present was a silver cake dish over seventy-five years old.

Wedding of Local Interest.

Many older residents of the town will be interested in the marriage of Miss Alice Hammond Drake, daughter of Simeon J. Drake, to Alcaeo Clark Robinson, which will take place December 8 at the residence of the bride's father, 540 Madison avenue, New York. Miss Drake is a granddaughter of Rev. Simeon J. Drake, who was pastor of the First Baptist Church for more than forty years. Miss M. Blanche Todd, another granddaughter of Mr. Drake, will be the bride's attendant.

THE HIGHBALL IN WAR.

Potency of the American Tairet Remedy Illustrated in the Panama Revolution.

Our esteemed neighbor, Panama, places the world under emphatic obligations by producing something novel in the way of revolutions. The government-al convulsion the other day was due, not to a general uprising or disaffection in the army, but to the untamed thirst of Gen. Varquez Cobos, relates the Philadelphia North American.

The brilliant man was led by some light-hearted person to tamper with the American highball. Possessing a temperament attuned to the innocuous beverages of France and Spain, he made a fatal error in attempting to harmonize with it the seductive drink offered by "el Americano," and the resulting discord was frightful.

After the first one the general was more impressed with the dignity and power of his position than he had ever been before in his career. After the second he decided that he was the savior of his country, or ought to be. The third brought to him visions of an oppressed Panama, and the fourth and fifth fired his martial heart to deeds of patriotic valor.

Straightway he assembled the army overthrew the government, chased the governor to the woods—and fell asleep. When he awoke he was under arrest, and is still in seclusion trying to find out what happened.

MATHEMATICS AND LAUNCHING

Vast Amount of Calculation Necessary in Floating the Great Vessels.

The launch of a vessel is primarily a matter of mathematics. In a ship of immense size it calls for a great amount of calculation before the first step is taken in the actual work, says Franklin Matthews, in Outing. In the first place the specific gravity of the vessel must be figured out so as to allow for the various strains to which the hull is subjected on its slanting journey into the water, with its sudden plunge as the bow drops from the ways. An enormous amount of data must be collected to fix the center of gravity. The weight of all the material that has gone into the vessel up to the time of the launching, the distribution of this weight, the weight of chains and anchors and other material placed on board preparatory to the launch, must all be considered. When the center of gravity is fixed the successful shipbuilder knows just how to build his launching ways, and just where to strength-en them. He knows, then, by a little calculation, how long each part of the vessel will be subjected to certain strains and how best to prepare for them. He can figure almost to the second how long the ship will be in sliding into the water.

ADAPTING FOREIGNERS.

How the Little Children Begin to Acquire Knowledge in the United States.

The foreign parents of East side children realize that knowledge—especially knowledge of the language—is power. In the class room, as on the street, the conflicting racial characteristics of the children of different nationalities, the influence of heredity, home life and environment are all strikingly revealed, says Everybody's Magazine. The teachers soon come to realize that the surest way to spur the Jewish boys on to renewed efforts in their studies is to tell them the contrasting stories of the positions of power and wealth which await boys who have the education to fill them, stories of other boys who have grown up to fill such positions.

The dreamy, indolent Italian children can be reached by an appeal to their love of pure scholarship, their appreciation of the artistic, of rhythm and music, of the beauty of form and color. With nothing in their unlovely lives to awaken a spark of artistic creativeness, once given a glimpse of artistic procedure in the modeling and drawing classes they display that marvelous talent for creation which is their heritage of race and which has outlived the degradation of fifty generations. All the children of the East side, especially the Hungarians, have a wonderful gift of language.

Slow Repair to Swift Destruction.

An indication of the enormous cost of time as well as money involved in attempts to repair the damage done by forest destruction is given by Mr. George W. Rafter, in Water Supply Paper No. 80, of the Geological Survey. Concerning the proposition to reforest the Croton watershed, whereby, it is calculated, the daily supply of New York city water could be increased 75,000,000 gallons, Mr. Rafter says that 120 years would be needed to produce the full effect of forestation, and by the expiration of that time the original cost, compounded at three per cent. interest, would amount to about $780,000,000.

LITERARY.

While so many American trusts are suffering from locomotor ataxia, general paralysis, and a complication of diseases, Coal and its brother Steel are strutting majestically in Germany. A Steel Trust, in the form of a joint stock company, for each constituent concern of which is fixed a percentage of the whole product, has been formed for five years. Every member must pay five shillings for every ton it produces in excess of its allotment, and will get the same sum for every ton less than its allotment. The Coal Trust will go hand in hand with the Steel Trust against foreign trade. Five years is a long time in the life of a Trust. "It is beautiful," said the Fairy Prince of the Rainbow, "but, excuse me, will it last?" Anyhow, these German trusts are nice for Protection Joe Chamberlain to hammer on.—Everybody's Magazine for December.

An issue of extraordinary beauty and interest will be the Christmas (December) Metropolitan Magazine. While space will not permit more than a brief mention of the more striking features of this great holiday issue, a sufficient number of items from its contents may be quoted to give some hint of its charm. This number will be in effect a demonstration of the advancement of reproductive methods and the art of printing. It will be profusely illustrated in color. There will be some seventy-five pictures, most of which will be of full-page size. A Pre-Raphaelite, George Wharton Edwards, artist and author, contributes a short story, charmingly illustrated with color drawings by himself. Mr. Edwards has chosen a theme with which he is well acquainted. His story deals with Holland at Christmastide and is full of the out-door freshness and healthful gayety of the Dutch at the time when "Sint Nic'laas" holds sway. Is is a typical Christmas tale of the bright, laughing, human kind.

Our general conclusion is that while recent theories have done good service in directing attention to the early determination of sex in the egg, those of them which have attempted to connect this conclusion with the assumption of the separation of male from female primordia in the germ-cells have yet to establish their point of view. The egg, as far as sex is concerned, appears to be in a sort of balanced state, and the conditions to which it is exposed, even when it is not fully formed, may determine which sex it will produce. It may be a futile attempt to try to discover any one influence that has a deciding influence for all kinds of eggs. Here, as elsewhere in organic nature, different stimuli may determine in different species which of the possibilities that exist shall become realized.—T. H. Morgan in the Popular Science Monthly.

The Christmas Scribner's is a sumptuous number, filled with fiction gay and bright in its character, with remarkable poems, which prove conclusively that poetry has not gone into eclipse, and with artistic achievements notable for their beauty and variety. Color printing has never reached a higher point than in this issue. There are eight full-pages, "Elsie Child in a Garden," by Jessie Wilcox Smith, a story in pictures reproducing exactly the original paintings; the frontispiece by Maxfield Parrish, the many illustrations of Dutch scenes by Penfield, and the beautiful cover by J. G. Sommer, are also beautifully reproduced in color. Another artistic feature is the reproduction of Sargent's latest wall painting in the Boston Public Library, with an article about it.

PASSING OF THE P. NAMA.

Their Vogue in England and America the Past Summers Merely a Craze.

Strangely enough Panama hats are not much affected by Englishmen resident in the lands where they are produced. Their vogue in England and the United States for the past two summers was merely a craze. They were worn by many persons who should have known better, says the London Outlook. Panama hats go naturally with white duck clothing and soft shirts. Cricketing or boating flannels will do well enough, but a stiff linen collar or patent-leather boots bring discredit upon themselves or upon the Panama hat. Neither does the Panama go well with a fair complexion and light-colored hair. Your swarthy skin and dark hair carry the Panama best. Gilpin, who would wear them should have well-formed heads and a saucy air. Strict decorum and the Panama hat go not well together. Fat men who perspire steadily and readily should eschew them, for fat on the skull not wear the much longer. The Panama hat is dying. Any specimens which cost three guineas or over may be kept as a curiosity. Under that price they may be burned or converted into baskets.

THE WOMAN OF THIRTY.

At That Age She No Longer Masquerades and Has Reached Her Highest Capacity.

Keith Clark remarks in the Reader that when one knows the age of a woman one knows the woman. The very fact that she permits you to know her age exhibits her character. She no longer masquerades. She has lost a certain uncertainty, an evanescent delicacy, that was irresistible charm. Women, like philosophy, are divided into two classes, the knowable and the unknowable. Also like philosophy, it is the unknowable woman who is the speculable. Therefore to get her at her highest capacity, she must be unmarried and about 30.

The married woman presents certain inescapable telltale data. She has children, and those children have apparent ages, two facts which go far in determining her annals. If she is unmarried and not "about 30," she is under 30 again an indefinite fact. Being "about 30" is indefinite. She may be more or less. No one hazards a guess. There is a delightful vagueness in being "about 30." It is familiar to go with dates, and many of us who from our youth up have felt no attachment for dates can forgive the unattached their confessed indifference.

THE CIRCUIT BARBER.

Takes Temporary Quarters in Each Village Twice a Week and Does His Work.

The circuit preacher everybody has heard of, but the circuit barber is surely something new, says the Detroit Free Press.

"Out on the road the other day," said a man who had been out painting signs in the small towns, "I saw something unusual. Of course, I always read every sign I come to; it is my business instinct.

"On one front window of an empty, battered old house, at the end of a village street I read, in great white letters, the word 'Saturday.' Wondering what this meant, I glanced at the next window, on a side porch, and there were printed on the panes of glass these words: 'Shave, five cents—hair cut, ten cents.'

"It puzzled me to connect the empty house and the word 'Saturday' with the other notification. Then I decided that it meant that some traveling barber would receive men of the village and the farmers round about on Saturday. In the village I was told that my guess was correct. The barber was a young farmer in the neighborhood; and on two other days in the week he visited two other villages in the country, on the same errand of scissors, lather and razor."

TWO-FOOT DRAGON-FLY.

The Longest Insect Known Is One That Is a Native of Borneo.

Which is the largest insect is not an easy matter to decide, as the question of shape has to be taken into account, says Nature.

The longest known insect is undoubtedly the stick insect of Borneo. Specimens 13 inches in length have been captured. It is an interesting example of mimicry, resembling in a remarkable manner a piece of rough stick. On the bough of a tree it is extremely difficult to distinguish between the insect and the bark.

Borneo is also the home of one of the largest species of dragon-fly. A specimen of the sub family Aeschna measures six inches and a half from wing to wing, and is endowed with a correspondingly strong body.

Another giant insect is the Hercules beetle, found in the West Indies, which rivals a sparrow in size, and might turn the scale against one in weight.

Some tropical butterflies measure from 10 to 12 inches across their wings, as does the Atlas moth of Southern Asia.

The largest insect of antiquity was a species of dragon-fly, which measured more than two feet across the expanded wings. It flourished during the carboniferous period.

Density of City Population.

Although there is an average area of about three and a half acres on Manhattan Island where the density of population is at the rate of 630,000 to the square mile, yet the city of Paris shows a far greater average density of population than New York, the figures for Paris being 79,300 per square mile, and for New York city proper 40,000 per square mile. The average density of London's population is 37,000 per square mile, and that of Berlin 67,500.

HIGH SCHOOL'S FIVE DEFEATED

IN SNAPPY GAME Y.M.C.A. AGGREGATION IS VICTORIOUS.

A lively contested and exciting basketball game between the Y. M. C. A. five and a combination of present and past members of the High School team, yesterday afternoon, ended in a victory for the Y. M. C. A. by a score of 18 to 16. Sharp and snappy play characterized the game throughout, Cahoone and Denton especially having a battle royal at centre.

The score at the end of the first half was 10 to 9 in favor of the High School. In the second half it was even up all the time until the last two minutes. Two goals from fouls proved enough to bring victory to the association.

Summary:

Y. M. C. A.—Hallock, Minor and Collier, forwards; Cahoone, centre; Scull and Thompson, guards. High School—Long and Smith, forwards; Denton, centre; Neal and Heinecke, guards. Goals from the floor, Hallock, Collier 3, Cahoone 2, Scull 2, Long, Smith 2, Denton 3, Neal, Heinecke. Goals from fouls, Long and Denton. Referee, C. Heywood. Timer, Doane. Scorer, Pittinger. Time, 15-min. halves.

A. O. U. W. ENTERTAINMENT.

Members of Central Lodge Hold Thanksgiving Night Affair.

Members of Central Lodge, No. 48, Ancient Order United Workmen, after the regular meeting, last night, were entertained by several artists in music, dialect and magical wonders. During the meeting, preceding the entertainment, J. W. A. Bauersachs, a member of the finance committee of the Grand Lodge, announced that there would be no assessment for December.

The entertainment consisted of banjo and mandolin selections by Joe Loughead, piano and guitar selections and dialect stories by Fred Finnigan, after which Prof. Struck, of New York, entertained with tricks of all kinds. Harry Warnock, the caterer, served refreshments after the entertainment. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of L. J. Spicer, who gave a short address of welcome; H. R. Thorn and Theodore Mason.

FRACTURED HER ARM.

Miss Lucy Otterson Fell From Her Horse and Was Injured.

While Miss Lucy Otterson, of Evergreen avenue, was riding a favorite saddle horse to the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, yesterday afternoon, the animal stumbled and fell on a grade just below the clubhouse and threw the rider, both going down together. In the fall Miss Otterson sustained a fracture of the upper part of the right arm. Club members hastened to assist Miss Otterson. She was taken to her home, where Dr. Hedges was summoned. Today Miss Otterson is resting comfortably and no serious results from the accident are anticipated.

THANKSGIVING DAY IN THE CHURCHES

Union Services in the First Presbyterian Church Attended by Local People.

ADDRESSES ON THE DAY

EPISCOPAL AND ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCHES OBSERVE THE DAY.

Rev. Mr. Zeltz Holds Service in the Crescent Avenue Church—Talk by Rev. Dr. Chambliss at East Third Street Chapel.

Union Service.

Union Thanksgiving services were held Thursday morning at the First Presbyterian Church at which time Rev. Charles L. Godorich preached an interesting sermon on the reasons why the people of this country should offer thanks. He pointed out that we have been singularly blessed as a nation since the first Thanksgiving services were held by the grateful Puritans in New England. This nation's great progress, the pastor believed, was largely due to the fact that this is a Christian nation with Christian institutions.

Rev. George Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, gave out the hymns; Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed Church, read the scriptures; Rev. Dr. Ewin L. Earp, pastor of the Grace M. E. Church, delivered the prayer. Rev. Dr. W. O. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. Church, delivered the closing prayer and Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis pronounced the benediction. The singing by the regular church quartette was exceptionally fine.

Masses in R. C. Churches.

Special masses were held in the Catholic churches in this city Thursday morning. At St. Mary's Church the special Thanksgiving mass was held at 8 o'clock, Rev. Father Andrew F. Egan officiating. The attendance was very large and the singing was especially fine. At St. Joseph's Church the mass for Thanksgiving was held at 9 o'clock at which Rev. Father Joseph Miller, the pastor, officiated. All the children of the congregation were seated in the center of the church and all the singing was rendered by them. The attendance at the North Plainfield services was large.

Episcopal Churches.

Simple services were held at the Episcopal churches. Holy Cross Church was decorated appropriately to the day with flowers, vegetables and grain. A Thanksgiving sermon, was preached by the rector, Rev. W. M. Downey, at 10:30. At the Church of the Heavenly Rest morning prayer was held. Rev. W. V. Dawson preached on "Liberty" at St. Stephen's Church and Rev. E. V. Stevenson conducted regular Thanksgiving day services at Grace Church.

East Third Street Chapel.

Special Thanksgiving services were held at night at the East Third Street Chapel under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the chapel. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist Church, was in charge and he gave an appropriate talk, after which various pieces present took part, offering prayer or testimony. There was special music and more than ordinary interest was manifested.

Crescent Avenue Presbyterian.

There was an unusually large attendance at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, in the morning, when a Thanksgiving service was held. Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor, preached an appropriate sermon. He read the President's proclamation, after which he dwelt at some length on the importance of being thankful for all the blessings of the past year. He spoke of the great prosperity of the country and its new territory and urged his hearers to unite in a prayer for continued blessings during the coming year.

During the service several appropriate hymns were sung and the quartette choir rendered three anthems. The offering received was for the Plainfield Relief Association, and a goodly sum was given.

I. C. T.'s Jolly Time.

The annual Thanksgiving reception and dance given by the I. C. T. Club was held in its rooms on North avenue Wednesday evening. The affair was arranged by a committee composed of Edmund Texier, William Waters, Leonce Texier, Burlin Banks and George Coes. The music was provided by Charles Suhr.

—Eugene O'Reilly, of this city, furnished music Friday night at a dance given on the John Sharp estate at Annandale. There was a very large number of guests present.

—According to a recent issue of the Newark Evening News the mortality rate from consumption is lowest in Warren County, 121 being the number of deaths per 10,000 population.

NEW PASTOR FOR PARK AVE. BAPTISTS

Rev. A. E. Finn Given An Unanimous Call to Succeed Rev. J. W. Richardson.

SKETCH OF HIS CAREER

GENERALLY BELIEVED THAT PASTOR-ELECT WILL ACCEPT.

Said to be An Energetic Man—Is a Graduate of Bucknell—Has Charge of Church at Cherryville, Hunterdon County.

Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor of the Baptist Church, of Cherryville, Hunterdon County, has been extended a unanimous call to become the pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, succeeding Rev. John Wilbur Richardson, who resigned nine months ago to accept the pastorate of the Baptist Church at Stamford, Conn.

The action was taken at a special meeting of the church on Wednesday night, after the congregation received the report of the pulpit committee having charge of the selection of a pastor.

Mr. Finn, who is thirty-five years of age, was graduated from Bucknell University and completed his preparation for the ministry at Crozier Theological Seminary. From 1894 to 1897 he was the pastor of the Baptist Church at St. Ephraim, near Haddonfield, and since 1897 he has been at Cherryville. He is married and has a son two years old. He has received high recommendations of well-known Baptist ministers, including Dr. H. G. Weston, of Crozier Theological Seminary. He is spoken of as an energetic and painstaking pastor and preacher.

The clerk of the church, Charles Dayton, was instructed to convey the call to Mr. Finn. It is believed that he will accept.

The committee having charge of the selection of a pastor consists of T. I. Runyon, chairman; T. H. Cuming, secretary; Nelson Runyon, David M. Runyon, John H. Doane, Charles Dayton and E. C. Treadwell. T. I. Runyon was moderator of the meeting and T. H. Cuming presented the report for the committee.

An effort will be made to have Mr. Finn enter upon his new duties at an early date, owing to the unsettled condition of the church. Mr. Finn preached here on Sunday, October 11, and he made a favorable impression.

FRANK O. REINHART DEFEATED

H. R. STOCKTON WINS TROPHY IN THE HILLSIDE GOLF COMPETITION.

There were a few events of interest at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, Thursday, despite the fact that there were many attractions elsewhere. In the morning H. R. Stockton defeated Frank O. Reinhart in the final competition for the green's committee cup-hard, and in the afternoon he won the trophy by defeating E. P. Goodwin by 6 up and 5 to go. Another event of the morning was the final play for the Holiday cup. This was won by E. B. Shoemaker, by default, no other players putting in an appearance to compete for the trophy.

A third event of the day was a competition for a box of golf balls as a prize. H. R. Stockton was the winner. The scores posted in this competition were as follows:

H. R. Stockton, 84, 4—80; E. B. Shoemaker, 101, 20—81; S. H. Patterson, 108, 27—81; E. P. Goodwin, 93, 10—83; C. C. Burke, Sr., 99, 16—83; Dudley H. Barrows, 89, 6—83; H. D. Hibbard, 92, 7—85; H. R. Munger, 95, 10—85; Walter Peterson, 96, 6—92.

Accident at Campbell's.

William Stapelton, an employe of Campbell's Press Company works, was injured Wednesday afternoon by falling from a ladder while working about some machinery. He received a severe gash in the arm and sprained the muscles of his leg.

Reception to New Pastor.

A reception will be tendered Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist Church, in the church parlors Thursday evening, December 10.

MRS. STILLMAN DEAD AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

Widow of the Late Dr. Chas. H. Stillman Passes Away at Daughter's Home.

SHE WAS EIGHTY-THREE

LIFE-LONG MEMBER OF SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

Sketch of Her Career—Funeral Last Saturday at Mrs. Myers' Home—Rev. Dr. Lewis and Rev. Mr. Shaw Officiate.

Mrs. Mary Starr Stillman, widow of the late Dr. Charles H. Stillman, who died late Wednesday afternoon at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers in East Seventh street, following a brief illness, was buried last Sturday afternoon. She was in her eighty-third year at the time of her death.

Mrs. Stillman was born in Norfolk, Conn., and at the age of sixteen years she moved with her parents to Hamilton, N. Y., at which place she was married July 5, 1842, to Dr. Stillman. Previous to her marriage she taught school. Afterward she and her husband came to Plainfield. Dr. Stillman was the "father" of the free public school system in New Jersey. When he came to this State there was not a public school in it and through his efforts the first one was established in 1847 and in 1867 the first public school was established in this city. He was Mayor one term, 1872-1874.

Mrs. Stillman was a life long and devoted member of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church. She possessed true womanliness and throughout her life she was always a help to others. Her husband died about twenty-two years ago. Surviving Mrs. Stillman are two sons, Thomas B. Stillman, professor of chemistry at Stevens Institute, and William M. Stillman, Esq., of this city. She also leaves a daughter, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, of East Seventh street. Another son, Dr. Charles Stillman died some years ago.

THE PARK'S DELIGHTFUL DANCE

SOCIETY FOLK ENJOY A SOCIAL TIME MARKING THE THANKSGIVING.

The first formal dance given by the members of the Park Club since the reopening of the club house recently, was held Wednesday evening. It was in the nature of a Thanksgiving reception at which there were about four hundred people, a large number of whom were from out of town. The affair was successful.

The ball room was decorated in evergreens and smilax with chrysanthemums. The arrangements were in charge of the entertainment committee composed of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Hallock, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford McGee, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCutcheon and C. E. Murray. The large attendance and the success of the affair shows conclusively that the club has entered upon a career of much importance socially. Its newly enlarged parlors and ball room make it compare favorably with the Casino as a place for holiday society events.

FINE THANKSGIVING DINNER

YOUNG MEN ENJOY THE ASSOCIATION'S HOSPITALITY AND HAVE JOLLY TIME.

The young men of Plainfield who are away from home were given a big Thanksgiving dinner Thursday at 6 o'clock in the small hall of the Y. M. C. A. building. Those present included men from six States, and one representative each of Newfoundland, Toronto, Can., Sweden, Scotland and England. There were twenty-five wanderers to tell about themselves and their homes when called upon by the toast-master, Kenneth Robbie.

The affair was in charge of the social work committee of the Y. M. C. A., J. W. Gawett, chairman. The banquet room was decorated with Japanese lanterns, flowers and bunting. Assisting in the serving were Miss Lantz, Miss Mary T. Draper Miss Bessie Fitz Randolph, Miss Ernestine Smith, Miss Mildred Green and Miss Green

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 6, "Lost and Helpless," Matt. xviii. 12-14; "Without Christ"—Text, John xiv. 37-43; Heb. iii, 12.

"Take heed lest there shall be in any one of you an evil heart of unbelief, in falling away from the living God."

"They loved the glory that is of men more than the glory that is of God."

It is not so very long ago that much was said of the depravity of human nature and the desperate wickedness of the heart. The creeds of most of the churches still have articles similar to that of the Methodist Episcopal church, which speaks of "original or birth sin" as "the corruption of the nature of every man that naturally is engendered of the offspring of Adam, whereby man is very far gone from original righteousness and of his own nature inclined to evil, and that continually." Little, however, is heard at the present time of the evil of human nature and the lost condition of men. The attention of the people has been turned from the study of soul life and spirit nature so completely by the study of material things and the intoxication of discovery, invention, trade and luxury has so absorbed all interest that the true condition and nature of man have been largely lost sight of. It has become about that in the pulpits of the most orthodox denominations preachers may declare without challenge and the daily press publish without comment that "goodness and not sin is natural to man." The human heart is first and fundamentally good. Sin is as unnatural to the heart as disease to the body. God then is as congenial to man as sunlight is to the plant." Indeed! And really this is wonderful! Since when has man so gloriously and wonderfully changed?

This gospel is not the gospel of Jesus Christ. No wonder men are not made better under its preaching. No wonder that ritualism spreads. Under such preaching the minister may well become a priestly performer of churchly rites and symbolic ceremonies and burning incense take the place of saintly prayers.

The need is for prophetic preachers of righteousness and great spiritual truths. Men are wicked. The heart is sinful and deceitful. Get down among men and listen to their talk and watch their doings anywhere in city or country, among the rich or poor, and there will be unnatural and goodness is natural" if you can!

One needs not to go into the slums to know that men are lost and sinners exceedingly against God and their fellow men. The will go among men anywhere with open heart to Christ grow heartsick at the sights and sounds. Men are desperately lost, and there is no power to save them but in Jesus Christ. The recovery must be to love unto God and purity. No culture, no wealth, no philosophy, can cure this disease. Men are as corrupt now as in the days of Isaiah, as in the days of Christ.

Our duty is to bring them a gospel of holiness, a cure for sin, and not a proclamation of their natural goodness.

It is true now as when Jesus spoke the words:

"Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish."

Leave Tomorrow With God.

Would it not be better to leave tomorrow with God? That is what is troubling men — tomorrow's temptations, tomorrow's difficulties, tomorrow's burdens, tomorrow's duties. Martin Luther in his autobiography says: "I have one preacher that I love better than any other on earth. It is my little tame robin, which preaches to me daily. I put his crumbs upon my window sill, and he comes in sight. He hops on the sill when he wants his supply and takes as much as he desires to satisfy his need. From thence he always hops to a little tree close by and lifts up his voice to God and sings his carol in private and gratitude, tucks his little head under his wing and goes fast to sleep and leaves tomorrow to look after itself. He is the best preacher that I have on earth."—H. W. Webb-Pepioe.

The Reign of Love.

To nature God is law; to man God is and must be love. For matter can be ruled, sustained, molded, glorified by law only, but man is governed, uplifted, brought to his best estate only by the manifestation of an infinite love. To him law is an incident; it is not nor can it be by him regarded as a primary or an ultimate condition of spiritual well being. A good man obeys the law of nature and of his own well being, but finds not his goodness. Such obedience may be his life, but it is not his virtue or his exaltation. To put on the bloom of grace, to be morally excellent, a human spirit must come under the reign of love divine. The realm of ideal manhood is there love rules. The beginning and the end of our perfected humanity is the reign of love.—Evangelist.

Answered Prayer.

Among the incidents there is none greater than that of answered prayer. How does God answer it? By law? In law? Above law? We do not know, nor how to pray as we ought do we know. We are sure that God must somehow respond to His child when he cries to Him, and we are quite as sure that prayer at its best can be little more than that which Whittier declares, "Thy will be done." It is a peaceful condition of mind to come to, and the will best back the billows of doubt and distrust and misgiving as from nowhere else.—Baptist Commonwealth.

By the Radiance of God.

Keep your conduct abreast of your conscience and very soon your conscience will be illumined by the radiance of God.—W. M. Taylor, D. D.

A BIG TRANSITION

Wake Island in the Pacific and Its Interesting History.

Reclaimed Five Years Ago, It Is Now Owned by the Greatest Nation on Earth and Upholds the Great Pacific Cable.

One of the remarkable transitions which has resulted from the progress and development of the United States during the past few years has been the elevation of a lonely little coral reef and sand patch in the midst of the great Pacific to the dignity of a cable station. Wake island has long been known to navigators of the southern Pacific as a lowlying coral reef island not discernible more than five miles away in the day time and not at all at night, and hence proving a serious menace to ships.

When the United States came into control of the Philippines the need of a cable to the new possessions was realized. Gen. Greene, while en route to Manila in 1898, visited Wake island and, finding it uninhabited planted a record of possession and raised the flag of the United States. Realizing the value of the island as a landing place for the Pacific cable which was under consideration at that time, formal possession was taken of it the following year. It is from nine to 20 miles in circumference, according to wind and tide. The larger part of it is a lagoon. Vegetation is scarce, there is no fresh water, and the only food to be found consists of a few birds and plenty of fish.

LANDING THE CABLE AT GUAM.

It would be hard to imagine a more desolate region than this island. The finishing touch to the weirdness and forsaken loneliness of the place is given by the group of rough wooden crosses placed by shipwrecked sailors over the graves of shipmates. One of the crosses marks the grave of the captain of the ship wrecked on the reef about 30 years ago. The crew, all but the captain and one man, went to explore Bird Island, which is inclosed by the same reef, and on their return found their captain murdered and accused their shipmate of the crime. On the departure of the men from the island it was decided to leave the murderer behind, and in spite of his protestations this was done. He was eventually rescued in an insane condition by a passing vessel. The other graves are those of a part of the crew of an American bark who died of scurvy after being shipwrecked on the island.

The laying of the cable upon the island was accomplished in a manner similar to that which marked the work at Guam, which is the next cable landing station towards Manila. The great cable was coiled upon pontoons and brought into shore as closely as possible. The cable was then floated ashore by means of barrels. A party of American blue jackets assisted the cable hands in the hard work of getting the cable into position.. This cable station will be a lonely post, and yet the throb of life of the outside world will be felt. Hawaii, on the west and Guam on the east will be able to speak across the waters because Wake island will be the faithful link between the two.

GRAVES OF SAILORS ON WAKE ISLAND.

Again we say: What a transition. Heretofore owneriess, now owned by the greatest nation upon the earth. Heretofore only a barren lonely spot, now the connecting link between San Francisco on the west and Manila on the east, and the place which will daily feel the throb of life of the twentieth century. Heretofore a menace to navigation, now a responsible agent in the commercial and political activities of the world. Wake island hence forth is more than a graveyard for shipwrecked sailors.

Gordon McKay.

Gordon McKay died October 19, 1903, at his home at Newport, R. I. His inventions had a most marked influence upon the boot and shoe industry of the country. They saved the doors of the cobbler; but they supported large American factories. Mr. McKay peddled the stock of his first corporation from door to door. From the payment of the very first dividend the stockholders considered themselves wealthy men. Everyone who made American-made shoes paid tribute to Mr. McKay in the form of royalties.

Patent Right.

The owner of a patent, in selling the patented article, may reserve to himself, as an ungranted part of his monopoly, the right to fix the price at which it may be sold by jobbers, or dealers purchasing from them; and a dealer who buys with knowledge of such restriction is bound thereby, and may be treated as an infringer if he sells in violation thereof.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 6—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic—What the heroes of faith teach us. Heb. xi. 1-6.

The eleventh chapter of Hebrews is one of great interest and inspiration. Here we have recorded a long list of the ancient patriarchs, whose lives were in harmony with the will of God and who because of their faith in Him made their lives count and "obtained a good report." Heroes indeed and heroes of faith! Not by might nor by power, but by faith in God, they "subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of aliens." As heroic deeds inspire to emulation, so also should the faith of heroes, and from a study of this chapter our faith in God through Jesus Christ should be more firmly established.

The faith of these ancient heroes possessed several important characteristics. (1) It was faith in God. The faith defined and illustrated here is not distinctive Christian faith. Saving faith in Jesus Christ is something entirely different. This was faith in God, in His power and in His promises. Such faith always preceeds Christian faith. It should exist in every human heart and prepare the way for saving faith in Christ. (2) It was a practical faith. Some religious faith is not practical. It is not applied to the daily affairs of life. We believe, but do not live by our beliefs. Not so was it with these Old Testament worthies. They based their lives upon their faith. Dangers, difficulties, trials and afflictions had no terrors for them when their faith was in God. Our faith should be practical. It should sustain us in difficulty, inspire us to duty and comfort us in trial and affliction. A fruitless faith is a worthless faith. (3) It was an adaptable faith. The experiences of some of these worthies were exactly alike, yet faith in God was adaptable to every experience. Nor is there any condition or experience in life where faith in God will not sustain us. It is able to meet the wants and needs of every human heart and life.

The numbers of the heroes of faith are also worthy of our attention. Many young people have the erroneous idea that only a few of the great men of earth have been men of faith. The impression somehow prevails that religious faith has been for the most part exercised by children and women. But nothing could be further from the truth. The list mentioned here. All of Israel's great men from Abel to Malachi are included in this list of faith heroes. Nor has the Jewish nation been peculiar in this respect. The world's truly great men have all believed in God. Therefore we should not hesitate to believe and to act up to our faith. "Seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith."

BIBLE READINGS.

Gen. iv, 4; v, 21-24; vi, 11-22; xii, 1-5; xxii, 1-19; Ex. ii, 1-15; Josh. vi, 12-21; Matt. ix, 27-31; xvii, 14-21; Gal. ii, 20.

Enlargement.

Let us increase our working forces. Every manufacturing plant when it decides to do more business adds to its horse power. The soul power of the Christian Endeavor society is the active principle. Enlarge your active membership. Every real active member won is a new force added to the dynamics of the kingdom of heaven. Do not overwork the story of Gideon and his 300. Do not teach that God prefers to work with the few rather than the many. Ten thousand Gideonites are better than 300—only see that they are Gideonites. Let us get away forever from the heresy that a Christian Endeavor society is a little club of like minded young people who meet together once a week for a pleasant little conclave of a religious character. A good Endeavor society may be very small, but it is always as large as its field allows.—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark in President's Annual Address at Denver Convention.

Worth the Cost.

The Epworth Leaguers cheerfully footed bills to the amount of $9,000 for their recent international gathering at Detroit, and confidently counted it "worth every cent of it." We have not seen the figures of the Denver committee, but we know they paid every item with a glad heart and felt that they were putting their money where it would bring large and lasting returns for the advancement of the cause of Jesus Christ.—Rev. H. Clements in "Empire State Notes."

Denver Snap Shots.

The man who has been thinking that the sun of Christian Endeavor is setting will have to think again. We are not looking back upon our Egypts, but we are looking forward, with our faces toward the land of promise.—Rev. James Alexander.

The best way to get new members into the Christian Endeavor society is to have a first-class prayer meeting.—H. A. Kimports.

The teacher is the one who "wakes up;" the scholar is the one who responds. Let our motto be, "A junior society connected with every Endeavor society."—Rev. Amos R. Wells.

We keep the idea strongly to the front that Christian Endeavor is applicable to every denomination.—Rev. Dr. F. E. Clark.

A plan in the Christian Endeavor World is good, but a plan in the Christian Endeavor member is better.—William Shaw.

BIG CROWDS WITNESS THE FOOTBALL GAMES

Alis Club's Eleven Triumphs Over Has-Beens in Exciting Game, Final Score, 6 to 0.

O. F. C.'S TWO CONTESTS

BROOKLYN TEAM MEETS DEFEAT AND SOMERVILLE AGGREGATION WINS.

Alis Does Some Good Work—"Bossy" Reiter, of Princeton, as a Referee—Summaries in the Several Matches.

Alis Won.

Alis and the Has Beens had a second football battle on Crescent Oval last Thursday afternoon and Alis again triumphed though by the narrow margin of 6 to 0. Alis scored within the first three minutes of play in the first half, but thereafter the Has-Beens steadily improved and kept the ball in the centre of the field most of the time during the remainder of the game. A big holiday crowd witnessed the contest.

Cathcart's end runs were the leading factor in scoring Alis' touchdown. Cathcart took the ball over the line and Phillips kicked goal. In the second half Alis had the ball twice on the Has-Beens' five-yard mark, but in each case the defense stiffened and prevented a touchdown. The Has-Beens found little difficulty in gaining through the line but lost the ball repeatedly on fumbles. They showed their lack of practise. "Bossy" Reiter, of Princeton football fame, refereed the match. Line-up:

Alis—Meeker and Radford, e; Pond, t; Cahoone, lg; Taylor, c; Egan, rg; Pike, rt; Cathcart, rs; Phillips, qb; Hardcastle, lhb; Waltman, rhb; Browne, fb.

Has-Beens—Goddard, re; G. Dupee, rt; Hall, rg; Cathcart and Cummings, c; Peck, lg; Ring, lt; H. Lovell and Thayer, le; Barnes, qb; Main and Cathcart, lhb; R. Lovell, rhb; C. Dupee, fb.

Touchdown—Cathcart; goal from touchdown—Phillips; referee—Reiter—umpire, Davis; linesman—Dumont; timer—Cummings; time—20 and 15 min. periods.

Brooklyn Eleven Defeated.

The Mohegan Club, claiming the championship of Brooklyn for 135-pounders, proved no match for the Orange Field Club Thursday afternoon on Orange Oval, the local eleven winning 6 to 0, very much as it pleased. Orange made two touchdowns in the first half, Smith's hurdling and end runs doing the trick. The second half was a repetition of the first except in the opening play when Emmons, for Orange, received the ball on the kick-off and was thrown for a safety behind his own goal line. He was superbly tackled by Ackerson. Trick plays worked successfully for Orange. The Brooklyn eleven failed to gain its distance once during the entire game. Smith's work was a feature, although Tobin and Eberwin also made substantial gains whenever called upon. Summary:

Orange F. C.—Emmons, le; J. McCullough, lt; Giddis, lg; Helyer, c; Day and Embleton, rg; W. McCullough, rt; Flannery, re; Hamilton, qb; Sherwin, lhb; Tobin, rhb; Smith, fb.

Mohegan A. C.—Hughes, re; Flanery, rt; Gulbert, rg; Arnold, c; Huss, lg; Ackerson, lt; Corson, le; Cerero, qb; Sampson, rhb; Abberly, lhb; Hendrick, fb.

Touchdowns—Smith, 2; goal from touchdowns — Smith; referee— Phillips; linesman—Radford; timers—McVoy and Todd.

O. F. C. Lost.

The Orange Field Club lost to Somerville at Somerville Thursday morning by a single touchdown which was made only after the hardest kind of a fight on the part of the losers. In the first half neither side scored. McClure, for Somerville, formerly of Alis, went through the line in the second period for the only score less than a minute before the half ended. The goal was not kicked and the score was 5 to 0. Four of the regular Orange team were included in the line-up owing to the failure of several of the men to put in an appearance. Line-up:

Orange F. C. Scrubs—Hock, le; Emmons, lt; J. McCullough, lg; McGue, c; W. McCullough, rg; Schuck, rt; Bird, re; W. Hamilton, qb; E. Hamilton, lhb; Shepherd, fb; Smith, rhb.

Somerville—Briggs, re; Galpin, rt; Berkaw, rg; Scully, c; Wilcox, lg; McClure, lt; Thomas, le; Barcalow, qb; Koehobe, lhb; Engen, fb; Case, rhb.

LAID CORNER-STONE OF THE SYNAGOGUE

Rev. Jos. Krauskaupf Made Address at Congregation B'nai Israel Ceremony.

MAYOR JENKINS ASSISTS

REV. DR. LEWIS AND REV. MR. LIVERMORE PARTICIPATE IN SERVICE.

Assemblyman William Newcorn, Master-of-Ceremonies—Dunellen Band Renders Several Airs—Big Crowd Present.

The laying of the corner-stone of the new temple of the Congregation B'nai Israel, of Plainfield, Thursday afternoon, attracted a large number of people to the place where the building is being erected on New street, near West Front street. The ceremonies began at 2 o'clock and several persons prominent in religious circles took part.

The members of the Congregation assembled at their present place of worship on West Front street, and led by the Dunellen Brass Band, marched to where the new temple is being built. There were selections by the band, prayer and address by Rev. Joseph Krauskaupf, of the Broad Street Temple, Philadelphia. There also addresses by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, formerly of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, and Rev. L. E. Livermore, of the New Market Seventh-Day Baptist Church; also by Mayor O. L. Jenkins, of this city.

Assemblyman William Newcorn had charge of the ceremonies and directed the programme. There were two corner-stones, one on the north and the other on the south side of the building. Mayor Jenkins and Samuel Dreier laid both corner-stones. One stone bears an English inscription and the other a Hebrew.

Following the ceremonies a banquet was served in Saengerbund Hall, when other addresses were made. At night there was a dance at the hall for the benefit of the building fund.

According to the contract the temple must be completed before Easter so that the building can be dedicated during the Feast of the Passover.

The Congregation has been incorporated in the English name, "Congregation, Children of Israel," the State laws making this obligatory.

The committee in charge of the building of the temple and Hebrew School, consists of Samuel Dreier, chairman; Rev. Jacob Wooll, secretary; Morris Abrams, Kalman Bleiberg, Julius Srager and Bernhardt Newmark.

REMOVE OBSTRUCTION.

Durlach Brothers Say That Part of Building Encroaching on the Line Will be Removed.

Chairman R. I. Telles, of the Councilmanic street committee, after considering correspondence with the Durlach Brothers, has received a letter assuring him that the obstruction will be removed from Watchung avenue and East Front street by December 20. This obstruction consists of a portion of the dwelling on that corner which extends over the line on the sidewalk. The owners do not intimate just how they will remove the obstruction, where the entire building will be moved or the end of it cut off.

FORTY YEARS MARRIED.

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Newman Celebrate Anniversary of Wedding.

A very pleasant reunion was enjoyed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Newman, on Thanksgiving Day, in honor of their fortieth wedding anniversary. The brightest feature of the event was the fact that all their children were with them, Rev. and Mrs. Fred E. Newman, and Miss Lilian Newman, of Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Newman, of Philadelphia; Dr. and Mrs. Louis G. Newman and daughter, Helen Marie, from Brewster, N. Y., and Miss Marie Newman, of Plainfield.

REV. MR. SHAW DECLINES.

Pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Decides Not to Go to Ashaway, R. I.

Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, who recently received a call to become pastor of the church of that denomination at Ashaway, R. I., has declined and will remain in Plainfield. While he believes in short pastorates, he is of the opinion that two years is too short. The Ashaway Church is larger numerically than the one in this city.

AN OLD TAVERN AND ITS STORY

Scotch Plains Hotel and Incidents, Coupled With Its History in Days of Yore.

WASHINGTON AT INN

TALE OF THE MURDER OF OLD BALTUS ROLL, A FARMER.

First Opened as an Inn on Thanksgiving Day, 1773—Its Many Proprietors—Meeting Place of the Cider Cask Club.

Beneath the low ceilings of the Scotch Plains hotel where the post boy of years ago stopped to rest on his dash across country from New York to Philadelphia, and where today the automobilist tarries while on his pleasure trips along the New Jersey roads, George Washington discussed matters of importance as commander in chief of the revolutionary forces. The old tavern looks much as it did two hundred years ago when it was built and it is now one of the oldest buildings left standing in this part of the State. Gen. Washington spent three days at the inn, while en route for Bound Brook, and the people of the staid old village never fail to mention this fact to visitors. Some seventy years ago it was the meeting place of the Cider Cask Club, a debating society, whose name is linked with the building.

Col. Swan was one of the first proprietors of the resort, and since then thirty-five others have had charge of the place. Swan, it is said, was a deserter from the British army. He purchased the inn, which then took the name of the Three Swans Tavern. Among those who have been proprietors since the Colonel died are Recompense Stanbery, Jacob Stanburg, Alexander Campbell, Peter B. Davis, William Harris, Jonathan Hetfield, Joseph Darby, William Cleaver, Egatt Drake, William Fisher, William J. Barr, Cornelius Staats, William H. Derrerna, Joseph C. Moses, William Sutton, Abram Nelson, Antoine Debaud, Thomas M. Paff, Sr., William Post, John Roulston, Harry Illsly, Vincent J. Sisser, William Emery, Carlisle Hand, Fred Ivamy, and the present proprietor, William E. Earl, whose name the hostelry now bears. Villagers say that Lafayette stopped at the hostelry at one time and they mention a list of others notable in revolutionary days as being guests at the tavern.

The place was formerly opened as a hotel on Thanksgiving Day, 1773. It enjoyed good patronage and was a popular resort for travellers in its early days. Coupled with its history, is the story of one of the most dastardly crimes ever committed in this vicinity. Today is shown the low-ceilinged room where the plot was concocted which ended with the death of Baltus Roll, a wealthy farmer, and a man named Baldwin, who was partially responsible for the crime, together with the conviction of Peter B. Davis, the proprietor of the inn.

One stormy night old Baltus Roll stopped at the inn on his way home. He ordered a glass of wine and to the inn-keeper confided the fact that he had a large roll of money in his pocket gained in selling cattle. When Roll departed, Baldwin, who was lounging about the place, and Davis spent part of the night in a small room back of the bar. There they plotted to get away with Roll's money. Hitching up a pair of fast horses to a rig, they drove to the farmer's place and gained admittance, under the pretence that they had been caught in the storm. The pair overpowered the farmer and demanded his money. Being refused, they gagged and bound him and threw the old man into a snow pile. Mrs. Roll sounded an alarm and upon the approach of neighbors the desperate men escaped. Baldwin got as far as Morristown and there committed suicide. Davis was captured. He was tried and convicted on the old court house at the corner of Broad and Market street, Newark, this district at that time being a part of Essex County. He served a part of his sentence and was pardoned. It is said that he removed to the West where he died in poverty. No one refers to the history of the Scotch Plains hotel without telling about the murder of old Baltus Roll.

WRECK VICTIM AT HOME.

After Being in Hospital Since Disaster, Frederick Is Now in Dunellen.

Wilson J. Frederick, who was one of the most dangerously injured of the Westfield wreck victims, and who has been undergoing one of the most remarkable operations of skin grafting in the annals of surgery, has been discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital and is now at his home in Dunellen, although he is under the care of his physician, Dr. Albert Pittis, of Somerset street. While Mr. Frederick will be able to move about and will have the use of his limbs to some extent he will have their movements restricted on account of the extensive grafts.

Over ninety-seven per cent. of the scalded surface has been replaced by skin taken from brother Masons, and employes of the United States Express Company, where he was employed. Skin from 168 persons were grafted on his body, making in all 4900 grafts. The patient is not yet able to walk around although he is capable of sitting up.

MR. FRENCH BURIED.

Two Ministers Officiate at Obsequies, Which Were Largely Attended.

The funeral services of John Henry French were held Friday afternoon from the late residence on West Seventh street, where a large number of relatives and friends gathered. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor emeritus, and Rev. Dr. J. A. Chamblias, pastor of the First Baptist Church, conducted the services. The interment took place in Evergreen Cemetery and the pall-bearers were L. L. Manimg, Henry Rankin, Alexander Thorn, Clinton VanVliet and Arthur Gallup.

Fears Her Husband.

The case of the State against Watson Emery in Justice VonMinden's court in which Mrs. Emery appeared against her husband with complaints that he had made threats against her was adjourned Saturday to December 12. The adjournment was taken in the hope that the husband and wife, who are living apart, might make some amicable arrangements for the maintenance of their children. Emery was represented by S. S. Swackhamer, Esq.

Discharged From Guard.

Because of non-payment of fines imposed by court martial of the Second Regiment for absence from drills, Privates William H. Stites and John H. Cashin, of Company K, of this city, and Chester A. Huff, of Company M, of Somerville, have been dishonorably discharged from the guard.

Miss McKeen to Speak Here.

Miss Mary McKeen, of Bala, Pa., president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, will address the Monday Afternoon Club January 18.

Oyster Supper at Holy Cross.

An oyster supper will be given in the parish house of the Church of the Holy Cross, Thursday night, Dec. 10, from 6 to 8 o'clock.

TRINITY'S MEN TO ORGANIZE

CONSISTORY COMMITTEE CONSIDERING IDEA OF FORMING A MEN'S CLUB.

A committee from the Consistory of Trinity Reformed Church consisting of Edgar F. Sheppard, chairman; Rev. Dr. Schenck and Robert Clark, Jr., has been appointed to consider the advisability of forming a men's club. Inasmuch as the women have their several societies for church work, it is argued that it would be equally well to have some sort of a men's organization.

Y. M. C. A. FIVES IN BATTLE

SMITH'S TEAM DEFEATS HAND'S, AND NEAL'S DOWNS HEINECKE'S.

In the Senior league basket ball series at the Y. M. C. A. Friday, Smith's team won out from Hand's in the second half of a hotly fought game. In the first half Hand led 9 to 5, but the "Smithers" got going in the second period and scored fourteen points while the "Hands" made 6, leaving the final score, in Smith's favor, 19 to 15. Summary:

Smith—Hallock and Calcen, forwards; Schuck, centre; Brokaw and Radford, guards. Hand—Long and Jacot, forwards; Joseph, centre; Sebring and Carolin, guards. Goals from the floor, Hallock, Calcen 5, Schuck 3, Long 2, Jacot 2, Joseph 3. Goals from fouls, Schuck, Jacot. Fouls, Smith's team 1, Hand's 3.

The Neal-Heinecke game was won by Neal's aggregation by the margin of a single goal from foul, 11 to 10. Neal's men did all of their scoring in the first half, not having a look-in in the second. and Heinecke's followers scored four times in the first half and six in the second. Summary:

Neal—Kirch and Hoagland, forwards; Markley, centre; Benstiff, Neal and Rothberg, guards. Heinecke—Mundy and Caboone, forwards; McCullough, centre; Utsinger and Woodland, guards. Goals from the floor, Mundy 3, Caboone 2, Woodland, Markley 3, Benstiff 2. Goal from foul, Neal.

Captains Hand and Heinecke did not play but acted as umpires. Smith's team was without the services of two of its regulars. C. B. Morse was referee.

This week, Neal will meet Hand, and Heinecke will play Smith.

REV. MR. FINN'S ANSWER.

Park Avenue Baptists to Know on Sunday Whether He Will Accept.

A response has been received from Rev. A. E. Finn, recently called to the pastorate of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, and he says that he will give the church a definite answer on Sunday. Just at present Mr. Finn's congregation at Chetryville is holding a revival service and this may cause a delay in the shaping of his plans. It is generally believed that he will accept the charge.

ELIJAH A BANKRUPT

Receivers Take Possession of Prophet's Zion City.

FOUNDED BY DOWIE TWO YEARS AGO

Financial Difficulties Which Began During the Dowie's Crusade in New York Have Culminated in All Property Being Seized.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—Judge Kohlsaat in the United States district court has appointed Fred M. Blount and Albert D. Currier receivers in bankruptcy for the property of John Alexander Dowie at Zion City on petition of three creditors alleging an indebtedness of $1,169.

Financial difficulties which began during the crusade of John Alexander Dowie, the self styled "Elijah III.," and his restoration host to New York a month ago and which have been rapidly increasing since Dowie's return culminated in the federal court thus taking possession of all the property controlled by Dowie in Zion City. This town, which was founded two years ago by Dowie, has a population of over 10,000, is the general headquarters for Dowie's church and is said to represent an expenditure of $20,000,000.

The bankruptcy proceedings against Dowie were based on the allegation that he is insolvent and that while in this financial condition he committed an act of bankruptcy by making a preferential payment on Nov. 2 to the E. Streeter Lumber company for $3,770. Dowie has been hard pressed by his creditors, especially since it was announced that his recent mission to New York had proved unsuccessful financially.

Dowie is known to have accumulated a large sum as the head of the Christian Catholic church, the assets of the organization being estimated at between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000. There was a large outlay of money, however, when Zion City was started. Then lace and candy industries were started, and as both of these ventures have never been a paying investment a great deal more money was tied up. Dowie's differences with his brother-in-law, Stevenson, over the management of the lace factory cost more than $100,000, and other suits recently begun in Lake county by creditors are said to aggregate a large sum.

Dowie's first confession of weakness was made at a rally in the tabernacle at Zion City.

"A lot of you people have cash in your pockets," Dowie said to his followers. "Dig down and get it out. It is God's, and we need it in his work. You're cowards if you don't give it up. Deposit it."

Instead of frightening many into deposits his appeal sent a long line of people to the bank on Friday, when they lined up at the paying teller's window, drawing out their money.

Less than $3,000 was deposited in the bank on Friday, while the amount withdrawn was twice as much. Late in the afternoon A. W. Graham of Waukegan tried to withdraw his account of $300 and was told he would have to give thirty days' notice before he could get his money. Another appeal was made by Dowie for funds, but the depositors who appeared were few, and the deposits were chiefly in trivial amounts. He asked the members of Zion more urgently than ever for money. He declared that he must have $500,000 without delay. This sum, he said, he was willing to take in short loans, but that they must be forthcoming immediately.

In the efforts to remedy the condition of affairs at Zion City hundreds of letters were sent out daily to Dowie's followers in other parts of the country. In these letters, in which glowing prospects of Zion City's future were painted and in which Dowie himself is quoted as praying that all those who believe in him will "follow the Lord," all Dowieites are urged, almost commanded, to sell their farms, stores and everything else and come at once to Zion City and help in the work of the church. All of those who have money in banks near where they now live were asked to draw that money out of the local banks and send it for deposit at Zion City.

It is declared to be a fact that the employees of the manufacturing industries have not been paid in from four to six weeks.

In one shop a nonmember of Dowie's flock asked Dowie why he was going to Australia if his finances were so bad.

"Perhaps I may not be able to go at all," quietly returned Dowie. "I may have to stay and see that things are set right before I leave."

The receivers, with their attorneys, and Custodian Redieske, with six deputy marshals, went out to Zion City to serve upon Dowie the notice of the receivership. Redieske and his deputies went to the bank, while the others called upon Dowie at his residence. As the officers were about to demand admission to the bank a man ran from a near door. One of the deputies overtook him, and a second man came running from the bank, shouting:

"Let me have those papers. I will get away with them."

Redieske threatened to place them under arrest unless they returned at once to the bank, which they did. He then placed the bank and the three men in it under a guard.

While this was taking place at the bank the receivers and their attorneys called upon Dowie and read to him the petition and order of the court which placed Zion in the hands of receivers.

After hearing the petition Dowie locked himself up with several of his leading subordinates. He refused to allow himself to be seen or to make any statement, merely sending word that he had nothing to say.

The order of court compels Dowie to appear in court Dec. 11.

WAR CLOUD CLEARS

Japan and Russia on Verge of Final Settlement.

FRANCE AND BRITAIN HELPED PEACE

Both Powers Will Support the Open Door Trade Policy and Will Assent to the Integrity of China and Korea.

PARIS, Dec. 2.—Japan and Russia are on the verge of a settlement of the far eastern controversy which promises to dissipate the war clouds which have been hanging over both countries. This settlement will be the result of the negotiations which have been in progress for some time past and which were assisted by the friendly representations of France to Russia and of Great Britain to Japan. The two nations have practically agreed upon the basis of a treaty, as follows:

Russia will accept the two agreements entered into by Japan and Korea dated 1896 and 1898 respectively, under which Japan secured various rights in Korea, including the maintenance of a garrison at Seoul. In exchange for this concession Japan will accept Russia's treaty with China respecting Manchuria.

It is believed that Japan and Russia will reiterate their support of the principles of the "open door" and the integrity of China and of Korea.

In diplomatic and official circles here considerable gratification is expressed at the satisfactory stage upon which the negotiations between Russia and Japan have now entered.

Before the recent visit of Count Lamsdorff, the Russian foreign minister, to Paris, on which occasion he accompanied the czar, France and Great Britain as a result of the entente existing between them had agreed to use their influence with Russia and Japan respectively for the purpose of securing an amicable arrangement of the questions in dispute. When Count Lamsdorff arrived M. Delcasse, the French foreign minister, took occasion to point out the interest which France had in a peaceful solution of the difficulty. At the same time M. Delcasse told Count Lamsdorff that it was clearly understood that no matter what the result there would be no change, generally speaking, in the attitude of France toward Russia.

Count Lamsdorff fully appreciated the delicacy of the French representation, but explained that the policy of the Russian government tended to a peaceful solution. In the meantime Great Britain had been making energetic representations to the Tokio government. Diplomats therefore give considerable credit to the respective allies of the two disputants for the moderation which has prevailed in the Russian and Japanese councils.

Philadelphia Accepts Carnegie's Gift.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 2.—The city council's committee on free libraries has voted to accept from Andrew Carnegie the sum of $1,500,000 for the building of thirty branch libraries in this city. The gift was contingent on the city furnishing the sites, appropriating 10 per cent of the total cost of the libraries for maintenance and purchasing the books. There was spirited opposition to the acceptance of the money, because it made necessary an annual appropriation of about $150,000 to maintain the libraries.

Memorial Church Dedicated.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Dec. 2.—The Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Church of the Prince of Peace, erected in this borough in honor of the soldiers of both the north and the south who took part in the battle of Gettysburg, has been dedicated by Bishop Ethelbert Talbot of the central Pennsylvania diocese of the Protestant Episcopal church.

Rockefeller's Christmas Gift.

CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—John D. Rockefeller will make his usual Christmas present to the University of Chicago this year. His special educational agent, Starr J. Murphy, is inspecting the various departments of the university for the purpose of learning the needs of the institution.

Found $800 In I. O. U's.

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 2.—Postoffice inspectors who are investigating the Portland postoffice have found, it is said, "I. O. U's" for over $800 for money taken from the cash drawer. Postmaster Bancroft declines to discuss the matter, but it is understood he has made good the shortage.

Kaiser Will Not Open Reichstag.

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—It is reported here that, owing to the condition of his throat, Emperor William will not open the reichstag tomorrow, but that Chancellor von Bulow will act in his stead.

SOCIETY PATRONIZES MISS CADY'S RECITAL

Charming Musical Entertainment at Sunnyside Attended by Women of Plainfield.

EXCELLENT PROGRAMME

MISS LEARNED'S MEZZO SOPRANO VOICE, CAPTIVATED ASSEMBLAGE.

Miss Cady a Brilliant Pianiste—Successful Affair—List of Those Who Acted as Patronesses—Mrs. Myers Not Present.

A select and highly appreciative audience was delighted Friday afternoon by the piano recital given by Miss Harriette Cady assisted by Miss Ellen E. Learned. The affair took place at "Sunnyside," the home of Mrs. Lawrence Myers, who loaned her residence for the purpose though unable herself to be present. Miss Cady was the pianiste, and Miss Learned, who is a mezzo soprano, sang. The work of both performers was wholly adequate, though the difficult nature of the selections necessitated for a successful rendition an unusual degree of musical talent. The programme:

a, Gavotte, Bach-Saint Saens; b, Sonata, (Moonlight), Beethoven, Miss Harlette Cady; a, Roses D'Hiver, Fontenaille; b, Herseleid, Goldmark; c, Sapphische Ode, Brahms, Miss Ellen E. Learned; a, Impromptu, c, Ballade, Chopin, Miss Cady; a, Love, The Pedlar, Edward German; b, The Little Thief, Leo Stern, Miss Learned; a, Stemminger, Sjogren; b, Wedding March, Grieg; c, Pres De La Mer, Arensky; d, Caprice Espagnole, Moszkowski, Miss Cady.

The patronesses: Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. J. Otis Averill, Mrs. Edward H. Booth, Mrs. George A. Chapman, Mrs. John Gray Foster, Miss Saidee Mae Howell, Mrs. Samuel Huntington, Mrs. Francis de L. Hyde, Miss F. Elvira Kenyon, Miss Ada G. Marsh, Mrs. Fred G. Mead, Mrs. David Hall Rowland, Miss Emilie Schipper, Mrs. Walter Scott, Mrs. John P. Stevens, Mrs. George A. Strong, Mrs. Duncan Taylor, Mrs. Mason W. Tyler, Mrs. Geo. W. VanBoskerck.

I. C. T. Dances.

The I. C. T. club decided Saturday night to hold a dance on New Year's Eve. Raymond McVoy, V. W. Nash, Jr., Leonce Texier, Edmond Texier and George B. Cose were chosen the committee in charge, the first named, chairman. The club will hold a masquerade ball Feb. 11, on its second anniversary. Alfred Berry Marsh was made a member of the club Saturday night.

Back to the Farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Vols have sold their house on Johnston's Drove to Charles C. Wesley, of New York, who will take possession within a short time. Mr. Vols expects to resume farming.

Muhlenberg Ready January 1.

It was announced last evening that the new Muhlenberg Hospital will be ready for occupancy by January 1. It is planned to hold a reception and public inspection at the new building a few days before the patients are removed. The chairman of the committee on arrangements for the reception is Edward H. Ladd. No date has been set for the Annual Harvest Home which is to be held for the benefit of the hospital fund.

Sale at Trinity Reformed.

Under the auspices and for the benefit of the Young Women's Mission Band, of Trinity Reformed Church, a bazaar of Christmas handkerchiefs will be held in the parlors of the church Saturday afternoon, December 12, from 4 to 10. Home-made cake and candy will also be offered for sale.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS AT VESPER SERVICE

Members of Fraternal Order, 500 Strong, Listen to Sermon by Brother Doyle, C. S. P.

CITY OFFICIALS PRESENT

REV. ANDREW M. EGAN CELEBRANT AT IMPRESSIVE SERVICE.

Singing of the Knights a Feature—Trenton, Newark, Jersey City, New Brunswick and Other Councils Represented.

Solemn vesper services were held last Sunday in St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church under the auspices of Watchung Council, No. 559, Knights of Columbus. It was the first time that such a service has taken place here and the large edifice was thronged. There were at least five hundred knights present, a full representation of the membership of the local council and many from councils in Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Trenton, Newark, Jersey City and New York. Many of the city officials were present.

Souvenir programmes announced the order of services. The processional was the hymn "Onward Christian Soldiers" sung by the church choir and the Knights of Columbus.

Brother Alexander Doyle, C. S. P., of New York, an eminent priest and scholar, delivered the sermon. His subject was Christ and the Church and in his discourse he showed that all things must be renewed through Christ. The choir sang "Nearer My God to Thee" and the Watchung Council's double quartette rendered "Abide With Me." The quartette of Bayley Council, Elizabeth, sang "O Salutaris," after which the recessional was sung by the regular choir. The services were conducted by Rev. Andrew M. Egan, as celebrant; Father Westmus, of Garwood, as deacon; the curate of St. Mary's Church, Father Delahanty, sub-deacon, and Father Federici, of Bloomfield, as assistant.

The solemn vesper service is one primarily of praise. The officers of the committee of arrangements of the Knights of Columbus were John O'Keefe, chairman; and William O'Keefe, secretary.

The delegates were conveyed to this city from New Brunswick, Bayonne, Newark and Elizabeth in the electrical trolley cars. The "Annie R," Edward H. Raydel's private trolley car brought many of the New Brunswickers here, picking up some of the Bound Brook Knights on the way.

CORIELL SUED FOR $50,000

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT WANTS HEAVY DAMAGES FROM UNION'S SHERIFF.

Papers in a $50,000 damage suit instituted by the United States Government against Sheriff B. Frank Coriell, of Union County, were filed at Trenton on Saturday by United States District Attorney Vreeland. This action is the result of the sheriff's detention of the unfinished cruiser, the Chattanooga and the torpedo boats, Nicholson and O'Brien in the Elizabethport yards of the United States Shipbuilding Company until about a month ago, when they were forcibly seized by the North Atlantic Squadron and towed to the Navy Yard at Brooklyn.

Three other boats, Charles M. Schwab's "Happy Day," the "Czarina," another pleasure boat and the ferryboat "Plainfield," now at the shipyards are advertised to be sold on Thursday through a similar proceedure. The complainant in this case is an Elizabeth firm of lumber dealers, who have a claim against the boats for lumber furnished.

Malicious Mischief.

A complaint has been entered in the city court against Frank Meeser, Richard Bird and Fred Guinn, charging them with having maliciously cut into pieces a number of derby hats belonging to Robert Leland and others, at the home of W. S. Decker, of West End avenue, on Thanksgiving night.

Reformed Church Seminary Fund.

The special endowment fund of the Dutch Reformed Seminary in New Brunswick, has been increased by another gift of $1,500 for a memorial window and alcove endowment. The gift was made by Mrs. Anna V. N. Bussing, of New York city, in memory of her father, Abram VanNest. This makes the ninth gift of $1,500.

Y. M. C. A. at Singer's.

About fifteen members of the Y. M. C. A. boys' department, in charge of Secretary Kenneth Robbie, inspected the factories of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, Elizabethport, Saturday morning.

STRIVING TO RECLAIM THE FALLEN WOMAN

Door of Hope Worker Tells of the Noble Undertaking in Gotham's Slum Districts.

RESCUING FROM SIN

MANY PATHETIC CASES RECOUNTED BY THE MISSIONARY.

Large Audience Moved by the Sad Stories—Home Influence, According to the Speaker, the Greatest Aid in Preventing Downfalls.

Miss C. M. Wittemore, of New York, addressed a missionary meeting held Tuesday in Warren Chapel, telling of the work being accomplished in saving fallen women in the great metropolis. Her talk was an interesting one. She told of the many pathetic cases which have come to her attention during her experience in New York and showed how necessary it is that this part of the mission work at home should receive the support of churches and church members.

It was one of the largest attended meeting held at Warren Chapel in some time and at its close many persons assured the missionary that she could count on their support.

The meeting was one of a series which has been planned by the prayer committee of the chapel of which Mrs. Louis Ely is chairman. Several more have been arranged for the winter by the members of the Christian Endeavor Society.

Miss Wittemore is identified with the work of the Door of Hope Mission in New York. The main object of that organization is to save women who have strayed from virtue's path. With tears in her eyes she related stories of women who had sought refuge in the mission and had been saved. Graphically she related narratives, filled with sorrow and woe, of families reunited through the efforts of the missionaries. So pathetic were some of those that tears were visible in the eyes of some of her hearers, as the sin of the great city was unfolded to their eyes. Miss Wittemore declared that good home influence is the greatest blessing in the world and that if the family altar is maintained in the home fewer women would go astray.

A part of the collection was given for this worthy cause.

PHOTOGRAPHIC WORK EXHIBIT

COLLECTIONS OF MISSES MARGARET AND EDITH TRACY PLACED ON VIEW.

The first and second of a series of three photographic exhibits on consecutive afternoons was given Monday and again yesterday by the Misses Margaret and Edith Tracy, of West Eighth street, at the studio of Miss Margaret Tracy and Miss Harriet Goddard, corner of Ninth street and First place. The exhibit consisted of a variety of photographs taken by these young women, the execution of which showed great skill and careful attention to technique. A group of pictures taken at Ipswich, L. I., was one of the best specimens in the collection.

Inter-State Fair Profits.

At the meeting of the board of directors of the Intre-State Fair Association it has been decided to declare a dividend of 5 per cent. on the common stock and of 7 per cent. on the preferred stock. This action has been taken pursuant to the report of secretary Mahlon R. Margerum that the profits of the fair for the last year were $18,000, which exceeds the largest profits of any preceding year in the history of the fair by more than $6,000.

Company K's Election.

The annual meeting of the civic organization of Co. K was held Monday night. By reason of the fact that W. B. Martin is captain of the company, he holds the same position in the other organization. The other officers chosen are secretary, Corporal W. B. Martin; financial secretary, Sergeant Oliver R. Pearson; treasurer, Sergeant Asa F. Randolph. The committees were reappointed.

No Increase for Firemen.

There has been a rumor about that an effort is to be made to secure an increase of pay for members of the fire department. When Chairman Lee, of the Councilmanic fire committee, was questioned concerning the report, he emphatically denied that any such move would be made.

M'KINLEY CLUB'S ELECTION

FOWLER MAN SCORES AN EASY VICTORY AS CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY.

The annual election of officers of the McKinley Club at Elizabeth resulted in the choice of the regular ticket headed by Former School Commissioner Robert M. Kellogg, who was elected by a large majority. Mr. Kellogg is a strong Fowler man, and led the Fowler side in the Cross-Runyon primary fight of last year. He received eighty-nine votes to twenty-five for his opponent, C. A. Trimble. Mr. Kellogg has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the assembly.

Representatives present from Plainfield were George Tobin, Andrew McCardell and Former Assemblyman William Newcorn. Among the prominent members from Elizabeth were Judge Joseph Cross, City Treasurer James Morrison and County Prosecutor W. C. J. English.

STATE SCHOOL INSPECTION

BILL TO BE INTRODUCED TO PREVENT LOWERING OF THE STANDARD.

An effort will be made when the Legislature meets to have authority given to the State Board of Education to appoint a State Inspector of High Schools, whose chief duty it will be to see to it that the high standard of high schools throughout the State is maintained and does not fall below the mark required by the State educational body. At present there is no such inspection for high schools and some of these institutions have not kept up the standard.

As a consequence the State, it is pointed out, has lost prestige with other States in educational matters, and New Jersey's high school graduates have little or no standing outside of the State. The State high school inspection plan has been specifically indorsed by the State Council of Educational and State High School Teachers' Association, and in its general outline by the State Teachers' Association.

The State Board of Medical Examiners has also become interested in this important matter, and a request has been sent to the State Educational Department by this board to leave no stone unturned to obtain such inspection.

The State Board of Education, at its last meeting in Lakewood, discussed the matter, and it was decided that it was high time that proper action be taken, and that the Legislature be appealed to. A bill has been drafted setting forth the requirements to properly launch this inspection and it will be introduced early at the coming session.

OBSERVED A FEAST DAY

SPECIAL MASSES SAID IN ST. MARY'S AND ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCHES.

Masses were held yesterday in the local Roman Catholic Churches in honor of the Feast of the Immaculate Conception. The services at St. Mary's Church were in charge of Rev. Andrew M. Egan, celebrant; Father Delahanty, deacon and Father Frederici, sub-deacon. The services at St. Joseph's Church were in charge of Rev. Joseph Miller.

D. OF A. SOCIAL.

Members and Friends of Martha Washington Council Gathered at Mrs. G. W. VanCamp's Home.

A dime social was held under the auspices of Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America, last night, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George W. VanCamp, 24 Somerset place. The evening was spent in playing games, interspersed with phonograph selections by William Richards, vocal solos by the Misses Elders Beekman, Flora Moorehouse and Mrs. Jennie Benjamin. Miss Beekman also rendered several selections on the organ and recitations were given by Masters J. Harold Martin and John Richards and the Misses Maude A. Martin, Ethel VanCamp and Mabel VanCamp. After the entertainment refreshments were served by a committee from the Council and a social followed.

Woodrow Wilson May Attend.

At 10 o'clock this morning there were six seats unsold for the Princeton Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Club's concert which will be given at the Casino Friday night. The house holds 500 people and no "standing room" tickets will be sold. It is not positively certain that President Woodrow Wilson will attend the performance.

NARROW ESCAPES IN CENTRAL R. R. WRECK

Rear-End Collision of Two Freights at Berckman St., Early Hour This Morning.

THE ENGINE A WRECK

TWO COAL CARS BURNED AND FIREMAN HOLMAN SLIGHTLY INJURED.

Two Alarms for Fire Department—Tracks Blocked—Engineer of Rear Train Said He Couldn't See on Account of Steam.

Almost by a miracle, three men escaped serious injury or death in a rear-end collision between two coal trains on the Central Railroad a few minutes before 3 a. m. yesterday. The caboose of the first train, which was a Central, was lifted high in the air and completely overturned by the force of the collision but the fireman who was riding in it at the time escaped with slight scratches on his hand and arm. He was thrown under a huge heap of coal but dug his way out without difficulty.

J. Dixbarn, engineer of the P. and R. freight which ran into the other, though considerably shaken up, was able to crawl out of his cab with a sound body, in spite of the fact that his engine was a complete wreck. His fireman, M. Dietrich, was knocked between the locomotive and the tender, and although his trousers caught fire, he was pulled out and the flames extinguished without great trouble.

Both trains were East bound when the collision happened directly in the rear of Powers' coal yards, 500 to 600 feet East of Berckman street. Engineer F. Remley, of the Central train, drawn by Engine No. 464, signalled to the rear train to slow down. Dixbarn, engineer of the rear train drawn by Engine No. 634-2, claims that he brought his train as near a stop as possible without actually coming to a standstill. He wished to avoid coming to a full stop as this would have necessitated the calling out of a push car to get the train started again. He claimed also that he was unable to see the train ahead on account of the dense clouds of steam.

When the trains came together, the caboose and the car ahead were thrown to the right and the car next in front to the left and down an embankment. The caboose and car caught fire, and alarms were rung in from box 53 by a citizen and box 63 by Patrolman Messler. The Plainfield apparatus was on the scene at 3 o'clock and at 4:30 the flames were completely extinguished. One of the cars and the caboose were almost an entire loss and the engine of the rear train was totally wrecked. All four tracks were blocked until 4:50 when one was cleared for the passage of trains.

The Central train was in charge of Conductor V. Waller and the P. and R. train, which did the damage, in charge of Conductor J. Streeper. The crew of the Central train assert that the engineer of the P. and R. must have been asleep to run by the signals, but the latter, Dixbarn, explains his action by the statement that he could not see for the steam. Holman, the fireman, was the only one injured sufficiently to require the attention of a physician. He was taken to the office of Dr. Browning and his cuts on hand and arm dressed.

KOONS, CHIEF OF ORGANIZATION.

Plainfielder Chosen Chairman of State Y. M. C. A. Bowling League.

Chauncey Koons, of the local Y. M. C. A., was elected chairman of the Y. M. C. A. bowling league of Northern New Jersey at a meeting Saturday night in Orange. The application for withdrawal from the league of Montclair was granted, the action being taken because Montclair's players had joined other teams. George Hanckel, of Montclair, resigned his office of chairman.

Church Boys' Club Elects.

The Boys' Club of the choir of the Church of the Holy Cross met last night and elected these officers for the coming year: President, Harry Fahn; treasurer, H. Davis; secretary, George Mead. This entertainment committee was appointed: Reese Conroy, chairman; Harry Allen and George Mead. This committee will have charge of all entertainments.

Miss Ernestine C. Smith, of Madison avenue, will entertain the Duplicate Whist Club at her home, Tuesday night, Dec. 15.

CAPTURED WITH THE BOOTY

BURGLAR CAUGHT ON MADISON AVENUE BY PATROLMAN M'CARTHY.

Shortly before 1 yesterday morning, Patrolman McCarthy found two crooks with the goods on them and captured one, the other fellow succeeding in making his escape. The men were detected on Madison avenue, after having gotten some booty. The men are colored and it is understood that they are not professionals in the business of house breaking. The burglar who McCarthy landed in the police headquarters is being detained there until a search for the other man, being made by the department, is completed. Chief Kiely went to Elizabeth this morning and it is said that his trip is on matters connected with the capture.

MISSIONARY WORKERS MEET

WOMEN'S H. AND F. SOCIETY OF MONROE AVE. M. E. GATHER TOGETHER.

A social of the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the Monroe Avenue M. E. Church was given last night at the home of Mrs. W. B. Grannatt, in West Fourth street. The attendance was large and a most enjoyable afternoon was spent in playing crokinole and other games. Readings by Mrs. N. Mansfield Smith and recitations by Miss Edna Grannatt and Mrs. W. D. Grannatt contributed much to the evening's pleasures. The committee in charge was Mrs. W. D. Grannatt, president of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the church; Mrs. J. C. Pierson, president of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, and Miss Annie Stafford, secretary of both organizations.

TRIAL GIVEN TROLLEY CAR

NEW TYPE OF VEHICLE RUN OVER THE LOCAL TRACKS LAST NIGHT.

A trial trip was made with one of the new cars recently ordered by the Public Service Corporation, on the main line between this city and Elizabeth last night. The car is much larger than those now used. It will carry sixty-five passengers and each platform will hold twenty-five people. No passengers were carried on the test run.

The seats, covered with white rattan, are arranged cross wise in the car and there is no smoking apartment. The cars are fitted with Westinghouse air brakes and are equipped in modern matter. The platform, where the motorman is stationed, is entirely vestibuled. The company has ordered 150 and most of them will be put in operation on the main line between this city and Elizabeth.

MONROE'S YOUNG MEN ACTIVE

ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN BY WEST END CHURCH CLUB LAST EVENING.

A social of the young men's organization of the Monroe Avenue M. E. Church was held last night in the Epworth room of the church. Crokinole, ping pong and other games were played. It was decided to hold meetings on Tuesday nights in the Epworth League room. The organization is a new one in the church and has prospered greatly. The committee in charge of last night's entertainment and supper consisted of John J. Praed, chairman; Clarence Drouard, Adam Neuman, Robert Leland, Howard L. Cox, John W. Daub and Louis Burger.

MRS. BODINE BURIED.

Rev. Dr. Schenck Officiated at Services at Home in Jackson Avenue.

Services over the remains of the late Mrs. William C. Bodine were held yesterday from her late residence on Jackson avenue. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed Church, was in charge of the services. The interment was in the North Plainfield Cemetery. The floral tributes were handsome, among the number being a large wreath sent by the clerks of Woodhull & Martin's store.

—Trouble with the larger number of brands of canned goods is that you cannot depend upon whether the goods are packed scientifically or not. White Label goods are. Neuman Brothers have that brand. Try their fancy small stringless beans.

E. S. F. Randolph, of Park avenue, has returned from a visit with relatives in Yonkers and New Rochelle.

BOROUGH FIREMEN STRONGLY PROTEST

Adverse to the Use of New Engine House by Council or Any Other Body.

TALK WITH THE MAYOR

WAS ORIGINALLY PLANNED TO HOUSE COUNCILMEN IN OLD QUARTERS.

A Committee Appointed to Hold Another Conference With Mr. Smalley—Matter Being Kept Quiet—Action Last Night.

A special meeting of the Common Council of North Plainfield has been called for Friday night at which time a committee from Warren Engine Company, it is said, will be present to protest against the movement on foot to remodel the plans of the Warren Engine Company's new house, so that the upper rooms can be used as Common Council chambers. It is said that the firemen are not in favor of the proposition.

Officers of the Warren Company met a few evenings ago at the home of Mayor Smalley at which time this plan was fully discussed. The firemen, it is said, object to the plan on the ground that the house was erected for the special benefit of the engine company and that no agreement was stipulated at the time the petition was circulated for the erection of the house for any other purpose.

It was originally planned to convert the present headquarters of the company into a tax collector's office, a recorder's office and Common Council chambers. It is claimed by those interested in the project that the objection to having the Common Council chambers placed in the old building is that the Council, in session, is liable to be disturbed by the prisoners confined in the cells on the ground floor.

A fireman, when in speaking of the matter today, said that at the regular meeting of the company last evening, the matter was discussed, and a committee was appointed to wait upon the Council to further discuss the matter.

ANOTHER BUILDING.

Ground Broken at Watchung Avenue and East Fourth Street for Flat Structure.

Preparations have begun towards the erection of a row of stores and flats at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Fourth street, where the lumber store house formerly occupied by DeWitt C. Ivins, is located. Workmen have been at work during the past few days in tearing down the old structure and the work will be commenced by the middle of the month on the foundation. The stores will face on Watchung avenue and will occupy the entire space between Fourth street and the property of the Central Railroad. The cost of the structure will be in the neighborhood of $6,000.

Slow Work on Gas Tank.

Work on the new gas tank, East Fourth and Washington streets, has been hindered somewhat of late on account of the difficulty in securing iron work from the rolling mills and foundries in Pennsylvania. Operations have not entirely ceased and a corps of men are still engaged in doing work on the inside of the great tub. It was planned to have the job completed by the first of the year, but it is probable that it will not be finished until late in March.

Mr. Bellis' Funeral.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Archibald L. Bellis took place yesterday afternoon from his late residence at 408 West Third street. The services were in charge of Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren Chapel. The interment was in the family plot in Flemington.

New Mrs. John Brann.

Miss Louise Wenzel, of New York, and John Brann, of Jackson avenue, were married this morning at 9:30 at the parsonage of Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren Chapel. The wedding was a quiet one. The witnesses were Miss Carrie Wheeler and Miss Berther Wheeler.

Father Smyth Going Abroad.

Bishop O'Connor will sail for Europe on Tuesday, January 5 and among those who will accompany him is Very Rev. Patrick Smyth, formerly of St. Mary's Church, Plainfield.

Another Minstrel Show.

H. P. Greenwood and Thomas Muir are planning to give a minstrel show either just before or after Washington's Birthday. The affair will be an elaborate one, it is said.

WINFIELD SCOTT POST ELECTS

LOCAL G. A. R. CHOSES OFFICERS FOR THE ENSUING YEAR.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., met Tuesday and elected these officers for the coming year: Commander, William C. Smith; senior vice commander, Andrew Cox; junior vice commander, William Hand; quartermaster, John R. Naylor; surgeon, Abram King; chaplain, M. C. Dobbins; officer of the day, I. L. McVoy; officer of the guard, William Day; trustees, William Hand, William C. Smith and M. C. Dobbins; delegates to Department Encampment, J. W. Coddington and J. R. Naylor; alternates, Andrew Cox and Edward Willis.

The installation of the officers-elect will take place at the first meeting in January, at which time the officers to be elected in the Woman's Relief Corps may also be installed.

HARVARD VANQUISHES YALE

BUT IT'S ONLY BASKET BALL PLAYERS WEARING THE COLLEGE COLORS.

Enthusiasm ran high Tuesday afternoon among the supporters of "Harvard," "Yale," "Princeton" and "Columbia" in the boys' basket ball league of the Y. M. C. A. The rivarly resulted in two hard fought games. Harvard beat Yale, 7 to 2, doing all of its scoring in the first half. Princeton defeated Columbia, 4 to 1. In the series to date, Harvard leads with three games won and one lost, Princeton and Columbia are tied for second position with two won and two lost, and Yale trails the others with a record of one victory and three defeats. The summaries:

Harvard—Doeringer and Hart, forwards; Laughlin, centre; Gavett and R. Doeringer, guards. Yale—Leggett and VanArsdale, forwards; Heath, centre; Leland and Williams, guards. Score, Harvard, 7, Yale, 2. Goals from the floor, Laughlin, 2, Heath. Goals from fouls, Doeringer, Laughlin, R. Doeringer. Referee, Kenneth Robbie. Umpire, Paul Collier. Time, 15-min. halves.

*Princeton—McClintock and Cald*well, forwards; Bird, centre; Taylor and Shorp, guards. Columbia—Hodge and Freeman, forwards; Woodhull, centre; Beeker and Morris, guards. Score, Princeton, 4, Columbia, 1. Goals from the floor, Caldwell, 2. Goal from foul, Woodhull. Referee, Collier. Umpire, Robbie.

Next Tuesday afternoon it will be Yale against Princeton, and Harvard against Columbia.

HOPE'S NARROW ESCAPE

Y. M. C. A. JUNIORS PUT UP GOOD FIGHT IN BASKET BALL GAME.

A practise game of basket ball was played last night between the Hope Y. M. A. team and the Y. M. C. A. Juniors in the Y. M. A. gymnasium and was a victory for Hope Y. M. A., 25 to 23. The players seemed out of practise, though Dilts, for Hope and Collier, for the Y. M. C. A., had their eye on the baskets. Summary: Hope Y. M. A.—Dilts and Porter, forwards; Roseberry, centre; Chamberlain and Montross guards. Y. M. C. A. Jrs.—Brokaw and Joseph, guards; Sherwin, centre; Collier and Sheppard, forwards. Goals from the floor, Dilts, 8, Porter, Roseberry, 2, Sherwin, Collier, 2. Goals from fouls, Dilts, 3, Joseph, Collier, 2. Referee, Wooden. Umpire, Nash. Timer, Wharton. Time, 15-min. halves.

Italians in Mixup.

Frank Zarro, arrested by Patrolman Messler for drunkenness and disorderly conduct by striking Antonio Lasardi, appeared before City Judge Runyon yesterday and was granted an adjournment to Saturday morning. Suit for damages for assault has been brought in Justice Huff's court by Lasardi against Zarro and the case will be heard Saturday.

Hope Y. M. A. Meeting.

The Hope Y. M. A. grievance committee settled a number of complaints brought to them last night. A social meeting of the Y. M. A. was held with banjo selections by Joseph Loughead as the feature.

Park Club Dance.

Under the auspices of the entertainment committee of the Park Club a dance will be given at the clubhouse on Thursday night, December 24.

Boys Plan Xmas Dinner.

The members of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. are planning a Christmas dinner for a large number of their friends.

REAL JOLLY TIME AT PARK CLUB'S SMOKER

Excellent Programme Provided by Sketch Artists Affords Entertainment.

SOME INDOOR SPORTS

PLAY ON THE BOWLING ALLEYS AND POOL AND BILLIARD TABLES.

Refreshments In Abundance—Society Folk Present—Samuel Townsend Chairman of Committee on Arrangements.

The men of the Park Club turned out in large numbers Tuesday to enjoy the club's annual smoker, arranged by the house committee, Samuel Townsend, chairman; Nelson A. Miller, George T. Rogers and A. VanDeventer. Like previous affairs of the kind there was nothing lacking to make it one round of pleasure for the members. "Church wardens" were generously distributed and there was plenty of good tobacco, and while all enjoyed the pipe, an excellent entertainment was given by New York talent.

Charles H. Simerson, who appeared at the club a year ago, gave impersonations and songs which were features of the evening, while the work of Ronald Reeder, sketch artist and sleights - of - hand performer, called forth the heartiest applause. He was clever with the crayon and in doing all sorts of tricks. At the piano was George Leonard, who in addition to acting as accompanist, gave a number of musical impersonations of a fife and drum corps, mandolin, auto-harp and music box, and he also gave banjo selections.

This concluded the entertainment and the members were served with an abundance of refreshments. Then followed a social time in which the guests bowled on the alleys, played billiards and pool and otherwise passed the time. A feature was the presence of many of Plainfield's society folks, who have recently identified themselves with the club.

EVANGELIST AT Y. M. C. A.

REV. L. B. GREENWOOD COMMENCES A SERIES OF MEETINGS.

Rev. Lawrence B. Greenwood, an evangelist, led the first of the series of meetings at the Y. M. C. A. building last night. He showed by apt illustrations what had been accomplished by evangelical work in the past and indicated a hopeful outlook for the work in Plainfield. Mr. Greenwood's address was pointed and pithy and contained numerous bright illustrations. Singing by Mr. Greenwood and violin selections by Martin A. Korff added attractiveness to the meeting.

The men's meetings will be continued every evening at 8 o'clock and daily Bible lessons will be given afternoons at 3 for men and women. Meetings for boys will be held this afternoon and Friday and Saturday afternoons at 4 o'clock. The attendance at last night's meeting was most encouraging.

33,655 BIRTHS

And 31,319 Deaths in New Jersey is the Record for the Year.

The State Board of Health and Bureau of Vital Statistics have combined their annual reports to the Governor. According to the tables of figures the total number of births, marriages and deaths in the State are shown, together with like figures for the counties and larger cities.

Altogether there were 33,655 births, 18,156 marriages and 31,319 deaths. This shows a remarkable advancement for the State over last year, inasmuch as a decrease of 400 deaths is reported. The increase in births for the year was 700, and the marriages a little more than 1,600.

Succeeding P. L. Conde.

On account of poor health, P. Ludwig Conde, formerly of Plainfield, is obliged to give up his classes in violin in this city, and go to Denver, Col., for an indefinite time. Kenneth H. Stuart will succeed Mr. Conde, continuing with the latter's pupils at W. E. MacClymont's studio, room 305-306 Babcock building, all day each Saturday. Mr. Stuart is highly recommended by Mr. Conde and other well-known violinists. He will also furnish orchestral music. His residence is 403 West Front street.

WILL WEAR PALLIUM

Bishop Glennon to Be Head of St. Louis Archdiocese.

Will Be the Youngest Man in North America to Occupy So Exalted and Powerful a Position —In the Church.

Most Rev. John Joseph Glennon, who became archbishop of the diocese of St. Louis upon the death of Archbishop Kain, is one of the most interesting figures in the Roman Catholic church in America.

Although only 41 years old, his success in his chosen field has been little short of remarkable.

He will be the youngest archbishop on the continent of North America, and one of the youngest, if not the youngest, in the world.

His youth, his perfect health and his ability make him a formidable candidate for still higher honors within the rank of the Catholic church, and it is not at all improbable that he will some day be a cardinal.

With many years of active service before him, his chances for succeeding to the American cardinalate are looked upon as better than those of any other archbishop in the Catholic church in America.

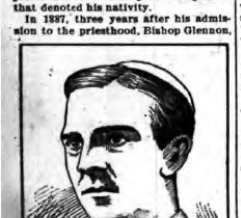
Bishop Glennon was born in County Meath, Ireland, of aristocratic Irish parents. He was educated at All Hallows college, Dublin university, and came to this country 20 years ago.

He finished his studies in Ireland, but when he arrived in Kansas City, where he had been called by Bishop Hogan, he was too young for ordination.

He worked under Bishop Hogan for one year, when he was admitted to the priesthood and made assistant to Father Dunne, then pastor of St. Patrick's church in Kansas City.

The Kansas City friends of Bishop Glennon well remember him as the young ecclesiastic student. He was tall, had a clear-cut, frank countenance, Irish blue eyes with wonderfully bright expression and a clear pink complexion that denoted his nativity.

In 1897, three years after his admission to the priesthood, Bishop Glennon,



MOST REV. J. J. GLENNON.
(Archbishop Kain's Successor as Head of St. Louis Diocese.)

in order to better acquaint himself with his duties as a prelate of the church, made a tour of Europe. He made an extended visit in Rome, was received by Pope Leo, and when he returned to this country, one year later, he was made assistant pastor of the cathedral parish in Kansas City.

From this position he was elevated to the pastorate, then to the station of vicar general, and later coadjutor to Bishop Hogan, which office he held when selected as coadjutor to Archbishop Kain.

While a student of religious literature, Bishop Glennon does not neglect the literature of the day. He is a great reader of the newspapers, and in Kansas City it was not unusual to see him walking home with a large bundle of Sunday papers under his arm. On one occasion, seeing the bishop in possession of several Sunday papers one day, asked him what he did with them.

"I study the funny pictures," said the bishop.

The St. Louis Republic says that the bishop is also a student of Shakespeare. On his journeys one generally finds a small copy of Shakespeare in the prelate's pocket. He speaks wonderfully pure English, and two elements have contributed to this excellence in his speech—his early education at Dublin university and his constant study of the writings of the bard of Avon.

Newspaper men perhaps have had a better opportunity to study Bishop Glennon than anyone else. When a reporter calls on the bishop, night or day, he finds a welcome. The bishop was never known to treat coldly a representative of the press, although he does not always discuss the subject desired.

When a reporter calls upon the bishop for an interview, it generally develops that the reporter is interviewed instead of the prelate.

The new archbishop has made an excellent impression upon the clergy and laity of St. Louis, and while the sickness and death of Archbishop Kain are regretted, the consistory of Bishop Glennon to the archiepiscopal office is a matter of congratulation on the part of those who knew him when he was an obscure priest in an obscure parish less than 20 years ago.

Strongest Man in Senate.

The strongest man in the United States senate is Senator Kearns, of Idaho. He is athletic, muscular and brave, with a fist as hard as a hammer. In the early days of Idaho, when nearly everyone carried a pistol, the future senator refused to arm himself, although he was frequently involved in altercations, he was never known to come out second best. A single blow always settled his adversary.

AMERICAN ANCESTRAL HOMES

One Shrewder Millionaires Proposes to Build Them in Their Own Country.

Now that the American millionaires have had time to look about them and have overcome the habit of visiting Europe, where they are received by royalty, it is not surprising that they should be taken with a desire for ancestral homes, says the Philadelphia Record. In the first impulse several of them have bought up the ancestral homes of impoverished English aristocrats and attempted to enjoy the emotions which are commonly ascribed to the man who inherits baronial halls, oil portraits, tombs and vast game preserves. It has been noted, however, that after a very brief experience most of them have turned up again in the neighborhood of Wall street, where their most exciting and happiest days have been spent. The fact is that life in the foreign ancestral home is too like a pioneer existence to please the American millionaire for long. To equip the place with electric lights or even with gas; to install a hard coal furnace and hot air pipes, and all such modern improvements as hot and cold water, dumb waiters, electric bells, swift-footed young servants, telephones, soft carpets and whatever makes living comfortable—the things for which the millionaire labored in his most active days—would be ridiculous. No man can experience or pretend to experience the state of mind of a born aristocrat in his ancestral home without submitting to ancient conditions.

The shrewder American millionaires propose to build their own ancestral homes in their own country within easy reach of the busy cities and where no traditions bind them to the life of privation which is the lot of the foreign aristocracy.

WANTED QUEEN'S COURIER.

Rich American Held Out Financial Inducement to the Servitor of Victoria.

"When your American millionaire wants anything he wants the best," observed an Englishman who was a "queen's messenger" in Victoria's reign. "He's willing to pay well for it, too.

"I know this from an experience I once had in Constantinople. After my signature on the hotel register I added, for reasons of my own, 'queen's courier.'

"The next day I was surprised to receive a card bearing the name of a well-known wealthy American. I couldn't remember the gentleman, but, thinking that I'd probably met him on a steamer or on a train somewhere, I told the servant to show him up.

"A few minutes later a short, fat man who conveyed the general effect of too much diamond stud and watch chain was ushered in.

"'I rose to meet him.

"'How are you?' he started off in a business-like voice. 'You're the queen's courier, ain't you? Well, now, I'll tell you. I'm here with my family—been tourin' Turkey, y' know—and our courier's left us. Now I know you've got a pretty comfortable job with the queen, but I don't care how much it is: if you'll come with us, we'll give you a darn sight more'n she's payin'. What d'yer say?'

RAILROAD TO CLIMB ALPS.

Electric Line Up the Jungfrau Will Be Completed in a Short Time.

An electric railway which, when finished, will be the highest in Europe is now nearing completion up the Jungfrau in the Swiss Alps. It will be seven and a half miles long and its terminal station will be at an elevation of 13,670 feet. It is for the most part constructed through tunnels, and the last station will be connected with the summit of the Jungfrau by a lift 242 feet in height and a winding staircase. The power for producing the electric current will be derived from waterfalls on the mountain. The starting point of the line is at the Scheidegg station, at an altitude of 6,180 feet, on the Wengern Alp system, and the first station is the Eiger glacier, 7,045 feet high. A doctor will be in attendance at a certain altitude in order to attend to passengers and advises them or not according to the state of their health as to the safety of their journeying to the summit. The ascent will occupy about one and three-quarter hours, and the stations are to be luxuriously fitted up, so that passengers who may feel any ill effects from the rarefied air will be able to rest in comfort before proceeding on the journey.

An Ingenious Cadet.

An ingenious cadet of an English scientific corps has made all electricity serve him in the morning and boil his coffee at the same time. The minute hand of his clock was made to bring two spring contacts together and thus send an electric current to ring the rising bell. The current, at the same time, actuated a small electro-magnet, which allowed some sulphuric acid to run out of a spoon and ignite a match, which, in turn, lighted a spirit lamp under the coffee. Where at the time he was dressed his coffee was hot.

Average Number of Children.

The best calculation that can be made shows that the average number of children to the white native family a century ago in the United States was more than six; in 1830 it had fallen to less than five; in 1860 to less than four; in 1872 to less than three; in 1900, among the "upper classes" in Boston, to less than two.

First Prune Tree.

The first prune tree was planted in California in 1870 by a Frenchman, who brought the tree to this country from France. The first orchard—of ten acres—began to yield in 1875.

HOLDS LUCRATIVE JOB.

Income of Secretary of Arizona Exceeded That of the President of the United States.

Isaac Taft Stoddard, of Phoenix, Ariz., secretary of Arizona, is in Washington on a leave of absence to answer charges preferred at the last session of the territorial legislature. The Maricopa County Republican Press association is the author of the complaints. Among other things is charged the "maintenance of a corrupt and unscrupulous lobby at the capitol."

The fight against Stoddard is being made by men in his own party. They say they can furnish evidence of corruption and malfeasance.

Until recently Stoddard held the most lucrative political office in the United States. The fees of the secretary, consisting largely in legal tribute from foreign corporations, incorporating under the laws of this territory, constituted an income exceeding the amount paid by the country to the president; Gov. Brodie recommended in his message to the legislature that these fees go into the territorial treasury, the work to be performed by the auditor. A bill embodying this recommendation was introduced. The secretary, it is alleged fought it inch by inch until within a few days of the close of the session, when it narrowly passed. He is now accused of having bribed legislators, making false official reports and with the destruction of his fee books.

Mr. Stoddard is the son-in-law of Judge Celora Martin, of Binghamton, N. Y., and is credited with having influence with Both Odell and Platt.

HIS PRIDE AROUSED.

How a Prince Was Cured of a Bad Habit Which Is Quite Common Among Boys.

An amusing story is told of how one of the kaiser's sons was cured of a habit he had of getting up and going down to breakfast without being washed.

If possible, the little prince would slip out of bed and into his clothes before the nurse arrived on the scene to attend to his dressing, for thus he escaped the matutinal bath which he detested. Before entering the room where the royal family breakfasted the little prince would stroll around the house, and each time he passed the sentry he enjoyed being saluted by the soldier, says Home Notes. At breakfast he would inform his brothers of the soldier's salutation with great satisfaction, and thus it happened that a lady in waiting was struck with a bright idea, which she communicated to the empress. Acting on this communication, the empress sent for the sentry and bade him notice the little prince's appearance and not to salute him if he appeared with unwashed face.

PRINCE ADALBERT.
(German Sailor Prince Who Was Not Always Fond of Water.)

Next morning the young prince again left his room before the nurse entered; he went for a stroll, but to his great disappointment the sentry took not the least notice of him. Immensely disappointed and upset, he told his mother, with tears in his eyes, that the sentry had not acknowledged him.

"It is because you have a dirty face," said the empress.

From that day forward there was never occasion to reprove the little lad for failure to take his morning bath.

Toad Shower in Utah.

During a thunderstorm in Weber county, Utah, the rain carried down millions of small toads, from an inch to an inch and a half in length. They were so deep on the highway that they clogged the wheels of vehicles, and it was with difficulty that teams could get through.

Miniature Oak Trees.

Little oak trees, not more than an inch and a half in height, are grown by Chinese gardeners. They take root in thimbles.

TEXAS BOLL WEEVIL

Eats $30,000,000 Worth of Good Cotton Every Year.

His Appetite Will Make Clothing Prices Higher—Lone Star State Offers $50,000 Reward for a Way to Kill Him.

Housewives of America, you have a new insect enemy, and his name is Mr. Boll Weevil.

Mr. Boll Weevil is busy eating cotton in the wide cotton fields of Texas. He eats cotton at the rate of $3,000,000 worth a year. If the time hardly comes when you have to pay seven cents, instead of five cents, for a spool of machine cotton, and from three to five cents a yard more for all the dainty dimities and lawns and organdies with which you delight to attire yourself and your sunny-haired little daughters, you will have only Mr. Boll Weevil to thank for it.

"Who is he, and where did he come from, and what has he done?" These are pertinent inquiries questions than you know. Here are some of the things he already has done, according to the Chicago American:

He has made W. P. Brown, chief factor in the cotton market, half a million dollars richer by the rise in cotton in a single day.

He has become so menacing that the state government of Texas has offered a reward of $50,000 for any means that may be devised to vanquish him.

He has caused a serious shortage in this year's cotton crop.

He has baffled the entomologists of the federal government in their efforts to check his ravages.

He has brought together a convention

THE BOLL WEEVIL.
(Cotton Eating Pest Magnified Over Fifty Times.)

of 500 busy men at Dallas, Tex., to plot his assassination.

And he is only a tiny bug.

The boll weevil is a beetle with a huge proboscis, and came originally from Mexico. The extension of cotton growing in the southern counties of Texas made a bridge for him to cross the Rio Grande, and he was first noticed in Bee county, Tex., in 1894. The agricultural department experts proposed to the Texas legislature to stop growing cotton along the river for two years, and starve the assassin out. "Who is going to pay the planters for this sacrifice?" asked the legislators.

Since then the beetle has traveled at the rate of 75 miles to the northward, and 25 miles to the eastward every year. Texas soil and the weevil has thrived like the rabbit in Australia, for the females lay 300 to 700 eggs a year. They develop with the cotton boll itself, and eventually blight it so that it does not open.

Latest reports say that the pest is present in Louisiana and Georgia, as well as Arkansas. Boll weevil news has become a factor in the stock market; the bears try to suppress it. Louisiana opinion is that the soil and the climate of the state will prevent any further spread there. Arkansas and Georgia confidently hope the same.

Insecticide does no good. Going over the field with revolving brushes that sweep off the affected plants is too costly. The hope that a certain "green bug" which was the natural enemy of the weevil had been found was soon dashed. The damage to the crop is $30,000,000 a year in Texas.

Last year a large number of representative cotton men, with government experts and entomologists to advise, met in Dallas to begin a systematic fight against the enemy. At their behest the state government offered $50,000 to any one who could find a remedy for the evil. Thousands of methods have been exploited, without anybody having a shadow of a claim to the reward.

The Dallas convention just held consisted of men representing the cotton interest, not only of Texas, but of all parts of the south and even the north. Texas to-day would doubtless give $10,000,000 as quickly as it would have given $50,000 a year ago for a remedy.

Made Captive Devour Mud.

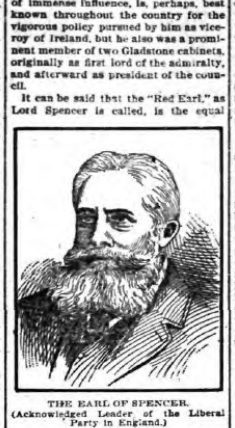
Ben Michaels, George Dubery and Fred A. Rodgers were arrested at the Coltax (Wash.) county jail for kidnaping. They had a negro boy 14 years of age disguised as a white girl from Cuba, and compelled him to eat mud. Rufus Stone, the boy's father, came from Spokane and charged the men with having kidnaped his son. They were doing a good business when arrested.

THE EARL OF SPENCER.

May Become Prime Minister of Great Britain If Liberals Return to Power.

According to all accounts, it is now practically settled that, should the liberal party return to power as the result of the present political crisis in Great Britain, the premiership will be handed over to the earl of Spencer, Lord Spencer, who for years has been a liberal of immense influence, is, perhaps, best known throughout the country for the vigorous policy pursued by him as viceroy of Ireland, but he also was a prominent member of two Gladstone cabinets, originally as first lord of the admiralty, and afterward as president of the council.

It can be said that the "Red Earl," as Lord Spencer is called, is the equal



THE EARL OF SPENCER.
(Acknowledged Leader of the Liberal Party in England.)

of Lord Rosebery, or Mr. Asquith, as a statesman, but he is regarded as the only liberal leader of the first rank under whom the various disagreeable factions of the party of Gladstone could work in harmony at the present time. It is practically certain that neither Lord Rosebery, nor Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the present liberal leader, would care to hold office under the premiership of the other, but pretty well authenticated report has it that both would be willing to hold portfolios in a cabinet presided over by Lord Spencer. In such case Lord Rosebery probably would become secretary of state for foreign affairs, while it is thought that Sir Henry would be made a peer, and thus transferred to the upper house. Mr. Asquith becoming leader of the house of commons, with the ticklish job on his hands of circumventing the assaults of Mr. Chamberlain, who would almost certainly be the leader of the opposition.

It has never been said of the "Red Earl" that he has had any great ambition for the premiership, and although he has held various offices in parliament and in court, he is much attached to the life of a country gentleman. He owns 27,000 acres in Northamptonshire, and his half brother is his heir.

Turkish Minister Thinks Mendicants of Philadelphia Are Nervier Than All Others.

delphia. "You have here," he said, "an enterprising and intelligent collection of beggars. One of them approached me this morning. He told a moving tale of misfortune; then he asked me for a little money; I put my hand in my pocket to find that I was altogether out of change. 'My man,' I said, 'I have nothing for you now, but in an hour I shall be passing this way again. Then, I promise you, you shall get something from me.' 'All right, sir,' said the beggar; 'but all the same,' he added, fretfully, 'you wouldn't believe the amount of credit I give in this way.'"

Human Ostrich Not Wanted.

Lee W. Wright, "the human ostrich," who eats oyster shells, pieces of glass, tacks, buckles, wire nails and tough articles of that kind, lately applied for a place as clerk in the Mobile post office. The officials deemed him an unsafe man to have around, and he was so informed.

Birds Fear Earthquakes.

During a recent earthquake in North Wales the birds showed signs of extreme terror. One would imagine that of all creatures, birds have the least reason to be afraid of an earthquake; yet it seems to affect them with the same violent fear as those which are tied to the earth.

THE HOUSES OF MEXICO.

Solidly Built of Brick or Adobes and But Little Wood Is Used in Any of Them.

There is a minimum of wood used for house construction in the cities of Mexico, and there is absolutely nothing to burn except what furnishings the houses may contain, says Arboriculture. The walls are solidly built of stone and brick, or, in the less costly structures, of adobes, which are thickly plastered inside and out with mortar or stucco. The floors are of brick, stone or tiles, while the roofs are of brick, laid in mortar, or, in some cities, of semi-cylindrical clay tiles. Many roofs are acked with brick, laid flat, not on edge, and it is marvelous how slight a curve is given some of these arches. Yet they support heavy weights and have lasted through centuries.

Flat roof are supported by 6x6-inch hewn pine joists, placed eight inches apart. These joists are often 20 feet in length. The doors are heavy, hanging upon ornamented wrought strap hinges, and secured by strong, handmade locks, which have remarkably large, complicated keys. Practically the only wood used in construction are the doors and joists which support the roof. The church roofs are invariably of brick arches, usually several arches in each. There are no such fire traps in Mexico as those mansard roofs of French and American cities, or the frail dwellings of China, or the universal wooden structures which have made fire insurance so great a burden in the United States, and which cause so great and continuous expenditures for fire protection.

RATTLERS DONE IN STONE.

Venomous Reptiles Clearly Outlined in Tracery on Indianapolis Federal Building.

One of the pinnths in the north front of the new federal building promises till the close of mind of the inveterate loper, for on its surface in a delicate tracery is apparently the outline of many rattlesnakes, says the Indianapolis News. An old stone man from the Bedford quarries called attention to the freak several days ago and said that such markings were very unusual.

According to his story these snakes existed many years ago, in prehistoric times, back in the era when the picks for fairy stories were laid. Possibly these snakes were cold, according to his story, anyway they coiled closely to one another and in that form were petrified and were gradually turned into stone. The stone expert also pointed out where the rattles of the snake may be seen plainly.

One of the most peculiar features of the stone is the fact that the tracery shows most plainly during damp weather, and if it were on the south side of the building, it is said, the sun would soon bleach its delicate tracery until it would be no longer discernible. On account of its present situation the sun seldom reaches it, but when it does the outlines of the snakes completely disappear.

WORKS LIKE A MACHINE.

Mechanical Execution of the Telegraph Operator Illustrated by an Edison Tale.

Thomas A. Edison believes there is no worker as mechanical as the telegraph operator. In an argument over this point with a number of friends the other night he told the following story, says the New York Times.

"One night when I was a 'rub' operator in Cincinnati, I noticed an immense crowd assembling in the street outside a newspaper office. I called the attention of the other operators to the crowd, and we sent a messenger boy out to find the cause of the excitement. He returned in a few minutes and shouted out:

"'Lincoln's shot!'

"Then all the operators looked from one face to the other to see which man had received the news. All the faces were black, and every man said he had not taken a word about the shooting.

"'Look over your file,' said the boss to the man handling press stuff.

"For a few moments we waited in suspense, and then the man held up a sheet of paper containing a short account of the attack on the president. The operator had worked so mechanically that he had handled the news without the slightest knowledge of its significance."

Hot Springs "Blowed Out."

The Cimarron salt fields in Indian territory boast of a large hot spring, which forms a pool about 20 by 60 feet. A story of this spring is told by cattlemen who camp near by. One night last summer a thunderstorm was raising over the plain, when a bolt of lightning descended. Instantly a great volume of flame shot up a thousand feet into the sky from the spring, and continued so for 20 minutes. The cowboy claims that the hot springs "blowed out" and that the location changed several rods.

Photograph and Birds.

A perfect phonographic record of the exquisite song of the brown thrush was produced before the American Ornithologists' union by Prof. S. D. Judd. With equal success Dr. Judd has been experimenting with other birds, and his achievements are attracting attention in the scientific world. The educational possibilities of the undertaking are generally conceded. Nature study in schools is just now receiving more attention.

Caustic Alkalis.

The electrolytic production of caustic alkalis and chlorine has proved of the greatest importance to the world of trade. The chlorine produced is used for making bleaching powders which, in turn, has revolutionized the bleaching trade here and abroad.

THE CENSUS BUREAU.

Interesting Figures from the Report of Director North.

An Available Balance on Hand from Last Year of Over $400,000—Good Work Done in Collecting Cotton Statistics.

According to the annual report of the director of the census for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, the twelfth census of the United States cost $13,115,429.27, according to the computations made by Director S. N. D. North.

The total amount of disbursements for the permanent census office during the year was $1,283,936.28. To this sum should be added the accounts chargeable against the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, which have been presented for payment, amounting to $60,485.65, making, since July 1, 1903, the total cost for that year $1,344,421.93. It is estimated that the cost of printing ordered during the same year, but according to information obtained from the government printing office, not begun until after the end of the year, and therefore chargeable to the appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904, will be about $70,000. The total cost of the census office from its organization under the act of March 3, 1899, to the close of the last fiscal year was $13,115,429.27. The cost of carrying on the work of the office for the fiscal year covered by this report was $402,268.29 less than the appropriations available for that purpose. Under the provisions of the act to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year, as construed and interpreted by the attorney general, the whole of this unexpended balance is available for general census purposes during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904. Adding this unexpended balance to the regular appropriation voted by congress for the conduct of the census office for the current fiscal year, $1,163,260 (which includes the allotment of $250,000 in the appropriation for public printing and binding for that year), the total sum available for that purpose is $1,535,528.29, or $242,046.36 in excess of the total expenditures for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903.

Considerable space in the report is devoted to a resume of the work of the division of manufacturers, one of the most important branches of the bureau. This division has had charge of the work of collecting statistics relating to electric and street railways, mines and quarries, electric light and power plants, employees and wages, cotton production and all things relating to manufactures.

With regard to the work done in the collection of cotton statistics, Mr. North says:

"Another branch of work intrusted to this division has been the collection of statistics of the quantity of cotton ginned in the United States from the crop of 1902, in accordance with the provisions of section 9 of the act establishing the permanent census office. Compliance with this provision of law has required the employment of 626 local special agents, located in as many counties throughout the cotton-growing states, and also a considerable office force. Three millions of bales were issued during the cotton-ginning season. The first covered the cotton ginned up to October 18, and the second to December 13, and the third the quantity ginned from the entire growth of 1902. In addition to the collection of the statistics the field and office force perfected the official list of ginneries, which now contains the names of 32,753 gins, of which 30,948 were active during the season of 1902. The collection of these statistics required that three reports should be obtained from each of these gins, making a total of 92,844 reports, which were obtained by a personal visit to each gin. The rapidity with which this vast number of reports was secured, transmitted to the census office, tabulated, added and the results made public is a striking illustration of the perfection of the machinery for the collection of statistics of this character.

"The cost of the field service required in this inquiry for the season of 1902 was $58,080. For the crop season of 1903 the reports are now completed, and the cost of the service will this year be increased accordingly, and will reach approximately $97,500. In view of the enormous importance of the cotton crop, and the advantage to planters and consumers of obtaining from early and accurate information as to the size of the crop, it is believed that this annual expenditure on the part of the government is warranted. The census office was established by the constitution, to give the public an accurate and final statement of the size of the crop of 1902 as early as April 1 of the present year, which was five months earlier than this important information has ever before been available from any governmental source. Its important bearing upon the cotton market, in a season of such unusual activity as that through which we have passed this year, is apparent."

THE NEW WOMAN

She Will Move the World

We do not live in a republic; not really, you know. The founders of the nation, who held it to be self evident that all mankind are created equal, thought they were starting a republic, but they were mistaken. I can prove it to you. The "upper circles," which means the rich class of this land, were recently shocked by the report that a bachelor belonging to their sacred ranks was going to marry a girl who worked for her living. The young man was nothing to write intellectually or physically. If he had been a poor youth he might possibly have earned a rather shabby living as some kind of an underling, but, having inherited an annual income that of itself would have constituted a fortune during lifetime for half a dozen large families if it had been divided among them, he was great things, according to us, the people, who get down upon our faces and worship those who have money. The girl was a good girl, well educated and at least as well mannered as many of the gay set to which the youth belonged, yet the rumor that the millionaire was actually to marry her created almost as much disturbance as the story that the German crown prince wanted to marry an American beauty. Society breathed again, however, for the rumor concerning the engagement of a millionaire to a working girl was shown to be false, as false, for instance, as the foundation upon which social distinction in America is built. The splendid dream of the signers of the Declaration of Independence has been nearly despoiled. Only this much remains of it—that there is yet in our land opportunity for every person to become a true lady or gentleman in spite of money worship. There are the public schools, the night schools, the free lectures, the literary clubs. All may secure a good education. All in this country may acquire the manners and the language of the cultured man and woman.

The idea of what true social distinction is based upon has somehow lodged itself in my head and will not out. A boor, whether man or woman, is one who is ignorant, selfish, ill bred and careless and untidy in personal habits. There are such often among millionaire men and women, and these cannot be ladies and gentlemen. On the other hand, I have had a mechanic, a steamfitter, come into my flat to repair a hot water pipe who had the manners of a knight. He was noble looking, clean and tidy as to his dress, perfect as to his English, scientific in knowledge of his business. That man was a gentleman, and George Washington could not have overshadowed him. Let every one of the hundreds of thousands of American girls who earn a modest living in shop, factory or office know that it is incumbent on her to be a real lady, gentle, sincere and low voiced, courteous and polished in her manners, correct in her English, tidy in her dress. As truly as the sun shines, this is all that constitutes the real lady, and every woman can achieve it.

The older I grow the fewer opinions I have concerning other people's affairs.

* *

Girls, learn to use your hands. Learn to use hatchet, hammer, saw, chisel and screwdriver as well as the needle. Learn to draw from the real object and to draw well. You can do that without a teacher. Manual training is now the demand. The woman who cannot use her hands will be left.

* *

Since written history began men have been making fun of women and reviling and blaming them. The oldest records show it. Adam began it in the garden of Eden. It constitutes a large part of the stock in trade of the funny papers today. Yet now, when woman has learned to write, if she says one word against man instantly man squeals out that she is "antagonizing him" and must stop it, for he can't stand it. Dear, dear! What of all the centuries during which man has been antagonizing woman?

* *

The superintendent of the telegraph company that has recently employed girls instead of boys as messengers in Boston reports, "The girls are giving us better service than the boys, as they attend strictly to business."

* *

I am glad scientific authorities are beginning to find out what some of us have always known—that hard work does not drive half so many people crazy as laziness. There is no preservative of health, happiness and youthfulness like steady employment at work one loves enthusiastically. And if you don't like your work and can't quit it yet make yourself like it. You can do that, and there is everything in it.

* *

During the late campaign in New York city a woman's organization held one of the largest of the many political meetings. The president of the woman's league occupied the chair and introduced the men speakers to an audience consisting mostly of men. The speakers were candidates for various offices. The same league of women raised and paid to the men's committee hundreds of dollars to help run the campaign. The women raised the money, and the men spent it. Thus it seems that politically woman is good enough to do everything except hold office and vote.

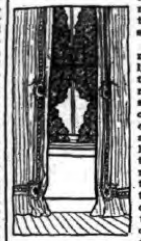
WINDOW FURNISHINGS.

They Need Not Be Expensive In Order to Be Pretty.

The window is perhaps the most important feature of the room, and if it is tastefully decorated the whole room looks pretty. The careful house furnisher looks out first for the carpets and curtains, and then somehow the rest of the furniture seems to take care of itself.



A DAINTY EFFECT.

This does not mean necessarily that the curtains must be rich and expensive. The day of heavy brocades is past, and we are no longer limited to highly ornamented lace curtains. In fact, the stiff white curtain has entirely gone out of style. For the drawing room there are filmy curtains of lace or net, very soft and creamy in tint, and some of these are quite inexpensive. They are not suspended by means of hooks or rings, but are shirred on to a narrow brass bar placed on the inside of the window frame. These curtains are frequently quite short, reaching in some cases only to the sill. If a second curtain is desired it hangs in straight folds down to the floor and is drawn back in order to show the dainty inner curtains. The sketch shows a pretty effect. These outer curtains need not be expensive. There are silk and linen mixtures in old rose, pale green, pale blue and yellow, which are very effective. They come in empire or Louis XV. designs and in wreaths, crowns and fleur-de-lis. Then there are the linen English cretonnes so heavily ribbed and mellow in their pale colorings that they look like tapestry. Figured china silk makes pretty outer curtains, too, especially when combined with white woodwork.

The inner shades need no longer be of unattractive linen. They now come in all the pale shades to match the room, and the ends are decorated with fringe in scallops or with two insertions of coarse lace and a lace edge dyed to match the shade.

For the bedrooms nothing is prettier than plain muslin frilled, or if one wishes a change from white curtains there are pretty French mulls daintily sprayed with rosebuds. These can either be made up by themselves or with white ruffles.

There are ecru net curtains for the dining room and library, and the newest of these come with a border of applique in red, blue or green. They sell for $5 a pair. But plenty of pretty materials are sold by the yard, and as they only require a narrow hem they are easily made. Oriental weaves in stripes or solid colors are always in good taste.

The figured madras is the prettiest material for window draperies that has been seen in many a day. The ground work is sheer, allowing the light to pass through, and the figurings in dull reds, greens and yellows give somewhat of a stained glass effect. Curtains of this description are not caught back. They hang in straight folds to the floor and are not very full in order that the figurings may be clearly seen. If the woodwork is pretty they are shirred on to a small rod inside of the frame and close to the window.

ENTRANCE HALLS.

How They May Be Furnished Like Living Rooms.

Nowadays many houses have square rooms for entrance halls instead of the narrow, cheerless affairs of the past, and these are furnished much in the style of a living room.

The illustration shows how an antique idea was utilized, and a very smart effect was gained.

The woodwork is in squares of dark oak, and the ceiling is tinted to harmonize. The massive fireplace and the carved tables and chairs are all of this rich, dull finish, and the tone is relieved by the red leather cushions of the chairs, by the brass andirons and by the old portraits in their dull gilt frames. The old English window is particularly attractive, with its frosted panes and figured dimity curtains, and the deep red rug adds another touch of color to the whole.

SEPARATE WAISTS.

They Still Are Worn In Spite of Some Dressmakers.

The separate waist still flourishes in pale tints to match the costumes with which it is worn. Gray, lavender and pure white seem to be the favorite colors. The most serviceable material is crepe de chine, but lace, soft silks and chiffons are all popular.

The wide collar or cape effect is also smart on waists, and where this is not seen the long shoulder seam takes its place.

V shaped yokes of moderate size are effective on a separate blouse, and the silk or crepe de chine is tucked in groups all around. Stole trimmings are greatly in demand, and these are made daintily out of lace and embroidery.

Black and white effects in lace are gained by means of embroidery touches. Circular gaugings are used for yokes and are often relieved by stripes of fancy embroidery.

Elbow sleeves are voluminous affairs, with frills reaching far below the length of the arm. These frills are all of sheer chiffon net, etc., put on very full.

The illustration shows a peau de soie gown trimmed with white chiffon and renaissance lace.

Brief Hints For Dainty Winter Dresses and Wraps.

dressmaker, for she must plan the trimming carefully in order to avoid their appearing clumsy.

Spotted and figured velvets are much in demand this winter.

Cream evening wraps are all the rage again for evening wear. They are trimmed with Irish lace and sable.

French sailor shapes of coarse lace and fur are among the novelties. They are trimmed with beautifully shaded velvet flowers.

Chiffon novelties are sewed at intervals on lace ruffles to give a fluffy effect.

Hair decorations are of a more modest size to go with the low style of hair dressing.

Gun metal gray is a very fashionable tint and harmonizes well with moleskin and squirrel and with the rich looking plushes which so closely follow the shades and markings of these furs. A very pale Japanese blue goes admirably with the gun metal tint, but it requires an amplitude of lace of fleelle tone and some brightly enameled or old silver buttons to make a smart gown.

The cut shows an evening coat of white cloth, Irish lace and sable.

GIRLS WITH SMALL INCOMES

They Must Select Their Costumes With Great Care.

The girl with a small income must choose her costumes with care, but if she does this she will often find herself better dressed than her sister whose larger means sometimes makes her purchase things without due reflection.

Always remember that it is better to have one good costume than three in*different* ones. Study the styles carefully, and choose what you find best suited for you.

With one walking costume of mixed goods and a dressy tailor made for visiting, a girl will find herself well dressed for the street. The walking costume may be made of black flecked with white, of navy blue or of brown, the skirt kilted just to clear the ground and the jacket three-quarter length.

The gloves and petticoat should match the costume with which they are worn.

A turban shape is pretty to go with the walking costume, and it may be trimmed with shaded cock's plumage.

The illustration shows a useful gray, cloth coat having a tinted lace collar. It is trimmed with mouflon fur.

WHAT IS WORN.

Colors and Fashion Adopted by Well Gowned Women.

Bright blues are very smart for afternoon gowns, made with the hat to match. Browns and grays are to be met with on all sides, and quite a bit of lavender and purple is also popular. Coarse laces are dyed to match blue and brown chiffons, and the effect of a gown of this description is very smart.

The real old fashioned Marie Antoinette belts are being revived, and these are boned in a dozen places so that they will be sure to retain the shape of the figure.

The new skirts are fuller than ever, and they are much better made unlined and simply worn over a slip or a well fitting underskirt.

Petticoats are becoming more voluminous, and they have more ruffles than ever in order to hold out the full skirts. These new petticoats require as much skill in cutting as an outside skirt.

Ecru lace is used in a variety of ways for gowns, waists and even negligees. In the picture you will see a negligee of this ecru lace trimmed with dainty narrow velvet beadings.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

CHIFFON VELVET.

The New and Supple Weave Which Has Become So Fashionable.

Chiffon velvet has almost entirely supplanted the ordinary make of this material, for it is so supple and so lustrous that even the best silk velvet looks cheap by its side.

At almost any smart function this winter chiffon velvet dresses prevail. They are made in elaborate tailor fashion and are worn with handsome stoles of fur and much bejumped toques.

The most fashionable color seems to be gun metal gray, and the luster of this is toned down in spots by masses of embroidery and deep gray and white fringe.

Next in popularity comes an odd, rather silvery shade of brown, which goes particularly well with sables or silver fox.

In one of New York's most fashionable tea rooms recently no fewer than eight beautiful costumes in chiffon velvet of this shade were to be seen.

There are also very smart gowns of black chiffon velvet trimmed with rich Irish lace and black chenille, but these are worn by older women.

The dressy tailor made may be of gray cloth or velvet, made with a bit of fringe or dyed lace and some pretty buttons. A white or gray lace waist may accompany this and a large gray and white plumed hat.

In millinery chiffon velvet is positively unequaled, for, it is light in weight and lends itself to intricate manipulation.

The illustration shows a hat of this velvet in a fawn shade. It is trimmed with a brown and green wing.

SMART BOLEROS.

Changes In the Cut of Waists and Small Coats.

Three-quarter length cloth costumes are seen for general utility wear. For dressier occasions, however, the short bolero with the wide belt is to be preferred. This bolero is made in double and triple effects, and often the overhanging part is bordered with fringe.

The outline of the figure is lost in many of the new bodices, they are so befrilled. Bertha effects, and especially deep ones, are very smart, especially for evening toilets. Fullness is not only seen in the front, but also in the back, where it is frilled in to a wide, tight waistband.

Silk fringe with a deep network is one of the most fashionable trimmings possible, and it is much used on crepe de chine and velling gowns.

The pouch front is less assertive than formerly, but it still remains in a modified form.

Blouses of heavy lace are made with a thin lining of chiffon and a wide folded belt.

Velvet blouses are prepared for wearing with coat and skirt costumes, and the pin spotted velvets are most attractive when lightly trimmed with a few motifs of lace or made with a small V shaped yoke and collar of lace. Ornaments of chenille and silk are freely used on bodices and blouses, and lace is decorated with disks of velvet or with stitched bands and borders.

The illustration shows a bolero made of moleskin in a triple effect, with a wide jeweled belt. The turban worn with this is of ermine.

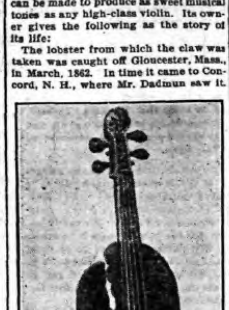
A CURIOUS VIOLIN.

Strange Musical Instrument Made from a Lobster's Claw by a New Jersey Genius.

The only violin in the world made from the claw of a giant lobster has just been completed by John H. Dadmun, of 429 Berkley street, Camden, N. J. This unique instrument, strange to say, can be made to produce as sweet musical tones as any high-class violin. Its owner gives the following as the story of its life:

The lobster from which the claw was taken was caught off Gloucester, Mass., in March, 1862. In time it came to Concord, N. H., where Mr. Dadmun saw it.



LOBSTER CLAW VIOLIN.
(Curious Instrument Made by a Man in New Jersey.)

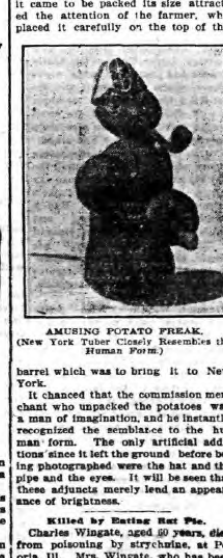
At that time the lobster weighed 17½ pounds. A single claw weighed 5½ pounds. The claw that Mr. Dadmun preserved, after the lobster had gone the way of such things, was 13½ inches long 7 inches broad and 2¾ inches thick.

Preserved among other curiosities of the Dadmun household, the giant claw remained a claw for many years. One day it occurred to its owner that it was shaped something like a violin, and he tried the experiment of fashioning it to look more like that popular musical instrument. After much patient effort Mr. Dadmun managed to transform the claw into a violin that could be played the tone was sweet, but not loud enough for an orchestra. Experiment proved that by changing the fittings and settings the tone could be made much louder. As it is now the violin when played properly sounds exactly like any other violin. It is doubtless the most curious musical instrument ever made.

POLITE POTATO FREAK.

After Being Supplied with a Hat This Tuber Closely Resembled Human Form.

The military looking potato whose portrait is presented herewith, was grown by a New York farmer. Neither the man who dug the potato nor those who packed it recognized its lifelike appearance and expression. It was unusually large, weighing a trifle more than a pound and a half. When it came to be packed its size attracted the attention of the farmer, who placed it carefully on the top of the



AMUSING POTATO FREAK.
(New York Tuber Closely Resembles the Human Form.)

barrel which was to bring it to New York.

It chanced that the commission merchant who unpacked the potatoes was a man of imagination, and he instantly recognized the semblance to the human form. The only artificial additions since it left the ground before being photographed were the hat and the pipe and the eyes. It will be seen that these adjuncts merely lend an appearance of brightness.

Killed by Eating Hot Pie.

Charles Wingate, aged 60 years, died from poisoning by strychnine, at Peoria, Ill. Mrs. Wingate, who has been much troubled by rats, made two pies. One of these she prepared for table use; in the other she put a large dose of strychnine. It was the intention of Mrs. Wyngate to place the rat pie on the floor of the closet, but she neglected to do so, and her husband, coming in hungry when she was not in the room, took the first pie he saw and ate it. Unfortunately, it was the wrong pie. The coroner's jury censured Mrs. Wyngate for leaving the poison in a manner so easily mistakable.

A PERFECT CATTERY

There Is Profit In It

There is no doubt the cat population ought to be improved, likewise diminished. One of the nuisances of this land is the ever increasing number of tramp cats that infest it. Starved, gaunt, stoned by small boys, destroying the precious wild birds, making night hideous with their yowlings, they troop in country and town. Real lovers of the feline tribe can wish nothing better than that these tramp cats be abolished off the face of the earth, and this should be done in the speediest, most merciful way wherever they are found by persons who have at heart the interest of both the cat and human races.

But rearing high bred, fashionable cats for profit—that is a different proposition. Women and cats somehow seem to belong together, there being apparently a peculiar sympathy between them. A few fashionable American ladies have already established catteries for their own pleasure and entertainment, though not specially as a source of income. Among these is Mrs. Hofstra, who is especially fond of Siamese cats. She has a cattery said to be worth $5,000, which costs her annually $1,500 to maintain. Mrs. Charles Wood is another cat fancier, and her champion feline is priced at $5,000. In the matter of cat culture Englishwomen are ahead of Americans, they having made the cat fad fashionable a number of years ago. In January, 1896, Lady Marcus Beresford founded the National Cat Club of Great Britain. It now holds annual shows which are very successful, 600 cats being entered for competition. Lady Marcus Beresford has the finest, handsomest and most elaborate cattery in England. The cat fad there is all the more popular because Queen Alexandra is a warm supporter of improved cat culture and fond of the animals themselves.

There might be profit in cat farming—rearing the common feline, just plain cat, for its fur, which is becoming valuable as the supply of fur bearing animals is being exhausted. It is practically certain, however, that rearing choice and fashionable cats for sale would return a good income. It already does so in Great Britain, where a number of women have taken the business in hand. A natural fondness for cats and a knack in taking care of them are necessary to begin. The rest can be achieved by intelligence, determination and perseverance.

A requisite to success would be the selection of fashionable breeds to rear for sale. The most popular at present are the long, silky, furry haired kinds, notably chinchillas, blue Persians and Siamese.

The chinchilla is of the color of the fur of that name. Her coat is extremely long, thick and silky, the tail very bushy. The cat in the cages in the illustration are chinchillas. The most famous cat in the world is a chinchilla, Zaida, valued by experts at $1,250. Zaida is a female and has taken more than seventy cups and prizes. She belongs to Miss Willoughby, an English lady. Chinchillas are among the most fashionable cats of all, but they are likewise rather delicate, apt to be attacked with pneumonia and consumption. This makes them somewhat difficult to rear. It is to be observed that a cat's lungs seem to be its weak point. Consumption, that, too, of a very infectious kind, is not uncommon among felines.

Almost or quite equal in favor with the chinchillas are the blue Persian cats. Angoras are the same as Persian, Angora being merely a Persian town famous for its pure bred, handsome cats. The fashionable Persian blue cat is a beauty among feline fanciers and brings a high price. The pure breed is all over blue, or what passes for blue among cat people, without a hair's variation from this color. Another distinguishing characteristic of blue Persians is an orange eye, that appears in no other cat.

Then there is the Siamese cat, which mews louder than a cat of any other breed can do, though it split its throat. For this reason some persons do not like Siamese cats. Still, those who do like them are enthusiastically fond of them, and that makes up. This breed of cats in Siam is only allowed to be owned by the royal family. That of itself is reason why it should be cultivated by fashionables. The Siamese cat of this breed is of a fawn color. Some specimens of the tribe owned by Mrs. Beresford are considered very rare and valuable are of a chocolate tint. The hair of cats of this breed is smoother and shorter than that of the Persians, and the eyes are always blue. A characteristic is two or more bald spots on the forehead.

The most successful and profitable cattery, of course, will be that in which the pets are allowed to live most nearly in the natural way.

Thursday, Dec. 10, 1903.

Dowie blames his downfall on the newspapers. After this let no one say that the influence of the press for the public good is on the wane.

What hinders the completion of the work on Girard avenue? The continued blocking of the thoroughfare is a source of annoyance to residents in that section.

Stories on "Mantle of snow covers city," and poems on "The beautiful snow" are now in order. The annual alarm on "peach crops blighted by frost" is yet several months off.

The reports of the Plainfield Organized Aid Association for the last year is very encouraging. Assistance was rendered in 331 cases, representing the expenditure of much money as well as time. The entire contributions for the twelve months amounted to $1,875.81, which speaks well of the generosity of Plainfielders.

John L. Moody, of Cranford, as county chairman of the Democratic party, has incurred the displeasure of some of the local party workers because of his alleged interference in local politics. Mr. Moody is a conscientious and able Democrat, and there is no reason to suspect that what he does is not for the best interests of his party. The attitude of the Plainfield delegates at the recent county convention was such as to cause alarm for the prospects of the party in this city.

MRS. A. J. WINCKLER BURIED

REV. C. L. GOODRICH AND REV. DR. E. L. EARP OFFICIATED AT OBSEQUIES.

Funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. A. J. Winkler were held Monday afternoon at 2:30 from her late residence on Park place. Rev. Charles L. Goodrich officiated, assisted by Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp. The services were attended by a large number of relatives and friends.

Rev. Mr. Goodrich read the Scriptures and spoke of the departed in a tender way, especially regarding her religious faith. He told of a beautiful dream she had a short while before her death in which she saw a glimpse of the future and of the friends of loved ones gone before. The pastor read parts from Pilgrim's Progress. Elmer Runyon sang several selections and Rev. Dr. Earp offered prayer.

The interment was in Hillside Cemetery. The pall bearers were: Warren, Edward and Elmer Weisman, grandsons, and Dykman Winkler, and Elmer Winkler, and William Smith, of New Brunswick, nephews.

A DEFECT IN PRIMARY LAW

NO PROVISION FOR ELECTION OF PRESIDENTIAL DELEGATES.

One of the first measures to engage the attention of the next Legislature will be an amendment to the imperfect primary law adopted at the last session.

In drafting the new primary law ex-Senator Stokes and his associates on the commission appointed for that purpose overlooked the fact that New Jersey was in the union, that she is entitled to a say in the matter of electing a President of the United States. No provision is made in the law for primaries to elect delegates to the State convention that names the delegates to the national convention.

Each State is entitled to double the number of delegates to the national convention as there are representatives in the congress of the United States. Thus New Jersey will have twenty-four delegates to the next national convention, twenty from the two congressional districts and four delegates-at-large.

The first step in the preliminaries for the national convention will be taken at a meeting of the Democratic national committee next month. This committee, on which Mr. Gourley is the New Jersey representative, will meet next month to issue the call for the national convention. Following this meeting the State committees in the various States will take action.

The primaries in this State will, in all probability, take place in April, and the State convention in May. It is expected that the national convention will be held in June.

Baldness is a sore affliction and it is a needless one when Reynolds' Petroleum Hair Tonic, for sale by T. S. Armstrong, Park avenue druggist, will cure it.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Hudson Theatre, one of the superb playhouses, has Marie Tempest in the "Marriage of Kitty" as its attraction. Included in the company is Leonard Boyne. Miss Tempest's name is sufficient to fill the house nightly, but in this instance she has a good drawing card, the "Marriage of Kitty" being something exceptional. The whole caste is good. Order your seats in advance by mail.

Frank Daniels is a fixed star in the domain of popular actors and he is adding newer brightness to his reputation by his funny stunts in "The Office Boy," which is enjoying a great run at the Victoria Theatre. Daniels is at his best in the show and this is saying a good deal considering past successes.

"The Little Princess" is the attraction at the Madison Square. It is a winning number among the New York theatrical offerings of the week and possesses merits which easily account for the large houses it is drawing. The curtain does not go up until 8:30 thus allowing the suburbanite to enjoy his dinner at home and get to the playhouse in ample time for the performance.

To fulfill the expectations of the thousands who each week go to Keith's for their amusements is no small undertaking. Not only must the entire bill be changed but no two must be alike. There must be an endless variety of variety, and the fact that no audience ever left the Union Square Theatre disappointed speaks volumes for the arrangement of the shows offered each week. Some are better than others, but all are good. Just which to class as best depends very much upon the tastes of those who witness them. This for all around merit once better could be put together than that which will be seen during the coming week.

Music lovers, long wearied and surfeited with rag-time airs and banal melodies supposed to illuminate the recent flood of musical comedy scores, will be interested in hearing that concerted numbers for male voices are being given special prominence in "Winsome Winnie," in which Miss Paula Edwardes appears as a star at the Casino. That in many cases, she has been to surround herself by an excellent company of actors and singers, and there is no time when she is the only pretty girl in evidence or the only one who had something of interest to say or to do.

The programme of the third Wetzler Symphony concert, which will take place Tuesday evening, December 8 at the Carnegie Hall contains works by the three great "B's" in music: Bach, Beethoven and Brahms. The orchestral numbers being a Suite in E flat by Bach, orchestra led by Mr. Wetzler, and the monumental C minor Symphony (No. 1) by Brahms; the soloists is Harold Bauer, the distinguished pianist who will play Beethoven's Concerto in E flat.

It is a good thing for the "Red Feather" management that the new and pretty Lyric Theatre has nearly 2,000 seats and plenty of wide aisles and foyer space. Although the De Koven-Klein-Cook operatic comique started off with a rush and its business each week has shown a substantial increase. Miss Grace Van Studdiford, with her voice of surpassing sweetness and purity, has scored the biggest kind of a hit with Broadway audiences. Thomas Q. Seabrooke's two comic songs "If I Only Had a Mustache Like the Kaiser," and "There's a Little Street in Heaven That They Call Broadway," are strikingly original and have become so popular that six and eight encores are the rule rather than the exception.

"Winsome Winnie" with petite Paula Edwards' hand on the bridle, came under the wire at the Casino last Tuesday, a winner, distancing all musical comedy competitors in the quality of music, the dash of action and the charms of her fair women. She proved a thoroughbred from start to finish, and the grand stand throng of first-nighters took her straight to their hearts. This is largely due to the fact that the theatre-going public is weary of banal melodies and hungry for the good old harmonies of light opera, with which "Winsome Winnie" score abounds.

Broadway, somewhat jaded by the long continued visitation of musical farces, French vaudevilles, colonial plays, emotional dramas and "society" stage hysterics, has been awakened from its lethargy by the appearance of "The County Chairman," George Ade's new rural comedy. This work, presented last week by Henry W. Savage for the first time in the East, met with recognition as enthusiastic and instantaneous as it was unexpected. George F. Marion, who is Mr. Savage's general stage director, has gained renewed distinction through the skill with which he has "put on" "The County Chairman," with its twenty two speaking players and 150 supernumeraries.

J. V. BOND'S FUNERAL HELD SATURDAY

Body of Former Plainfielder Interred in Borough Cemetery, After Brief Service.

SKETCH OF HIS CAREER

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD AT HIS LATE HOME IN NEWARK.

Dead Man a Member of A. O. U. W. and I. O. O. F.—Treasurer of Manufacturing Company—Active in Other Organizations.

The funeral services of Isaac Vanderveer Bond, treasurer of the Palmer-Price Varnish Company, of Newark, who died on Wednesday after a brief illness, were held from the residence in Newark, at 8 p. m. Friday. Rev. Dr. Lyman Whitney Allen, of the South Park Presbyterian Church, where Mr. Bond was a member, officiated.

Mr. Bond was for many years a member of the firm of Price, Bond & Co., and later of the firm of Bolen & Bond, varnish manufacturers. He was treasurer and one of the oldest members of the Inland Horse Association of New Jersey. Members of that organization, and of Radiant Star Lodge, No. 190, I. O. O. F., and the New Jersey Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, to which the dead man belonged, attended the obsequies.

Upon the arrival of the remains in this city Saturday, Rev. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian Church, accompanied the cortege to the North Plainfield Cemetery, where the interment took place. At the grave Mr. Herring conducted a short service. There was a very large number of floral tributes from relatives and friends.

Mr. Bond's wife was tragically killed at the North Avenue station in this city some time ago, while returning from the marriage of a relative. He was born in Plainfield sixty-nine years ago, but had lived in Newark nearly all his life. He is survived by three daughter, Mrs. Alexander M. Linnett and Mrs. Alexander Archibald, of Newark, and Mrs. O.W. Thompson, of Los Angeles, Cal.

"A FINE NATIONAL GUARD"

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S REPORT POINTS OUT THE MERITS AND DEFECTS.

Included in the annual report of Adjutant General R. Heber Breinnall, just submitted to Governor Murphy, is an interesting report on the condition of the guard by Inspector General Joseph W. Congdon.

It is shown that the strength of the National Guard has been increased within a year from 4,753 men to 5,008.

Referring to the condition of the National Guard of New Jersey General Congdon's report says:

"This is a fine National Guard organization, well uniformed and equipped. It is undoubtedly well experienced and practically efficient in military discipline, drill, rifle practice and the qualities that go to make up a practical citizen soldiery. As such an organization the people of New Jersey should be proud of it.

"The whole system of inspection is, in my judgment, faulty. The work cannot be done so hastily, as the time limit of the present laws governing inspections makes necessary, and be well or even completely done.

"The percentage of absentees from the muster rolls is smaller than ever before and is a subject of gratification. The percentage absent from this year's inspections was 10.03. Last year's absentees equalled 10 per cent. of the total. This 9 per cent. is, however, unreasonably and unnecessarily large. The mischief at the bottom of this percentage, which should never be more than 5 per cent. of absentees, lies with some few and particularly low-grade companies."

Hospital Benefit.

The conductors and motormen of Middlesex County street railways will hold a ball in Bound Brook Hall, Bound Brook, Friday, December 18 for the benefit of the Somerville hospital. The affair will be under the auspices of the ladies' auxiliary connected with the hospital. The benefit is in recognition of past kindnesses received by the trolley employes at the hands of the hospital authorities.

No Change at Clinton Avenue.

Mrs. S. A. Meader, who has been agent at the Clinton Avenue Station, on the New Jersey Central, for many years, still continues in that position. A few days ago an announcement was made that Charles Sutton, of Annandale, had secured the place. The item was obtained from an exchange. The fact is Mr. Sutton has secured a position as a helper at the Clinton Avenue Station.

ST. MARY'S SCHOOL GIVES A CONCERT

Incidentally the Medals Are Awarded and Pupils on the Roll-of-Honor Made Known.

PROGRAMME AS GIVEN

FATHER EGAN PRAISES THE CHILDREN FOR THEIR GOOD WORK.

Prize Winners Include Fourteen Pupils—Contest in Geography a Feature of the Affair—Complete Roll-of-Honor.

The monthly concert of St. Mary's Parochial School in the school rooms Friday afternoon was attended by a large number of pleased fathers and mothers of the pupils. The character of the tasks accomplished during the past month was set forth in an interesting programme and the pupils were praised for their good work by Rev. Father Andrew M. Egan. Reports were read of the progress made in the commercial, second, fourth and fifth grammars; and an entertaining contest in geography took place among the pupils of the second grammar.

The exercises opened with the singing of the hymn, "My Child, Give Me Thy Heart." Included in the programme were a concert recitation, "The Madonna Penitent;" a solo, "Two Little, Blue Little Shoes" by Miss Walsh; solo, "Molly Pitcher," Joseph Cullin; piano solo by Kathryn Galbraith; the singing of the "National Hymn of the Republic;" and a composition reading, "The Sphere of Woman" by Nellie Hanrahan.

Those named in the month's roll of honor in the school are: Commercial department, boys, Eugene Johnson; girls, Margaret Lutz; second grammar, boys, Henry Forrestel; girls, Miss Bebout; fourth grammar, James Motley and Mary Crosby; fifth grammar, James Comiskey and Mary McKenna and Mary McDonald; first primary, boys, William Sullivan and George Flatley; girls, Theresa Mullin, Elizabeth Fernt and Myra Tollivant; second primary, boys, James Geary, Joseph Brady and Walter Johnson; girls, Ellen Higgins and Helen McCarthy; third primary, Albert Naylor and Annie Sullivan.

The medal for improvement was drawn for by Elizabeth Brown, Catherine Galbraith, Margaret Watson, Mollie Traynor, Elizabeth McNerney, Edward Hanrahan. The medal for improvement in sewing was drawn for by Helen Hamilton, Christine McEachen, Mary McMenan, Mary Wilbe. Punctuality in attendance at Sunday mass and Sunday-school, medal drawn for by Cornelius McCarthy, second grammar, John Casey; fourth grammar, Kathryn Barry; fifth grammar, Nora McCarthy.

GUILD FOR NURSES.

Branch of Order to be Instituted Here on Friday Afternoon.

A branch of St. Barnabas' Guild for Nurses will be established in this city at a meeting next Friday afternoon, December 11 at 3:30 o'clock in the parish house of Grace Church. Mrs. William R. Howe, of Orange, will meet the graduate nurses of the city at that time for purposes of organization. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Grace Church, will be the chaplain.

St. Barnabas Guild was established on St. Barnabas Day, June 11, 1886. Rt. Rev. Cortland Whitehead, bishop of Pittsburg, is chaplain general of the order, and Archdeacon Mann, of the diocese of New Jersey, general chaplain for this State. "Blessed are the merciful" is the guild's motto.

Trolley Changes.

The local trolley cars, Sunday, were run under the same schedule that is followed after 7:30 at night, that is one car went to and fro Dunellen-Nethenwood line and the other four cars were obliged to do the work of five cars. This seems to work all right when the traffic is light, but it has been suggested that the rate of speed for night travel is too fast, in fact, making accidents more probable. The motorman is obliged to make his time and it requires a high rate of speed.

King's Daughters' Sale.

The Silver Cross Circle of King's Daughters will hold a sale of cake and useful articles, Saturday morning, Dec. 12, from 10 to 12, at the residence of Mrs. John Valiant, 38 Myrtle avenue.

For Better Trolley Service.

An effort will be made next spring to have the trolley company run a spur from Park avenue and Randolph road to Crescent Oval so that better accommodations can be given the people during the base ball season.

Election of Bank Directors.

The annual meeting of stockholders of the City National Bank for the election of nine directors will be held at the banking house on Tuesday, Jan. 12, from 1 to 2 o'clock.

FRANKLIN COUNCIL MUST PAY CLAIM

Junior Order Compelled to Pay Death Benefits, Though Dues in Arrears.

IS THE FINAL DECISION

VICTORIES WON BY WILLIAM VAN ALSTYNE'S COUNSEL, G. W. V. MOY.

Technical Defects in Pleadings—Case Does Not Establish a Precedent So Far as Merits of Claim Are Concerned.

George W. V. Moy, Esq., has scored a decisive victory in a suit against Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., and his client, William Van Alystine, of Watchung avenue, will be awarded the amount of his claim for benefits due by reason of the death of his son, Harry VanAlystine.

Three victories have been won by the plaintiff's counsel in as many courts, the final decision having been made by the Court of Errors and Appeals.

The case was fought purely on technicalities in pleading. Franklin Council refused to pay death benefits alleging that young VanAlystine was in arrears in his dues at the time of his death. Counsel for the defense set this up as a defense although pleading the general issue. For this defect, the Union County Circuit Court found in favor of the plaintiff. Then the case was appealed to the Supreme Court with a similar result. As a last resort, the case was again appealed to the Court of Errors and Appeals, and there the opinions of the lower courts were sustained.

This does not establish a precedent so far as the payment of death benefits when dues are in arrears, the merits of the case never having been gone into by the courts before which the suit was heard.

LITERARY.

(Land Grabbing.

The movement in Connecticut toward "saving the Connecticut shore" is likely to spread to all other sections of New England. Thirty years ago such a step would have been wholly unnecessary, since the coast was all public, but about that time the beginning of private occupancy of the shore began. At first, indeed, the owners did not attempt to secure the coast, but bought extensive tracts overlooking Long Island Sound. Their view being often obstructed by the public or by old landmarks, they then began acquiring the shore itself. During the past four years this shore grabbing has advanced with marked rapidity. In Maine it is estimated that over one-half the coast is privately owned.—Collier's Weekly.

One of the Bonaparts.

It would be useless to attempt a chronicle of Mr. Bonaparte's writings and other activities. He belongs to most of the good government organizations of the country, and has been the president of several of them. He has the commencement speech habit, and is wont to tell ambitious youths how the government should be reformed. He has fought for civic service reform and—a young man still—has lived to see many of his dreams come true. Personally he takes life easily and does not grow excited. He is a blue-blood of the blue-bloods, but he never mingles in the poverty-stricken, ancestor - worshiping "society" of Baltimore. He is a millionaire, but he does not bother about the stock market. He is the foremost lay Catholic in the Catholic capital of the Western hemisphere, and the friend, adviser and confidant of Cardinal Gibbons, but his religion is not obtrusive. His friends may be few, but they are friends worth having His enemies are enemies that every decent man should be proud to have.—From a Sketch of C. J. Bonaparte, in Leslie's Monthly for December.

F. W. WUNSTEN DEAD.

Apoplexy Carried Him Off, Before Medical Aid Could be Summoned.

Fred W. Wunsten died in his bed suddenly at 9 a. m. Saturday in his room at 913 West Front street. He was a hired man in the employ of Mrs. Marie Kuelen, who, hearing his groans, summoned assistance. Matthew Sweeney, who was passing the house, went to the man's room just as he breathed his last. Dr. Oregar was called in and notified the police, who in turn sent word to Dr. Westcott, county physician. Death was probably from apoplexy. Wunsten was the victim of a prolonged attack of rheumatism last winter, which it is thought weakened his heart.

D'Aubigne to Speak.

M. Merle D'Aubigne, of Paris, a relative of the great historian of that name, will preach at the First Baptist Church, next Sunday morning and at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church in the evening. He is interested in the work of the McAll Auxiliary and it is through the influence of the Plainfield branch that he comes to Plainfield to speak concerning the growth of that work in Paris.

Stage Line Discontinued.

Because it does not pay to run it, the stage heretofore run between this city and South Plainfield was discontinued Saturday. During the winter it is a cold journey to ride in such a vehicle and the people do not patronize it well. It is believed that before many years there will be trolley connection between Plainfield, South Plainfield and New Market, giving the people cheap and quick transportation.

Reception for Frenchman.

The women of the McAll Auxiliary have sent out invitations for friends of missions to meet M. Merle D'aubigne, of Paris, Monday afternoon, December 14, at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Craig Marsh, in West Eighth street.

ORDINANCE TO STOP REMOVAL OF HOUSES

Borough Council Acts Speedily to Prohibit Removal of Frame Buildings From City.

ILLEGAL LIQUOR SALES

THE AUTHORITIES ARE POWERLESS TO PREVENT ALLEGED ABUSES.

Reward Offered for Detection of Persons Destroying Street Lights and Signs—Park Club Wants a Storm Sewer.

The Borough Council, at its December meeting held Monday, found much business of more or less importance to occupy its attention, and one of the most important steps taken was the adoption of a resolution offered by Mr. Clark, which authorized the borough counsel to draft at once an ordinance prohibiting the removal of any frame building in the borough. In connection with the resolution, Mr. Clark stated that if such an act is legal an ordinance cannot be drafted too quickly as the borough seems to be the dumping grounds for these kind of structures. Mr. Clark added that the borough does not want to pass through another such experience as it had recently.

For the purpose of hastening action on the matter, the Council will hold an adjourned meeting next Friday night to consider the proposed ordinance. Mayor Smalley made a few remarks in relation to the resolution, reviewing the action of the borough in reference to the Sebring house, and he declared that as he had carried out the orders of the Council in that case and he was prepared to do the same in any future case of a similar nature. He advocated the refusal of all applications for the removal of frame buildings in the borough and asked for the endorsement of the Council in what he had done in the last trouble. He said that the borough would likely have a law-suit on its hands as a result of the arrest of John Goodwin, but he was not afraid of the final decision.

Another matter that was discussed at some length was that in reference to a complaint received from the Plainfield Electric Light Company regarding the breaking of incandescent lamps in the borough. It was the general opinion that this is the result of boys who use flobert rifles recklessly. In order to put a stop to this practice, a resolution offered by Mr. Clark, providing that a reward of $5 be paid to anyone securing the detection and conviction of any person or persons guilty of breaking these lamps or defacing street signs, was adopted. The resolution also provided that an advertisement of this action be inserted in the local papers.

A communication was received from Ottilie Emma Heinold, Ottilie Emma Schaeffer, Theodore F. French and Elston M. French in which the petitioners offered to dedicate the necessary fifty feet of land necessary to extend and widen Dver street from Greenbrook to what is known as upper Duer street. The matter was referred to the street committee and later Chairman Arnold offered a resolution that the street would be accepted if the petitioners would open up and grade the street. This was adopted.

A communication was received from S. St. John McCutchen, president of the Park Club, in which he asked the Council to construct a short storm sewer under Washington avenue on the Park Club side for the purpose of carrying off the surface water that usually floods the street at that point. Mr. Arnold stated later in the evening that improvements had been made in Washington avenue near the Park Club and the committee believed that no further trouble would be experienced there.

This report was presented by Collector G. W. Brown: Taxes and interest, $3,856 14; Board of Health, $46 03; special school, $1,972.99; license, J. H. Gracely, $284 87; rebate from State school tax, $35.68; dues received from Recorder, $12; interest from bank, $30 80; balance November 1, $11,369 71; total receipts, $17,639 22; disbursements, $7,219 36; cash on hand, $10,419 86. Last night claims amounting to about $4,000 were ordered paid by the Council.

Chairman Arnold, of the street committee, reported that $164 had been expended during the past month on street work and through a resolution he secured the endorsement of the Council in this action. Chairman Clark, of the fire, water and lamp committee, reported that $153 39 was expended in his department.

Mr. Lee, chairman of the police committee, stated that Chief Campbell reported four arrests made during November and the collection of $23 in fines. He also offered a resolution authorizing the payment of $5 to George Weise after his bill was properly sworn to.

A resolution offered by Mr. Arnold and adopted, provided for the erasure from the tax duplicate the names of several persons, who have either moved away or are not liable for tax for other reasons. The amount involved is about $50.

Mayor Smalley informed the Council that the lease on the present rooms would expire on April 1 next, and that he believed it would not be necessary to renew the lease as the new borough building would be completed the first of the year, when the new Council rooms would be ready for occupancy. The clerk was instructed to notify the owner of the present quarters of this fact.

The Mayor also made a few remarks concerning the sale of liquor in Baumgarbund Hall, stating that no person or persons who occupy that hall have a right to sell liquors; that no permit had been obtained from him for such a right and if any one was desirous of making a test case in the matter they were invited to go ahead and do so. A somewhat peculiar condition seems to exist at the hall. It is claimed that liquor is sold there yet no license has been given for that purpose. It is a question in the minds of the officials as to whether they have a right to stop the sale of liquor, inasmuch as they have no power to grant the sale of it. Any prosecution in this matter would have to be on the part of the county authorities.

Before the Council adjourned Mr. Nichols offered a resolution authorizing the drawing of warrants to pay the Watchung avenue bond, taxes and all notes now due. This was adopted.

PRAISE FOR T. H. KELLER.

Sporting Magazine Contains Picture and Says Complimentary Things of Former Plainfielder.

The current number of the Sporting Goods Dealer has on its frontispiece a good likeness of Thomas H. Keller, formerly of this city. In referring to him the paper says:

"He made his home in one of the New Jersey suburbs of New York City, and perhaps it was his one-time residence just in the State that prompted his fellow officers to choose him for colonel of a regiment of marksmen they organized at Sea Girt. However this may be, the fact remains that the regiment boasted one private and only a score or so of officers.

"For several years Mr. Keller has been the Eastern manager of the Peters Cartridge Company, of Cincinnati, with headquarters in New York City, now at 98 Chambers street, in the center of the sporting goods trade. The immense success of this company's loaded ammunition and the phenomenal popularity of its Semi-Smokeless powder are in a very large measure due to the untiring work of its Eastern manager, along every line open to a wide-awake, hustling worker."

MRS. KIRK THANKS THE BOARD

UNION COUNTY FREEHOLDERS GIVE AND RECEIVE APPROPRIATE GIFTS.

At the last regular meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders with its present membership, the director, Capt. J. Frank Hubbard, of this city, remembered the Board with his usual Christmas gift, a neat little diary containing much valuable information.

On motion of Freeholder Robison the bill of the W. T. Kirk Company for furnishing pipe to John Wahl, at New, Providence, was ordered paid when properly audited.

Previous to the regular business of the session a letter of thanks was read from Mrs. William T. Kirk, a bride of a few weeks ago, thanking the members for a wedding gift on the occasion of her recent marriage. Former Sheriff and Mrs. Kirk were married at Biltmore, N. C., November 25, and the freeholders had remembered them with a pretty gift.

LODGE OF SORROW.

Plainfield Elks Attend the Memorial Services in Elizabeth and Hear Eulogies.

About twelve members of Plainefild Lodge, No. 883, B. P. O. E., attended the Lodge of Sorrow of their Elizabeth brethren Sunday at Elizabeth. Exalted Ruler Kaufmann, of Elizabeth Lodge, No. 289, presided at the meeting and Rev. Otis H. Glazebrook, rector of Christ Church, Elizabeth, delivered impressive eulogies. Past master Palmer H. Chalrock, also of Elizabeth, made an address. Violin selections and singing by a quartette composed the remainder of the programme.

Political Manoeuvres.

A dispatch from Philadelphia says that the object of Senator John Kean's dinner in honor of Governor Franklin Murphy is to launch a boom for the latter for the Vice Presidency. The game is to hand out a gubernatorial nomination to Edward Stokes, of Cumberland County, boom Murphy as a running mate for Roosevelt and give Kean a "cinch" for a Senatorial renomination.

DEATH AFTER HALF AN HOUR'S ILLNESS

Theodore J. Miller Taken Sick on the Train, Passes Away in a Doctor's Office.

HEART FAILURE, CAUSE

THREE PHYSICIANS WORK HEROICALLY TO SAVE HIS LIFE.

Sixty-Nine Years of Age—Had Been Engaged in Various Lines of Business—Member of Crescent Avenue Church—Funeral Arrangements.

Theodore J. Miller, of 907 Park avenue, died suddenly Saturday afternoon soon after leaving a train at the North Avenue Station. He was taken ill on the cars while coming home from New York and at the station he secured a carriage, giving instructions to the driver to take him to Dr. H. H. Lowrie's office in Park avenue. The physician at once determined that Mr. Miller was in a critical condition. With the assistance of Drs. W. H. Murray and M. B. Long, who were called in, every effort was made to resuscitate the sick man, but to no purpose. He died within a half hour after reaching Dr. Lowrie's office.

In the meantime Mr. Miller's daughters were notified and they arrived at the office just before he died. Heart trouble was the cause of death.

Mr. Miller was born in New York sixty-nine years ago. During the early part of his life he was engaged in the manufacture of clothing and later was a coffee and tea importer, with offices at 89 Front street, New York. He removed with his family to Plainfield about twenty-five years ago, where he continued to live. Some years ago he was in a railroad wreck at Greenville on the New Jersey Central, a fractured rib puncturing the lung. This injury healed, but always caused more or less trouble. Mr. Miller was a member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church. It was about a year ago that his wife died.

Mr. Miller is survived by four daughters, the Misses Minnie C., Caroline C., Grace E., and S. Cordelia Miller; also three sons, Clifford J. Miller, of Paterson; Theodore J. Miller, Jr., of Westfield and Howard J. Miller, of this city.

AT THREE SCORE AND TEN

ISRAEL J. COON PASSES AWAY AT HIS HOME IN SOUTH STIRLING.

Israel J. Coon for years a prominent resident of Warren township, died at his home in Smalleytown or South Stirling Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Death was due to stomach trouble. He is survived by a son, David, and two daughters, Mrs. David Smalley and Mrs. Borneman, wife of the pastor of the Methodist Church, at Smalleytown. His wife, who also survives him, is the sister of Harrison and Worth Coddington, of North Plainfield. He was seventy years of age.

Few people were better known in Warren township than Mr. Coon. He had lived in that part of the State nearly all his life. He held positions in the community in which he lived, serving several terms as assessor and tax collector. He was one of the first members of the Smalleytown church and during his later years has held many positions as trustee and administrator of wills. He was one of the heaviest stockholders in the Hills borough Fire Insurance Company.

The funeral will be held at noon, Wednesday, at the Mt. Horeb Church.

Preparing for Christmas.

Matthew J. Cashin, choirmaster of the St. Mary's R. C. Church and Miss Mae Smith, organist, are preparing the Christmas music. The musical service this year promises to be elaborate.

Chicken Thieves at Work.

John M. Hesfield has reported to the police the theft of a large number of chickens from his place on East Fifth street. He also states that large quantities of coal have been stolen from his coal yards.

Whist Congress Jan. 9.

The Elizabeth Chess and Whist Club, recent winners of the New Jersey State Whist trophy, will now have to maintain its right to championship against any club in the State and it is likely that a number of contests will follow during the winter. The next State congress will be held in Elizabeth, January 9

FIRE DEPARTMENT CAPTAINS APPOINTED

Common Council Transacts Much Business at Its Regular December Meeting.

UNDERGROUND WIRES

BILL TO BE FRAMED FOR PRESENTATION TO THE LEGISLATURE.

One Regular and Several Special Policemen Appointed—Council Returns Deposit Check to the Bidders for School Bonds.

There was a great amount of routine business considered at the December meeting of the Common Council held Monday. There was the appointment of three captains in the fire department to take the place of the foremen. This was done in accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Lee, chairman of the fire committee. James Daly was made captain of No. 1 Hose Company; William Townley of No. 2 Hose Company, and George Feiring of No. 3 Hose Company. At the same time the rule governing the fine to be imposed upon a member of the department for an infraction of rules was changed from $5 to one month's pay.

Mayor Jenkins appointed Peter Hamilton, John Albert and Jacob Dunham as special policemen, with the understanding that Mr. Hamilton, who recently passed the third best civil service examination, is to go on as a "regular" at once with the ultimate idea of being appointed a "regular" in the near future, if found satisfactory. According to the statement of President Buckle, Mr. Hamilton is an ideal man for the position of policeman. He is almost perfect physically, 28 years of age, and has had previous experience. He is a former member of the Board of Aldermen and a sheriff at Elmira, N. Y.

Mr. Tyler took exception to the promiscuous appointment of specials and believed more care should be used in this matter, inasmuch as the wages of the "regulars" have been raised. President Buckle, as well as Mr. Glenk and Mr. Randolph, the latter chairman of the police committee, endeavored to explain matters for Mr. Tyler and tell him of the prevailing rule regarding the appointment of specials, that is that they cannot be made "regulars" only by the usual vote of the Council after passing an examination, and the men have to come up to the requirements. In the case of Mr. Hamilton he simply takes the places of another man who declined the position after passing his examination. Upon the conclusion of the remarks on the subject, the Council confirmed the appointments.

There were a great many petitions received, including several regarding tax matters in which there appeared errors. One of these was from Elston M. French, who purchased a property on Elizabeth street, supposed to belong to Jane Bundy. It was sold under the Martin Act with this understanding. Its now appears that a Mrs. Keefe owns the property and has paid her tax. Mr. French signified his willingness to give up the property, provided the Council reimburses him to the extent of $68 95, the amount the deal cost him. In accordance with a resolution by Mr. Daniel this action was taken.

E. L. Finch, owning property on Arlington avenue, and F. H. Kinsman, owning property on Pemberton avenue, complained of wrong assessments and petitioned to have these matters adjusted. The American Sabbath Tract Society petitioned the Council to exempt it from the payment of a tax on eight shares of bank stock, claiming it to be part of an endowment fund used for religious purposes. These matters were referred to the proper committees.

In view of the fact that the recent new school law was declared unconstitutional, Ladesburg, Thalman Co., of New York, the successful bidders for Plainfield's $90,000 school bonds, communicated with the Council and asked to have the firm's $1,000 deposited check returned to them. Under the circumstances they did not care to take the bonds. The request was granted upon a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel.

Among other petitions was one from Carl Linmark, of Pond place, objecting to a dog tax imposed, claiming he does not own a canine. Residents of Terrill road and East Second street asked for three electric lights and residents of Leland avenue asked for an extension of the sewer through that avenue. These were all referred to the proper committees.

Mrs. Lucy B. Tomlinson, of East Sixth street, whose husband, Harold W. Tomlinson, lost his life in the Westfield wreck, petitioned for relief from a tax assessed on $1,500 worth of personal property. She claimed that on May 1 last, when the assessments were made she was not subject to such a tax and she asks for exemption. Accompanying the petition was a sworn statement from Charles A. Reed verifying the facts set forth by the petitioners. This matter was referred to the finance committee.

Howard G. Tracy, of Prospect avenue, petitioned for an electric light and he wants it located on a pole di*rectly in front of his driveway*, between Hillside and Woodland avenues. J. C. Daly asked for the return of $12 paid as tax on property at 1851 Everett place, the sum having been paid twice. Elisa L. Brown, of Brooklyn, stated that she has been assessed for a barn supposed to be on her property on Belvidere avenue. She stated that the building is on J. W. Reinhart's property, and she wants the matter adjusted. These petitions all took the usual course, being referred to the finance committee.

Mrs. M. E. Risberg, of 259 Jackson avenue, took exception to paying a tax on her property, claiming that the tax had been paid before. In consequence she asked to have the sum paid by her returned. Chief T. O. Doane, of the Firemen's Relief Association, asked the Council to exempt an Elizabeth street property, owned by the association, from taxes, as the association is a charitable one. These petitions were given to the finance committee for consideration. The bills of the election officers for services performed in 1901-02 were again presented and this time they were referred directly to the Corporation Counsel for consideration.

Street Commissioner Gavett reported that during the past four months he had granted seventy-nine sewer permits, while Building Inspector Doane reported the granting of eleven permits during November.

At this time Mr. Daniel offered several resolutions, the first being that the city treasurer be authorized to pay the sum of $61,604 43, Plainfield's proportion of the State and County School tax. The second resolution provided for the renewal of a part of the $16,000 note issued on account of fire fund, the amount it was renewed for being $7,000, the balance having been paid off. Another note for $1,000, a part of a $4,500 note issued on account of the poor fund, was renewed in a similar manner and on a third resolution the sum of $3,000 was borrowed on account of sewer improvements, the same being secured by a note.

Mr. Tolles offered a resolution providing for the laying of sidewalks by the city in front of certain properties, the cost of the same to be paid for through a lien on the properties. This was adopted.

The appointments by the Mayor of Charles O. Pearson and Eugene V. Lorton as call men in the fire department, were confirmed by a vote of the Council.

Chairman Randolph, of the police committee, *reported upon the investi*gation of the police patrol system by Manager C. W. Runyon, of the local telephone company, who has charge of the system, and W. H. Klerzyin, a representative of the Gamewell Company. It will be remembered that at the last meeting it was reported that the electric wires appeared to be causing trouble to some of the call *boxes. The report of those who in*vestigated the matter showed that the system is in perfect condition, that there is no trouble that would cause injury to those using the system. There was found a slight escapement of electricity through electric light wires, but this was discovered only in damp weather and is not dangerous.

Mr. Tolles offered a resolution fixing Wednesday night, December 23, at 8 o'clock, as the time when the Council will meet to treat with the interested property-owners regarding the opening and extension of Myrtle avenue to the city and borough line at Green brook. In connection with this a formal notice, such as will be sent to the property owners, was read and approved. The property-owners affected include H. C. Compton, Mrs. Mary Moore and Christian Spreck. In connection with this Mr. Tolles moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet on the above date.

Mr. Tyler reported on the matter concerning the condition of the electric wires about the city and stated that Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh had informed him that the city's only remedy in protection from these wires was a presentation of the facts to the Grand Jury, that the city is practically without power in the matter. Mr. Marsh said that legislation along this line is needed very much and acting on this suggestion Mr. Tyler moved that Mr. Marsh be requested to prepare such a bill to be presented to the Legislature and that he report on the matter at the first meeting of the Council next year.

In a communication from Mr. Clark, clerk of the Board of Education, the Council was informed that L. H. Lovell and C. F. Abbott were recently appointed as members of the Board of School Estimate to serve with the Mayor and a similar number from the Council.

All of the members, except Mr. Parr were present, last night, and in addition J. S. Higham, Theodore Wilson and William Starr Bullock, the newly-elected members were there to see how the City Fathers do things. They seemed much pleased and took advantage of getting acquainted with many little details.

REV. MR. FINN ACCEPTS.

Letter in Response to Park Avenue Baptist Church Call Read to Congregation.

At the morning services at the Park Avenue Baptist Church, Sunday, the clerk, Charles Dayton, read the letter of acceptance received from Rev. A. E. Finn, of Cherryville, who was recently called to the pastorate of this church. The letter was brief and stated that the new pastor expected to enter upon his new charge the first Sunday in January.

Rev. Frank Fletcher, who occupied the pulpit of this church yesterday, took occasion to speak concerning the ability and high character of Mr. Finn, wishing him a successful work in the new field.

Sports in Lakewood.

The world's play is quite as important as its work. You don't believe it? Then you should study your world history more carefully, to find proof in plenty that there never was a time when recreation, change, and diversions of some form, were not regarded as essentials by the best and greatest workers ever known.

And more and more in these driving modern days the play-hours of men of affairs have prominent place on their daily schedules. The intense and pitiless thought which maps out the almost infinite detail of tremendous operations, of which the world learns at the breakfast table, must be broken and cast aside for a little time each day, or intellect will fail.

Lakewood without its varied opportunities for out-door sport and amusement of busy men can hardly be imagined; certainly, would lost interest. They come here, singly and in parties, by hundreds, for a day or a week or a month; establish their headquarters, and thereafter found on the golf links, polo course, or in the woods. They bring their favorite saddle horses and drivers; order their 'orgies sent down, or spend hours with their guns at the traps, or in boats on the lake. In one way or another, they live out of doors; exercise in the open, recover appetite and sleep sound o' nights. Naturally they return to business new men.

Still safer is the habit of growing numbers who are in business, to locate homes here, going into town each day and returning in season for an hour or two of sport before dinner. The great tournaments which at regular intervals have been held for years are field days for golfers and polo experts all over the country, and Lakewood is recognized as the popular winter play-ground of the great eastern cities.

FASHIONABLE AUDIENCE WAS WELL PLEASED

William Lavin, Noted Tenor, Gave Song Recital at Truell Court.

HE WAS IN GOOD VOICE

ASSISTED BY MRS. M. M. MACDONALD, SOPRANO, AND E. A. JANKE, PIANIST.

Mr. Lavin and Mrs. Macdonald Have Appeared in Europe—Mr. Lavin With Mme. Patti—Mrs. Macdonald in Grand Opera.

A song recital at Truell Court last Thursday was given by Wm. Lavin, tenor, assisted by Mrs. Marie Margerite Macdonald, soprano, and E. Arthur Janke, pianist. An attentive and well pleased audience filled the room.

Mr. Lavin, who is a singer of wide repute, has just returned from a tour of conquest through Italy, France, Germany and England. In London, he sang in a series of concerts under direction of Wood, the well known conductor, who recently came to this country on invitation of the Philharmonic Society to represent England in a musical festival in New York. Mr. Lavin also toured England and Scotland with Mme. Patti. His voice is clear and strong, his tones rich and mellow. He sang last night selections from Italian, French, English and German, and all with true art, expressively and with a high musical conception.

Mrs. Macdonald's soprano voice was sweet and pure in tone, and if it lacked anything in freshness, the deficiency was more than supplied by the cleverness of her art. Her performance in two duetts with Mr. Lavin was brilliant. Mrs. Macdonald has sung recently in Paris and in many places in Germany. In the United States, she has sung frequently the part of "Marguerite" in Faust and "Leonora" in Il Trovatore and has appeared in many other parts in the leading operas. Mr. Janke, the pianist, of this city, accompanied the singers ably.

The programme: Serenata, duett, Tosti, Mrs. Macdonald and Mr. Lavin; a, "Ah non credea" (Mignon), Thomas; b, "Dai campi dai prati" (Mefistofele), Boito, Mr. Lavin; "Einsam in truben Tagen" (Lohengrin), Wagner, Mrs. Macdonald; c, Obstination, (Fontenaille; b, "Bon jour, Suzon," Pessard; c, "Si mes vers," Hahn; d, "Te souviens-tu du baiser," Cui; e, "Aimons-nous," Saint-Saens, Mr. Lavin; a, "Thy Name," Mary Knight Wood; b, "Absent," Tirindelli; c, "Ring Out, Wild Bells," Jordan; d, "Love Laid His Sleepless Head," Herbert, Mr. Lavin; a, "Ouvre tes yeux bleus," Massenet; b, "Ueber allen Gipfeln ist Ruh," Janke, Mrs. Macdonald; a, "Ueber's Jahr," Van Der Stucken, b, "Mein mir gegrust," c, "Du bist die Ruh," d, Serenade, Schubert, Mr. Lavin; "Dear Love of Mine," duett, Goring Thomas, Mrs. Macdonald and Mr. Lavin.

MRS. GEORGE W. VANNEST

STROKE OF PARALYSIS CARRIES OFF ONE OF MARTINSVILLE'S CITIZENS.

Mrs. George W. VanNest, one of the best known residents died at her home in Martinsville, Thursday morning, a third stroke of paralysis being the cause. She suffered the attack while sweeping snow from the porch. She was a daughter of the late Jacob Long, of North Plainfield.

Surviving her are a husband and seven children. The latter are George W. VanNest, Jr., of Dunellen; Mrs. Simeon Gratrix, of Martinsville; Edwin D. VanNest, of Westfield; Mrs. M. M. King, of Liberty Corner; Mrs. Wesley Jerolaman, of Washington, N. J.; Miss Sarah VanNest and William VanNest, of Martinsville. There are also four brothers and a sister surviving her. Former Surrogate W. H. Long, of Somerville; J. B. Long, of Martinsville; Dr. Monroe B. Long, of Plainfield; Jacob Long, of North Plainfield, and Mrs. S. O. Staats, also of this city.

Alleged Crook in Pennsylvania.

Edmund C. Everett, the alleged confidence man, who has been operating here, has, according to the Stroudsburg, Pa., Times, been operating in that city. The paper tells of the work of the dapper little chap who, it is claimed, disappeared at the same time $41 and some jewelry vanished. While in Stroudsburg he was known as Roland Tremaine, but had letters in his care under the name of St. Clair. His description corresponds with that of Everett; short, very dark and nervous, wearing a heavy black moustache. He claimed to have come from Trenton.

SICK BENEFITS FOR ORANGE F. C.

Planned at Meeting Held in the Parlors of the Hotel Kensington Last Night.

THE CLUB IS GROWING

A TWENTY-ONE CENT DIVIDEND PAID STOCKHOLDERS IN FOOTBALL TEAM.

Incorporation of Club Planned—Rooms Will be Secured—Discussion of Move to Combine With Fanwood and Other Clubs.

The Orange Field Club, the crack junior athletic association of the city, concluded the business of the football year at a meeting in the Hotel Kensington last Thursday. Twenty-one cents per share was declared to be the dividend in the football stock issued by the association. The meeting was attended by at least thirty members of the club and was most enthusiastic. It was planned to incorporate the club under the present name and introduce sick benefits as a permanent feature, each member who is ill to recieve $5 a week and the services of a physician. This was the suggestion of William T. Waters, manager of last year's Clinton avenue baseball nine. H. Clifford Smith presided at the meeting, and Harry Hook was secretary.

George McVoy, who was manager of last year's football team will be the manager of the baseball team next spring. William T. Waters will be the first assistant and Edward Sherwin, second. A committee was appointed to secure suitable club rooms and report at the next meeting Tuesday evening, Dec. 22, at the Hotel Kensington. It is probable that the rooms will be located over I. H. Boehm's store on West Front street.

There is a movement on foot to combine the Orange Field Club, the Reform Club, the Cranford Field Club and the Fanwood Club. This matter will be discussed carefully at the next meeting of the club. An effort is to be made between now and the date for the next meeting to secure a total club membership of sixty.

Lakewood's Fall Season.

With the passing of the summer and the farewells to September there comes as a ruling thought in the minds of resorters, the choice of a point of healthful and advantageous location for the winter, and, more immediately, for the months of early fall, when summer places of entertainment are closed and cold weather resorts have not yet opened. To the family the problem is particularly weighty one for the schools all over the country are opening for the year, and it is time the little people took up the business of childhood. And in making choice there are to be considered as factors, healthfulness, accessibility to business centers, the character of diversions, and social surroundings.

It is true that Lakewood very largely owes its leading place among resorts to the peculiar points which are most valued at midwinter—warmth, shelter and mildness of climate—and yet, in all its eight months' season, from fall to spring, there are no more perfect months than October and November.

For more than twelve years the first day of October has been the date on which Lakewood has opened its doors to the outside world, and that first day's registrations have been uniformly large, including travelers from mountain and seashore, and returning cottagers anxious to get settled again in their Lakewood homes after a summer's wanderings. All through the above named months the habit of outdoor life which governed the hot weather season is prolonged in Lakewood, and the golden days of color which imperceptibly pass into frosts and chill of winter are rich in opportunities for sport and exercise on the golf links, the lake and in the woods. If you have never enjoyed the experience, try Lakewood in early its season.

A booklet on Lakewood will be sent free by C. M. Burt, G. P. A., New Jersey Central, New York City.

DIES AS SHE KNEELS.

Acid Kills Young Woman at Church While at Prayer at the Confessional.

Miss Fanny Ballard, an 18-year-old student at the state university at Lincoln, Neb., swallowed carbolic acid the other morning while kneeling at the confessional in St. Theresa's procathedral. Staggering to her feet a few minutes later she whispered to the waiting priest that she had killed herself. Ten minutes later she was dead.

The girl was the daughter of Elias E. Ballard, a former banker at Wilber, but now engaged in extensive milling and wheat interests in Dodge City, Kan. She and her sister came to Lincoln a few weeks ago to attend the state university.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says the girl was a devout Catholic and was desirous of seeking an education at the convent at Lincoln. Her father was insistent that she go to the university. She first went to the convent and then to the university. For this she is said to have been gently chided by the sisters and urged to break away from the university. She was to have had another interview with the mother superior, but rather than face her importunities she took the poison.

For the past four years she has been of a very morose disposition. This was attributed to the fact that several years ago, in a spirit of bravado, and while accepting a dare from a companion, she placed herself under the influence of a traveling hypnotist, who gave a performance in her native town.

The girl left no note behind her, nor did she tell anyone of her intentions or threaten at any time to end her life. She left her boarding house in the morning without eating breakfast, and, coming downtown, purchased the acid. She repaired to the church and, after spending an hour in prayer and meditation, walked to the confessional and swallowed the poison.

The first intimation the listening priest had of her act was when the ear he held to the aperture caught the sound of a fall and a groan.

TOOK HUSBAND'S DARE.

New Jersey Woman Painted House While Her Lesser Half Did the Housework.

A woman dressed in man's attire, mounted on a high ladder and painting the rear of a two-story frame house, caused a sensation in the Johnstown section of Jersey City. Crowds watched her for hours while she transformed the color of the house from a sickly yellow to a beautiful Nile green. The woman was Mrs. Lizzie Maschinsky, formerly Mrs. Spectator, and the house was that in which she lives.

There was much speculation as to why Mrs. Maschinski undertook the job. Her husband is an expert with the paint brush and usually paints all of the buildings which he owns. Maschinski is well to do and owns much property in the Johnstown section.

When he commenced painting some new houses he took his wife to look them over. It did not suit her ideas of how a house should be painted, and she told him so.

"If you don't like the way I paint," said Maschinski, "why don't you put on my trousers and show me how to do the job?"

"I will," said Mrs. Maschinski. "The house we live in needs a coat of paint and I will paint it, but on one condition, and that is that while I am wearing your trousers you cook the dinner for the family."

Maschinski took the dare, and [illegible] his invitation.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Books Added During November.

Next Thursday's issue will contain short list of children's favorite books. There will be none included which after reading, the Librarian cannot unreservedly recommend. It is offered as this time as a Christmas suggestion for those who want to select books for their child friends, which are really good and which the children themselves like.

LITERARY.

In literary merit and in the manner of presenting and illustrating its contents, The Metropolitan Magazine for 1904 will challenge comparison with any other magazine published. In its short stories the aim will be variety and that kind of style of writing that compels attention. Important and timely special articles will be contributed by trained observers and the whole will be illustrated by artists whose names are a guarantee of artistic beauty. Among the best known contributors will be Thomas Nelson Page, John Fox, Jr., "Mr. Dooley," George Ade, Anthony Hope, Maurice Hewlett, F. Hopkinson Smith, Miss Carman, Guy Wetmore Carryl, Richard LeGallienne, Clinton Scollard and many others. All of these writers will contribute their best work. A special feature will be Maurice Hewlett's great romance, telling the stirring love-story of Mary, Queen of Scots. Rufus F. Zogbaum, author and artist, has been specially commissioned by the magazine to investigate the condition of Uncle Sam's fighting men and he will tell the truth about the army both with pen and pencil. Another remarkable feature will be the humorous short stories written by the masters among the fun-makers.

TEA AT MRS. TAYLOR'S.

Afternoon Affair Given in Honor of Mrs. and Miss Cady, of New York.

A tea at the home of Mrs. Duncan W. Taylor, of West Seventh street, Thursday from 4 o'clock to 7 was given by Mrs. Taylor in honor of her mother and sister, Mrs. J. Cleveland Cady and Miss Cady, of New York. Mrs. George P. Mellick, Mrs. D. H. Rowland and Mrs. Everett Kimball presided at the tables and those who assisted in serving were Miss Kathleen Hollister, of New York, Miss Margaretta Taylor, of New York, Miss Margaret Tracy, Miss Mellick and Miss Ursula Rowland, of this city.

Twenty-Two Suspended.

Twenty-two Rutgers College sophomores have been suspended by the faculty for two weeks as a result of the hazing of John Bergen, a freshman, who lives in New Brunswick. The hazed student is a son of John S. Bergen, a salesman for a New York firm.

MARINE BAND MENACED.

Famous Naval Musical Organization May Be Forced to the Wall by Union Labor.

The famous Marine band, after an existence of 100 years, may be forced to fall to pieces. The Federation of Musicians, having affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, attempted last year to get a resolution through congress the effect of which would have been to forbid any member of the Marine band to play at any performance in civil life for pay. The resolution failed, but the musicians, with the backing of the Federation of Labor, are going to try it again next year.

The unions object to the Marine band because its members are employes of the government, but Lieut. Santelman says that of 27 members of the local musicians' union, which instigated the war on the band, 17 are government clerks drawing more than $1,000 a year each and the pay of some of them runs up to $2,000 a year.

"There is not a foreign government which does not permit its crack bands to take concert engagements and go on tours," said Lieut. Santelman. "Many of the famous bands of the world have visited America and have been received with ovations by our people, but whenever I have desired to play an engagement in or outside of Washington I have been met with a storm of protest from local musicians' unions. Why do not the unions object to foreign bands that come over here and play long engagements? They do not. But they object to our organization, though we are the representatives of the United States government, carrying the flag of our country with us in the best sense."

Some time ago the musicians of the Marine band applied for membership in the local musicians' union. Their applications, fees, etc., were returned to them without any explanation. It appears that the Federation of Musicians has a clause in its by-laws which forbids members to play with any enlisted man of the United States army or navy.

Ex-Senator Reagan of Texas Thinks the Days of the Republic Are Numbered.

Hon. John H. Reagan, who stated in a speech recently delivered in his home state that the United States is destined to become a monarchy, has been a confederate congressman, United States postmaster and a United States senator from Texas. He was born in Tennessee, October 8, 1818, served in the Texas war against the Indians, became a judge, and later was postmaster general and secretary of the treasury of the confederacy. After the close of the war between the states he was held prisoner of war for a time, but upon his return to Texas was elected to congress and served as United States senator from 1875 to 1887. He is the author of the interstate commerce bill, which, modified by amendments by Senator Cullom, of Illinois, is still in force. Judge Reagan made his now famous remark about the retrogression of popular government in this country in connection with an argument against the division of Texas into four states, a principle which was accorded to it when it was admitted to the union. He wants Texas to remain one great state so that when the collapse he fears shall come it will be strong enough to perpetuate its existence as an independent republic.

Razor Wouldn't Let Go.

Chicago has a school for barbers. Tramps and other unfortunates who cannot pay for a shave or a hair cut are operated on by the novices, while patrons who pay are attended by experts. The other day, while a tramp was being shaved, he was asked: "Does the razor take hold well?" "Yes," responded the victim, "but it doesn't let go worth a cent."

PLAINFIELD BOWLERS DEFEATED BY ORANGE

Superb Exhibition Given by Visiting Team Which Found No Trouble in Winning.

CAPTURED THE THREE

ORANGE AGGREGATION INDIVIDUALLY AND COLLECTIVELY STRONGER.

Score of 894 Made by Out-of-Town Team in First Game—Plainfield's Highest Mark Was 695—Detailed Results of the Play.

The bowling team from the Orange Y. M. C. A. visited the local association, Dec. 2, and defeated the home team in each of the three games rolled. The visitors had a walkover, being individually and collectively stronger. They gave an excellent exhibition of team work and there never was a question as to the result of the games. The totals rolled in the three games by the visitors were 894, 770 and 789. McCurdy, who made a score of 226 in the first game, was high man, while his colleagues all put up high scores. Plainfield rolled 695, 695 and 648.

Not a member of the home team reached 200, but a good attempt was made. It is the purpose of the team to devote more time for practice, so that in the coming matches a better showing will be made. The third match in the league series will be rolled with the Passaic Y. M. C. A. team in this city, and there will also be a basket ball game the same night between teams from these two associations.

The scores for last night's matches follow:

Orange.	1st game	2d game	3d game
Murray	168	156	175
McCurdy	226	164	152
Thomas	169	166	189

TO DO THEIR OWN COOKING

COMPANIES OF NATIONAL GUARD TO RECEIVE STORES SEPARATELY.

The annual report of Quartermaster General Richard A. Donnelly has been made public. An important feature of the report is the recommendation it contains that the system of feeding the soldiers be changed, that stores be issued to each company separately and that the different companies do their own cooking and serving. This is the mode in New York State and has been found to be entirely satisfactory.

CONGREGATIONALISTS ENJOY THE CONCERT

Local and Out-of-Town Talent Employed to Entertain Music Lovers.

MISS PALMER WHISTLED

C. R. TAGGART PERFOMED TRICKS OF VENTRILOQUISM, SANG AND RECITED.

Others Sang Including Quartette of Local Vocalists—The Programme Was Interesting and the Performers Heartily Applauded.

An exceptionally fine concert and entertainment was given Thursday at the Congregational Church by local and out-of-town talent. The programme opened with the "Ballad of the Weaver," sung by a quartette composed of Miss Cornelia Miller, soprano; Mrs. Charlotte Ross, contralto; Fred C. Tallamy, tenor and Fred S. Cutter, bass. Mr. Tallamy also sang "O Dry Those Tears" and Charles R. Taggart recited several humorous pieces which were well rectived. Miss Ethel M. Palmer, who is known throughout the East as a whistler of exceptional ability gave several selections. She was loudly applauded. Lennox D. Barnes, baritone, rendered two selections, "The Rose" and "The River and the Sea." Miss Miller sang a pretty selection, "Once" and the first part of the programme closed with "The Lover's Song," by the quartette.

Mr. Cutter opened the second part of the programme with two vocal selections, "The Turkey's Song" and the "Skipper of St. Ives." Tricks of ventriloquism by Mr. Taggart entertained the audience. Miss Palmer again favored with whistling selections and Mrs. Ross, contralto, sang "Good Night Little Girl" and one of R. K. Miller's compositions, both of great merit and loudly applauded. Mr. Barnes rendered "When Thou Art Near" and "The Rosary" and Mr. Taggart sang "Old Fancies." The programme closed with "Echoes" by the quartette.

Lennox D. Barnest made a bit with his singing and was accorded unusual applause. The entertainment was arranged by the ladies' committee for the benefit of the choir fund. It is probable that the committee will realize at least $100. The committee in charge of the arrangements was Frank A. Weeks and M. A. VanArsdale. The ushers were Charles Belknap, Samuel Craig and Everett Morgan.

W. C. T. U. ACTIVELY AT WORK

SUPERINTENDENTS OF VARIOUS DEPARTMENTS PRESENT REPORTS.

The W. C. T. U. yesterday afternoon received various reports showing that the prospects for the winter's work are bright. Mrs. Gilbert Van Nest, evangelistic superintendent, told of the work that is being done in a barn on the mountainside near Johnston's Drive. Services will be continued there during the winter.

Miss May R. Howlett, superintendent of the Loyal Legion, reported that arrangements are being made to hold a novel entertainment about the holiday time.

KIDNAPPED GIRL RETURNED.

Child Former Plainfielders Are Alleged to Have Lured Away.

Almost as mysteriously as she disappeared, Emma Bahr, the fourteen-year-old girl, who left the Waterburg Orphan Farm School at Pelham on Thanksgiving Day, has returned to the home, and a charge of kidnapping now rests against Mr. and Mrs. John Lang, formerly of this city. The girl was located in Jersey City by her uncle, who took her to Mount Vernon, and turned her over to Chief Foley. He sent the child back to the home.

The girl says she was induced to leave the home by her sister, Bertha, and her husband, John Lang, known here as John Long, who are now under charge in Mount Vernon charged with kidnapping.

She says that they visited her at the home on Thanksgiving Day, and as they were leaving gave her ten cents to pay her fare on the trolley car so that she could follow them to New Rochelle. While the police were looking for her in New Rochelle Emam says that she was hidden in an attic in her uncle's home there. She was taken to a house on Staten Island, where she remained until the police traced her there and arrested her sister. Lang and his wife deny that they kidnapped the girl.

Wedding Invitations Out.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Emma C. Hoagland, of Somerville, and William R. Carpenter, of this city. The event will be celebrated on Wednesday, December 16, at the home of the bride.

ELKS' LODGE INSTITUTED

Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., Formally Organized With Elaborate Ceremonies.

STREET PARADE HELD

Representatives Present From Many Cities—Institution, Installation, Parade and Banquet—A Charter Member of Order Witnesses Ceremonies.

Fire works, gay decorations on many of the business houses in the down town section, and enthusiasm which could not be dampened or diminished by cold winds or driving snow everywhere attested the welcome given to the Elks who invaded this city six hundred strong Dec. 2. It marked the advent of Plainfield lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., as a local fraternal organization. The dream of a year, cherished by many prominent men, was realized when the first officers of the new lodge were inducted into office and a local lodge was started, on what promises to be an eventful career, with pomp and ceremony.

The Elks owned the town. Towards evening the Best People on Earth began to arrive in great numbers. Some brought with them brass bands, all came prepared for one of the greatest days in the history of New Jersey Elkdom. As the various delegations arrived they were received by the members of the reception and entertainment committees, of the Plainfield lodge. Elks arriving on incoming trains were met by Alexander D. Findlay, Sheriff E. Frank Coriell, Former Judge William A. Codding*ton, Edward Gaston, Herbert Brooks,* L. I. VanAlystine and Edward C. Searing. Those who came by trolley were escorted to the lodge rooms in the Stillman building by the entertainment committee, consisting of George O. Stevens, H. C. VanEmburgh, J. F. Lane, William W. Warnock and Henry Pedeflous.

At 5 o'clock the ceremony of instituting the new lodge was begun. This was performed by the members of New Brunswick lodge, No. 834. The officers in charge were District Deputy Charles H. Smith, of Jersey City; Exalted Ruler William H. Everson, Esteemed Leading Knight William Schlesinger, Esteemed Loyal Knight William Tallman, Esteemed Lecturing Knight William Boylan, Esquire J. Harvey Wilson, Secretary Joseph H. Ridgeway, Treasurer Theodore Cohn, Inner Guard John Hickey, Tiler J. Newton Blue, Jr., and Chaplain Joseph Allen. The first officers of the local lodge to be installed were: Exalted Ruler City Judge William N. Runyon, Esteemed Leading Knight A. D. Findlay, Esteemed Loyal Knight George O. Stevens, Esteemed Lecturing Knight L. I. VanAlystine, Treasurer L. B. Woolston, Secretary Walter H. Freeman, Tiler Edward C. Searing; trustees—One year, Former Senator Charles A. Reed; two years, Herbert W. Stover, and three years, James F. Buckle. Thirty charter members were initiated. The team was composed of Peter Moore, Benjamin Suydam and G. Edward Burt, all of the New Brunswick lodge.

After the ceremonies, which lasted almost three hours, Exalted Ruler William N. Runyon made a short address to the members of the new lodge and the visitors in which he said he was glad to see so much enthusiasm attending the institution of the first lodge of Elks in this city, and hoped for the hearty support of the new members. He expressed a wish that the new lodge increase in membership until it becomes one of the strongest in the city.

After the ceremonies attendant upon the inaugurating of the new lodge, a parade was held through some of the business streets of the town. This was one of the eventful incidents of the evening. Standing in the driving snow, citizens lined the curbs to watch the parade pass. They had prepared a royal welcome for the visiting host. As soon as the first roll of the drum announced that the parade was about to move colored lights shot up from a hundred different places and loud cheers arose on the night air. The glow from the torches in line and on the sidewalks among the spectators showed windows full of people in many of the buildings which lined the route of the parade, cheering the visitors lustily. The line of march: From lodge rooms down Front to Park avenue, to East Second, to Watchung avenue, to North, to Park avenue, to Somerset street and to Saengerbund Hall.

Dasher's band, of Elizabeth, which escorted Elizabeth lodge, No. 289, headed the parade. Seifert's band, of Bayonne, which accompanied Bayonne lodge, No. 434, was followed by LaVere's full band which preceded the Plainfield lodge in the parade. There were fully six hundred Elks in line, and their cheers as they passed by the decorated places of business or returned the salute of friends, reehoed blocks. A feature of the parade was the salutation given the marchers by the members of Warren Engine Company in North Plainfield. The doors of the engine company were thrown open and as the parade marched into the hall the bells in the house, including the gongs on the apparatus and the bell in the tower, were started ringing in unison. The entire front of the building was lighted and a lantern was placed at the top of the flag staff.

An elaborate repast was served by Pedeflous in Saengerbund Hall. Speeches and songs served to pass the evening enjoyably. Among those who made speeches were: Exalted Ruler William N. Runyon, District Deputy Charles H. Smith, of Jersey City lodge, No. 211; Exalted Ruler Henry Kaufman, of Newark lodge, No. 21; Frank Cook, formerly of this city, now a member of New York lodge, No. 1; Ira C. Peck, of Manila lodge, No. 671, who enjoyed the distinction of representing the most distant lodge; John T. Kent, who was one of the members of the original organization of Elks, which was then known as the Order of the Jolly Corks, but who is now a member of Jersey City lodge, No. 211; John F. Martin, of Syracuse lodge, No. 51; Harry Butler, of Brooklyn lodge, No. 22; Exalted Ruler Edward Gribbel, of Bayonne lodge, No. 434; Robert McDonald, secretary of Jersey City lodge and Exalted Ruler James Murray, of the same lodge. Several vocal selections were rendered by Robert Schwartz, of Elizabeth lodge, and the newly elected officers of the Plainfield lodge, No. 885.

Representatives were here from Perth Amboy, Trenton, Philadelphia, Camden, Jersey City, South Amboy, Paterson, Syracuse, Hoboken, Elizabeth, New York, Brooklyn and many other places. Among the prominent people here were Senator W. H. C. Hobson, of Middlesex County; Surro*gate Peter Francis Daly, Alderman* John Harkins, of New Brunswick, and Edward H. Radel. The New Brunswick contingent numbered seventy-five and that of Elizabeth 125.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 12—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—An antiwory meeting.—John xiv, 1-3.

We are living in an age when worry and its pernicious effects are most prevalent. The contest for place and power and the strife of competition at a time when so much stress is laid upon mental things are so great that the lives of many are filled with undue anxiety concerning the things of life. In addition to this, there are many other causes that produce worry—the afflictions, sorrows and bereavements of life as well as its duties and unnatural ambitions.

But worry is anti-Christian. Jesus Christ, the "author and finisher of our faith," was an optimist and not a pessimist. He recognized the fact that there were sorrows, adversities and disappointments in life, but in spite of all He preached the gospel of good cheer. To the paralytic He said, "Be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee." To the disciples on the stormy Galilee He said, "Be of good cheer, it is I; be not afraid." Then again when about to leave them in the world a parting word was, "In the world ye have tribulation, but be of good cheer, for I have overcome the world." To Paul, face to face with shipwreck in the Mediterranean sea, He appeared at night with the comforting words, "Fear not, Paul." So it was continually in the life of the Master. Recognizing the sorrows of life, He yet preached cheerfulness and weaned His disciples against undue anxiety about the things of this life. And we do we find a better illustration of this truth than in the instance before us, where when about to leave His disciples in the world He said, "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in Me."

Christ's practice and teaching make worry wrong for the Christian. It is a manifestation of doubt of God. It is an expression of lack of faith in Christ. Real, genuine faith in God and in Jesus Christ as the Son of God and our Saviour should exclude worry from our lives, and worry indulged in becomes a sin.

But worry is worthless as well as wrong. It improves nothing. It makes bad worse instead of better. Nothing in the midst of trouble is more barren than worry over it. Cheerfulness strengthens and encourages us, it helps us to endure, but worry weakens us at every point and makes us all the less able to stand against the trouble that assails us.

If not worry, what then? Trust—trust in God, trust in Jesus Christ. "Ye believe in God, believe also in Me." That Christ declares should be our attitude toward the troubles and adversities of life. We are not to fear, but believe and not to worry, but to trust. Christ Himself is the basis of Christian cheerfulness which should supplant worry. "Be of good cheer, it is I," He said to the disciples, and again, "In the world ye have tribulations, but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world." Christ has overcome, and in His name and power we can overcome. Therefore "let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid."

BIBLE READINGS.

Josh. i, 7; Isa. xi, 25-31; Ps. xi, 1-7; xvi, 1-11; xxiii; xxvii, 1-5; xlvi, 1-7; Mark vi, 45-51; John xvi, 33; Acts xxvii, 21-25.

The White Harvest Fields.

Lift up your eyes and look upon the white harvest fields in all the world. India has enlarged her Christian Endeavor boundaries. China with her new secretary is at the beginning of a new era of great expansion. Japan *has gained 30 per cent and has just en*joyed the best convention in her history. Great Britain has made steady progress. Germany has made substantial gains. France and Spain have had the best year in all their history, while since our last convention Switzerland, Italy, Portugal, Finland and Iceland have fairly entered the ranks of Christian Endeavor for the first time.—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark.

Canvass For Members.

Let every society inaugurate a membership canvass. Search the Sunday school, go through the entire congregation, for recruits. Enlarge the associate list. Bring in the Christian young people who have not yet learned the joy of service for Christ. This will be a splendid preliminary to a campaign for new work further on.—Rev. Dr. Edwin Forrest Hallenbeck.

More Quiet Hour Thoughts.

If each man had the spirit of self surrender, the spirit of the cross, it would not matter to him whether he preached the word or the mistepring or of one of the inferior parts—F. W. Robertson.

For grounding our young people in fundamental truth, for quickening the spiritual life and for developing in them a love and a power for Christian service nothing can be more effective than day by day feeding on the word of God.—Rev. Edwin F. Hallenbeck, D. D., President New York State Union.

The daily study of the Bible, if possible at some regular time each day, as in the Quiet Hour in the morning or in the evening, and in systematic way, is the substantial way of making progress daily in a mastery of the Bible and of deeply impressing on the mind and heart the life molding truths of the Bible.—Robert E. Speer.

Five minutes spent in the companionship of Christ every morning—aye, two minutes, if it is face to face and heart to heart—will change the whole day, will make every thought and feeling different, will enable you to do for His sake what you would not have done for your own or for any one's sake.—Henry Drummond.

FARMER VON SWINKE

Why He Considers the United States a Marvelous Country.

His Garden Is an Eel Trap Which Is Good for Several Bushels of Fish Every Day in the Season.

There are several ways of catching eels as well as of skinning them, after they are caught. The latest method of doing both has been introduced by Fred von Swinke, a German, who came to Orrington, Me., last spring and began to grow peas for market upon some swamp land which he had purchased near Segunkedunk stream.

The farmer vowed that the rich lands near the sluggish water were capable of yielding more green peas to the acre than ten times the area on the hills. The seed came up in due time, and showed an inclination to grow, but before the plants were six inches tall every one was eaten off close to the soil by some creature which visited the farm by night.

Every pea vine was spoiled, but cabbages, turnips and other vegetables were allowed to grow undisturbed. The crop was planted over many times without securing any harvest worth the trouble.

In August, after Von Swinke had lost his seventh crop, and after all kinds of traps had failed to give relief, he kept watch among the pea vines for two nights. He was rewarded by seeing a large number of fat eels climb up the low banks and invade the pea preserve, gorging themselves upon the foliage, and then escaping back to the stream.

A New York correspondent says that instead of feeling downcast over this discovery, Von Swinke seemed to be highly elated. He went about the village rubbing his hands and telling what a wonderful country America was to furnish eels enough to supply a large city in every garden that edged upon a stream of fresh water. Then he bought a thousand feet of narrow boards and placed them end to end around his pea patch until they met and made a frame for the crop. Having done this he dug a hole near his cabin, sunk a half hogshead until its rims were level with the soil and filled it with pure water. Then, by opening his fence and putting a line of boards on each side of the walk leading from his garden he had included the tub of water within the cordon.

He sat up until nearly daybreak the following night, then he went out with a kerosene can and smeared the top surface of all the boards with the oil. After this he blew out his lantern and went to bed.

The first thing he did when he got up at nearly noon was to pour about ten quarts of salt and a bushel of hardwood ashes into the tub of water. No sooner had this been done than the water was alive with a squirming mass of eels, which tied themselves in knots, turned somersaults and handsprings, and made the water boil with their convolutions.

Soon they were dead, and then the farmer bailed out the water and began to skin his fish. There were nearly three bushels of them, all of good size and very fat.

Once a week since then Von Swinke has repeated the experiment and has made good catches every time. He says that eels will sooner run through fire than cross a board which has been daubed with oil. Having come to his garden to feed on peas early in the morning they had found every avenue of escape blocked by kerosene and naturally followed the path until they had come to the tub of water, into which they had plunged in fancied security.

The salt and ashes not only killed the eels, but removed the slime from the fish, so the farmer had no trouble in skinning the catch.

Girl Contracts to Be Good.

In consideration of her father's consent that she may go on the stage, Miss Eleanor Lawrence, of South Bethlehem, Pa., has signed a contract to "be good." The contract is unique, for she promises to eschew midnight suppers, frivolous company, and slide door "Johnny boys." Further, she adds, she will not play cards and always will carry a prayer-book. Miss Lawrence is the daughter of Dawson Lawrence, a promoter of business enterprises.

Blind Men Swim Straight.

It is a standing puzzle that all blind swimmers are able to hold an almost perfectly straight course for very considerable distances, though no more guidance is given them than some species of call or whistle coming from the winning goal. A blind man, in fact, desiring to go in a straight line possesses the curious power of being able to do so almost exactly.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 13. "Jesus Christ—His Saving Power"—Text, Acts iv, 12; Matt. i, 21; I Tim. ii, 5.

"In none other is there salvation." What is salvation? The answers have been many and varied. Nor is it an easy thing to give an answer which covers all the necessary items and does not include anything unnecessary. It has something to do with what we believe, and yet it is more than belief, for it is possible for one to know much about God and religion and yet be far from saved. It has something to do with our feelings and actions, but nothing we can do will save either ourselves or others, and it is far more than feelings of any kind.

Looked at in one way, salvation is "pure love to God and man filling the heart and governing the actions."

From another point of view it is the Holy Spirit dwelling in the soul and working in all the faculties of mind and body.

Its effects are peculiar. It broadens and clears the understanding, giving a grasp and comprehension of truth never before possessed. It deepens sympathy and awakens sentiments of purity, reverence, devotion and benevolence. It prompts acts of helpfulness and words of tenderness. It brings harmony into the inner life and the desire to see all outer life harmonious and happy.

That such a condition is not natural and common to all people is very plain. That some do live in such a state is also well known. That many who have been in the unsaved state have by some means passed into the power and purity of the saved life is a matter also of experience. Testimony to this is around us many such transformed lives. *They are not all alike in the ex*tent or intensity of the change, but in some things all have a resemblance.

All agree in the fact that they have found Jesus when they have come to trust Jesus Christ as a personal Saviour and rely upon Him to give them guidance, pardon and eternal life from God the Eternal Father. This act of faith may be described in various ways, but in its essential nature, it is a combination of all the powers of the soul, taking the highest and best it knows of God and in glad recognition of His love willingly consenting to become obedient to His directions and take Him as ruler of all our life. It unites the best of thought and will and feeling in service of God.

It is not merely a decision to live a better life. It is not merely acknowledging our condition in faith alone. It is not merely feeling sorry for the misdeeds of the past and wishing to be good and do good for the future. It is a deep soul turning from all evil and the conscious incoming of power to love and do the right, a power not of self, but greater and deeper and purer than ever before known. It also has an element of personal fellowship with Jesus Christ never before felt toward any other one. A bond of union in purpose and principle and satisfaction of soul desires.

This is salvation, and there is no other one the world has ever seen who had power to so affect men, and there is no one who may not be so affected by Him if he will so decide.

Untold Possibilities.

Life brings untold possibilities of good to each of us, but what we need is faith in these, especially when we are immersed in the petty details, the drudgeries, the coarser passions and trials which daily come to us. We need this faith in a divine calling and in the promise of God when the world and the flesh and the devil appeal to our sloth or to our selfishness, when we are tempted to take the low standard of the world and to be, as they say, "no better than others." It is then we need faith in Christ and, at whatever cost, to surrender ourselves to the vision which He vouchsafes of what is right and true and good. It may be hard just then to obey, to take this particular cross, to lay aside the indulgence that fascinates and to turn at once from the tempter to the Saviour, but to doing so lies the way of faith and victory.—Sunday Magazine.

What Is a Christian?

There is only one great character in the world that can really draw out all that is best in men. He is so far above all others in influencing men for good that He stands alone. That man was the Founder of Christianity. To be a Christian man is to have that character for our ideal in life, to live under its influence, to be like Him. He would wish us to do, to live the kind of life He would have lived in our house had He our day's routine to go through. It would not, perhaps, after the forms of our life, but it would after the spirit and temper and rule of life, and then the Christian man is he who in that sense lives under the influence of Jesus Christ.—Henry Drummond.

Religion.

Religion is not a perpetual moping over good books. Religion is not even prayer, praise, holy ordinances. These are necessary to religion. No man can be religious without them. But religion is mainly and chiefly the glorifying of God amid the duties and trials of the world, the guiding of our course amid adverse winds and currents of temptation by the sunlight of duty and the compass of divine truth, the bearing up manfully, wisely, courageously, for the honor of Christ, our great leader, in the conflict of life.—John Caird.

God's Love.

God's love runneth faster than our feet
To seek a man, in fact, desiring to go in
And lifting numb our shame; nay, and
The best robe, bidding angels bring it forth.
—Edwin Arnold.

NOW A MAN OF MANY PARTS

NEWARK EVENING NEWS SAYS FREDERICK'S CURE, A TRIUMPH OF SURGERY.

The most composite man in New Jersey, perhaps in the world, is Wilson S. Frederick, of Dunellen, Middlesex County. He is now, after his marvellous restoration at the hands of the doctors, made up of bits of more than 200 different men. Of course the greatest part of this newly restored man consists of the original Frederick, but all the rest is an aggregate of little patches, about 4,200 in number, contributed by his friends and acquaintances. It may seem amusing to read of such a composite individual, but the experience has been anything but amusing to the man himself. He was a victim of the West*field wreck on the Central Railroad,* and his body was so scalded that fully one-third of the skin was destroyed. His death seemed but a matter of a few hours, but as he outlived the expectations of the Muhlenberg Hospital physicians, the latter resolved to try skin grafting. Piece by piece, during the past ten months, little patches of skin, about an inch long and a quarter of an inch wide, were cut from Masonic brothers of the scalded man and from willing employes of the ex*press company for which Frederick* had worked; and were placed on the raw, quivering flesh. They grew, they healed; and now, at last, Frederick has a whole skin again and has been discharged from the hospital as cured. This triumph of surgery is marvellous because of the extent, the heroic constitution of the man which enabled him to endure the long treatment, and the liberality of the unusually large number of friends who have contributed to his restoration. Had each one insisted upon putting his name on the piece of cuticle contributed, Fredericks would have looked much like a memorial patchwork quilt.

CHANGING JERSEY DAY.

Date Originally Set by St. Louis Fair Commissioners Conflicts With State Fair Plans.

Secretary Mahlon R. Margerum, of the Inter-State Fair Association, who is much chagrined by the announcement that the New Jersey commissioners for the St. Louis exposition have decided upon Wednesday, September 28, the day before the Inter-State fair's big Thursday, as New Jersey day at the exposition, has called the attention of the commissioners to the fact that next year the State will have presidential and gubernatorial elections in this State and that for this reason "Big Thursday, or Politicians' day" at the Inter-State fair will be of unusual importance not only to the politicians of the State, but as well to the fair association, many of whose directors are prominent in State affairs.

He said if Wednesday, September 28 were made New Jersey day at St. Louis it would be impossible for the men to whom it would be important to attend both New Jersey day at St. Louis and "Big Thursday" in Trenton to reach this city by Thursday, September 29. Mr. Margerum saw former Governor Foster M. Voorhees and Ira W. Wood members of the New Jersey commission and was assured by them that if possible the date for New Jersey day would be changed. They said they apprehended no difficulty in the matter.

F. C. LANGHORNE, AN ORIGINAL ELK

Plainfield Man Relates the True Story of the Birth of the B. P. O. E.

FIRST, THE JOLLY CORKS

HUMBLE BEGINNING IN A NEW YORK BOARDING HOUSE.

Organized As Benevolent Order of Elks on February 10, 1868—Its First Officers and the Constitution.

The Benevolent Protection Order of Elks, which now numbers its membership in the hundred thousands, owes its origin to a social party of young men who boarded in the same house in New York some thirty-six years ago. Frank C. Langhorne, of Putnam avenue, this city, was one of six who composed the group, the majority of them being connected with the stage as a profession. These young men styled their organization The Jolly Corks and their place of meeting was the boarding house, at 188 Elm street. A few weeks subsequent to organization, The Jolly Corks, who were fond of merry times, established themselves at 17 Delancy street, from which they removed in a short time to Mosley Hall in the Bowery, where the first lodge of Elks held its meetings.

Disaffection had arisen in the ranks of The Jolly Corks, it being due to jealousy over offices in the society. The Benevolent Order of Elks was established and the organization was effected on February 10, 1868. Report has it that there was also a branch of The Jolly Corks in Philadelphia, but this is denied by Mr. Langhorne, who told a Daily Press reporter yesterday, for the first time the true history of the order's birth. Nearly all the original members of the order are now dead, but strange to say, John G. Kent, of New York, a charter member, participated in the organization of Plainfield lodge, No. 885, last night. In its early days the titles of the several offices were different than those of the present day. Instead of an exalted ruler, the principal officer of the lodge was the right honorable-primo. This position was held in the original organization by Charles Vivian, as actor. Richard R. Steizly, a professional player, who visited Mr. Langhorne a short time ago, was first deputy primo, and William Carlton, who possessed a rich tenor voice frequently heard before the footlights, was the honorable secretary. H. Vandermark, another soloist on the boards, was the treasurer, and William Sheppard was tyler. Mr. Langhorne had no connection with the stage.

A constitution and set of by-laws as well as rules and regulations were drawn up and printed for the benefit of the members. Probably what is the only copy extant is now in the possession of Mr. Langhorne. An elk's head is printed on the fly leaf. The purpose of the organization is best explained in this declaration subscribed to by the charter members:

"The undersigned members of the theatrical, minstrel, equestrian and literary professions and others who sympathize with and approve of the object in view (hereafter set forth in the constitution and by-laws) do hereby organize an order to promote, protect and enhance the welfare and happiness of each other.

"Charles Vivian, Richard Steizly, William Carlton, H. Vandermark, William Sheppard, E. M. Platt, W. Bowran, H. Bosworth, M. G. Ashe, John G. Kent, J. G. Wilton, F. Langhorne, F. A. Bloome, C. F. McDonald and T. G. Riggs."

One of the primary objects of the organization was to help the unfortunate or sick actor. Mr. Langhorne declares that the members had jolly good times together and frequently gave benefit entertainments in the New York theatres, in which the best metropolitan talent appeared. The Plainfield man has long since dropped out of the order.

Funeral of Joseph Farris.

Funeral services over the remains of Joseph Farris, who died on Monday as a result of an attack of lockjaw, caused by a sore on his finger, were held Dec. 9, Rev. Andrew M. Egan, pastor of St. Mary's R. C. Church, officiating. The interment was in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Former Plainfielder Dead.

Rev. W. C. Hendrickson, who died at his home in Bristol Pa., Wednesday night, at the age of seventy-two years, was a native of this city, and was the son of a former elder of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church. One of his sisters lives in this city.

—Miss Lela McCloughan, clerk in the office of C. L. Moffett, Esq., is detained at her home in East Fourth street with an attack of tonsilitis.

GOLDEN WEDDING OF DUNELLEN COUPLE

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Merrill Celebrated Fiftieth Anniversary of Their Marriage.

WAS A FAMILY REUNION

MR. MERRILL A STAUNCH REPUBLICAN, WELL-KNOWN IN BOROUGH.

Came to Dunellen Shortly After Marriage in 1853—Made Hay for Government During War—Celebration at Home of Daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Merrill, of Dunellen, Thursday celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding at the home of their son-in-law, George W. Day, an editor. The occasion was marked by a family reunion and a gathering of about eighty friends and relatives in the evening.

Mr. Merrill was one of the pioneer Republicans of Middlesex County. Although born in Flemington, Hunterdon County, seventy-four years ago, he moved to Dunellen shortly after his marriage in 1853, and has lived there ever since. Few men in the borough are better known than he. During the war he conducted a large hay press in Dunellen and sold large quantities of hay and straw to the Government for use in the army. Years ago he was one of the most prominent Republicans in his county. He occupied positions on the Township Committee and on the School Board. Of late years he has led a retired life.

His marriage to Miss Mary Runyon took place on the old Asa Runyon farm. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Alfred Mawl, pastor of the Samptown Baptist Church. Mr. and Mrs. Merrill have three children, Mrs. Walter Hunt, of Philadelphia; Mrs. George W. Day, of Dunellen, and A. R. Merrill, of Newark. The grandchildren are S. Merrill Hunt, Harry B. D. Hunt and Anna Hunt, all of Philadelphia; Alfred W. Day and Clarence W. Merrill.

Friends were present last evening from Flemington, Weston, Newark, Dunellen, New Market and other places. Mr. and Mrs. Merrill were presented with a purse of gold, the contents equalling in dollars, the number of years of their married life.

THE ORGANIZED AID'S WORK

STATISTICTS COMPILED BY MISS SARA M. VAN BOSKERCK, THE SECRETARY.

An insight into the work of the Organized Aid Association of Plainfield and North Plainfield is given by the detailed statistics of the past year as prepared by the general secretary, Miss Sarah M. VanBoskerck. The total number of applications, of all kinds and from all classes of people, was 784, classified as follows: For material aid, 174; for information, 149; for investigation of supposed need, 87; for advice, 67; for loans, 12; for medical services, 17; for services of the city nurse, 10; for legal aid, 6; for aid for neglected children, 30; from other societies, for investigation, 33; and information, 46; for personal service of various kinds, 37; for outside work, 49; for servants, 71. There were eighty new cases during the year. The particular approval of the Organized Aid Association was accorded the street commissioner in his work of having the poorer city streets watered, a work which bene fitted the poorer classes greatly.

MRS. A. J. WINCKLER DEAD

PASSES AWAY AT AGE OF 72 YEARS—LEAVES HUSBAND AND SIX CHILDREN.

Mrs. Margaret Ann Winckler, wife of Augustus J. Winckler, died suddenly Friday at her home, 33 Park place, North Plainfield. She was seventy years old and, though a native of New York State, had lived thirty-five years in the borough. She was a member and active worker in the Congregational Church. She is survived by her husband, two married daughters, Mrs. W. G. Debele and Mrs. L. Wiesman, three other daughters, Stella, Mamie and Nellie, and one son, Thomas Winckler, a councilman of Asbury Park. Mrs. Winckler has always been of a quiet and domestic disposition, much beloved for her kindliness and sympathy.

Yellowstone Park.

The women of the Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital have secured J. Dunbar Wright to give an illustrated lecture on "The Yellowstone Park and Canadian Rockies," for the benefit of the hospital. The lecture will be given at the Park Club, Tuesday night, Dec. 20, and tickets are selling at a rate that will insure a large audience.

ADDITION TO STATE LIBRARY

INCREASING COLLECTION DEMANDS SOME EXTENSION TO BUILDING.

The fact that the present capacity of the State Library at Trenton is taxed to its utmost together with the further fact that an architect has declared that the walls of that part of the State House in which the library is situated will not safely carry any greater strain than is now upon them may necessitate the erection in the near future of a new building for the accommodation of the library.

It is likely that the Legislature will be asked to take some action in the matter at its approaching session. Some time ago State Librarian Henry C. Buchanan called the attention of Governor Murphy and others of the State officers to the necessity for providing more accommodations in the State library for the constantly increasing number of books. At the same time Librarian Buchanan asked that a modern steel stack be built in the library.

In 1901 the legislature passed an act providing for the erection of this stack, but the appropriations committee did not include the cost in the annual budget.

According to Librarian Buchanan there are at present in the library about 65,000 volumes and there are upwards of 15,000 volumes stored away in the loft, a place that was not built with the idea that it would ever be called upon to carry a great weight.

Hutchinson, Acting Governor.

Governor Murphy has started on a two weeks' trip through the West to make a tour of inspection of the western shops and offices of the Murphy Varnish Company. The Governor more than a score of years ago inaugurated the custom of making such a tour at least once a year. During his absence, business requiring the attention of the executive will be transacted by E. C. Hutchinson, president of the Senate.

I. C. T. Club's Plans.

The I. C. T. Club held a business meeting Saturday and received the report of the committee on the fair. It was voted, after a lively opposition, to let the club rooms to Eugene O'Reilley's dancing class Tuesday afternoons.

The Banjo Club met for rehearsal last evening.

BOARD OF TRADE'S BANQUET

GENERAL DISCUSSION OF PLANS FOR THE PROPOSED FEAST.

A discussion of the proposed banquet which the Board hopes to give in January, occupied the time at the Board of Trade meeting Thursday. The plan is to make the affair more elaborate than the last one, to provide accommodations for 125 guests and to have speakers of National and State prominence. There appears to be no place where such a gathering could be accommodated. Alexander Gilbert is the chairman of the committee and further discussion was given up until a report from the entire committee is received.

James E. Martine provoked a discussion of the gas question, citing the reported condition at Atlantic City, where it is said gas is furnished for thirty-five cents per thousand cubic feet. The matter was warmly agitated and finally a resolution was adopted authorizing the secretary to communicate with the officials at Atlantic City and learn the exact condition of the gas question there.

THE WILL PROBATED.

Judge Strong Dismisses the Caveat Filed by Granddaughter of the Late Mrs. Emeline Manning.

Judge Strong, of the Middlesex County courts, has admitted to probate the will of the late Mrs. Emeline Manning, of South Plainfield, thereby defeating the hope of Mrs. Andrew Manning, who sought to break the will on the ground that she believed it did not make proper provision for her young daughter, Emeline, a beneficiary. Two thirds of the estate is divided equally between the deceased woman's daughters, the Misses Harriet T., and Sarah T. Manning, and the other third is left to these daughters in trust for Emeline T. Manning, granddaughter of the dead woman.

W. L. Hetfield, Sr., Esq., brother of Mrs. Andrew Manning, represented her, while Joseph B. Coward, Esq., was counsel for the defendants.

DONATIONS TO HOME.

Institution for Poor Children Acknowledges Thanksgiving Offerings.

The generous gifts made Thanksgiving Day made a happy one at the Children's Home. From the Needlework Guild are the largest and most valuable assortment ever received, 240 new garments. From North Plainfield High School through Mr. H. J. Wightman, seven dollars in money and several barrels of fruit and vegetables, with many groceries, preserved jellies. ON FOREIGN GROUND

Marines Establish a Camp Near Panama.

SAID FOR THE GOOD OF THEIR HEALTH

The Actual Purpose Believed to Be to Watch Any Disloyal Act on the Part of Local Forces or Possible Demonstration From Bogota.

COLON, Dec. 9.—Two companies of marines from the United States auxiliary cruiser Dixie under command of Captain Wirt McCreary were landed here and have gone by train to Empire, a town on the railroad near Panama, where a camp has been established in the canal company's buildings. The camp is now thoroughly fortified, and all necessary precautions from a sanitary standpoint to insure the health of the marines have been taken. The camp will be supplied with water from the Dixie landing the analysis of the drinking water available there. If this water should be found to be good the remainder of the 450 marines on board the Dixie will be transferred to the camp in batches of fifty.

The stated official purpose of this movement is to give the marines practice in the building of camps and to relieve them from their long confinement on the vessel. The actual purpose of the United States government in landing the marines is, however, believed to be connected with the precautionary measures now being carried out on both sides of the isthmus and perhaps also for the moral effect which the landing of the marines may have on the native garrison at Panama, the loyalty of which, though hitherto absolutely unswerving, has been questioned in some quarters, especially since the discovery of the plot against the life of General Huertas, commander in chief of the forces of the republic of Panama, and the alleged effort on the part of a few army officers to persuade the garrison to revolt.

It is considered significant that the point selected for the encampment of the Dixie's marines, while it is the highest and most sanitary on the line of the Panama railroad, is also on the trail most frequently used in the past for the movement of troops overland from the Cauca district into the Chiriqui district.

General Huertas is about to establish a small garrison of the troops of the new republic at Yavisa, a town at the head of San Miguel bay, on the Pacific side of the isthmus.

Dr. Manuel Amador and Frederico Boyd, the special commissioners from the republic of Panama who recently visited Washington, have landed here from the steamer Seguranca. The commissioners took a special train for Panama.

Jewel Robbers Caged.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 9.—The two men, Morris Opar and Abram Dahler, arrested here with a large quantity of diamonds and other jewelry in their possession are, according to the police department, a much wanted pair. The police officials say that an officer is on his way here from New York to identify the two prisoners and that they are wanted in Orange, N. J.; Boston and Minneapolis for supposed connection with jewelry robberies in those places.

Shotguns Rule Berkley.

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 9.—Democrats in the town of Berkley have driven County Treasurer Lyons from his office, where, it is charged, he was registering negro voters, and have the negroes penned up in one section of the town. The streets are filled with men armed with shotguns, and a request will be made for a company of military from Norfolk or Portsmouth at once. Serious trouble is feared.

Society Lady Shot Dead.

RISING SUN, Ind., Dec. 9.—Miss Elizabeth Gillespie, prominent in local society, was assassinated here while sitting in the front room of her residence. The murderer shot her through a window, the entire charge of shot taking effect in the side of her head. No reason can be assigned for the shooting, and there is no clew to the murderer.

Sentence a Hundred Years Hence.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Dec. 9.—John H. Wood, a leader of the convicts who escaped from the Folsom penitentiary last summer, when a guard was stabbed to death, was convicted of murder in the second degree here. As Wood is already serving a life sentence, Judge Hart ordered him to appear in court for sentence 100 years from date.

Pennsylvania Will Sell Coal.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9.—Beginning on Jan. 1 the Pennsylvania railroad will follow the plan of the Reading company and other anthracite coal carriers by establishing its own sales department for the disposal of the product of its hard coal mines through its own sales agents instead of commissioned agents.

Will Not Submit to Reforms.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Dec. 9.—Turks and Albanians at a meeting held in the Isaak mosque at Monastir declared they would not submit to Austro-Russian measures for reforms in Macedonia. It was decided that steps would be taken to prevent the entrance to Monastir of the civil commissioners.

Captured Chinese Smuggler.

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash., Dec. 9.—A United States revenue cutter off this port has overhauled a sloop with five contraband Chinese and two white men on board. One of the white men was the notorious Wilkes, one of the most troublesome Chinese smugglers in the northwest.

PERKINS' TESTIMONY

Ship Trust Hearing Brings Out Connection of Morgan.

HOW BETHLEHEM WAS ACQUIRED.

Morgan's Partner Read Cablegram to Paris House Saying Schwab and Friends Are Interested in New Shipbuilding Company.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—At the hearing in the United States Shipbuilding receivership proceedings Lewis Nixon, president of the company, concluded his testimony and was followed by George W. Perkins, partner in the J. P Morgan & Co. firm, who gave the story of the connection of Morgan & Co. with the shipbuilding flotation. His testimony on direct examination went to show that Morgan & Co.'s connection with the shipbuilding company consisted in supplying trust companies with money to loan the shipbuilding company and in the sale to it of the Bethlehem plant.

The defense made strong efforts to keep certain cablegrams and letters bearing on the French underwriting firm from being published, and at the close of the hearing Mr. Guthrie pocketed the copy of one letter, the newspaper men being unable to obtain it.

Mr. Perkins read a cablegram in which, he said, had been sent by his house to Morgan & Co., Mr. Morgan's Paris connection:

"Mr. Charles M. Schwab and his friend are interested in the new shipbuilding company, and we would be glad to have you take as cogtial a view of it as is consistent."

Mr. Perkins insisted upon reading the cablegram despite the strenuous objections of William D. Guthrie of counsel for Mr. Schwab.

The witness declared that so much had been said about this cablegram that it would be a real pleasure for him to read it.

The Bethlehem plant was acquired from Mr. Schwab by J. P. Morgan & Co. as syndicate managers for the United States Steel corporation in the fall of 1901, the arrangement being, witness said, "that if we disposed of the property he (Schwab) should have a share of the profits." Schwab had no other interest in the company after the sale.

Mr. Perkins then gave an account of the connection of the firm with the shipbuilding company. In August, 1902, he said, he was approached by Mr. Pam, Mr. Nixon and Mr. Dresser, who wished to obtain from Morgan & Co. a loan for the shipbuilding company, Mr. Dresser representing to him on Aug. 11 that a large amount of the shipbuilding securities had been underwritten in France, that the money would arrive in a week or ten days, but that funds were needed for the company at once. Mr. Perkins said he declined to make the loan for the week or ten days, saying that as a firm Morgan & Co. could have no connection with the shipbuilding business.

The next day, after another conversation with Mr. Dresser, Mr. Perkins, in behalf of his firm, agreed to deposit $750,000 in each of three trust companies—the Trust Company of the Republic, the Knickerbocker and Manhattan trust companies—for ten days, Mr. Dresser having represented that these trust companies were willing to take an interest in the shipbuilding company if they had the necessary funds to loan. The money was deposited, but the Manhattan Trust company sent back the loan, finding that Morgan & Co. were not interested in the company, and Mr. Dresser made an arrangement with the New York Security and Trust company to obtain that portion of the money, Mr. Perkins introducing Mr. Dresser at the trust company, of which he was a director. Mr. Perkins insisted that the transaction throughout was "strictly underwriting operation in foreign exchange" on the part of the Morgan company, the money being deposited temporarily with the trust companies in order that they might have funds to make loans against rejected money from abroad. The Paris branch of Morgan & Co., he said, had no connection with the French underwriting.

Mr. Untermyer pressed him with questions about the knowledge Morgan & Co. had of the French underwriting and of the security upon which Mr. Dresser obtained the money from the trust companies, but Mr. Perkins insisted that those were details in which his company was not concerned.

Missing Merchant Delirious.

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., Dec. 9.—John Sapp, a prominent merchant, who was reported missing and was supposed to have been pulled out of his buggy and murdered for his money, has been found at the cabin of a negro family a few miles from where he disappeared. He was without coat or shoes, and his feet were frozen. He was delirious and cried out against an imaginary mob intent on killing him.

Railroad Tower Outrage.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 9.—Single handed and with no chance to summon aid, Operator J. R. Largmont, stationed in the Pittsburg and Lake Erie railroad telegraph tower at Alliquippa Park, a mile distant from any habitation, battled with three negroes until he was overcome. He was beaten into insensibility and robbed of about $50. His assailants left him bound in a chair.

"For the Good of the Service."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The president has accepted the resignation of Second Lieutenant John R. Doyle, Ninth infantry, now serving in the Philippines, "for the good of the service." He is a native of Pennsylvania and was graduated from the Military academy in 1900.

MRS. HALL HOST OF EQUAL SUFFRAGISTS

Large Gathering to Hear Address by Miss Harriett May Mills on the Movement.

BENEFITS OF EQUALITY

ARGUMENTS IN FAVOR OF WOMEN'S TITLE TO CITIZENSHIP.

Tea Follows Address—Those Participating in Affair—Additions to Membership—Officers of Local League.

As the result largely of a clear exposition of the meaning of the woman suffrage movement Friday afternoon by Miss Harriett May Mills, of Syracuse, N. Y., fourteen new members were added to the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield. The meeting and informal tea was held at the home of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, the president, of Madison avenue. There was an attendance of fifty members.

"Woman's Title to Citizenship" was Miss Mills' subject. She spoke of gains made in the cause during recent years, showing that there are now twelve States in which mothers are placed on an equal footing in regard to the guardianship of their children. She brought forward the large amount of taxes paid by women as an argument for granting them equal suffrage, and stated that if any educational qualifications for voting were necessary, they should affect men in the same way as women. The argument that granting the franchise to women would affect the size of families, she answered by showing that in Wyoming under woman suffrage divorces had notably decreased. She further indicated that elections were held in a more orderly manner under woman suffrage, again citing Wyoming as an example. She expressed herself as pleased with the progress of the work in New Jersey and referred to the fact that women had the suffrage in the State prior to 1807.

At the tea which followed Miss Mills' talk, Mrs. John I. Clapp, Mrs. Robert Robley, Mrs. Olaf Saugstad and Miss Bertha Whitney presided at the tables. Assisting them as waitresses were Miss Florence Huntington, Miss Viola Conkling, Miss Stephanie Krem and Miss Wilhelmina Hatton. Green was the color scheme in the decorations of the tables and rooms.

The officers of the Equal Suffrage League of the city and borough are: Mrs. F. H. Hall, president; Mrs. I. L. Miller, vice president and auditor; Mrs. Samuel L. Huntington, treasurer; Mrs. William L. Patton, corresponding secretary and Mrs. Harold Durar, recording secretary.

Miss Mills will speak today in Elizabeth where she will be the guest of Mrs. Elizabeth B. Blackwell, the first woman ordained a minister of the gospel in the United States.

The local league will hold meeting every month this year instead of every month as last year.

ORGANIST RESIGNS.

Mrs. James H. Buckley Tenders Her Resignation at St. Stephen's.

Mrs. James H. Buckley, organist at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, has tendered her resignation. She has been organist at St. Stephens for a number of years. During that time the musical part of the service has been improved very noticeably. A vested boy's choir has been organized and other innovations have been made. Mrs. Buckley resignation is regretted by all the friends of the parish. Several members of the choir have also resigned.

N. Y. and N. J. vs. The Mosquito.

Gov. Franklin Murphy, of New Jersey, will be among those present at a meeting of the Board of Trade and Transportation called for Wednesday, Dec. 16, in New York city. It is hoped to organize a national movement for the extermination of the mosquito pest at that time.

UNION PARK FOR CITY AND BOROUGH

Scheme Launched by Council to Join With City for Consolidated Pleasure Grounds.

THE SITE SUGGESTED

COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO ASCERTAIN FEASIBILITY OF PROPOSITION.

Councilman Arnold the Father of the Plan—Mayor Appoints Committee of Three to Report on Advisability of Scheme.

Following closely upon the attempt to unite the public schools of North Plainfield with those of Plainfield, the borough officials, at the December meeting of the Council, Friday, took initiatory steps toward the establishment of a public park for the use of the two municipalities. Councilman J. K. Arnold, as chairman of the street committee, introduced the subject through a resolution providing for the appointment by the Mayor of a committee of three to investigate and report on the matter.

Mr. Arnold, in explaining his action, stated that he had been informed that Plainfield's plan of locating a park near Randolph road, had fallen through, and he also understood that the Boice property in the vicinity of Elm place could be secured for a public park. He favored the project and believed that such a scheme would be advisable and would be a source of pleasure to the people of the borough and city.

Mayor Smalley, before he appointed a committee consisting of Councilmen Arnold, VanArsdale and Clark, said that he was afraid the motive would be misconstrued to mean consolidation of city and borough. However, in appointing the committee he said that he would select three members who favored a public park, band concerts, and like municipal improvements.

ANNOYANCE CAUSED BY GAS WORKS METHODS

Residents in the Vicinity of Washington and E. Fourth Sts. Complain to Light Co.

CONSTANT EXPLOSIONS

BLOWING OF THE RUNS THE CAUSE OF THE DISTURBANCE.

Flames Shoot High in the Air Lighting Up the Sky at Night—Residents Say That Their Slumbers Are Disturbed.

Persons living in the vicinity of Washington and East Fifth streets have made several complaints to the Plainfield Gas Company and to The Daily Press about annoying explosions which take place every few minutes at the gas works situated at the corner of Washington and East Fourth streets. The explosions are accompanied by a large volume of flame which shoots into the air to a heighth of twenty-five feet and at night lights the heavens. There is a dull rumbling noise preceding and following the outburst, which the people claim, keep them awake at night.

A reporter for The Daily Press visited the gas plant a few days ago and in an interview with the superintendent of the works was told that the explosions were caused by "blowing off the runs." After each retort has been discharged of its gas, the flues are blown out before a new charge is put in. These charges are called runs and a new run is put in every fifteen or twenty minutes. The blowing off process is accomplished by turning into the retort a large volume of gas which is automatically set fire. The explosion of the gas clears out the flues in preparation for the new run.

Heretofore the runs have been accompanied by merely a large volume of flame, which was not accompanied by any noise. It seems that a new retort was installed in October and since then the new apparatus has not been overhauled. It has been made to do service while the old retort is undergoing repairs. As soon as the repairs are completed the annoying explosions will cease, say the men at the works.

BOYS' BASKET BALL GAMES

"YALE" DEFEATS "PRINCETON" AND "COLUMBIA" BEATS "HARVARD."

By two shut-outs, "Yale" triumphed over "Princeton", and "Columbia" defeated "Harvard" yesterday afternoon in the Junior basket ball league of the Y. M. C. A. Columbia won the game by two goals from fouls scored after much rough play by Woodhull, one goal in each half. The score was 2 to 0 and was the second defeat Harvard has sustained in the series. The Princeton-Yale game was won by the latter, 6 to 0, Briggs and Alpaugh scoring goals from the floor in the first half and Leggett in the second. Princeton was outweighed and generally outplayed throughout.

The series will be decided next Tuesday afternoon when the last games will be played. Harvard, the leader up to the present, is now tied with Columbia for first position, each team having won three games and lost two. Yale and Princeton are also tied, with two victories and three defeats. Summaries:

Columbia—Woodhull and Morris, forwards; Freeman, centre; Stephen and Stern, guards. Harvard—Doeringer and Hart, forwards; Longhitn, centre; K. Doeringer and Lambert, guards. Goals from fouls, Woodhull 2.

Yale—Leggett and Briggs, forwards; Alpaugh, centre; Denton and Leland, guards. Princeton—Line and Bird, forwards; Caldwell, centre; Sharp and Taylor, guards. Goals from the floor, Leggett, Briggs, Alpaugh.

Referee, Robbie; umpire, Coltjer; timer, Heywood; time, 15-min. periods.

Alis Club In Casino.

The Alis Club has secured the privileges of the Casino for two nights a week for the use of the bowling alleys and other games at the local amusement place. It is said that the club is arranging for a series of contests to be held during the winter on the bowling alleys.

RAILROAD CONTRACTOR.

John Shafer, Member of New York Firm, Died Here Yesterday Morning.

John J. Shafer, aged 60 years, died yesterday at 3 o'clock at 633 Belvidere avenue, where he had been staying for a month past. He had been ill about two months. Mr. Shafer was a member of the firm of A. H. Jacoby Company, railroad contractors, of New York. He lived in Plainfield about a year ago. He leaves a wife. The remains will be taken to Oberlin, Ohio, tonight, where the services will be held and the interment will take place.

Sued by Liveryman.

The case in tort of Fred Winter against Theodore Merle, in Justice VanMinden's court at New Market, will be given a jury trial tomorrow morning. S. S. Swackhamer, Esq., will represent the plaintiff and W. L. Hetfield, Jr., the defendant. The defendant is accused of abusing the plaintiff's horse and damaging his carriage which he has hired. A recent complaint against Merle of the theft of $300 was dismissed from Justice VanMinden's court.

Outings for Boys.

The members of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. will be given an opportunity to make several interesting trips during the holidays, under the leadership of Kenneth Robbie, their secretary. On Monday, December 28, they will visit the Rahway reformatory and on Wednesday, December 30, will inspect the handsome quarters of the Y. M. C. A. in Newark. Other outings will probably be arranged.

These officers have been elected by the Plainfield Camera Club for the coming year: President, Harold Serrell; vice president, J. Herrey Deane; secretary, Vincent Sokel; treasurer, H. H. Coward; directors, Frank T. Ostrom, C. E. Murray, Farnk Hammann and Samuel Craig. Early in January the club will give an exhibit loaned by the Photo Era, of Boston.

NASH CONDEMNS A. O. U. W. PLANS

Evasion of Order's Rules Responsible for Big Indebtedness Supreme Lodge Finds.

MEETING IN NEWARK

NASH AND COLLIER DISAGREE AS TO THE SCHEME.

Grounds for Opposition to Plan Enunciated Before the Members of West End Lodge, No. 49—Mr. Nash's Talk.

For and against the new plan of assessments for the A. O. U. W., adopted by the Supreme Lodge last June, V. W. Nash, of this city, and Edward Collier, of Newark, argued Tuesday before a gathering of members of West End Lodge, No. 49, at Newark. Both men are supreme representaives of New Jersey. Mr. Nash spoke carefully and at length in opposition to the new plans. He said in part:

"At the meeting of the Supreme Lodge, the members were informed to their surprise that the A. O. U. W. was in debt $650,000 on January 1 of this year to which sum must be added the amount of indebtedness incurred from January to June when the meeting took place, the entire debt being about $800,000. According to the laws of the organization, this debt should have been cleared up by a special assessment upon each of the 450,000 members and a per capita assessment of $2 would have been sufficient for the purpose.

"This assessment was not made and in consequence, the announcement of the $650,000 shortage was sprung upon the representatives to the Supreme Lodge.

"For eight months prior to the Supreme Lodge, the committee in charge had an actuary working upon a new plan of assessments. This plan as presented created a new class of members of 55 years of age and over from whom it was proposed to collect $11.40 per month upon each $2,000 certificate. This plan being rejected, a new one was substituted whereby a new class was formed whose rate at 55 should be $8.40, and this plan was adopted together with a number of other novel ideas on fraternal insurance.

"Among these ideas the one that was most strongly advocated was what is known as the level plan, such a one as New Jersey had abandoned a year previous for a classified plan. The new level rate was proposed as the offering greatest inducements to new members and was strongly opposed by me as a plan that could not advisedly be offered young men desirous of entering a fraternal insurance association. My grounds for this opposition are first, that a comparison of rates shows that the plan would make the cost to a man of from 21 to 45 greater than straight life insurance in old line companies. The figures that follow speak for themselves:

"Under the new plan, a man of 21 joining the A. O. U. W., and paying twelve years' assessments would be required to pay $16.08 and in addition $4 in dues and a $1 special assessment, the total being $21.08. An old line company would require the payment of $16.62. At the age of thirty, the fraternal insurance would cost $35.88 and the old line $34.38. At 35, the figures would be $30.24 for fraternal insurance and $28.11 for old line; at 40, $34.40 as against $33.01; and at 45, $40.64 as against $39.55.

"These figures indicate clearly that there would be no inducement for young men to join the order under the new plans, the fact that payments in the A. O. U. W. could be made monthly instead of quarterly or semi-annually not being a sufficient off-set.

"So far as the new plans affect New Jersey, I contend that New Jersey does not require and should not adopt them. The State has already paid about $100,000 for the relief of other jurisdictions without ever having received a cent in return. Under the present plan she has paid from January to November into the guarantee fund between $16,000 and $17,000 for other jurisdictions. If the new plans are adopted we will pay about $50,000 a year. If New Jersey, under the present plan, collects twelve classified assessments for a year, she will have collected more in the last year than is necessary to pay her debt losses.

"My contention is that, if New Jersey deemed it wise, the surplus of $70,000 a year could be properly invested and would enable the State to continue for many years without increasing the rate to the old man to drive him out of the order or cause him to reduce the amount of his certificate.

"As to the fraternal idea of the order, I maintain that men join this and similar associations for its insurance feature and not for the fraternal idea which prevails among Masons and Odd Fellows. This fact is clearly demonstrated in every lodge by the fact that not ten per cent. of the members attend their meetings, many never entering the lodge rooms after their initiations."

Referring back to the insurance feature of the order, Mr. Nash gave figures to show that under the proposed plans, members of the present day would be taxed to relieve those who will join fifteen or twenty years later.

In opposition to Mr. Nash, and in favor of the plans, Mr. Collier confined his argument almost entirely to an emphasis of the fraternal idea of the organization, stating that men should be willing to pay more for fraternity with insurance than for simple insurance alone. He said that dues should not be considered as part of the insurance, and that Mr. Nash, while not actually advocating secession for New Jersey, was merely making plain how easy it was to secede.

Mr. Nash will speak at Jersey City on Friday night of this week.

ROSELLE DEFEATED CRANFORD'S TEAM

Initial Contest Between Two Aggregations Results in a Clean Victory for Roselle.

WINNERS' HIGH SCORES

CRANFORD FAILS TO TAKE ANY ONE OF THE THREE GAMES.

Howe High Man on Successful Team—Bates Makes Good Showing for Losing Aggregation—Result of the Play.

Roselle Casino and Cranford Casino met last night for the first time this season in a series of games in The Daily Press Bowling League tournament. The games were rolled or the Cranford alleys, and the visitors still continuing their good work took all three from the home team. In every game they rolled over 800, while Cranford rolled over that score in the first game only, when the total was 810. The totals for Roselle were 843, 842 and 815, against 810, 795 and 705 for the home five.

Howe was high man for the Roselle aggregation with a score of 211. This he made in the first game when he is credited with four strikes, six spares and no breaks. Roselle did not roll such high scores generally, but they were better on the average, while with Cranford there were several scores much below the average. Bates, with a 190, touched high point for Cranford. Dohrman rolled for Hibson in the second and third games, while Hibson rolled for Bremmer in the third game. These changes did not benefit the home team greatly as their opponents were much too strong for them.

The next series of games is scheduled for Friday night, when Roselle will roll at Westfield and Cranford will visit the Parks.

The scores for last night were:

ROSELLE.			CRANFORD.
S. Smith	159	144	168	Bates	190	180	120
Hamman	167	179	138	Park	136	134	154
Harris	128	163	156	Bremmer	134	127
Howe	211	167	166	Hibson	120	153
Mulford	141	178	163	Dohrman		152	126
				Plummer	181	143	446

CHANGES IN FIRE HOUSE.

Councilman Clark Explains to Firemen Arrangements of Building.

Warren Engine Company, of North Plainfield, held an important meeting last night, at which time Councilman Clark, as chairman of the fire, water and lamps committee of the borough Council, was present and submitted the plans for the remodeling of the new engine house to accommodate the Common Council in part of the building upstairs originally designed for use of the members of the company. A meeting of the Council will be held this evening.

New Local Manager.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Trowbridge, Jr., of Newark, N. J., are registered as a local hotel and will reside in this city the first of the year. Mr. Trowbridge will manage the Singer Machine Company's business here.

MRS. HUNT TALKS AT TEMPERANCE MEETING

Plainfield W. C. T. U. Gathered in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church to Hear Address.

SOME EVILS OF DRINK

UNITED STATES THE MOST SOBER NATION ON EARTH SHE SAYS.

Scientific Analyses of Liquor—Woman Tells of the German Congress's Work—The Schools Receive Mrs. Willard's Portrait.

Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, a noted temperance worker, interested a small but attentive audience at the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Tuesday by an address descriptive largely of scientific analyses of the evils of drink and of a trip made by her to an anti-alcohol congress in Bremen, Germany, in April of this year.

Mrs. Hunt attacked vigorously the recently exploited theory of Prof. Atwater that alcoholic beverages contain much that is valuable as food. She pointed out the fallacy in the statistics, which Prof. Atwater produced to show a gain in weight produced by the taking of stimulants, indicating that the supply of protein, the most necessary food element, was lessened by the use of alcoholic drinks.

Mrs. Hunt's descriptions of her attendance at the German congress and visit to the German empress were most entertaining. She states that Germany has awakened to the need of an active war against the drink habit and that much progress has already been made. The emperor and empress are especially eager to restrain the excessive beer drinking of large numbers of their countrymen, believing that a continuance as under present conditions will menace the future of the empire.

The tests of German scientists of the effects of alcoholic drinks were described. These tests have been most thorough and unite to show the harmful effects of liquor upon physical and mental growth. Mrs. Hunt stated that the standards of measurements and physical requirements for admission to the army have been frequently lowered in recent years to meet the lower average of physical attainment brought about by the use of liquors.

Of the progress in the United States, Mrs. Hunt spoke most encouragingly. She stated that the United States is the most sober nation on earth and that the per capita consumption of liquor has greatly decreased in the last two decades. The safety of the nation, she declared, depends upon a continuance of the present laws requiring the study of the effects of alcohol upon the human system in connection with the study of physiology and hygiene in the public schools.

The beneficent effect of these laws which now exist in every State in the union, Mrs. Hunt said, has already been amply illustrated. Twenty-two million school children at the present time are learning of the evils of drink at an age when such teachings make their most lasting impression. Mrs. Hunt referred to the effect of immigration from countries where drinking has been universal for centuries upon the consumption of liquor in the United States, and said that these immigrants are gradually being weaned from their habit largely through the teachings that their children receive in the public schools.

Mrs. Hunt is the World's and National Christian Temperance Union's Superintendent of Scientific Temperance Instruction in schools and colleges and is a director of the Bureau of Scientific Temperance Investigation.

At the close of her address, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of the W. C. T. U., of this city, presented Superintendent H. M. Maxson for the public schools of the city a portrait of Mrs. Frances E. Willard, the distinguished temperance advocate. The gift, which was in recognition of good temperance work accomplished in Plainfield schools, was accepted with appropriate remarks by the superintendent.

Mayor Gilbert a Guest.

Among the guests of honor at the annual banquet of the New York State Bankers' Association to be given tomorrow evening at the Waldorf-Astoria will be Alexander Gilbert, of West Eighth street, president of the Market and Fulton Bank, New York, and a member of the Clearing House Committee.

ALL TO BE UNDER ONE ROOF

GREAT IMPROVEMENT AND EXPANSION ARRANGED BY M. WEINBERGER.

M. Weinberger, the West Front street clothier and men's furnisher, has decided to combine his two stores into one, continuing the one in the building owned by him and located next to what is known as Compton's alley. Extensive alterations are planned, including a forty foot extension to the ground floor and the complete remodeling of the two upper floors, one of which is now occupied by Assemblyman Newcorn and the Jewish Congregation. This second floor will be thrown into one large room, to be used exclusively for tailoring, while a handsome glass front, similar to the one on the first floor will be made. Nothing will be done for the present with the third floor.

Another improvement planned is a new and more substantial entrance to the alley, to be made of cement, taking the place of the block stone and wood now used.

THREE SILENT, SULLEN PEOPLE

MYSTERIOUS PERSONAGES VISIT SOUTH PLAINFIELD WITH MAPS, ETC.

Who were the three silent men of South Plainfield, and what was their mission? This is the question which is puzzling the people of that community. Although these mysterious persons were at the place Friday and Saturday nights, they would not divulge their true identity nor their object in coming to the town with surveying instruments and a large case of maps. Were they surveyors for some big company who intend giving South Plainfield communication with this city, Metuchen and New Brunswick by trolley? The question remains unanswered.

Late Friday night the three men alighted from an east bound Lehigh Valley train and secured lodging at Higgin's Hotel. They would not give their names neither would they say but that their object was in coming to that hamlet. The next morning, they received a large number of surveying instruments, maps, etc.

Early Saturday morning, they consulted their maps and located the direction to Metuchen and then started across the country towards Metuchen. They returned to the hotel that night, and Saturday night and that was the last seen of them.

The report spread that they were surveyors employed by the Middlesex and Somerset Traction Company to lay out the "air line" trolley road between this city and Metuchen, and New Brunswick, taking in South Plainfield and possibly New Market. As told in The Daily Press, the M. & S. Company, has in mind, the erection of a trolley road over that route. William F. Fisher, assistant superintendent of the New Brunswick line, when called up over the telephone yesterday declared that he knew nothing of any surveyors in the employ of the company being in this vicinity. It is thought that these surveyors represented some Philadelphia concern which contemplates building an air line road between this city and Staten Island sound and the sound resorts.

D. OF A. COUNCIL ELECTS.

Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Chooses Mrs. Benjamin Councilor.

Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America, elected these officers at a regular meeting held last night: Junior Past Councilor, G. Thorn; junior associate past councilor, Mrs. Susan VanCamp; councilor, Mrs. Jennie Benjamin; associate councilor, Mrs. Hannah Thompson; associate vice councilor, Mrs. H. W. Angleman; assistant recording secretary, Miss Eldora Beekman; conductor, Miss Flora Moorehouse; warden, Miss Florence Wesh; inside sentinel, F. G. Welsh; outside sentinel, Mrs. Fritse; trustees, eighteen months, F. G. Welsh. The installation will take place in the council's new rooms in the Babcock building on January 9.

—Do not bother about making your mince meat for Christmas. Just as good can be bought. Neuman Brothers have the purest and best. See ad for varieties. Neuman Brothers have plum pudding, too.

SUMMIT TURNPIKE PROPOSITION KILLED

Union County Freeholders Vote Against Scheme Because Too Extravagant.

MR. FARRELL HONORED

SILVER TEA-SET PRESENTED TO POPULAR RAHWAY MAN.

Farrell, a Valuable Member, Leaves Board After Long Service—The Presentation Speech Was Made By Benjamin King.

The Summit turnpike project was killed and forever buried by the Union County Board of Freeholders, when it met in adjourned session in the Court House at Elizabeth Tuesday afternoon. The Board was divided in the matter. Those who live in the neighborhood of the proposed road were in favor of the project but the members from Plainfield, Rahway and Elizabeth and other places in that part of the county voted it down. Their reasons were that the road is not of sufficient need to warrant the expenditure of $40,000.

A feature of the session was the presentation of a silver tea set of very attractive design to the retiring member, John Farrell, of Rahway. The speech was made by Major Benjamin King, who voiced the sentiments of the members of the Board when he said that Mr. Farrell has always been held in high esteem by his colleagues and that it came with a deep sense of regret that the time has come when he must be absent from the deliberations of the Board. Mr. Farrell, who was greatly surprised by the unexpected honor, was visibly moved by the gift. It was some seconds before he was able to make a reply. He then thanked the members for the spirit which prompted making him such a gift.

"Mr. Farrell was one of the most popular members of the Board," said a local member this morning.

TRINITY'S BIG SUNDAY-SCHOOL

OFFICERS ELECTED AT ANNUAL MEETING—FLOURISHING CONDITION.

Officers of Trinity Reformed Church Sunday-school were elected Tuesday at the annual meeting of officers and teachers. All of the officers were reelected with the exception of a single member of the executive committee who declined to serve. The results: Superintendent, F. E. Smith; assistant superintendent, H. J. Martin; superintendent of the primary department, Mrs. J. M. Tier, superintendent of the home department, Mrs. George Sauns; superintendents of the Junior department, Mrs. L. B. Schofield; treasurer, H. E. Gayle; secretary, H. H. Bird; assistant secretary, C. F. Colthar; librarian, H. C. VanBurgh, assistants, J. A. Love, W. F. Williams, Fred Dunavan, Charles Zimmer; executive committee, W. F. Oliver, chairman; Miss Mabel Wilson, Mrs. H. S. Potter; library committee, Mrs. H. Crawford, chairman; Mrs. L. B. Schofield, Miss Annie Searing; music, Miss Lillian A. Force, chairman; Miss M. A. Randolph, Elmer Wheeler, H. J. Martin, Mrs. George Sauns, W. C. Leek, teachers' committee, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, chairman; Robert Clark, Jr., Miss Etta C. Benedict; pianist, Miss L. A. Force.

The treasurer's report showed the school in a flourishing condition with $191.85 in the treasury and all outstanding debts paid. At the beginning of the new year, the enrollment in the school will be 704, including the members of the home department, a remarkably fine showing.

A Word to the Wife.

Many wives would like to give their husbands a new pipe for Christmas but do not know where to go to get the best bargain. M. O. Dobbins, of Park avenue, makes a specialty of the finest pipes at reasonable prices. He has in stock over one hundred different brands of tobacco, including the celebrated Partigas. He is making a specialty of fine cigars in boxes of 25 for holiday presents. Have you tried his celebrated non-flavored Yara cigars?

Will Name Boorsem.

The Senators, Kean and Dryden, having agreed on Robert H. Boorsem, of New Brunswick, he will be appointed Assistant United States Attorney for this district some time this week. Mr. Boorsem is the law partner of John H. Voorhees, Prosecutor of the Pleas in Middlesex County.

HOUSEHOLD ADVICE.

Hits of Useful Wisdom and Small Economies for the Busy Housewife.

Old stockings cut down the seam make excellent cloths for polishing furniture and floors, as well as soft iron holders.

Gasoline put on stains on a white silk waist, followed by as much lump magnesia as the gasoline will take up, well rubbed in, will generally remove the stains.

When grease is spilled on the kitchen table or floor, pour cold water on it at once to prevent it soaking into the wood. It will quickly harden and can be lifted with a knife.

To remove soot from a carpet, sprinkle plenty of fine salt over it and sweep along the grain of the carpet. Repeat until every trace of the spot is removed.

In making down pillows go over the wrong side of the cover with an iron rubbed well with beeswax each time it is applied to the cloth, to prevent the down working through the cloth.

Flat irons should be washed every week, and always kept in a clean, dry place. Few housekeepers use sufficient wax in ironing. Do not allow your irons to become red-hot, as they will never again retain the heat.

When winds do blow and there is frost in the air, put handkerchiefs, collars, cuffs and all small articles in the wash to dry in a sheltered place. The fabric is spared whipping by the wind, they will freeze dry and be quickly gathered for ironing.

Buy a strip of asbestos cloth at the hardware store, and use small squares to interline your iron holders. Keep a good-sized piece fastened to your ironing board to save the sheet and lay a square under the table pad where the meat platter rests.

Do not try to sweep an invalid's room, but bring a clean cloth out of cold water to which a few drops of ammonia have been added, and carefully wipe the carpet, matting or floor, turning and rinsing the cloth and changing the water as it gets dirty.

Cheese cloth or silkoline makes good dusters, and windows or box draperies that are not longer fresh and attractive should be cut into squares and neatly hemmed for the purpose. There should be a sufficient number on hand that they may be washed as regularly as the face towels, as they last longer and give more satisfactory service with frequent washings.

A bride's trousseau includes the wearing apparel (except dresses) and all the household linen necessary for two years. A simple list of the latter includes four tablecloths, with four or five dozen napkins of different sizes; 12 sheets, with a dozen and a half pillow cases; two dozen towels, with dish and kitchen towels, doilies, centerpieces, bureau and wash stand scarfs and other linen pieces needed about the house.

Teach the boys as well as The girls the proper way to put the bedclothes to air over two chairs in the morning, and also occasionally give the boys a lesson in simple cooking by having them help prepare breakfast. The lad who can make a good cup of coffee, broil a steak and serve them will lose nothing of manliness, but may find the knowledge useful in after life.

HINTS FOR THE LAUNDRY.

How to Handle the Table Linen in the Process of Renovation.

By most housewives the ironing of table linen is a much-dreaded task, but by using the following plan it may become a task pleasure. We all realize how tiresome it is to crawl out of shape when wet and how hard it is to regain it dried in that condition. All this trouble and exertion of pulling and stretching may be avoided, if when the tablecloths are being hung upon the line the selvages are loosened evenly and not pinned to the line, corners first, then the sag, says Woman's Home Companion. The edges must be stretched gently in place, and held with pins not more than 12 or 15 inches apart. If pins and line are used, the napkins may be hung over the table-cloth, allowing the same pins to do service for both. Shake out all unnecessary folds and wrinkles that may remain. When possible, leave out until dampened by dew; if not, sprinkle and fold in the usual manner. Let lay at least an hour or so, then shake out, and iron single. Begin at a corner. Iron lengthways, then across, keeping the lines squared. This is the secret of success. Turpentine in the starch produces gloss.

Preserved Pumpkin.

Allow one pound of sugar to every pound of pumpkin; juice of two large lemons to each pound. Cut off the rind and pick out the seeds from a very fresh pumpkin, cut it into slices, put into a deep dish with sugar between each two layers; strain the lemon juice over the slices, and let it remain for two days, and then put it into a preserving pan with a quarter of a pint of water to every pound and a half of sugar, and the peel of a large lemon. Let it boil until the slices are tender, and stand covered for three days. Put the pumpkin into jars, boil and strain the syrup until it is very thick and rich and pour it over the preserves. Cover with brandy papers, and tie closely.—Good Housekeeping.

Citron Melon and Cranberries.

Citron melon cooked with cranberries make a very agreeable sauce, attractive in appearance. Cook a quart of citron, peeled and cut into squares, in just water enough to cover, until tender; then add one and one-half cupfuls of cranberries and two heaping cupfuls of sugar; cook 20 minutes longer, and set aside to cool. It will keep well for some time without canning.—Kew Yorker.

A NEW GOLD FIELD

Prospector and Miner May Turn His Steps to South Australia.

Capital and Labor Only Necessary. It Is Said, to Increase the Returns a Hundred Fold.

The gold hunter is globe trotter, explorer and pioneer all in one. The gleam of gold can draw him unto the ends of the world. The hint of a find in a new quarter of the globe will make him unwary in the place of present location, unless he has struck it rich there, and the news of a big strike will find him pulling up stakes and moving on to the new El-dorado. The fever for gold will lure a man over land and sea, it will nerve him to untold hardships, it will drive him to herculean efforts and hold him steadily at his task until a strike is made or he is swallowed up by famine or pestilence.

The rush to the gold fields of California was followed by the discovery of gold in Australia and the turning of the tide of gold seekers in that direction, and of late years the Black Hills, Cripple Creek, Alaska and British Columbia have yielded their gold and drawn the hordes of gold seekers to the fields that promised fortunes quick and certain. More and more gold is being taken out of the Yukon region each year, miners continue to go there and stake out claims, but the first fever of the gold strikes in the frozen north has subsided. And now come news of discoveries in South Australia which may send the gold hunters from the far north to the far south.

It is said that it is only necessary to expend capital and labor on the gold fields recently discovered there to increase the gold returns of the colony a hundredfold. The government geologist lately made a report on the White Range mines, in the northern territory of the state, giving the history of mining in that district. The White Range is situated at Arltunga, in the MacDonnell ranges, some 70 miles northward of Oodnadatta, the present terminus of the Transcontinental railway. Oodnadatta is 688 miles from Adelaide by rail.

Gold was first discovered in the White range in 1897. The conditions in which the metal occurs are peculiar. No defined leaders have yet been met with. There are large outcrops of quartz, but these have no true walls separating them from the country rock; the quartz occurring in large irregular shaped masses and blocks, enclosed in and intermixed with the quartzite. The gold occurs mostly in cellular quartz and gossan, the greater proportion of it being in very fine dust. Wherever seams of cellular quartz are found traversing the quartz and quartzite, they appear to be an indication of the presence of gold. The stone obtained from the workings is broken and sifted; the solid white quartz is rejected, and the cellular quartz, gossan, and siftings are saved for treatment at the government battery.

The chief difficulty at present with which the prospectors have to contend is, of course, the great distance of the fields from Adelaide. The track is long and hard to travel, and provisions cost 50 per cent., and in some cases 100 per cent., more than they do in Adelaide. In a handbook to the mines, recently issued, the writer, while impressed with the good results that will follow the expenditure of capital on these gold fields, warns men who think of going to them that, unless they have some £75 to £100 in their pockets, they will have tremendous hardships to encounter. Much capital must be expended on the fields before man of small means should even think of going to them.

PRECEPT AND PRACTICE.

A Scheme That Was Good in Conception, But Is Not Needed Carrying Out.

"Confound it all!" exclaimed a friend with whom I was going home the other evening, relates the New York Times, "I have a package of papers at the office I wanted to take home. But I'll miss the boat if I go back for it. Guess I'll drop myself a postal card."

"Drop yourself a postal card?" I asked. "What do you mean?"

He thrust his hand into his pocket and drew forth a package of cards, and as he was scribbling a few words by the light that shone from the window of a cafe began:

"Best, cheapest and most effective memory-jogger in the world. I am a very absent-minded person, and all of the old schemes are of no avail. I found the writing on the finger won't work, for I'd forgot what I intended to recollect. So I hit on the idea of sending myself postal cards.

"Just before I left the office I addressed one to myself at the house, writing on it, 'Umbrella, Jim,' so it will be delivered to me at the breakfast table, a reminder that I should take the old umbrella over to town and get it fixed. Last night at home I wrote on a card 'Chicken and so forth.' That came to my office early the day, and if it hadn't I would have been shy of stuff for dinner tonight.

"It's a simple matter, costing only one cent for each service, and for this small outlay I have my lagging memory prodded by a special government official under bonds to perform his duty.

"Sometimes I think this new scheme of mine saved my life once. It was not very long ago. I had a bad cold. My doctor gave me some medicine which he said I must take every two hours. It was absolutely impossible for me to remember to do so, so I took a pack of postal cards and wrote on each 'Take your medicine and mail yourself a card.' I started the ball a-rolling by dropping a card in a box and taking the first dose. The deliveries at my office are exactly two hours apart. Whenever a carrier appeared he handed me the reminder, and I swallowed my medicine and handed him a fresh card. Result, prompt cure."

By this time we were aboard the ferryboat and on our way down the bay.

"It certainly is an admirable idea," I said. "But, by the way, what do you intend to do with those postal cards you showed me?"

"Confound the luck!" he said, looking chagrined. "I forgot to mail them."

FICHU AND SURPLICE.

Modes That Are in High Favor with Those Who Are Particular About Trimming.

The fichu, or surplice, form of trimming, is a great success, reports the New York Tribune. A nice example of it is used on a gown of light cloth, trimmed with embroidered filet. A five-inch band of lace, embroidered with brown chenille and edged with a narrow ruching of tan colored taffeta, runs about the neck, crossing in front and meeting in the back. On the upper part of the sleeves is a similar band, carrying out the idea of the edge of a cape a little longer on the shoulders than in the front or the back. The decolletage that the trimming leaves is filled in with a small point and choker of taffeta folds, embroidered with brown, the upper edge of the choker being edged with sable. The sleeves have pointed cuffs of taffeta, embroidered with edged fur. The bodice blouses a trifle over a draped belt of silk, spread out in front with three buttons made of fur. The skirt hangs in full folds behind and on the sides and has an inverted box plait in front—a novel and pretty skirt. It is trimmed with two bands of lace and ruchings that curve up and cross in front, with the ends disappearing under the sides of the plaits.

One can hardly remember when gowns have been more complicated. The full skirts call for a lot of trimming, and there is no lack of elaborateness on bodices. The tendency seems to be in the direction of severe tailored suits, and other gowns very elaborate. A tailored suit in one of the soft, checked woolens that are so much used now has a simple skirt made with a cluster of side plaits and a narrow box plait in front. The bolero has cuffs, a turn-over collar and belt of dark blue velvet, edged with white cloth, embroidered in gold. The back of the bolero is cut in two points, and buttons down on the belt with two large gold buttons. The top of the sleeves have puffs but open cape pieces, the points of which, back and front, hang several inches on the skirt.

Swiss Potatoes.

Select potatoes of even shape and size; scrub and then bake; directly the potatoes are done, slice off the top of each and scoop out the potato, taking care not to break the skin; mash and whip with a little milk, butter, and season very highly with grated cheese and cayenne, stir in a little chopped parsley and beat till light; return the pulp to the skins, letting it rise a little over the top, and run a little butter over it, then set in a hot oven and bake a light brown. —People's Home Journal.

Sweetbreads a la Creme.

Parboil, drain and cut up, but not too fine. Make a cream sauce and put the parboiled sweetbreads into it. Sweetbreads a la creme are frequently combined with chopped mushrooms, chicken, oysters, lobster, crab, shrimps or green peas, or a medley may be used in the same way.—Brown Book.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Interesting events have recently occurred in the harness racing world, and records have been broken several times. At Wichita, Kan., Cresceus gone king of trotters regained his lost laurels for a few days by trotting a mile in 1:59¾, but less than a week later Lou Dillon established her supremacy again at Memphis by trotting a mile in 1:58½, completely eclipsing all previous records. Not only has the trotter distinguished himself, but the pacer has come in for a share of the glory. Four times this year the trotting mark has been shattered or tied, while the side-wheelers have twice changed their bike-ribbon figures. Dan Patch, the pacing king, was the first, cutting the record to 1:59 then came Prince Alert with 1:57, and now Dan Patch has placed the latest figures at 1:56¼. Then came Lou Dillon at Readville, Mass., August 24 when the Billings mare pulled two minutes flat, being the first trotter to ever equal those figures. Her glory was not long-lived, however, for September 25 at the Empire City track Major Delmar tied her, and now come the figures of Crescens and Lou Dillon in quick succession. George H. Ketcham, breeder, owner and driver of Crescens, handled the reins over his horse in his record-breaking run. Another trotting mark of long standing was Maud S.'s 2:08¾, made with a high-wheel sulky, but she beats it Cleveland September 12 by Lou Dillon when she, hitched to the old-fashioned vehicle, went in 2:05. Comparison of the intermediate times in these record trials is "dope" that is enjoyed by the following of the trotting horses. The times in the miles made by Dan Patch, Lou Dillon, Prince Alert, Crescens and Major Delmar are as follows:

The title of "intercollegiate champion club swinger" is held by George E. Mix, a student at Yale university. Back of the title there is a story of suffering and perseverance that makes him more interesting than the ordinary athlete. Mr. Mix had the misfortune, when a lad of four, to slip on an icy pavement, breaking his right hip. The bone was not properly set, and when it had healed it was discovered that the child would be a cripple for life. During the period between four and 14 Mr. Mix was a puny, sickly boy, whose physicians finally gave him up, telling his parents that no possible earthly cure could be effected. Then it was that this boy of 14 displayed the indomitable will that has marked his career ever since. Having read somewhere that rigid physical training would oftimes cure the chronic invalid, he joined, without consulting his parents, a Young Men's Christian Association gymnasium. Here he took up Indian club swinging. But the road to victory was long and difficult to travel, for the clubs were heavy, and the swinging of them physical torture for many, many months. But he persevered, and finally his health began to mend. Straightway he grew from a sickly, crippled lad into a strong, broad-shouldered youth, whose brawn and muscle are to-day the envy of every college athlete. He is the only lame student in the history of Yale's athletes who has secured the much coveted Yale F. For two years he has held the university championship, winning two silver cups. He has also twice won first prize in dual meets between Yale and Columbia, securing a gold medal on each occasion. In 1892 he won third place in the intercollegiate gymnastic championship meet at Philadelphia. It was at this year's intercollegiate gymnastic meet at New York university that the title of "Yale's intercollegiate champion club swinger" was conferred upon him. Aside from his prowess as an athlete, Mr. Mix has won literary honors, and is regarded as one of the ablest debaters in his class at Yale. is the vice president of the Yale Kent club, and has been self-supporting for seven years, holds at present responsible positions with two of the leading New Haven dailies.

Terry McGovern, former feather-weight champion of the world, was given the decision over Jimmy Briggs, of Chelsea, the other night, after a hard 15 round battle before the Criterion Athletic club, at Boston. For ten rounds the ex-champion seemed to have lost his old-time cunning, and even a favorable decision for him seemed doubtful. Toward the end, however, superior ring generalship told the story, and he had the Chelsea boy completely at his mercy.

C. E. Norris, of San Francisco, left that city August 8, and, bound for a walk to New York, and was recently reported at Middletown, N. Y., having walked 3,000 miles up to that date.

At the Parc Des Princes, at Paris, Brunl, paced by motor cycles, reduced the 10 kilometer (62.13 miles) bicycle record to one hour, 12 minutes and 18 1-5 seconds.

MISSPELL WINDOW SIGNS.

New Trick in Advertising Which a New York Merchant Says Works Wonders.

"One of the tricks of the trade during the next year," said the window dresser for a big department store, according to the New York Sun, "is going to be the misspelling of words in window signs. It works wonderfully. You know, at one time, a great trick was to put a picture in your window, upside down. People would come in droves to tell you about the mistake, and it gave business a boom for a time.

"But this misspelling of words beats all the other old devices. Why? Because it is human nature to love to correct other folks. It's the same spirit that animates the man, woman and child, who go blocks out of their way to show a stranger where he wants to go.

"It pleases people to know that they know something you don't, and after they have corrected you they go on their way inwardly pleased with themselves, and you rise in their good graces just conceived at Detroit. Annually the four missionary societies of this great brotherhood gather together. Their churches are entirely independent, but many of them are associated together in contributing to and helping on missionary effort at home and abroad.

This year the societies reported the greatest progress they have ever had. The Disciples of Christ are the most rapidly growing of all religious bodies. During the past year there was added over 100,000 to the church, with a net increase of over 33,000 to their ranks. They organized 225 new churches. Although they are strongest in the country districts, and especially in the Mississippi valley, they show a 138 per cent. gain during the past decade in 17 of the largest cities of the United States, and they raised nearly $1,000,000 this year more than last, their total from all sources being $7,135,065. For missionary work carried on by three societies they raised $681,000; for education and benevolent work, $339,000, and for local church work, $6,115,000. In 1809 they numbered one congregation, with a membership of less than 20. Now there are 11,000 congregations—in every state of the union save New Hampshire and Nevada, and in many countries abroad. Generally speaking, they hold the evangelical belief common to most churches, but emphasize the importance of a closer observance of New Testament practice and teaching. They were the first, as they have been the most persistent people in pleading for the union of Christian forces. They take the Bible as their rule of faith and practice, and reject all human creeds and confessions that claim to be authoritative. They have founded 18 high-class colleges and universities, having over 6,000 regular and 900 ministerial students. They have created a great literature and sustain missions in all parts of the world. They are the first people to enter Tibet, the least unoccupied field of the world, with missionaries. All their work is under the control of elective boards, but most of it is carried on under the direction of a few able men. A. McLean is the devoted president of the Foreign Christian Missionary society, and F. M. Rains its secretary. Benjamin L. Smith is the capable secretary of the American Missionary society, and Ranshaw his right hand man. G. W. Muckley is the secretary of the Church Extension society, and George Snively the secretary of the Benevolent association. There is also a board of ministerial relief, and this convention has just taken the important step of appointing a board of evangelization. Women, too, play an important role in this work, the Christian Women's Board of Missions having raised $147,500 last year for the support of their own or the help of the other societies' missions. A feature of their work is the university lectureships which they maintain for instruction in the Bible at four great centers of learning.

Although the annual convention has no legislative control over the churches, it does express the sentiment of the body largely, and it passes some resolutions. This year the business men attending the sessions passed an unusual resolution condemning any tendency of a preacher to dabble in speculative stocks or company promoting. Their explanation was that a preacher, though perfectly sincere, may himself be the tool of sharpers and used as a decoy for wrecking the savings of those who invest in a scheme because they believe in the preacher's honesty and the value of his advice.

The missionaries from the foreign field pleaded for more workers: the great opportunities in the southwest and the great northwest were pointed out by the home secretaries, and it was resolved that $1,000,000 for missionary work should be the aim for next year, when the convention will meet at St. Louis and will erect a building on the world's fair grounds.

THE SLY OPOSSUM.

Not So Brainless and Foolish as Its Actions Would Seem to Indicate.

To the casual observer the opossum is a brainless, slow-going lazy beast, with scarcely enough energy to eat his food, says a writer in Woman's Home Companion. But I fancy that there is a good deal more of the knave than the fool about him, and that his apparent stupidity is but a part of his business policy. Helpless as he often seems to be, he usually has a snug hole to crawl into when he wishes to sleep, and he seldom goes hungry when there is any food to be had. Although he is slow, he is persevering, and manages somehow to capture many animals which have much greater speed. Squirrels, for instance, often fall a prey to him in the open woods, and once, when I left an opossum for a few hours in the same room, he caught a squirrels, he had captured and half devoured one before I returned. Rats, mice and rabbits he also captures, probably by lying in wait for them, and insects he obtains in various ways. Birds' eggs he finds with much diligence, and he finds a great many, both on the ground and in the trees, during the nesting-season. Young birds, too, are hunted for and devoured, and occasionally the old birds themselves fall to escape him.

But he is not dependent on animal food, for all is grist which comes to his mill. He is fond of nearly all the wild fruits and berries he finds in the woods and fields, and will even come into the orchards and vineyards to sample the cultivated varieties.

Chestnuts from Asia.

The following information from Gidion's history of Indian territory, concerning the Chickasaws, is of interest: "Prior to their immigration to the country east of the Mississippi, both belonged to the Muskogee nation of Indians. Choctaw is a corruption of the name of 'Choctaw,' the other, being for rebellios, chose the name of 'Chickasaw.' Thus much for the names, taken principally, we suppose, from their respective chiefs—Chotah and Chickasah. The traditions of both Indians and Chickasaws all point toward the time that their ancestors all came from a country beyond the 'Big Waters,' far to the northwest; and the Muskogee, Shawnee and Cherokee tribes have the same traditions. The point beyond Behring straits to Asia, as the land from which their forefathers came in past ages. They owned this vast continent and possessed it for ages. So much for their origin. After the treaty of Dancing Rabbit creek the Choctaws and Chickasaws came to this country, from Mississippi (from 1832 to 1837). Most of them settled at Doaksville and Boggy Depot."—Kansas City Journal.

DISCIPLES OF CHRIST

Proves to Be the Most Rapidly Growing Religious Body.

Convention Just Held at Detroit Comprised 6,000 Delegates Representing a Membership of 1,200,000.

Although the annual convention has no legislative control over the churches, it does express the sentiment of the body largely, and it passes some resolutions. This year the business men attending the sessions passed an unusual resolution condemning any tendency of a preacher to dabble in speculative stocks or company promoting. Their explanation was that a preacher, though perfectly sincere, may himself be the tool of sharpers and used as a decoy for wrecking the savings of those who invest in a scheme because they believe in the preacher's honesty and the value of his advice.

The missionaries from the foreign field pleaded for more workers: the great opportunities in the southwest and the great northwest were pointed out by the home secretaries, and it was resolved that $1,000,000 for missionary work should be the aim for next year, when the convention will meet at St. Louis and will erect a building on the world's fair grounds.

FISHMONGERING RAILROAD.

New Hampshire Line That Used to Supply Customers at All the Stations.

While looking through a pile of old papers the Exeter correspondent came across the following article in a New York paper of the date of February 6, 1859, under the caption of "The Smelt Railroad," says the Manchester Union.

"It is well known that the Portsmouth railroad has to turn everything to account to pay running expenses, and many are the jokes they perpetrate upon the conductors in reference to their shifts to get a living. It is said that one of them last year was accustomed to bring fish from Portsmouth and peddle them out on the way to Concord.

"One day he brought along smelts, dealing out to customers at every station, till he got to Suncook, where he blew his horn and an old woman came out and wanted six, 'just a pattern—all I've got left, you're in the nick of time,' said he, and he began to count them and found only five. 'How's that? I should have six,' and he began to count his fingers, and reckon over how he had disposed of the four dozen he had started with. After awhile, 'I have it; hold on a little while and I'll be back,' said he; and he put on steam and back seven miles to a place where he had let a woman have one more than she had paid for, got it, came back to Suncook and let the old woman have the six she wanted, and then the 'smelt' train went to Concord."

ADVICE TO YOUNG WRITERS.

Be Brief Till You Have Made a Reputation, Says the Literary Agent.

"If you have a good incident about which to group a story," said one of the literary agents who undertake the job of selling and marketing writers' copy, according to the New York Sun, "that incident is worth a certain amount of narrative. It may be equal to 1,500 words or it may be strong and intense enough to make 3,000 possible. Young writers are over-elaborate. One came the other day with a story of about 5,000 words long. I told the author that the central idea was good and the story really marketable if he reduced it to 1,500 words. Of course, he was furious and will send around the story to the magazines. After it has been refused by all of them he will condense it to 1,500 words and bring it back to me.

"And how he will criticise the tastes of the magazine readers which compel him to condense his story. He will say that he is not allowed to put in character, observation, wit or anything but the skeleton of his plot.

"That is unfortunately true so far as the beginner is concerned. In his case the editors want a story quickly told. After he has acquired a reputation it may be possible for him to depart from the facts of his plot. But he must stick to business until he is well enough known to make people read whatever he writes, whether it is interesting or not."

Electric Cars on Ice.

One of the winter sights of St. Petersburg is a system of electric tramways on the ice in the Neva. One runs from the Nikolai quay of the river to the island of Petrowsky and another from the English quay, opposite the Senate house, to the island of Basilio, near the Academy of Fine Arts. Wooden posts solidly embedded in the ice support the trolley wires. Besides these tramways, on the same quays, intended for pedestrians, cross the water in various directions. In summer bridges of boats take the place of the roads on the ice.

Cake-Walk Called Monkeyish.

The German Dancing Masters' association, at their annual meeting at Dresden, have made an energetic protest against "that monkeyish and indecent dance, the cakewalk, which no dancing master of refinement should tolerate."

The black silk handkerchief which British blue jackets wear was first tied around the sailor's throat in mourning for Nelson, and it was never dropped.

THE PREVAILING MODES.

The Short Bolero Effect—Ample Sleeves and Cape Effects.

The fate that shapes, not our ends, but our waists, has fully decided that shirt waists are not yet outlived their usefulness, and we are to have them not only this winter, but next year as well, for even now the manufacturers are making up thousands of light materials, mostly in the lighter silks, for next summer, so it may be understood that we shall be well provided with waists. But the new ones are somewhat modified and are not so baggy nor so short waisted in the back as they were. As they were last year it is a wonder that any woman could endure them. Now the backs are more nearly like the shape we are, but the fronts are certainly fuller at the waist line, though not in the old ugly way, for a few folds or gathers make a full effect at the belt line.

ural feathers in many cases having the additions of patches of bright coloring. The brush osprey is dying out, but the paradise plume remains. Very becoming are the toques made entirely of feathers, and some of the plumage is very lovely and evidently belongs to foreign birds of some rarity. Hats are still large and spreading and project in front, but toques have exceedingly deep brims, especially at the back. Toques are worn in different ways, as some fall low over the forehead and others are raised and show a great deal of the front hair.

The illustration shows a baby lamb coat and flat muff. Both are trimmed with handsome yellow lace.

FASHION HINTS.

Fur Stoles Are Becoming More Elaborate and Large.

Fur stoles have become more and more elaborate, and they have also increased in size until they reach the dimensions of little capes and are used to the exclusion of other wraps with tailor made dresses.

One of the smartest of these stole capes seen recently was of moleskin, having a double cape effect and long stole-like ends. Tiny lapels were of ermine, and the ends of the stole had crospieces of this fur added in.

Moleskin, by the way, makes a charming turban combined with ermine and cream white ostrich tips, and it is also good for fancy muffs, shirred in with a ruffle of yellowish lace.

Really good dresses cannot be cheap this year on account of the quantities of material needed and the patient fancy needlework required in the trimmings.

Ready made robes can be made into the prettiest ball and dinner gowns imaginable at one-third of what they would cost all ready made.

The new stoles are so varied that choice becomes a difficult matter. The most decorative and uncommon exhibit a great deal of lace, either in stripes or medallions. Ermine is much used in combination with other furs and bordered with skunk, sable or squirrel. The new plush coats are made with deep tucks or frills and have much silk passementerie and chenille fringe or tassels.

The illustration shows a net waist combined with lace and narrow velvet ribbon. This particular model would be charming in ecru and red.

HANDSOME WAISTS.

They Are Shown In Great Variety and of All Qualities.

The fate that shapes, not our ends, but our waists, has fully decided that shirt waists are not yet outlived their usefulness, and we are to have them not only this winter, but next year as well, for even now the manufacturers are making up thousands of light materials, mostly in the lighter silks, for next summer, so it may be understood that we shall be well provided with waists. But the new ones are somewhat modified and are not so baggy nor so short waisted in the back as they were. As they were last year it is a wonder that any woman could endure them. Now the backs are more nearly like the shape we are, but the fronts are certainly fuller at the waist line, though not in the old ugly way, for a few folds or gathers make a full effect at the belt line.

One very pretty waist of silk in a delicate gray has lines of Persian ribbon an inch and a half wide set diagonally all over the front. Each edge of the ribbon has a narrow velvet piping, the black forming a marked contrast. Extending over the shoulders in bretelle fashion are two folds two and a half inches wide at the top and narrowing down at the belt line. On these are set small white lace medallions. Another fold is placed down the center, and as these folds are above the lines of ribbon the effect is extremely fine. The sleeves are bishop shape, trimmed to match the waist.

NEW WAISTS.

Quite a number of the new waists have just a few tucks along the shoulder part of the front and the rest in the form of a shield, with a double breasted effect. These are particularly pretty for the young. Few of them now have the comfort piece, or short skirt, as the waist is finished off with a belt sewed to the waist, or it is so arranged that one of the new silk belts covers the edge completely. This double breasted effect is shown to great advantage in a velvet waist. Along the edge of the two folds there were rows of fine silk braid in cashmere colors, and along the left side there was a row of raised embroidery done in the new silks, which show all the beautiful colors of autumn foliage. The silk seems to have a dozen colors all in one length, and as the worker sews the different colors seem to blend and the foliage or flowers take the gorgeous tints of nature.

This is almost like the portieres which industrious ladies are now busily making out of silken straps. They find some new fad every year or so and work very hard at it, only to throw it aside after the novelty has worn off. But the weaving of these portieres is taking a great place in domestic economy. The scraps of silk are cut about an inch wide and not more than four to six inches long. They are sewed together and rolled into balls and then sent to the weavers, who make a thing of beauty out of it, as the fabric holds all the rich colors of silk and is soft and harmonious. I think it takes three pounds of silk scraps to make one portiere. Old pieces and black ones are useful to mix in with the others. I mention this as the fad is extending so rapidly that what I may say may be of real service to would be workers in this new fad, but let the men hide all their neckties.

One very neat and stylish waist of soft old rose French flannel had three clusters of tucks, two at the shoulders and the other down the middle of the front, while the waist closed at the left side with a band and large bone buttons. Others have V shaped openings filled in to appear like a vest, with a high stock and narrow fancy white collar. One like this was of fine Scotch plaid, and on each fold were several fancy jet and passementerie ornaments. The belt was of the new braided strings with tassels. The three plait style admits of many changes, one pretty fancy being to have insertion laid along between the front lines and down the shoulders. Others have a sort of fancy shaped yoke, and this may be stitched or left plain or covered with cross bands of lace.

Quite a number of the new waists have fringe of some kind around the yoke in the form of a bertha. Bretelles are put on to give apparent width to the shoulders. Some dainty waists for home and for dress occasions, the differences being in the material of which they are made, have the upper portion shirred round and round to fit it to the figure, and the upper part of the sleeve is shirred to match.

In one or two instances the shirring goes around the waist and the top of the sleeve in one line.

HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

A BUSINESS EDUCATION.

It Is as Necessary For Girls as For Boys Nowadays.

Time: The usual period of helplessness after the death of the head of the family. His womankind, brought up with expensive education, have been taught that they should not bother their pretty heads about business, and now that they are left with very little ready money, a collection of debts and a lot of (to them) indecipherable hieroglyphics on paper the old, old question arises, "What shall we do?"

Why on earth do not parents give a practical education to their daughters? What if they do marry? Marriage is no security as things are nowadays.

"WHAT SHALL WE DO?"

The husband is likely to fail, to fall ill, to die before he has laid aside anything, and then what is to become of the wife?

It is a waste of time to spend large sums on expensive music and drawing masters when not one girl in five has enough talent to make it worth while, but every girl is capable of being trained in business habits, and there is not the smallest reason why she should not be as intelligent and able in this branch as her brother.

That women have a good business capacity is plainly shown in France, where the greater part of the retail trade is in their hands. Let a father explain his business to his daughters that they may not despise the source of their income and that they may appreciate the value of money.

A father who has property in the shape of farms and other real estate would do well to interest his daughter in the management of such real estate, in the drainage of lands, the leases of houses, the collecting of rents, etc.

Such a practical training will make a girl a better wife, capable of helping her husband with her advice and counsel, and if she does not marry it will make her an independent woman, able to stand alone.

And, in any case, every girl, be her station in life high or low, should be taught a practical way of earning her living and of managing what income she has.

WICKER FURNITURE.

It Is Simple and Inexpensive and Yet Exceptionally Artistic.

Wicker furniture in brown, dull red and green is being used more and more even in the better rooms of houses. It is artistic in the extreme when fitted with pretty cushions, and its inexpensiveness is not the least of its charms.

dows. The quaint brick fireplace is made still cosier by the settle of green wicker drawn close to it. The pretty chairs are of the same shade of wicker, and the flowered cretonne pillows are of mingled green and rose. The rest of the furniture, tables, bookcases, etc., are of white wood. A dainty china lamp with a rose shade completes the pleasing color scheme.

R. DE LA BAUME.

Europe's Aristocracy.

The aristocracy of Europe is maintained by American money, which goes abroad with American girls who have bought titled husbands. Millions of dollars are taken out of this country every year in that way; but then what of it? Wealthy Americans spend a large part of their incomes in Europe, in any case, and it is little matter what kind of a bauble they purchase, whether a forty string pearl necklace or a titled husband.

THE NEW WOMAN

She Speaks for Mind

He had been a bad man. He had stolen. He had done most of the forbidden things. He would have been sent to the penitentiary, but suddenly a good girl who knew him somewhat interested herself in him. It was so dreadfully romantic and womanly to be interested in a criminal and forger! By and by the good girl said she would marry the bad man and criminal if he would promise never, never to do so again, and then the two would go and begin life anew. She would pour out the fine womanly devotion of a lifetime on him and make a good man of him. Did the criminal himself think she could accomplish the job of making a man of him? the judge asked the bad man himself. "I think I can be a good man again if I have Angelina by my side to inspire me and help me," replied the bad man. Then the judge, touched by the tender romance of the thing and the womanly devotion of the girl, suspended sentence on the bad man to give him a chance. Society forgave him and welcomed him and almost made a lion of him. Just so. People who have been bad and say they will try to be good should always have a chance even if some woman has to sacrifice herself in the effort to make them good, and the result is not always worth the effort either. But what I want to know is this: Suppose the bad man had been a bad woman, with no more reputation than that criminal had, would some good man have married her and given his life to the effort to make her good, and if he had done so would society have applauded him, taken the woman to its arms and made even more of her because she had passed through the fires and been scorched? No. Society would have dropped both him and her like a hot potato, all except the new woman, that is. The new woman would have really given the ex-bad woman a chance and would have received her as an equal if she bore the test. That is one difference between the new woman and the old.

Recently a manufacturing firm offered a series of prizes for the best photographs of outdoor scenery and some form of bicycling. There were two classes, one for women and the other for men, and one of the judges was a lady, Miss Edith J. Griswold, patent lawyer and expert in patent suits, herself an amateur photographer of ability. The highest prize in the contest was $100 in each class, the men's and the women's. The woman's first prize was won by Mrs. Nellie E. Cross of Concord, N. H., and in point of picturesque scenery her photograph surpassed the rest, even that which won first prize in the men's class.

All our failures and disappointments are so many opportunities to learn lessons. That is all there is in them.

History informs us that the original reason why women first had to go veiled in the orient was that if they went about with uncovered faces their beauty would lead men astray. Well, then, women in those days must have been far more beautiful than they are now, that's all.

Are you so loyal to your own sex that this can be said of you: "A woman is always safe in her hands?"

I went to a reception in one of the new lofty apartment hotels the other day. "How many stories high is this house?" I asked the elevator attendant. "Thirteen," he answered. "Oh, that is called an unlucky number," I said. "Can they get guests to take rooms on that floor?" "Oh, they don't put nobody up there but the help. It don't make any difference about the help," said the man.

At a recent Chicago horse show the first prize for driving a four-in-hand coach was taken by a lady, Mrs. W. E. Woodend.

At a woman's parlor lecture which I attended last week the entrance hall was rather dark. On the threshold I walked upon one woman's long tailed gown before I was aware of it. Backing out to avoid that, I stumbled over another woman's train. Backing off to try it again, I found my way blocked to right and left by two other dress trains, long, shabby and unmistakably dirty. Half the women present dragged these unclean appendages behind them, and I noticed that chiefly that the cheaper and dingier the material the longer the vile train. On the whole, what wonder men consider women inferior intellectually?

A New York girl wholly ordinary looking, not nearly handsome as two-thirds of the shop and factory girls of that city, spent $15,000 for new gowns to wear during the horse show week. She had never earned a cent of money in her life, and her father got his by sharp practice of various kinds. And yet some good people wonder at the growth of socialism in the world!

The New York state conference of charities and correction has decided that it is a cruel wrong to put child offenders in jail, but that they should be sent to reformatories, where they will be put to school and have trades taught to them, and that even their names should be so far as possible kept from the public. The world does move, does it not?

MILLINERY OF THE MOMENT

Styles and Trimmings Which Are Rather Smart.

Millinery becomes more and more picturesque as the season advances. The shapes are growing larger and more pronounced. Plumed hats are a necessity for dressy occasions, and the plumes, arranged in a variety of ways so that they droop on the hair, are supposed to match the tints of the gown.

Turbans made of flowers, rough felt or chiffon velvet are very smart and are worn on all occasions. A bunch of cock's plumes drooping over the left ear is a favorite trimming.

The French sailor has graduated into a dressy hat. It even comes made of ermine or sable and trimmed with white ostrich tips.

Rough felts are still popular, and these are prettiest in all black and all white relieved by a small touch of color.

Gainsborough and picture hats are very smart for the few who can wear them. In general the attempt to revive the high crown on other hats proves unsuccessful.

A mixture of royal blue and white is popular in Paris. A charming three cornered white beaver hat had strappings of blue velvet caught by fancy filigree buttons. It is curious that royal blue should die so hard in Paris. It was a favorite color last winter and still holds its own. White, too, is always popular in the winter with dark furs. Of course it is extravagant wear, but nothing looks so well. White corduroy velvets are perfectly lovely and will be a leading feature of the early Monte Carlo fashions. They are softened with lace and panne trimmings and worn with stoles of sable or mink and a brown hat.

The cut shows a Gainsborough hat of pale gray felt trimmed with a deeper gray panne scarf and a shaded feather.

FOR COLD DAYS,

Handsome Fur Coats With Loose Sleeves—Overskirt Effects.

The fur coat is now with us in all its glory. The loose or sack shape seems to be the favorite for beautiful minks and sables. The whole thing gives the effect of a cape with full sleeves. These sleeves are filled in at the lower edge with ruffles of lace, so that when the arm is raised it gives a very dainty effect.

Ruching appears on many of the dressy gowns, and these have pinked edges and are best made of taffeta or some other thin silk.

Borders of fur, particularly mink, are seen on many smart French gowns. A combination of cloth, mink or sable and Irish lace is especially desirable.

SIDELINE DRESS.

Overskirt effects are appearing on a few of the French gowns, but this is a trying style to all but a few tall, slender women.

Petticoats with heavily shirred flounces are used to wear with the thinner gowns which require holding out around the feet.

There is no doubt about it that wine color and mink or sable are beautiful mixtures and give a cheery touch of color to the somberness of autumn days.

The picture shows a costume of the popular old rose sideline.

BROWN DRESSES THE VOGUE

Street Costumes That Recall the Long Ago—Evening Gowns.

The latest street costumes recall those that were the fashion when women spun, wove and dyed the material they made up into dresses, which they generally dyed with a color popularly called "butternut brown," the shade that is the prevailing tint now. It is a pretty shade of brown, and almost anything in the way of accessory or trimming seems to look well with it. A fetching touch of color is obtained by having a tie or some other arrangement of a rich dark red near the face, not scarlet nor any of the magenta shades, but a red color like fresh blood. This is the only red shade that brings out the best of the brown and gives the face the fairness that comes from wearing the red beneath the chin, for it is, or should be, well known that red above the face adds apparent rosiness, while red below the chin makes the face appear fair and clear.

STYLISH EVENING AND STREET WEAR.

Black braids, narrow bands of fur or tucks and fine stitching are all in vogue for the garnishing of brown suits. Much depends on the kind of material. If, for instance, the stuff is sibeline, the trimming may be scanty, but effective, and should consist of straps, lines of fancy castle braid in black or perhaps round pipings of astrakhan fur. This last is naturally expensive, but is it not elegant enough to balance the cost?

If the suit is of fine broadcloth or some similar material, a strict tailor finish is to be desired in the finest work and with all seams and edges very neatly stitched. Several rows of this always popular kind of ornamentation may be set around or only two. I saw one handsome brown cloth suit where there was a shaped flounce with a strapped band at the joining, while on the flounce all around were three rows of oval medallions made of taffeta edged with the picot finish on some of the braids. The largest ones were at the bottom and the others above. There was a blouse coat with a long skirt, and the waist had the same design of ovals. The hat to wear with this was of shirred velvet, with a little fur of some brown color and a gold buckle. The gloves and hand satchel were also brown in different shades, and at the neck was a high stock of the dress material, with a dainty turnover lace collar, beneath which was the rich red tie that has called forth so much admiration on my left.

The belt that held the bloused basque coat in at the waist was thick and heavy and made of the shoestring cords. These make very fine and suitable belts for outdoor suits and sometimes indoors too.

The stocks are made to match in color and shape and general design as far as is possible. There were some dainty little silk mull scarfs shown last season for outdoor wear; but, strangely enough, in spite of their beauty they were not much liked. Now, however, we see them tied around pretty necks as regular stocks, but with the long ends hanging down to the waist in front after having been tied in two or three loops.

Ermine boas long and wide are seen, ermine all through and unlined. The muffs are large and nearly all quite plain. There are other beautiful boas, some of them of tulle, gathered closely; others of silk mull edged with ribbon on one or two cases with narrow curled ostrich fines. These when gathered up are very fine and very becoming. The boas for evening wear are mostly long and fluffy, whatever the material of which they are made. Pink, lilac and yellow chiffon are among the prettiest. In one instance all three of these delicate shades were employed, and all mingled together in such a way as to present the evening sky in its soft hues. Evening boas are generally very long, but one finds some just long enough to reach the knees.

Evening gowns and cloaks and wraps of every description are more in evidence just now than anything else, as the social whirl has begun with the horse show and the opening of the opera. I recently saw one gown of white satin in a princess shape trimmed with tulle festoons, these being held up by fairy roses made of chiffon, with spangles for dewdrops. The waist was very low off the shoulders, with straps made of the chiffon roses to hold the waist up. Jewels were to be placed in many of the gathers to add to the effect. A long loose coat of French gray was to be worn with this gown.

WOMEN'S GOWNS.

Wine Color Popular—Corduroy Velvet Suits For Utility Wear.

Wine color is a very popular shade. Some of the prettiest street costumes show variations of this color. Often a cloth gown will be trimmed with a darker shade of panne and then brightened by a little vest of a more delicate shade.

Corduroy velvet is popular for useful wear, but the attempt to introduce it into finer gowns is a distinct failure because of the more beautiful weaves of velvet which make it seem commonplace. But in shades of gray and myrtle green made into a smart tailor made it certainly has its charms.

The prevalence of fancy buttons is very marked. They are of kid, gun metal, gold, silver and even burnt wood.

Fur toques are made much lighter in weight this year, the crown in many instances being of chiffon velours or tulle.

There is no abating in the vogue of brown, and this ordinarily trying color is most becoming to some women.

Facings and cordings of cloth in pale shades or of darker velvet are quite the most fashionable trimmings for cloth gowns, and a great deal of lace is used for vests and fronts, which can be rendered warm and comfortable by a lining of soft, fine flannel.

The picture shows a net waist having silk embroidered spots.

TRIMMINGS OF GOWNS.

Tucks of the Wide Variety a Feature of the New Dresses.

Tucks are a feature of many smart costumes, but not the fine tuck, however. The fold is an inch and over in depth and decorates the bottom of the skirt and the full puffs.

Old fashioned sleeves ruffled to the elbow are seen on some Paris models of silk gowns.

Three-quarter coats of Persian lamb are smart, made with wide collars and revers which fold back flat and blouse in the front. These coats are held in at the waist line by a band of stitched black panne.

CHILD'S COAT.

Chiffon applique is used on many gowns and waists, as the different motifs can be separated and used with very striking effect.

Skirts box plaited all around the back, front and sides are very smart made of supple cloth or thin material.

A triple effect in capes and skirt ruffles is not uncommon on the same gown.

Gray and beaver tones are noticeable in millinery, and a hat of mole plush is turned up with cream colored chiffon elaborately drawn and tucked, and over the chiffon are medallions of gray lace highly embroidered with jet and steel. Large picture hats are much in favor, and lace with a broad binding is much used, and in black there are large shapes of gauged chiffon with black velvet bindings and bold garnitures of colored velvet.

The illustration shows a child's coat of tan cloth having a tan lace collar and brown velvet straps as trimmings.

President of Common Council James F. Beezle, whose civic pride is demonstrated by his works, says that Plainfield is blessed with improvements that rarely fall to the lot of the community of its size. He endorses, however, the proposition for the collection and disposal of garbage under municipal control, which is strongly urged by The Daily Press. In Mr. Beezle's opinion, this is Plainfield's greatest need at the present time.

Bob Davis, who runs the Democratic machine in New Jersey much as he pleases, shows his usual sagacity in picking out a strong candidate. If the reports be true that he will support Richard V. Lindabury, of Essex County, for the party's gub rnatorial nomination. When Davis supported Seymour in preference to Ferrell at the last Democratic gubernatorial convention, he displayed good political judgment, Seymour being not only strong with the masses but a man of undoubted executive ability well fitted to occupy the place now held down by Franklin Murphy. His reputed present choice, Mr. Lindabury, is one of the foremost lawyers in the State and a man of rare attainments. Plainfielders will recall his speech made against the annexation scheme during the campaign on that proposition His skillful handling of the poor end of the stick demonstrated to those interested in the scheme that the anti-annexationists had called into their service a Goliath in reasoning powers. One strong point in Mr. Lindabury's favor is that he is an able lawyer, which in view of the many and blunders recently, should make a good campaign argument provided he is nominated.

Rev. John A. He did say that if she was married to John Long she was a bigamist, but did not say who her first husband was.

The career of "Mrs. Long" has been an eventful one. About eight years ago her father killed her mother and then himself after a quarrel about their daughter. It was after that that the youngest daughter, Emma Buhr, was placed in the Mount Vernon orphanage, from which she was taken by her sister.

This welcome news will be hailed with delight by the thousands of school children who wish to see their old nursery friends and cannot attend night performances. No first class theatre in New York ever before gave daily matinees and the venture of the Majestic has aroused interest in theatrical circles.

When "Red Feather" was making its preliminary road tour before settling down at the Lyric Theatre for the winter, Miss De Vere was always ready to suggest points of interest worth visiting in the various cities. When they were approaching New Haven, Miss De Vere looked up from her note book on which were scribbled a few words in French, and said, "Do you know what we shall see in New Haven, girls?" A chorus of feminine voices replied: "Yale Students." Miss De Vere silenced the girls with severe glances. "Here—in the New Haven, we shall see as great offices of as New York, New Haven and as Hartford road," and then to the amazement of her traveling companions she rattled off amazing facts about the New Haven headquarters, the area they covered, the number of employes, the scale of wages, and other data that few Americans would be able to present.

At the Metropolitan Opera House this evening at 8, "Tosca" will be rendered and at tomorrow's matinee at 2, "Lohengrin" will be given. For tomorrow night "Traviata" is scheduled. On Monday evening, Dec. 14, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci;" Wednesday evening, Dec. 16, "Rigoletto;" Thursday, Dec. 24, 31, and Jan. 7, 14, 21, "Parsifal."

Maude Adams has captivated the theatre goers by the way she plays her part in "The Pretty Sister of Jose." There is something about her acting that is sadly lacking with other stars on the Metropolitan boards and she is drawing crowded houses at the New Empire, one of the finest appointed playhouses. The evening performances begin at 8:15. There's a matinee Saturday at 2:15.

Klaw & Erlanger's massive scenic production of the romantic dramatic story of modern Japan. "A Japanese Nightingale," adapted from Onoto Watanna's widely read novel by William Young, the dramatist of "Ben-Hur," is drawing packed houses to Daly's Theatre. This is the most elaborate production of a play treating of foreign life ever seen in this country. Great feature has been made of the music, composed by N. Clifford Page, the famous student of Oriental music, whose compositions have attraced wide attention, both in America and Europe. Margaret Illington has made a great hit in the role of the "Nightingale," to which she is well adapted both in temperament and ability as a player. Other important roles are very artistically played by Orrin Johnson, Vincent Serrano, Frederick Perry, Eugene Jepson and Olive May.

Charles Richman in Victor Mapes' stirring play of the Revolutionary period, "Captain Barrington," is drawing large audiences to the Manhattan Theatre, New York, the double indorsement of Mr Richman as a star and of the drama as the best of its period being enthusiastic. "Captain Barrington" would stand as a most effective and pleasing play without the atmosphere of the Revolution that gives it an added interest, for it is most skillfully constructed and abounds in exciting incidents, while its character drawing is clear and diversified. Aside from its strong dramatic scenes, too, it has much relieving comedy that keeps its audiences in the best of humor, and aside from Mr. Richman, the company is one of the strongest seen in New York this season, and all the prominent players in it have excellent parts.

Francis Wilson and his star players in the elaborate revival of Jacobowski and Paulton's comic opera classi, "Erminie," return to New York and to the Grand for the week beginning Dec. 14. This popular opera is now in its eighteenth year and still retains its hold on the music loving public. The production which Mr. Wilson and his managers have given the opera is pretentious in the extreme and the company supporting Mr. Wilson is the highest-salaried ever organized.

For a number of years past the Eden Musee has been steadily growing in popularity. This has been due to the excellent attractions furnished. The management is continually on the alert to discover [something new and novel that will appeal to the Musee's patrons. In addition the Musee has arranged for the reproduction of important scenes in history which will be of special interest to students of history. One of these now being exhibited is entitled "The Rise and Fall of Napoleon" showing the important epochs in his life and his death on St. Helna. The reproduction of this series of pictures alone cost $10,000.

WESTFIELD BOWLERS WIN SIX STRAIGHT

Cranford Casino Team Meets Defeat on Its Own Alleys by the Leaders.

HEGEMAN MAKES A 222

WESTFIELD DOES ITS BEST WORK IN THE FIRST GAMES.

Roselle Has Won Three Games, Cranford, One, and the Park Club, None—North Plainfielders Expect to Improve.

The Westfield Club bowling team tried conclusions with the Cranford Casino team on its alleys Friday, in the third match in The Daily Press Bowling League tournament, the visitors winning the second game only. The Westfield team seems to be in championship form at present and in the first game defeated Cranford by 143 pins, the totals being 868 to 725. The totals of the second game were 808 to 747 in favor of the visitors, while the home team won the last game by a margin of 103 pins, the totals being 821 to 718.

In the first game the Westfield five did its best work, Forster rolling a 210 and Hegeman a 222. The next highest man was Condit who rolled 191 in the third game. For the visitors there was not a man who rolled over 183 and the top score Hibson made in the second game. They won this game by a margin of fifty-six pins.

Thus far the Westfield team has won six games, Roselle has won three, Cranford one, while the Parks have failed to win a game. They no doubt will be heard from very soon and will give the other three teams a lively chase.

The scores for the three games:

Westfield.
H. R. Forster	210	183	179
F. C. Condit	168	137	191
C. Smith	160	176	155

Trolley Schedule Improvement.

An official of the Public Service Corporation in speaking about the new schedule under which the trolley cars are now operated after 7:30 at night and on Sundays, said that it simply cut off the time usually allowed at either terminal. Several minutes have been allowed in this way, while under the new rule when a car reaches a terminal no time is lost and the return trip is started at once. In this way connection with the Dunellen and Bound Brook cars is made more certain.

Xmas Eve Dance.

A Christmas Eve dance will be given by the Imperial Social Club on Thursday night, December 24, at Olympia Hall, on 6th Sycamore street, near Fourth, beginning at 8:30. There will be music by Buhr's orchestra.

MRS. EMMA J. UTTER PASSES TO REWARD

Widow of the Late Dr. Albert Utter Dead at Her West Fifth Street Home.

WAS A GIFTED SINGER

IDENTIFIED WITH MANY PROMINENT ORGANIZATIONS IN THIS CITY.

Devoted Member of Seventh-Day Baptist Church—Funeral Services Tonight—Interment at Westerly, R. I.

On Saturday, December 12th, there passed into the Land of Sunshine one of those rare spirits whose lives dispense sunshine wherever they go. Mrs. Emma J. Utter, widow of the late Dr. Albert Utter, had been a resident of Plainfield for many years, and was with her husband intimately connected with the musical interests here, being the leader of the Plainfield Harmonic Society, the precursor of the Vocal and Choral Societies, and she its leading soprano

In the earlier days no function where music was used was complete without Mrs. Utter, whose pure sweet voice and charming manner were highly esteemed here and in the metropolitan churches where she sang for many years. Mrs. Utter was a woman of remarkable endowments, not only of voice and manner but with those rare traits of character which endeared her to her large circles of friends everywhere. Seldom does one see so sunny a disposition. No trial, no discouragement, was great enough to cloud the happy smile which was like a benediction to all who came within the gracious influence of her presence.

Mrs. Utter was a devoted member of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, and was associated with local charities and benevolences. She was for a long time a member of the Board of Governors of the Children's Home, of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and many other societies whose object was the uplifting of the unfortunate.

To those who knew and loved her earth seems poorer for her going home, but the Heavenly Choir has been enriched, and freed from earth's limitations, she now joins in sweet acclaim to the Saviour whose foot steps she so closely followed in life.

She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Clarence Maxson, of Westerly, R. I., and Miss Jessie M. Utter, of Plainfield.

LITERARY.

The December number of The American Boy (Sprague Publishing Co., Detroit, Mich.,) comes to us this month in enlarged form and in number of pages. Seldom have we seen between the covers of a magazine a greater amount and variety of matter of special interest to boys than this number contains. The notable features of the number are the first chapters of a story by Kirk Munroe, who has just returned from a trip around the world and is writing for The American Boy, the story being entitled, "The Blue Dragon."

Dr. D. S. Adams, of Grove street, has returned from a successful hunting trip at Cobokoke, Va.

AMUSEMENTS.

Presents of every matter and description right from the hands of the members of the Piper family are to be given every child visiting "Babes in Toyland," at the Majestic Theatre, New York, during the daily matinees So pleased is the management with the children of New York and surrounding towns, the interest they have taken in "Babes in Toyland," at the Majestic Theatre, New York, and the hearty approval the little children give the "grown ups" on the stage that it was decided today to make reciprocation during the holiday matinees. Christmas trees, with branches bending under the weight of things that make glad the hearts of children will make a new scene during the last act and every one of the Piper children, even Contrary Mary, will take a hand in distributing the presents to their little friends in the audience. These nine matinees in ten days during the Christmas holidays, extending from December 25th to January 3d, are an unusual feature in New York theatricals. It has never been done before in any other theatre in New York.

"Way Down East" comes to the Academy of Music on Monday, December 14th, following "The Best of Friends." The engagement is to continue through the holiday season. This play has been seen in New York on numerous occasions and has a clientele peculiarly its own. There is little doubt that the coming engagement will be as satisfactory as previous ones. When one sees the play, as produced by William A. Brady' special company—the company which played in New York at the Academy of Music—there is no longer any wonder at its great success.

Broadway, somewhat jaded by the long continued visitation of musical farces, French vaudevilles, colonial plays, emotional dramas and "society" stage hysterics, has been awakened from its lethargy by the appearance of "The County Chairman," George Ade's new rural comedy. This work, presented by Henry W. Savage for the first time in the east, met with recognition as enthusiastic and instantaneous as it was unexpected. Habitual first nighters, who have become so hardened that they usually look on as expressionless as wax images, began to titter before the curtain had been up for two minutes, and presently they were laughing as they had not laughed in years The New York World said they burst off their buttons in excess of hilarity.

FIFTY-FIVE YEARS OF MARITAL BLISS

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Clark, of Somerset Street, Celebrate Wedding Anniversary.

SURPRISE GIVEN THEM

THE CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN GATHER AROUND THE AGED COUPLE.

Couple Were Married at Fulton, N. Y., and Removed to N. Y. City—Mrs. Clark is Now in Her Eightieth Year—The Guests.

In honor of the fifty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Clark, of 336 Somerset street, a surprise party was tendered at their home Monday by their children and grandchildren. Thirty-five people, immediate relatives and a few friends, arrived early in the evening and came upon the unsuspecting couple with hearty congratulations. The evening was enjoyed as a family reunion.

A number of presentations to the aged couple were made. A lamp was given by their children and grandchildren. The children who arranged the surprise were: H. F. Clark, J. W. K. Clark, William H. Clark, Augustus Clark and Mrs. Fred Emmons. The grandchildren are: Miss Lulu H. Clark, of the Oneanta Normal College, who was the only one of the grandchildren not present; Elmer Edward Emmons, Jay Clark, Harvey Clark, Julius Clark, Fanny Clark and Miss Justina Clark.

In retrospect Mr. Clark recalled the difficulties he had in getting from his home in Fulton, N. Y., where his wedding took place fifty-five years ago, to New York before the days of the railroad. He told of having made the trip in a canal boat and of riding on the first railroad in New York State. He engaged in business in New York for many years, having had charge of a manufacturing concern. He retired and came to live in Plainfield where he has been ever since. Mrs. Clark was a Miss Cornelia H. Knox and was married in the Presbyterian Church at Fulton by Rev. Rock well Townsend. She celebrated her seventy-ninth birthday Sunday. Mr. Clark is the same age as his wife.

AMUSEMENTS.

In these days of fierce commercial strife it is seldom that one theatrical manager pays a business rival a compliment, yet Weber & Fields have unostentatiously placed themselves on record as saying that "Raffles, The Amateur Cracksman" in which Kyrle Bellew is appearing at the Princess Theatre is the only new play of the season "worth burlesquing." In consequence, under the title of "Whiffles, The Amateur Cracker," the delightful dramatization of E. W. Hornung's detective story will be the first travesty of the season at Weber & Fields' Music Hall. "Raffles," by the way, seems destined to make the record run of the Metropolitan dramatic season. It is now in its third month at the Princess, and the battle royal between the Amateur Cracksman and Captain Bodford, the pursuing detective, is accompanied nightly by the merry jingle of coin in the box office below.

PLAINFIELD SCHOOLS AT THE EXPOSITION

As at Buffalo, the City Schools Will Have Elaborate Exhibit at St. Louis.

SUBJECTS INCLUDED

SUPT. H. M. MAXSON ANNOUNCES OPENING AND CLOSING DATES.

Formaldehyde Generator for the Schools—Medical Inspectors Report—Condition of Finances—Truant Officer Named.

Plainfield schools will be represented by an exhibit at the St. Louis exposition next year. Superintendent Maxson reported on the matter Monday at the postponed meeting of the Board of Education, stating that he had received an urgent request from the State department for a Plainfield exhibit. The fact that Plainfield's showing at the Pan-American Exposition, at Buffalo, was in many ways the most satisfactory of the New Jersey exhibit, made the State department especially anxious for an equally successful showing at the St. Louis school exhibit which it was said would probably be the greatest the world has seen.

The departments of languages, arithmetic, science, drawing and history will be represented and all pupils in the school will have samples of their work included. It is possible also that photographs of the children at work will be submitted as part of the exhibit.

Superintendent Maxson announced the dates for the opening and closing of the school terms during the coming year. The winter term will begin Tuesday, January 5 and close Friday, April 1. The spring term will open April 12 and extend to June 16. The fall term of 1904 will begin one week earlier than usual, September 13, and will extend to December 23, the arrangement necessitating a later commencement, June 22, in 1905.

The accuracy in keeping the school registers was commented upon favorably by the superintendent. Mr. Maxson was empowered to purchase a formaldehyde generator for use in the schools and to be operated by the janitors for disinfecting purposes in cases of diphtheria and scarlet fever. The committee on teachers was given power to grant excuses for dismissal from school. By the committee on buildings, Dr. Pitt Wilson, chairman, it was announced that the matter of obtaining disinfectants for use in the schools would be reported upon at the next meeting, after consultation with the medical examiners.

The medical inspectors, Drs. Tomlinson and Van Horn, announced that they had examined 289 pupils during the past month. They stated that cases of diphtheria are few. The report of the custodian of school monies showed a balance on hand December 1 of $34,489.85. The amount collected during the year from the sale of school property and from fines for books damaged by pupils was $138.11. The finance committee, Mr. Lovell chairman, reported that the books had been audited and that the accounts were in the hands of the printer.

A letter was received from Chief of Police P. S. Kiely announcing that Patrolman F. S. McCarthy had been chosen as an assistant in compelling children to attend school.

JOHN W. MURRAY SAFE.

Leaders Deny That There Is Any Scheme for a Change in Fire Department Heads.

From reliable sources it is learned that there is no intention of making any change in the office of first assistant chief of the fire department, and that John W. Murray will continue his duties. James T. MacMurray, the local Republican leader, said last night that he had not heard of the scheme previous to reading an account in the papers. John W. Murray said that he had received no information, whatever of a proposed change. Councilman Robert Lee, chairman of the fire committee, also denies that there is any truth in the story.

A Genius With the Violin.

Miss Florence Emerson, pupil of Professor Carl Mackees, of the Royal School of Music, of Berlin, Germany, and of other celebrated teachers, visits Plainfield every Monday and Thursday for the purpose of instructing local pupils violin and harmony work. She is also a pupil of Marguerite Melville, of Berlin, a violin virtuoso of world-wide fame. She has a studio in Carnegie Hall, New York, where she may be addressed when not in this city.

Another Kean Dinner.

A dinner of sixty covers will be given in their Washington home by Senator and Miss Kean December 31, at which it is possible Governor Murphy will be present.

RECTOR'S RESIGNATION ACCEPTED BY VESTRY

St. Stephen's Parish Consents to Rev. Mr. Dawson's Severing His Pastoral Relations.

TEMPORARY SUCCESSOR

REV. WILLIAM R. HARRIS, OF THIS CITY, TO HAVE CHARGE OF PARISH.

Rev. Mr. Dawson to Leave at Once for Elk Rapids, Where He Will be Rector of St. Paul's P. E. Church.

Rev. William Vincent Dawson who recently tendered his resignation as rector of St. Stephen's Church, Ravine road, will enter upon his new duties as rector of St. Paul's Church, Elk Rapids, Mich., on Sunday, January 24. His resignation has been accepted by the vestry of St. Stephen's Church, and Mr. Dawson will probably leave Plainfield before the time fixed for his taking charge as Elk Rapids.

Inasmuch as Mr. Dawson was determined to leave Plainfield, there was nothing else for the vestry to do but accept his resignation. His successor, temporarily, will be Rev. William R. Harris, of Martine avenue. Mr. Harris is a retired clergyman. He has been a resident of Plainfield for some time and he has agreed to take charge of St. Stephen's Church for the present. The choice meets with the approval of the parishioners.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS ELECT

WATCHUNG COUNCIL ALSO ARRANGES FOR HANDSOME NEW HEADQUARTERS.

Watchung Council, No. 552, Knights of Columbus, has elected these officers for the ensuing year: Grand knight, A. E. LaPorte; deputy grand knight, J. F. O'Keefe; recorder, J. W. Graham; financial secretary, J. F. Hines; treasurer, A. A. Cannon; chancellor, W. J. O'Keefe; warden, C. R. Guimes; lecturer, W. A. Boone; advocate, F. J. Blatz; physician, Dr. W. O. Boone; chaplain, Rev. J. Delahanty; inside guard, W. H. Schaefer; outside guard, Thomas Carty; trustees, J. C. Traynor, J. J. Kenney and Patrick Traynor.

The Council has leased for a term of years the lodge rooms known as Vandeventer Hall. Plans have been drawn for a thorough remodelling of the rooms and after the decorations are completed and the new furniture installed Watchung Council will have one of the finest lodge rooms in the city. Several applications for meeting nights have been received and many more are expected as soon as the rooms can be seen, as lodge rooms with all the facilities for degree work are very few in this city.

The furniture is to be of special design and to cost about $1,000. The Council expects to have everything in readiness for a grand opening early in January.

Miss Martin Engaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace J. Martin, of Marion avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Bessie Martin, to H. E. Needham, Jr., son of former Mayor H. E. Needham, of North Plainfield. Mr. Needham now lives in Denver, Col., where the wedding will take place some time near the first of the new year.

Delinquent Taxes.

The taxes on real estate will become delinquent in North Plainfield on December 30. As this date comes on a Sunday, the law says that the delinquent papers must be placed in the hands of the Justice of the Peace on the following day, which will give the people an extra day in which to settle their taxes. The delinquent tax list in this city was handed over to the City Judge on November 30.

Steal of Harlem.

Because the Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy disapproved, H. P. Toler has abandoned his efforts to recover the Harlem lands and demonstrate the fulfilment of the New Jerusalem property, but has placed money in the hands of his lawyer to enable the "heirs" to chase the rainbow of fortune.

Jeffery Sells Real Estate.

M. MERLE D'AUBIGNE TALKS ON MISSIONS

Recounts the Work Being Done by McAll Auxiliary in France.

MAKES TWO ADDRESSES

SPEAKS TO MEMBERS OF FIRST BAPTIST AND CRESCENT AVE. CHURCHES.

Grandson of Great Historian Relates Needs of France Which Contains Sixty Catholics to One Protestant—Interesting Discourse.

An excellent idea of the far-reaching work being carried on by the McAll Auxiliary in France was given Sunday morning at the First Baptist Church and at night at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church by M. Merle D' Aubigne, of Paris, who is now in this country interesting Americans in this work. It was through the influence of the local branch of the McAll Auxiliary, with a membership of about four hundred, that this noted person came to Plainfield. He is a grandson of the French historian of that name and is an earnest and interesting speaker.

At the First Baptist Church the speaker compared the superstitious religious ideas and practices of the early days with the religion of today. He told of the work of Huguenots; how they protested against church heathenism and were persecuted and burned to death for their beliefs and defense of Christianity.

In referring to the needs of France today, the speaker said that Protestant Christianity is the greatest. He said that during its long history the French people have never been quite at rest. They are naturally a critical spirit with a determination to look and examine things. He said that there is about one Protestant to sixty Catholics in France and one might travel a hundred miles without seeing a Protestant church.

Mr. D'Aubigne said that the French have strange notions about Protestantism. The Gospel has got to be taken to them and the McAll Auxiliary is one of the best agencies for doing this work. He stated that the Baptists are doing a good work in France, many of the followers being recruited from among the Roman Catholic Church. The necessity of doing union work was referred and to the efforts of reaching the farmer and laboring class, which was characterized as the true King of France, was told of in an interesting manner, as was also the work being done through two mission boats used on the canals. In this way the Gospel is carried to the poor people. The need of this was shown in a statement made that in one community of 6,000 inhabitants there was but one Protestant family.

In conclusion Mr. D'Aubigne told of the efforts to establish Christian settlements, or clubs, something on the plan of the Y. M. C. A., where men can meet, receive religious instruction and enjoy the benefits of a gymnasium, reading rooms and other helpful agencies. He thanked the members of the local branch for their earnest endeavor and support in the McAll work and expressed the hope that the interest would increase.

Last night at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, Mr. D'Aubigne told somewhat the same story as in the morning, and he was listened to with deep interest. In the two addresses he made he enlisted the sympathy and support of many Plainfielders.

ENDEAVORERS' ANNIVERSARY

SOCIETY OF SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH OBSERVES ITS BIRTHDAY.

The tenth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, was observed in the church Saturday morning, this service taking the place of the regular one usually held at that time. The president of the society, George L. Babcock, was in charge, and conducted the introductory services. Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis offered prayer.

The secretary and treasurer, Miss Mary St. John, read the reports for the year of the junior, intermediate and senior societies. There has been a slight increase in membership and contributions. The reports were encouraging showing that the societies have made progress and are doing good work.

After the reading of the reports Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor of the church, delivered and a short appropriate sermon.

A Christmas Cantata.

A Christmas cantata will be given at the First Presbyterian Church, Tuesday night, Dec. 29, under the direction of Clifford Braidor, organist of the church.

HEBREWS OBSERVE FEAST

EIGHT-DAY CELEBRATION AT SYNAGOGUE AND HOME ALL OVER WORLD.

Beginning Monday and continuing eight days, Hebrews will observe the national feast, "Hanukah," otherwise known as the Feast of the Dedication, or the Feast of Maccabeus. In this city services are held daily at the Weinberger building on West Front street and are conducted also by the heads of families in their homes.

The time is one of rejoicing among the Jews in commemoration of the victories of Judas Maccabeus over the enemies of the Jews of Palestine.

In the synagogues and in the Jewish homes a light is burning today, and one more will be added each night, so that on the eighth night there are eight lights in the Hanukah candelabra, the reminiscent of glory in the traditions of Israel. A special hymn, "Maos Tzur," is chanted after the same melody by the Jews all over the world. Hanukah is to the Jew what the Fourth of July is to the American and The Quatorze Juillet is to the Frenchman.

The feast commemorates the deliverance of the Jews from the tyranny of Antiochus Aristophanes, about 170 B. C. He oppressed them and polluted the holy temple by offering flesh of swine on its altar, and placed statutes of pagan gods on the altars. Finally, the Syrians erected an altar and bade the aged Mantachias to sacrifice on it. He refused, slew the king's messenger, then raised the standard of revolt. He gathered an army, but died before the first attack, prohibiting Judas Maccabees as his successor. The Jews finally routed their enemies completely in two battles, and Maccabeus caused the temple to be purified.

A rabbinical legend is to the effect that when the perpetual lamp was to be lighted, it was discovered that there remained only one bottle of oil, but by a miracle the oil lasted eight days until a fresh supply could be obtained.

EXPLOSION HURTS GARDENER

EZRA HAMILTON HURT BY ACCIDENT AT MR. M'CUTCHEN'S GREENHOUSE.

One man was injured in an explosion of a boiler at the home of Charles W. McCutchen Saturday afternoon, and one end of the green houses was shattered. The injured man is Ezra Hamilton, the gardener. His injuries consist of burns and bruises.

Hamilton was at work in the green house and had just opened up the dampers in the boiler, which supplies the heat for the hot house in the winter time, when there was a frightful explosion and Hamilton was knocked down and received scalds about the face and hands by escaping steam. He was also injured by flying pieces of iron. The explosion is said to have been caused by water backing up in the boiler tubes.

The glass was shattered by the force of the explosion and part of the end of the structure was blown out. The damage will probably amount to $200.

No Fire in Borough.

Box 143, of the North Plainfield Fire Department, at the corner of Somerset street and Grandview avenue, was rung in Saturday night at about 10 o'clock for a fire outside of the borough limits. The firemen thought the blaze was in the Hyde property but when they arrived upon the spot they found that it was still several miles away. The cause of the fire was the Gould barn, east of the Mountain Park Inn on Johnston's drive, belonging to E. C. Kieb, of Fanwood.

New Jersey's Saloons Increasing.

New Jersey, according to the report of the commissioner, this year has 770 more saloons than the year before. The number of saloons in the State reported for the fiscal year 1903 is 9,172, and for 1903, 9,942. The Fifth district, to which Newark belongs, has 7,841 saloons. This also takes in Jersey City, Hoboken, Paterson and several other large towns. The First district (there are only two districts in New Jersey) has 2,101 saloons.

Editor Earned on The "Press."

The Men's Assembly of Grace M. E. Church will meet Friday night, when H. S. Barnes, formerly of Plainfield, but now city editor of the Rahway Advocate, will make an address on "The Power of the Press," and Rev. John McMurray, of the Monroe Avenue Church and Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer will debate the question of "Capital Punishment." In addition to the above programme there will be vocal solos by William Jeffery.

JUNIOR MECHANICS BEGIN THEIR FAIR

Benevolent Council, No. 256, Jr. O. U. A. M., Promises Week of Entertainment.

SEVERAL ATTRACTIONS

THREE CONTESTS TO CAUSE SOME EXCITEMENT AT BAZAAR.

Proceeds for General Fund of Organization — George Herman, Chairman of Committee—Women Aiding in the Work.

Under auspicious circumstances the fair of Benevolent Council, No. 256, Jr. O. U. A. M., opened last Monday in Saengerbund Hall. The attendance was large and the patronage generous. The bazaar has opened for a week's run, for which time a elaborate list of events has been scheduled. The proceeds will be devoted to the general fund of that progressive organization.

The committee in charge of the general arrangements consist of George Herman, chairman; Louis Drake, August Windham, Frank Terry, Herbert Alberts, James Conklin, Orrie Baker, Andrew Frederickson, John VanHorne, Joseph Plum, F. C. Milligan and William Davis; assists, A. G. Adams, Horace Adams, J. V. Beekman and S. E. Terry. The booths, which are ladened with a great display of fancy articles and novelties as well as candies, are presided over by Mrs. Frank Manchester, Mrs. Frank Terry, Mrs. S. C. Terry, Mrs. J. V. Beekman, Miss C. M. Clark and Mrs. M. H. Brokaw.

During the week there will be many events of an entertaining nature. There are three contests, two of which are being held on the chance system and the third is between two contestants, Frank Milligan and William Davis. The latter is for a gentleman's gold watch and the other two are for a ladies' watch and a sofa pillow.

WILD DASH OF RUNAWAYS

MADDENED TEAM OF HORSES CAUSE NO DAMAGE BY AWFUL PACE.

In and out among carriages, business wagons and pedestrians, two horses drawing a two-ton wagon loaded with barrels of beer, dashed down East Front street Tuesday, dodged a trolley car loaded with people at the corner of Front and Somerset streets and turning, ran up Somerset street at a terrific pace. Although the frightened animals covered almost half a mile of crowded thoroughfare in their mad run, they did not collide with anything, nor do any damage to the wagon, harness or themselves.

The wagon was in charge of Frank Rickett, who at the time was delivering beer in the Hotel Waldorf. A boy on a bicycle started the horses. As the team dashed down Front street without a driver, William Emmons swung on behind and climbed to the seat, only to find that the lines had dropped down between the horses. In front of Councilman Arnold's store, Chief Marshal William Campbell caught one of the horses by the bridle and as he was being dragged along the street, Marshal James Block caught the other horse and skillfully threw him.

A motorman on the Somerset street trolley line probably saved a half dozen passengers from injury by reversing the power on his car, and running it back to safety, when he saw the team coming up the street. The runaways were stopped just where the car had stood a few minutes before.

K. G. E. District Meeting.

A district meeting of the Knights of the Golden Eagle, comprising Freedom Castle, No. 49, of Plainfield; Golden Crown Castle, No. 53, of Somerville, and New Brunswick Castle, No. 71, of New Brunswick, will be held in the Eagle's hall, Babcock building, Tuesday night, Dec. 22. The grand officers of the State and large delegations from the above castles will attend.

Protest to Council.

It is reported that residents of the Third ward will make a formal protest to the Common Council if any measure is introduced before that body for the ousting of Joseph A. Hubbard as a member of the local Board of Assessors.

With Due Respect.

Without wishing to be irreverent, there will be some great developments in Eastern bank and financial advertising, following the obituary notices of a few score nice old gentlemen who now constitute "our most respected and conservative element."—George L. Dyer, in Mahin's Magazine.

FUNERAL SERVICES OVER MRS. UTTER

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis and Rev. George B. Shaw Officiate at Well Attended Obsequies.

IMPRESSIVE SINGING

INTERMENT TO BE MADE TODAY AT WESTERLY, R. I.

Dr. Lewis Dwelt on Dead Woman's Noble Character, and Rev. Mr. Shaw Read the Scripture—Quartette Sang Two Selections.

The funeral services of Mrs. Emma J. Utter were held Monday at 7:45 from the late residence, 422 West Fifth street, where a large number of friends and neighbors gathered. The services were opened with the singing of "The Homeland," by Mr. and Mrs. David E. Titsworth, Miss Nan. Randolph and Elmer E. Runyon.

Rev. George B. Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, read appropriate Scripture selections, after which Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, who knew Mrs. Utter for many years, made a few remarks. He referred to the unusual fact that it was the third evening service in that family in which he had taken part, the other two being that of Mrs. Utter's mother and her husband. He dwelt chiefly on Browning's thought in the poem of "Rear-Ezra," that the best of life is yet to come, and he also spoke of the uplifting influence of music on the character, it being the one thing on earth that is to be reproduced in the next life.

The services closed with the singing of "He Giveth His Beloved Rest," by the quartette, accompanied by Miss Carrie Dewey. Today the remains were taken to Westerly, R. I., for interment.

PARK DANCE PATRONESSES

ARRANGEMENTS FOR SOCIAL EVENTS TO BE GIVEN ON DEC. 28 AND 31.

These are the patronesses for the Christmas dance to be given at the Park Club on Monday night, December 28: Mrs. Thomas U. Dudley, Jr., Mrs. Clifford W. McGee, Mrs. Arthur Murphy, Mrs. George Rust Rogers and Mrs. Edward T. Wilson. On Thursday night, December 31, a dance will be given for the associate members and their friends under twenty-one years of age, including the young children, who are invited for 7:30. These are the patronesses: Mrs. George D. Hallock, Mrs. Augustus V. Heely, Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, Mrs. Clifford W. McGee, Mrs. Charles A. Reed and Mrs. George T. Rogers.

SWEDISH EVANGELICAL SALE

CHURCH PEOPLE NET GOOD SUM AT AFFAIR—PASTOR CHIEF SALESMAN.

Under the auspices of the sewing society of the Swedish Evangelical Church, a successful sale was conducted in the church rooms Saturday night. Laces, doilies, sofa pillows and many other dainty products of the seamstress's art, appropriate for Christmas gifts, found a ready sale and netted a good sum for the benefit of the church. The sale was conducted by the pastor, Rev. L. T. Lindholm. Others who assisted in disposing of the goods and serving coffee were Mrs. Annette Brandt, Mrs. Matilda Johnson, Henry Brandt, A. Jacobson, William Johnson and Arthur Lindmark. Mrs. L. T. Lindholm sang and a short service of prayer preceded the sale.

Bridge Across Newark Bay.

Representative Allen Benny wants to see a bridge built from Bayonne to Elizabeth across Newark bay. Former Congressman W. T. Dunn introduced a bill which became a law granting the desired permission. It had a time limit clause, however, which has long ago expired. Mr. Benny seems to have this clause repealed and if he succeeds the bridge may yet be built. It would save the people of Bayonne a drive of sixteen miles.

Miss Julia Clark, of New York, has been the guest of Plainfield friends for some time past.

FIVE HUNDRED GREET THEIR NEW PASTOR

Reception Given Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Chambliss by First Baptist Congregation.

PROGRAMME PRESENTED

LECTURE ROOM OF CHURCH EDIFICE HANDSOMELY DECORATED.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes, Pastor-Emeritus, and His Wife, Assist in Receiving Members of Congregation—Those Comprising Various Committees.

There were over five hundred members of the First Baptist Church congregation attending the reception given Thursday to the new pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, and his wife. The affair was an informal one and the greeting extended was cordial and unanimous. The reception was held in the lecture room of the church, the place being arranged with flowers, palms and smilax, while there were several cosy corners, where rugs and sofa pillows combined to make the scene an attractive one.

In the centre of the main room, the guests were received by Dr. and Mrs. Chambliss. They were assisted by Rev. Dr. Yerkes, pastor emeritus, and his wife; Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Bonney, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Leonard, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Probasco, Mr. and Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Compton, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Armstrong, Alexander Gilbert, H. E. Needham, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Chapman and Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr., comprising the deacons, trustees and the committee on pastor, together with their wives.

Mrs. Oliver B. Leonard was the general chairman of the various committees, while Mrs. Harold Serrell was chairman of the refreshment committee. Assisting her were Mrs. George H. Batchelor, Mrs. Frank Jones, Mrs. L. L. Manning, Mrs. Walter C. Dobbins, Mrs. Elvaine Van-Name, Mrs. L. W. Randolph, Mrs. S. B. Joseph, Mrs. George H. Robins and Miss Florence Serrell.

The refreshment committee was assisted by these waitresses: The Misses Helen Armstrong, Ella Harold Serrell, Ethel King, Minnie B. Serrell, Josephine Serrell, Gladys Burt, Ada Fountain, Marguerite Serrell, Annis Kinsman, Bessie and Grace Tomlyck, Mae Batchelor, Pauline Denton, Elizabeth Wilson, Velma F. Oakley, Helen Robins, Ida Jeter, Hattie French and Elizabeth Flanders. Those who poured coffee were Miss Ida Yerkes, Mrs. Hannah Flanders, Mrs. Harold Serrell and the Misses Florence and Minnie Marsh.

These women composed the committee on decorations: Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, chairman; Miss Ida Yerkes, Mrs. Walter M. McGee, Mrs. Hannah Flanders, Miss B. J. Shreve, Miss Florence Marsh, Mrs. J. B. Probasco and Miss Ella Serrell.

Mrs. Robert H. Lowry and Howard A. Case had charge of the music and a feature of the reception was the programme presented, consisting of vocal duets by Miss Luella C. Harris, soprano, and Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto, and tenor solos by George Smith, of the church choir. In addition there were piano selections by Howard Case.

An unusual feature was the singing of a familiar hymn by L. E. Barkalow, one of the oldest members of the church.

AMATEUR DRAMATIC CLUB'S SCHEDULE

Local Organization Plans Production of Several Performances, Including Faust.

CLUB IN NEW QUARTERS

INVITATIONS TO BE ISSUED FOR A EEW YEAR'S NIGHT EVENT.

Young Actors Occupy a Hall in East Front Street—Two Farce Comedies to be Presented at the Casino During the Winter.

The A. E. Willard Dramatic Club, which has already provided Plainfielders with much amusement by its presentation of "Hector" and a vaudeville entertainment as well as of "The Last Days of Pompeii," is preparing for a season of activity this winter. Through the exertions of one of its leading members, William Jeffery, the club has been enabled to secure for its purposes the hall above Mehrten's candy store on East Front street. The hall is admirably suited to dramatic work and has been fitted out with a large stage.

Though the scenery, which when completed will be handsome, has not yet been painted, the canvas is all up and it is expected that everything will be in readiness for a big time on New Year's night, the first entertainment by the club in its own quarters. A play or farce will be given at that time. The affair will be made a social event and a large number of invitations will be issued.

The club occupied its quarters for the first time Wednesday night of this week for a rehearsal of the play "Faust," which it will present in February or March under the auspices of some one of the local lodges. The cast of this play, which is not easy of acting except by an unusually competent company, have been excellently cast. Mrs. A. E. Willard will play Marguerite and Mr. Willard, Mephistopheles, both having appeared in the parts on the professional stage. William Jeffery will be the Faust of the production.

On the 23d of this month, the club will present two farce comedies, "A Quiet Family" and "Which Shall He Marry," at the Casino for the benefit of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Forresters.

PLANS OF THE ALIS CLUB

IMPROVEMENTS CONTEMPLATED AND SOME BASEBALL SCHEMES.

The success thus far attending the Alis Club in its efforts to give the people good sports, has encouraged the members and there is now talk of greater things in the future. Aside from the fact that the club expects to have a baseball team next season superior to anything in recent years, it is quite likely that before a great while it will have a house of its own, a place where indoor baseball, basket ball and tennis can be played.

The increase in membership is responsible for a revival of interest in sports. The purpose of the members is to secure a suitable clubhouse, where in the winter various sports can be given and at the same time combine social features with them. The plans call for plunge and shower baths and all modern conveniences.

Within a short time the baseball committee will have its arrangements about completed for next season's team and details concerning them will be made public. The committee has had under its wing some of the fastest semi-professional players in the Metropolitan district, many of whom are anxious to play in Plainfield, and there is no doubt but what one of the strongest semi-professional teams in the State will be located in this city. In becoming a member of the New Jersey State League, the club will be able to sign players and hold them the same as any regular league team.

Ely's Cream Balm is an old friend in a new form. It is prepared for the particular benefit of sufferers from nasal catarrh who are used to an atomizer in spraying the diseased membranes. All the healing and soothing properties of Cream Balm are retained in the new preparation. It does not dry up the secretions. Price, including spraying tube, 75 cents. At your druggist's or Ely Brothers, 56 Warren Street, New York, will mail it.

Miss Louise Curtis, of Plainfield, has been the guest for several days of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Haddon, of Newton.

The Misses Hendershott, of Somerville, were guests yesterday of Miss Leota Codington, on West Third street.

W. D. Williams, of East Front street, has been entertaining his father from Newark.

TRAPS SET FOR ANGLERS.

Singular and Unexpected Method of Enforcing the Game Laws in New Hampshire.

A young New York fisherman who went into northern New Hampshire to try his luck early last summer ran across a new way of enforcing game laws. The New Hampshire statutes make it an offense to have in one's possession a trout under six inches in length, but the New Yorker didn't know this, says the Sun.

He was returning by train from a good day's sport, when the conductor, after taking up his ticket, strolled back and started a conversation. He asked the fisherman what luck he'd had, and finally asked to see the catch.

The conductor looked long and carefully at the fish. Finally he said:

"Young man, I'm a game warden of this state, an' some o' them fish are under six. I'll have to measure them."

And measure them he did, finding that five were under length. It cost the youngster $25 and costs to settle the bill with the state, and a part of that sum went to the game warden conductor.

The fisherman didn't know the trick of the native, who, when he hauls out a trout that's under length, cuts off the tail and defies the warden to tell how long it was when caught.

NOVEL MILITARY RIDE.

Condition of the Horses to Count More Than Speed in New Contest.

Sir Evelyn Wood has invented a military ride under new conditions, which are to be tested over Salisbury plain, reports Country Life.

The conditions are 25 miles of distance to be covered, the riders steering by compass, and horses to be brought in in such good condition as to show no spur marks and be able to eat a feed of corn within half an hour of coming to the winning post.

Among the most important of the minor conditions attached to this ride is that which provides that the horse ridden shall have been the property of his rider for at least a fortnight, or if he be a government horse shall have been ridden regularly by the man who mounts him in the competition for a previous fortnight.

In order to give competitors no advantage from local knowledge, the ride is to be over a course that will be indicated to the riders by the markers posted at different times during the entire line, and each marker will indicate to the rider only so much of the course as will suffice to take him to the next of these living signal posts.

THE POWER OF RADIUM.

An Ounce Would Drive a 50-Horse-Power Motor Car Around the World.

The consular reports published by the department of commerce quote from the Anglo-Indian Review, "and interesting and illuminating account" of the possible future applications of radium. The report says:

"The area where success is practically assured is at present not very large, but in the medical field it is already fairly extensive. In the working of X-rays and in the marvelous results achieved in the treatment of cancer and blindness we have every hope for great and universally benefiting results. In its industrial application we are somewhat restricted by the extremely limited amount of radium available, but it is stated that a small fraction of an ounce, properly employed, would probably provide a good light sufficient for several rooms and would not require renewal during the present century. It has been calculated that the energy stored up in one gram of radium is sufficent to raise 500 tons weight a mile high. An ounce would, therefore, suffice to drive a 50 horse-power motor car at the rate of 30 miles an hour around the world."

COSTLIEST OF ALL KNIVES.

Piece of Cutlery Made in Sheffield, England, Said to Be Worth $4,500.

The most valuable knife in the world is to be seen in the collection of a famous firm of cutlers in Sheffield, reports London Answers. It is large enough to fit the pocket of none but a giant and contains 75 blades, which can close up like those of an ordinary knife. Each of the larger blades is elaborately engraved and among the subjects of these strange pictures are views of Sheffield college, the city of York, Windsor castle, Arundel castle and a score of other famous scenes. The hafts are of mother-of-pearl, carved with great skill. On one side the artist has depicted a stag hunt and on the other a boar hunt. When asked as to the value of this knife, the firm replied: "Well, we calculated it up to £920, but that was before it was finished, and then we ceased to estimate what it had cost."

Pearls in Indian Territory.

Pearls of great value have been discovered recently in Red creek, near Muskogee. There is much reason to believe that pearl fisheries similar to those which have been developed in Arkansas will be found extensively in Indian territory. In many of the streams of the territory are immense beds of mussels, which authorities say are of the pearl-bearing variety.

Losses to Italian Fishermen.

Swiss and Italian fishermen on the shores of Lake Lugano have suffered serious losses owing to a disease which has already killed at least a million fish, valued at $12,000. It is caused by a sediment which comes into the lake with the sewage of Lugano and other towns.

PLAINFIELD HEIRS CONTEST HER WILL

Not Satisfied With Testament, An Attempt is Being Made to Prevent Probate.

CAVEAT ALREADY FILED

MRS. REBECCA D. MUNN LEFT ESTATE VALUED AT $50,000.

Undue Influence Alleged to Have Been Used on Aged Testatrix, Plainfield Heirs Are the Dead Woman's Grandchildren.

Sidney B. Frasee, Frank T. Frasee and Mrs. Delia R. Voehl, all of this city and Mrs. Sarah F. Stillwell, of Newark, have filed a caveat in the Surrogate's office in Newark, to contest the will of the late Mrs. Rebecca D. Munn, who died several days ago in that city. It is claimed that undue influence has been used by Mrs. William H. Keepers, at whose home, Mrs. Munn lived for twelve years.

The caveat was filed by Hetfield & Hetfield, of this city, who represent the caveators. The will has not yet been offered for probate.

The caveators are grandchildren of the late Mrs. Munn, who died leaving an estate valued at about $60,000. The grandchildren were each bequeathed $200, and the balance of the estate was left to the daughter, Mrs. William H. Keepers.

The five grandchildren who are contesting the will are children of a deceased daughter. Under the intestate law these children are entitled to an equal division of the deceased daughter's share. Mrs. Munn was between 85 and 86 years old, and, it is alleged, that in her feeble state she was also influenced by her daughter in making out her will. It will probably be several weeks before the court sets a time for the hearing.

WILL BE COMPLETED SOON

RAPID PROGRESS ON WEST END SEWER AFTER MUCH DELAY.

Work is progressing rapidly on the new West End Saturday sewer, of which almost four miles is completed. It is probable that the work will be finished the end of next week.

The sewer runs through Albert street, between Compton avenue and Mariners place; Pond place, between Stebbins and Muhlenberg places; John street, Prescott, place between South Second street and West Fourth street; Dunellen avenue, between Clinton avenue and Compton avenue; Essex street, between Spooner avenue and John street; West Fifth street, between Grant avenue and Prospect place; West Fourth street, Lee place, North avenue and South avenue, Second street, West Sixth street, Spooner avenue and West Third street.

The contract for the sewer was given over a year ago. The contractors have not progressed as rapidly as was expected, and are now paying the penalty for their dilatory conduct by being confronted with at least a foot of frost through which they must dig.

The reason the street commissioner is rushing the work is to enable an assessment to be made and thus avoid paying interest on the work. Payment has been made in installments by the city. As soon as the work has reached a stage where it can be appraised, the cost will be reported to the Common Council and the matter will be placed in the hands of the Sewage Commission for settlement.

LITERARY.

The impressive "Avowals" by George Moore, author of "Esther Waters," which are appearing in Lippincott's Magazine, reach Part IV. in the Christmas number. The subject is Tolstoy and his literary work, and the delightful self-revelations known to readers of "The Confessions of a Young Man" are here carried forward by a manlier and unhallowed mind. Nothing in recent criticism has, it is said, provoked more serious discussion than these delightful "Ovowals."

E. M. LAING RETIRES.

Pressure of Other Duties Compels Successful Merchant to Sell Out Stock.

Eugene M. Laing, who has been engaged in the men's furnishing goods business at 139 Park avenue, for thirty years, is soon to retire from that business and give his time in the future to real estate and insurance. He now offers a great opportunity for any one to purchase a well-established business which is a profitable and well-paying one. Any person interested in this matter will learn something to their advantage by consulting with Mr. Laing.

The Misses Jessie and Jeanie Saxton, of Plainfield, are guests of Miss Laura Holder, of Jersey City.

FLY PROVED USEFUL.

Insect Foils Sneak Thief Who Was About to Rob Man in Chicago Hotel Corridor.

Listen to the tale of the heroic fly.

The tale has a moral which it will cost nothing to heed.

The moral is: If you have no money to employ private detectives to protect you from grafters and public detectives, get a fly—a nice, domesticated, well-behaved fly—and carry it about with you.

Nicholas Fenn, of Minneapolis, went to sleep the other afternoon in the corridor of the Grand Pacific hotel, at Chicago. His coat was unbuttoned, and in the pocket of the coat was a wallet containing $648—all the money he had in the world.

His sleep was disturbed by the buzzing of a fly, supposed to be the last fly of the season. He reached up several times and made aimless passes at the little pest, but was unable to drive it away. He did not wake up, and the fly kept on buzzing. Fenn's dreams were filled with swarms of winged insects that clouded his sleeping vision, swept to and fro, and threatened ever and anon to smother him.

"HELP! A THIEF!"

Finally the fly alighted on his nose. It declined to be moved or frightened by the sleeper's slowly moving head.

It stuck. Fenn stirred, and then sat upright.

He made a sharp pass at his tormentor, and his hand encountered something solid. He opened his eyes, and at the same instant closed his fingers. They were encircling the wrist of a man, whose hand was in Fenn's coat pocket.

"Help! A thief!" he shouted.

The fly flew away. The thief jumped up from the chair next to Fenn's, wrenched his wrist loose, and ran down the corridor and out at the door. His intended victim reported his case to the clerk, and told how he happened to be saved. He gave much praise to the timely fly.

HE BOUGHT THE DOG.

Canine Was So Smart That Its New Owner Had Him Converted Into Sausages.

The New York Times tells this unique story of a certain office holder who decided to buy a dog. In reply to his "ad." a man called at his office with an intelligent-looking animal, that he immediately took a fancy to, though he deemed it advisable to first inquire into something of its characteristics.

"What can he do?" he asked.

"Oh, sir, he can do anything. If you've lost anything, sir, he'll go directly to the place where you lost it. He'll—"

"HE CAN DO ANYTHING."

"By the way, I just missed my glove. Do you suppose he could find it?"

"Certainly, sir. Just let him sniff at your hand."

The office holder held his hand to the dog's nose, and the animal trotted serenely off. Presently he returned, and with a joyous wagging of the tail deposited his offering at the office holder's feet.

At the same moment the click of the typewriter in the next room ceased. A girlish form appeared in the doorway.

"My sash ribbon," cried a high sweet voice, "my sash ribbon! The dog has my sash ribbon!"

The office holder's face turned a dull red. He cast a furtive glance at the man, dived into his pocket, and hauled out a bill.

"I guess the dog'll do," he said, quietly.

Killed Bear with a Rock.

Thomas McNeill, a cowboy, living near Bluewater, N. M., while in the Zuni mountains accidentally ran into a cinnamon bear. Having no weapon, he tried to lasso him, but the bear brought down his horse by biting a piece out of the horse's flank. McNeil then tackled the bear on foot, using a rock to crush his skull. The animal when dressed weighed 417 pounds, and was sold at Bluewater.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists, such lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books or a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

The following list of children's books is offered with the double object of being suggestive at Christmas time, and of providing a list from which children may select library books. None have been included which young people have not been found to enjoy, nor which after reading the librarian cannot unhesitatingly recommend. As a slight guide, the approximate ages to which they are adapted are given, further information will be given at the library to those interested. Many of the books are especially adapted for reading aloud to children.

Next Thursday's issue will contain a list of books for machinists.

MRS. ADELE WATT SECURES DIVORCE

Proceedings Brought in the Orange County Court by a North Plainfield Woman.

STORY OF MARITAL WOE

HUSBAND NAMED CLERGYMAN AND A MEMBER OF OLD GUARD.

Mrs. Watt Alleged Cruel Treatment —Tales of a Yachting Party— Hearing Before a Referee— Final Decree.

After creating a scandal by suits and countersuits for separation and divorce, dragging in the name of persons whose characters have been smirched and who have had no opportunity to defend themselves, Commander Watt, of New York, and his wife Adele, who resides in North Plainfield, have been legally divorced.

A suit by Mrs. Watt against her wealthy husband was brought in Orange County. There the testimony was heard before a referee, who decided in Mrs. Watt's favor, and the decree will be signed on Tuesday. Commodore Watt put in a reply and there was the appearance of a contest.

So far as known there was no testimony taken at the suit in Orange County that reflected upon Mrs. Watt and no effort was made to prove the acts alleged wherein Mrs. Watt's name was unfavorably connected with that of the Rev. Dr. George R. Van De Water and Major W. H. Truman, of the Old Guard.

The Watt divorce proceedings originally came as a great surprise. Mrs. Watt formerly was a Mrs. Mc Laughlin and obtained a divorce from her first husband. When she was married to Commodore Archibald Watt, owner of the yacht American, former owner of the celebrated yacht Golden Rod, and member of a dozen clubs, wealthy, owner of the old Watt mansion, she had one child. The marriage took place in June, 1895. The Rev. Mr. Van De Water was the officiating clergyman.

Soon after the marriage the couple went to live on the yacht American, lying most of the time at her anchorage in the North River. Connected by telephone on to the shore, the couple on the $500,000 yacht lived happily for a while.

The first the outside world knew of the disagreement of the couple was when Mrs. Adele Watt began suit for separation. She alleged cruelty, made charges of various kinds and, in short, was a badly treated wife.

For a long time there were hints of a prominent clergyman and military man being mixed up in their allegations. In the court proceedings it developed that Dr. Van De Water was the clergyman.

A stewardess aboard the yacht made affidavit about Dr. Van De Water. She said he came aboard when the Commodore was asleep or was not aboard. On a couple of occasions she told of accompanying Mrs. Watt ashore. Once, she said, Mrs. Watt and the minister drank five highballs each while she sat by and drank a glass of beer.

When Dr. Van De Water's name was dragged in he made a vigorous denial of the charges and announced his intention of defending himself.

PARK TEAM LOST TO ROSELLE CASINO

F. O. Ball Rolled 226 in the Second Game, That Being Highest Score Made.

MEN IN FINE FETTLE

PARK'S AGGREGATION BOWLS 841 IN ONE GAME.

Local Team Shows Marked Improvement in Play—Two Roselle Men Make More Than 200 in Single Games—The Scores.

The Park Club bowling team journeyed to Roselle Thursday and rolled the second match in The Daily Press Bowling League tournament, with Roselle Casino. Despite the fact that the Parks rolled over 900 in each of the first two games, they were unable to capture a single one. In the first game they were defeated by five pins, the totals being 818 to 813. In the second game they braced up and rolled a total score of 841, but an 879 rolled by the home team was too much to overcome. In the last game their total was 746, while the Roselle boys finished with an 818.

The Parks, however, showed improvement over their first match. F. O. Ball was again high man with a 226 rolled in the second game, while the veteran, Dr. Thiers put up a score of 183 in the first game. All of the other scores were uniformly good, but the home team was a trifle too strong. Ralph T. Willis was a member of the visiting team and he failed to bring the totals up as he is accustomed to do. William Townsend was also a little off from his usual game.

There were comparatively few low scores rolled by Roselle, the majority of them being high. S. Smith rolled a 207 in the first game, while Mulford reached 201 in the third game and a 192 in the second game. The other scores with one or two exceptions were equally as high in proportion.

The scores for the three games:

Adjourned Meeting of Council.

There will be an adjourned meeting of the Common Council on Wednesday night, December 23, when additional business will be considered in closing up the city's affairs for the year.

NO MORE FRAME BUILDINGS

WITHIN CERTAIN LIMITS OF BOROUGH AFTER PASSAGE OF ORDINANCE.

The ordinance entitled "an ordinance to govern the erection of frame buildings in North Plainfield" and the defining of a fire limit in the borough was passed on its second reading at the meeting of the borough Common Council last Friday, and in will be read for the third time at the next regular meeting which will be held on Friday evening, January 8. The limits wherein frame building will not be permitted to be erected after the ordinance becomes a borough law is defined as follows: Washington avenue to Park place, to Grove street, east to Somerset street, to Grandview avenue, on the easterly side of Somerset street to Jackson avenue, to Westervelt avenue, to Green brook and to the intersection of the county line in Green brook and Washington street.

It is probable that a building inspector will be appointed at some later date in North Plainfield, who will have charge of the erection, removal and demolition of buildings. It is understood that the passage of the ordinance is primarily aimed to defeat the Durlach brothers in their intention to move into the borough the frame building now located on the corner of Watchung avenue and East Front street, this city.

A communication signed by Ferdinand Brose and other for two street lights on Wilson avenue above Cedar street, was referred to the fire, water and lamps committee. The Council adjourned at 9 o'clock to meet on Friday night, January 8, on account of the regular meeting night in January falling on a holiday.

John Kitchen is confined to his home on Stone street by illness.

Mrs. Percy Baird, of Plainfield, has returned from a visit at Nebanic.

SITE FOR BOROUGH'S NEW SCHOOLHOUSE

Place Favored by Majority of Board on West Side of Grove St., South of Greenbrook Rd.

LOCATION IS THE BEST

SCHEME TO ERECT TWO BUILDINGS NOT SUPPORTED.

Growth of North Plainfield in Westerly Section, Improvements in the East Being Blocked—Where Majority of Voters Are.

The impression seems to have gone forth that the site selected by the majority of the North Plainfield School Board, for the new school building, is as the corner of Grove street and Greenbrook road. This is not the case, for while this location was offered, it was considered that the ground was too low, and another site on the westerly side of Grove street, about 300 feet south of Greenbrook road, was the one selected. This is on higher ground, and is a much more convenient location for a school, and as the growth of the borough in the next ten years is bound to be largely in this vicinity many tax payers feel that this is the best available situation.

Improvements in the eastern end of town on a large scale are in a sense blocked owing to the fact that most of the property east of Westervelt avenue is owned by the estate of Charles Hyde, and the estate of John Taylor Johnson, and the properties are held at figures, which are not particularly attractive, it is said, to builders of homes. Property in the western portion of the borough, north of Greenbrook road can be purchased at a low figure, per front foot, and naturally, it is claimed, the growth will go that way.

The fact that there is already one new school building in the district east of Somerset street, it is signed, would seem to preclude the necessity of building another one in that district, and leaving the larger section west of Somerset street out in the cold. The last named district, that west of Somerset street, has a large majority of voters, and according to Collector French's books has a valuation of ——, while the district east of Somerset street pays taxes on ——.

Speaking of the subject, a borough site said today: "The necessity of a new school is admitted by all and there should be little division on the Grove street site selected by the school Trustees as they have given the subject thorough consideration. The idea suggested by some one that two school houses be built, one in either end of the borough, is hardly inclined to strike the tax-payers favorably as the purchasing of two sites, and the building of two schools, will cost much more than one site and one building having twice the capacity."

TRINITY'S YOUNG MEN'S CLUB

CONSISTORY APPROVES OF ORGANIZATION AND INSTRUCTS COMMITTEE.

Trinity Reformed Church is to have a Young Men's Club. A committee recently appointed to look into the advisability of organizing such a club reported favorably Thursday to the Consistory of the church at its regular monthly meeting. The idea was approved by the Consistory and the committee, Edgar F. Sheppard, A. K. Willard and F. K. Smith, was instructed to formulate plans for the club in regard to the age limit of membership and the features to be emphasized. The social side of the club will be made prominent.

The present clerk of the Consistory, Edgar T. Sheppard, was unanimously re-elected for the ensuing twelve months as was also George Gayle, treasurer of the church. Both officers were thanked for their efficient services for the good of the church. It was voted to contribute to the support of Muhlenberg Hospital by an annual offering to be made at the morning services on the third Sunday in December. Other business considered by the Consistory was mainly routine.

New Business Delivery.

John Entwistle, an employe of the Potter Press Company's plant, has received a license to start a new business delivery, to be known as the "Star Business Delivery."

Ralph Hallock, of Willow avenue, has recovered from a long sickness.

Miss Edna Stott, of Annandale, has been the guest of Plainfield friends.

Mrs. John Marquis, of Neshanic, has been visiting Plainfield relatives.

Charles Cook, of Crescent avenue, is spending a few days at Somerville.

Mrs. Clarence H. Leland, of Elmwood place, is the guest of Newark friends.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 20, "A Choice For Eternity." Text, Luke xvi, 19-31.

Jesus was speaking to a mixed company in which there were many of the most religious of the people, the Pharisees and scribes, and also large numbers of the common people who were reckoned as irreligious. Because Jesus did not shun these last, but did talk and eat with them, the strictly religious people were scandalized, much as church members would now be astonished and offended if an evangelist should familiarly visit and associate with the dissolute and drunken.

Jesus talked to them about losing a sheep and a piece of money and how we would hunt to find it, about a boy squandering his money and then waking up to his condition and starting on the way to true manliness.

After this He carries His lessons of life a little further and speaks about the enduring results, the permanent effects of our actions. The first series of pictures from life shows the anxiety one feels to find what he has and to recover what may have been lost. The fact that one who has been a prodigal and wanderer may return and find welcome and become a dutiful son is also made clear. Jesus here shows the real nature of God in His dealings with men in this life.

The second series of parables carries the truth beyond this life and shows the settling of destinies for all eternity by the actions of this life.

The parable of the unrighteous steward showed how a man in a position of influence might use his power so that when he had lost his place he would have friends who would take care of him. The lesson Jesus taught from it was that we ought to use our opportunities and means so that when all earthly advantages are gone we shall have friends who will welcome us into eternal abiding places.

Then comes the story of the rich man and Lazarus. This has had many different explanations, but it should be studied in its connection with all the parables which go before it. It closes this special section of teachings.

Read carefully and with attention to all surrounding circumstances, the main truth that is taught appears to be the permanent effect on future destiny of the way we live in this life. Nothing is said about any special vice or wickedness of the rich man nor of any special saintliness of the poor man. Nor does it appear that the rich man had to the place of anguish because he was rich and the poor man to the comforts of Abraham's bosom merely because he was poor. The point of the teaching of Jesus appears when he says, "They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them." That the rich man had not heeded, regarded and kept God's law as given by Moses and the prophets seems very clear from his anxiety that one shall be sent from the dead to his brothers, whom he acknowledges he has not repented. Jesus states plainly the uselessness of sending such a messenger. If those living have no disposition to walk the right way pointed out by the teaching of such holy men as Moses and the prophets no persuasion by one rising from the dead would have any influence with them.

The mysteries of the future life are claiming as much attention now as ever they have. Every person has reason for keenest interest in the discussion, but one should lose sight of the supreme importance of knowing the truth. Whether it seems pleasant or disagreeable we should force ourselves to recognize the fact that our future condition depends on the use of our present opportunities. No regrets will long avail to undo one done. Neglect of God's law now forever forfeits the benefits to be had from obedience to that law. The guif between characters good and bad is unchangeably fixed, and the limits once passed can never be repassed.

What you are now doing and becoming will remain yours and you—ever.

Then do and be what will be best for—ever.

God's Power.

In the world of nature God's power is exercised for our temporal welfare. In the world of grace His power in the gospel is for our salvation. We take hold upon His strength in nature, and God carries our burdens for us, flashes our messages under the ocean and across continents, operates our mills, produces our harvests. We take hold upon His strength in grace, and He bears our heart burdens, gives us communication with Himself, keeps us from falling, works in us both to will and to do of His good pleasure and makes us conquerors, and more than conquerors, through Him that loves us. Let us take hold of His strength, that we may make peace with Him.—United Presbyterian.

Meekness.

Meekness is love at school, love at the Saviour's feet. It is Christian lowliness. It is the disciple learning to know himself, learning to fear and distrust and abhor himself. It is the disciple practicing the sweet but self emptying lesson of putting on the Lord Jesus Christ. It is the disciple learning the defects of his own character. It is the disciple praying and watching for the mellowing of his temper and the ameliorations of his character. It is the living Christian at his Saviour's feet, learning of Him who is meek and lowly and finding rest for his soul.—Dr. James Hamilton.

He Calls You.

Even if in the midst of an avalanche of work He calls you "apart into a desert place to rest awhile," and, even if the desert mean only a headache or a rainy day instead of a journey, make no complaint, but follow close.—Anna Warner.

Coney Island [illegible]

Refuge for Un[illegible]
Many Varieties.

A unique institution at Coney Island is the Gospel lighthouse, which is presided over by Col. William D. Hughes and his wife.

Col. Hughes started in his mission work at the island four years ago with a small tent and a few camp stools. The "boosters" and "barkers" laughed at the "gospel shark" then, but they have since learned to respect him and he is now aided in his work by many of the most prominent business men and pleasure promoters on the island.

In the midst of the hurly-burly of roller coasters, merry go rounds and other noisy engines of amusement, he has built a church little different in architecture from the structures which surround it. The "lighthouse" adjoins the church and is a skeleton tower rising to a height of 65 feet above the sandy beach. The lantern at the summit of the tower, which can be seen from any point on the island, is an electric transparency on the four sides of which are emblazoned nightly the words "Jesus Saves."

Many girls who have run away from their homes frequent the dance halls at Coney Island every year. Some of them fall into the hands of the police. Magistrat Voorhees, who presides over the Coney Island court, sends many of these to Col. Hughes. They are either returned by him to the parents or mailed until it is thought safe to send them out to employment with good surroundings. While living at the "lighthouse" girls are taught to sew and cook.

Col. Hughes and his family live over the chapel. On the outside of the building is a large sign that reads: "Always open. Pull the latch." Spiritual food and the more substantial variety as well are free to any who ask. There is but one table, and tramps are often invited to sit down with the family. The chapel is open afternoons and evenings week days and Sundays.

MONSTER HAILSTONES.

They Fell Not Long Ago in a Pennsylvania Town and Were Larger Than Hens' Eggs.

One sometimes hears a man speak of hailstones "as big as hens' eggs." The tale is perhaps told by a traveler, whose story is received with a shrug of the shoulders. The stones general fell in some far away place, and the ordinary unbelieving auditor puts it in the same category as Mexican dodos or Adkaskan sea serpents.

There was a hailstorm, however, not long ago, about which some 20,000 persons can hold up their hands and swear that they saw and picked up hailstones which were even larger than the average hens' eggs. The inhabitantsof West Chester, Pa., which is 20 miles from Philadelphia, were suddenly overtaken by a brazen colored cloud, which threatened for a time, as many thought, to annihilate them. For two minutes the hailstones rattled on the roofs with the roar of thunder, and smashed windows, stripped trees of their leaves, killed chickens, birds, dogs and cats, and devastated fields of ripening crops. The storm was suddenly as it came, and it was found to have covered not more than ten square miles of country.

Charles L. Robinson, a New York business man, chanced to be in West Chester at the time of the storm, and he watched the huge hailstones from a porch.

"The roar of the falling ice," said Mr. Robinson, "inspired a sort of fear which I cannot describe. It was like the roar of cannon. I could see horses in the street which ran away from fright. The storm caused a fall in temperature of about 15 degrees. After it had passed I went out and picked up several stones and measured them. Several were more than 2½ inches in diameter. In order that I might remember just how large they were, I traced the outlines of one of them on a paper by running a pencil around the edges."

earth, pea[illegible] and, most importa[illegible] tween every man a[illegible] nineteen centuries of Chris[illegible] scarcely dare dream of universal [illegible]
yet centuries before the Christ was born Isaiah the prophet was bold enough, under divine inspiration, to picture the day of worldwide peace and to set forth some of its characteristics.

Though a vision, Isaiah's vision is to be a reality. The day is coming when there will be universal peace. This is the prophecy of the prophet of God, and God Himself is therefore responsible for its fulfillment. This fact makes its fulfillment an absolute certainty. God often acts slowly, it is true, and yet He always accomplishes His purposes. He "moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform;" but, though the way may be mysterious, the wonders are always performed. And while God often unfolds His plans and purposes slowly, at the same time He also acts at times with marvelous rapidity. Through the coral insect God sometimes takes ages to make an island in the sea, and then, again, by volcanic action He casts up a group of islands in a day. So with His purposes concerning men. What it may take centuries to accomplish in one way God can and sometimes has accomplished in a day by a different method. There is a divine plan in human life, and whether it is worked out slowly or rapidly it will be worked out, and God will be supreme.

The basis of worldwide peace is Jesus Christ. Isaiah calls him "the Prince of Peace," and He is. He was peace itself amid the adversities and distractions of His own life. In leaving the world He left peace as a legacy to His disciples—"Peace I leave with you; My peace I give unto you, not as the world giveth give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled." And as the Prince of Peace He is finally to extend His peace throughout the entire world. He came into this world to bring peace. At His birth the angels of heaven sang, "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will toward men!" On Christ alone could universal peace be brought about. He alone can satisfy the want and need of every human heart. He is the only universal Saviour, and through Him alone can universal peace be brought about. But it must and will be through Him. His kingdom is to be a universal kingdom, and when it is universally extended there will be worldwide peace.

But we have a part in bringing about worldwide peace. It is to be brought about by the extension of Christ's kingdom. Peace is to reign "because the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." It is our mission to fill the earth with a knowledge of the Lord. In so doing we will have a part in bringing about worldwide peace.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. xxix, 11; lxxii, 1-8-17-20; Isa. xxvi, 1-4; Dan. ii, 44, 45; Matt. xiii, 31-33; Luke ii, 7-20; Rom. viii, 15-23; Eph. ii, 14-22; Rev. xxi, 23-26.

Some Distinguishing Features.

One distinguishing mark of a Society of Christian Endeavor is the prayer meeting pledge, which reads as follows:

As an active member I promise to be true to all my duties, to be present at and to take some part, aside from singing, in every meeting unless hindered by some reason which I can conscientiously give to my Lord and Master Jesus Christ. If obliged to be absent from the monthly consecration meeting, I will, if possible, send an excuse for absence to the society.

Another distinguishing feature is the committee work, especially the lookout, prayer meeting and social committees.

Another is the consecration meeting, concerning which the constitution reads:

Once each month a consecration or experience meeting shall be held, at which each active member shall speak concerning his progress in the Christian life. If any one chooses, he can express his feelings by an appropriate verse of Scripture or other quotation.

A Blessing to the Churches.

No man can measure what a blessing the Christian Endeavor society has been to the churches of this land and to individual believers. One of the many reasons why I rejoice in it is because it is not an organization outside of the church, filled with growing suspicion upon anything in the way of an organization that is not an integral part of the church of Christ.—Rev. R. A. Torrey, D. D., of Moody Bible Institute.

Enthusiasm Worth Copying.

One Sunday it was 41 degrees below zero in Winnipeg, but it could not keep the Endeavorers away from church and Sunday school.

The enthusiasm in Jamaica for the extensive campaign is, "A society in every church in the island that is in sympathy with the movement."

A Voice From India.

Millions of young lives have been redeemed and quickened to highest service in the name of the King through the simple but soldierly spirit of Christian Endeavor.—Rev. William Carey, Dacca, India.

The Flower of Endeavor.

The Junior movement is the flower of the Endeavor society. We are not doing enough for the boys and girls.—John Willis Baer.

"We, the undersigned, citizens and residents of the State of New Jersey, do hereby endorse an act regulating the practice of barbering; the licensing of persons to carry on such practice; and to ensure the better education of such practitioners; and to ensure better sanitary conditions in barber shops; and to prevent the spreading of contagious or infectious diseases; and to authorize boards of health to co-operate in securing such conditions in the State of New Jersey.

"As we believe that the present existing conditions demand the enactment of such legislation and that by the passage of such an act the interest of the public health will be improved and promoted.

"We therefore respectfully urge upon your honorable body the passage of and adoption as law of the 'New Jersey State Barbers' License and Sanitary Bill,' when introduced at this session of your Legislature."

All the barbers in the State will be asked to aid in passing the measure by subscribing amounts toward the State fund. The State association will meet in Trenton, January 17, and will visit the State House.

VILJOEN TO MARRY.

Announcement of Engagement of Boer Leader, Who Visited Plainfield as Martine's Guest.

Many Plainfielders who remember the visit to this city of General Viljoen, the great Boer leader, will be interested in an announcement of his approaching marriage to Miss Mary May Belfort, an accomplished singer, of England. The general performed valiant service in the Boer War and at one time was a prisoner under death sentence. He says that in the two nights he was imprisoned his hair turned perfectly white as a result of his worriment. He finally secured his release, his fellow Boer friends getting possession of the town and jail where he was held. Afterward the English Government offered a reward of $10,000 for his head. While in Plainfield Gen. Viljoen was the guest of James E. Martine at "Cedar Brook Farm," and he made an address in Reform Hall.

[illegible] TS GRACK TEAM

[illegible]er Johnson Already Arranging a Strong Nine for Season of 1904.

STORY OF YEAR'S WORK

BUSINESS-LIKE METHODS HAS PLACED CLUB ON A PAYING BASIS.

Balance on Hand for Opening of Season—Players at Nominal Cost —Batting Averages of the Members for Last Season.

The chilly blasts of winter cannot put a damper upon the National game of baseball at Scotch Plains. While the fans are unable to enjoy their usual weekly game Saturday afternoons, they are nevertheless active and are already planning for the work of the season of 1904. The last season was one of the best the local team has ever enjoyed. Good clean baseball was furnished and the fame of the team spread to neighboring places. This helped to enrich the treasury and the club was one of the few teams in this section that could strike a balance on the right side at the close of the season.

Ball players came high, but Manager Johnston was enabled to present one of the fastest teams in the State at a nominal cost, because when he signed the team for 1903 he guaranteed them a season of play and the result was practically the same, the team being maintained during the whole season. No fancy prices had to be paid to help strengthen with as continued practice together enabled the players to put up a much faster article of baseball than a team of stars could have done, as they would lack team practice.

Manager Johnston showed his good judgment during the summer, by hiring out-of-town umpires. This was an innovation which was convincing to the baseball public that a fair game was assured visiting teams. Expense were kept down by the management not carrying any extra players. During the twenty-three games played only fourteen players were used. The record made of eighteen victories and five defeats was encouraging to the supporters of the team, and when the season closed it was decided that the coming season Scotch Plains would have as fast a team as it is possible to get together. Manager Johnston is already scouting for the lineup for 1904. It is quite probable that many of the familiar faces will be found in their usual positions when the cry of "play ball" is heard in May. Several have already promised to don the Scotch Plains colors again. The uncertain ones are Davis, who occupied the box. "Lefty's" record during the season was swelled by some of the minor league teams and an offer was made him but he refused on account of a good position he held with the Metropolitan Traction Company, but the fans are worrying for fear this inducement offered will be too alluring and Lefty may change his mind. If not, he will no doubt be a member of the local team next season.

Secretary and Treasurer Arthur Haskard's report shows, receipts from all sources $1,598.48; expenses including grand stand and rent of grounds, $1,334.93, leaving a neat balance of $268.55.

Following is the batting averages and the number of games participated in during the season by the players:

TINIEST SHETLAND PONY.

Little Animal Owned by LeRoy Ellis Can Pass Under Parlor Table.

Probably what is the smallest Shetland pony in the State is the property of a Fanwood man, LeRoy Ellis, who purchased the little beast recently from the famous Belle Mead stock farm, near Nashville, Tenn. The animal is so small that it could pass easily beneath an ordinary parlor table. A few days ago when an attempt was made to capture it, the animal dodged beneath a milch cow, to the surprise of the cow as well as the pursuers.

Princeton Glee, Mandolin Clubs … at the Casino.

RECEIVED AN OVATION

DANCING WOUND UP NIGHT'S EVENTFUL PROGRAMME.

College Airs and Comic Opera Selections Among the Numbers at the Concert—Old Nassau Sung With Spirit—House Crowded.

Fond recollections of college days were brought to the Plainfield alumni of Old Nassau, who with five hundred others, mostly society folk, gathered Friday night at the Casino to hear the excellent concert given by the Princeton Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs. Every available seat was taken long before the well balanced programme was started. The great majority tarried until long after midnight for to the younger set especially the dance was not the least among the events of the night's entertainment.

The Plainfield Alumni Association left no means unspent to make the occasion enjoyable alike to the students and the patrons of the affair and they succeeded admirably. And on the other hand the "undergrads" did their share, the clubs being particularly kind in responding to encores. Interspersing the good old college airs were a liberal number of catchy tunes made popular at the theatrical attractions on the boards at present. Owing to the fact that the programme was not commenced until somewhat after the time designated, a few of the numbers of lesser importance were necessarily omitted.

Mention of the interior decorations should not be neglected, for the effect of the college colors adorning the walls was particularly fetching. Princeton banners above the stage faced the colors of Yale and Harvard decorating the balcony. The "tiger" was on guard between "Yale" and "Harvard."

To give a lively stir to the old college enthusiasm, which is more or less dormant in the alumnus, "Old Nassau" was sung as an opening number by the Glee Club. That it brought a tone to every heart and every voice was shown by the demonstration, to which the Club responded by pushing "the bull dog off the map." "A rag time ball" by the Banjo Club was followed by a little mixture of everything tuneful entitled "1904 Medley." Selections from one or two comic operas and musical extravaganzas were given by the Mandolin Club and the first part closed with "Fantasie-ance" by the Banjo Club, several of the selections having been encored. A step song form Carmina Principeton is by the Glee Club was the first number of the second part and this was followed in turn by "Gondolieri," by the Mandolin Club; "The 1904 Nation" by the Banjo Club; solos by Joseph R. Truesdale, leader of the Glee Club; "The White Crow" by the Banjo Club, and "Espanola Viva" by the Glee and Mandolin Clubs. Mr. Truesdale's contributions were coon songs, which he sang well, although he lacked much of the expression and effectiveness required." Espanola Viva" caught the fancy of the amused audience and received hearty applause. The major portion of the third part was omitted, but the "Triangle Song" from Carmina Principeton, rendered by the combined clubs served as a fitting climax to the concert. College yells dear to the heart of the Princetonian thundered forth from the club's members as the curtain rung down.

The dance proved to be exceedingly enjoyable and it was well managed. The patronesses were principally selected from the ranks of Plainfield's society women, who are related to graduates and undergraduates of Old Nassau. During the night's festivities, light refreshments were served. The music for the affair was furnished by Prof. Austin's orchestra of seven pieces, of New York.

RUMOR OF THREATENED CHANGE IN DEPARTMENT CAN'T BE REMOVED.

Fire department circles have been greatly exercised over a report that First Assistant Chief John W. Murray is to be practically forced out of the department. The assertion that politics enters into the matter is frequently made and the sympathy of the entire department is with the First Assistant.

There is nothing official in the report. Rumors, more or less conflicting, have been filling the air for the past month. Those "higher up" declare that the report is entirely without official confirmation and while they admit that the ousting of Mr. Murray is possible they deny its probability. Chairman Robert L. Lee, of the fire committee of the Common Council, is reported to be strongly opposed to Mr. Murray's withdrawal.

While there is no opposition to having John Coss made first assistant chief, the department is not in favor of having the place made vacant by dynamiting Murray out of his seat. Murray's record as a fireman alone entitles him to better consideration than that. During the past sixteen years he has attended at least 80 per cent. of the fires. He resuscitated the Alert Hose Company when it was all but dead and helped to give it order and system.

It is exceedingly doubtful if Murray can be forcibly removed from office without some charge being made against him and a trial accorded him. Murray stands with a clean record before the department.

TROLLEY RECORD TRIP MADE

NEWARK TO NEW BRUNSWICK THROUGH PLAINFIELD IN THREE HOURS.

A record was established for fast trolley service between Newark and New Brunswick last Friday when one of the new cars recently tested on the main line between Elizabeth and this city was run through from Newark to New Brunswick in less than three hours. The car left Newark at 9:35 and arrived in the "Muddy City" at 12:30. On the car were all the officers and directors of the company, including President Thomas N. McCarter. The trip was continued on to Trenton, the entire distance from Newark to Trenton being covered by four hours and ten minutes, which was record breaking time.

President McCarter said that the trip was merely an experiment, and he was unwilling to speak at length of it or what the company proposed to do in running its cars between Jersey City and Trenton and on to Philadelphia. It continued on to Trenton.

In New Brunswick the officials of the Public Service Corporation were joined by Superintendent Wagenhals and other officials of the Trenton line.

It is hinted that the P. S. C. is dickering for the Trenton-New Brunswick "Fast Line."

WOMEN'S MISSION BAND SALE

THE AFFAIR AT TRINITY REFORMED ATTENDED BY ATTRACTIVE FEATURES.

A sale of unusual attractiveness at Trinity Reformed Church Saturday afternoon and evening was under the auspices of the Young Women's Mission Band of the church for the benefit of mission work. The church parlor, where the fair was held, was decorated in Oriental fashion and in the evening young women, in the costumes of the far East, poured tea. Miss Grace Runnion represented Japan; Miss Emma Line was dressed in Chinese costume; Miss Grace Rowland wore the robes of India; and Miss Abbie VanCliefe represented the American Indian.

All sorts of handkerchiefs from inexpensive ones to costly lace affairs, including as especially beautiful one made by a Russian peasant, were sold at a table in charge of Miss Lillian A. Force, assisted by Mrs. David J. Krymer, Mrs. H. S. Potter and Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh. Most of the handkerchiefs were collected by the mission band during the summer.

Home made sweets of all kinds attracted many purchasers to the cake and candy table, which was in charge of the emergency committee of the mission band. Mrs. Harry Crawford, chairman, presided, and was aided by Mrs. A. Zeiss, Miss Grace Emmons, Mrs. F. S. Custer and Miss A. Searing.

The Oriental cosy corner, which was the object of much admiration, was the handiwork of W. H. Olmsted and C. F. Goldner.

The remarkable success of the fair is indicated by the fact that, though there were only two tables at which goods were sold, at least $55 was realized for the mission fund. The sale of handkerchiefs alone will add nearly $40 to the fund.

In Memoriam.

The women of Garfield League desire to express in this public manner, their sorrow at the great loss they have sustained, in the death of Mrs. Laura I. Bodine.

"Faithful unto death" most appropriately voices what she has been to the organization ever since its formation twenty years ago. She was one of its charter members, and its honored and efficient secretary during all those years. Sister Bodine was not only gifted in the use of her pen, but possessed in an eminent degree the spirit of patriotism, which she inherited, no doubt from her dear old father, Comrade Thomas M. MacDonald who served his country for three years during the war of the Rebellion, as a member of Co. I, 3d Regiment, N. J. Vol., and also from her brother, Benjamin MacDonald, one of "McAllister's Boys," of Co. D. 11th Regiment, N. J. Vol., who gave his young life to his country early in the struggle, and sleeps in a soldier's grave at Alexandria, Va. May the Great Commander above bless and comfort the husband, daughters and father of the loved one, called so suddenly to her everlasting home, and may those of us who remain, be as ready as our sister was to answer the summons when our turn comes to join the Grand Army above. "Be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

…have …ry of State … New Republic.

…SIRE TO ANNEX THE COUNTRY

President Was Instrumental by Congress to Secure a Route For the Canal on the Old Route if Possible, and He Had Done So.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—Assistant Secretary of State Loomis at the dinner of the Quill club at the Hotel Manhattan here last night delivered the following address, which bears the authority of an official statement:

"The government has not desired to annex Panama and has not done so. The president simply executed the will of the American people, with due regard to international law and rights. He was instructed by congress to secure a canal route on the isthmus of Panama if possible. He waited until the adjournment of the Colombian congress and gave the government of that country every opportunity to ratify the treaty or to propose some proper method looking to the ratification of a new treaty, and the Colombian congress, in utter bad faith, rejected the treaty and adjourned.

"In less than a week's time and before the president could reasonably be expected to turn to grave consideration of the Nicaragua route the long expected and inevitable revolution in Panama came to pass. The people arose as one man, and in thorough accord, without the firing of a single shot, unresisted, they quietly established a government of their own. They had thrice been independent, and the right of secession was, I believe, expressly stipulated in some of their constitutions.

"The president directed our meager naval force ashore, consisting of forty marines, to do what they could to preserve peace, order and unimpeded transit across the isthmus. He promptly recognized the de facto government as soon as he learned that it was in peaceful possession of the country. This is the usual and necessary proceeding. We have on many occasions recognized new governments with an equal degree of celerity and promptness. I state the republic of Panama was given full recognition. We are acting fairly and lawfully under the treaty of 1846. The administration, I am sure, has no apologies to offer for its course.

"We were more deeply interested and more directly in the guarantee contained in the treaty of 1846 than New Granada was or any other country. That treaty was negotiated for the purpose of securing to us certain canal privileges. We in turn agreed to guarantee the neutrality of the isthmus, to keep transit open and to keep foreign aggressors at a distance. We have carried out the letter and the spirit of our part of the agreement. We have performed generously and faithfully all of the duties laid upon us and at times greatly to our disadvantage and very great cost. Colombia, on the other hand, seems to have shirked most of her obligations.

"The rejection of the treaty at Bogota was an unfriendly act from the viewpoint of international law. Colombia appealed to us to enter into a treaty to build a canal, the treaty was negotiated with her in a most liberal spirit on our part and was published by the Colombian government and congress without debate. The executive branch of the government, which had negotiated it, did not try to secure its ratification. It became evident shortly after the opening of the Colombian congress in June that there was not the least intention of ratifying the Hay-Herran treaty. The belief seems to have been widely current in Bogota that the United States could not or would not build a canal by any other than the Panama route.

"It occurred to certain men in Bogota that the United States could be made to pay $20,000,000 or $25,000,000 instead of $10,000,000, or, better still, as has been published in the public and official correspondence, if the treaty were rejected or no action taken upon it and the whole matter postponed for another year, the concession of the present French canal company having expired by that time, the refusal of that concession would be declared invalid and all the rights, privileges and work of the French canal company be practically confiscated and disposed of to the United States for $40,000,000 in addition to the $10,000,000 as proposed and the annuity of $250,000. This was a radiant and alluring prospect, and the temptation proved too strong.

"This particular phase of canal history and the possible consequences of the action of the Colombian government in rejecting the treaty have not been exhaustively discussed. If you will consider it carefully you will see that out of the conditions created by the failure of the Colombians to ratify the treaty and their amply grounded belief that they could invalidate the renewal of the concession of the French company and sell that concession to the United States for $40,000,000, out of these possibilities came one of our strongest needs for prompt and vigorous action when the opportunity was offered by the revolution in Panama on Nov. 3.

"Reflect for a moment on the grave possibilities which confronted this government at its ingress into the future and sought to prevent by intelligently forecasting the many serious complications and contingencies which the president foresaw. If the revolution in Panama had not occurred, if the American people guided by the opinions of its most learned, efficient and highly trained engineers, continued to think the Nicaragua route an impracticable one, if the people and congress of this country … wait for a year or … such time as the politicians at Bogota were ready to negotiate a new canal treaty and in the meantime their congress had declared invalid the renewal of the French concession, what might have happened on the isthmus? I may safely assert without fear of contradiction by any well informed person that the government of France would not have stood serenely by and witnessed the pillage of thousands of her people through the act which Bogota politicians devised for the looting of the French company of $40,000,000.

"The moment that the cables flashed from Bogota to Paris the astounding news that the extension of the French concession was canceled a French squadron from Martinique would have borne down upon the isthmus and perhaps landed marines at Colon and sent them across the isthmus to Panama and along the line of the canal to protect the interests and property of French citizens. There would in all probability have been an armed conflict between France and Colombia or France at least would have felt herself compelled to hold the isthmus for a long period. This would have wrought immediately and poignantly upon the sensibilities of the American people in respect to the Monroe doctrine, and we should no doubt have found ourselves viewing France with annoying apprehension. The French warships might easily have been followed by those of England and Holland, and Panama, like the Balkan states, might well have been expected to furnish the spark to set half the world in flames.

"This situation which I have described, fraught with real and momentous dangers, furnished one of the very serious possibilities which the administration had to reckon with in dealing with the revolution in Panama. When you keenly grasp the full sense of imminent danger of foreign complications which confronted the president and the plainly evident truth that no justice, generosity, fair dealing or business-like consideration could be obtained from Colombia; when you consider further our obligations under the treaty of 1846 and the opportunity afforded to put an end to the long series of sanguinary and enfeebling revolutions which have wasted the resources and arrested the progress of the isthmus; when you recall Colombia's 'dog in the manger' attitude and the salient, dangerous, pressing exigencies of the situation which confronted this government upon the night of Nov. 3 I think you may well be glad that there was in Washington upon this truly fateful occasion a man who possessed the insight, the knowledge, the spirit and the courage to seize the opportunity to strike a blow the results of which can be fraught only with peace and good to the whole world.

"One of the most significant and valuable results of our action in respect to Panama will be the immediate and direct lesson and the enduring moral effect which our supremacy on the isthmus will bring to the eyes of certain people who are in sore need of instruction in the practice of peaceful pursuits and orderly administration. It also would be hard without words to help these people clearly to understand in dealing with the United States that there is a limit to the patience and the forbearance of this government.

"Happily all of the Latin-Americans are not like, and all do not offend in these particulars. There are many good and enlightened people among them. We have the best of feeling for them all. As I have said, we have been tolerant, generous and sympathetic in the past and we will maintain this line of conduct in the future. From some of the citizens of these countries we have received encouragement, assistance, intelligent appreciation and cordial approval. We have left nothing undone to show our good will and unselfish purpose. We have respected the rights and sovereignty of every government when possible to do so.

"We have tried to help our friends in Central and South America who wanted to be helped and were willing to be helped by us to become strong and efficient commonwealths. We want them to attain great prosperity and power. We wish all of our neighbors well, and we want all of them to be plenteously endowed with the blessings of peace No republic to the south of us can become too rich, potent and self sustaining to suit the kindly purpose of this country. Everywhere among the people of Latin-America we want the spirit of liberty to thrive and have its being. We want to feel that they are profiting by what is noble and true in our national life.

"In this sense at least we hope to be paramount throughout the new world. We are the American republic. We know that honest toil is dignified and ennobling; we want them to entertain a spirit of toleration in all matters; we want the ideas of civil and religious liberty and free education to have wide scope and abundant opportunity, and we desire all of our Latin-American friends heartily to join us in urging, supporting and vitalizing the principle of international arbitration.

"In these peaceful ways it is the desire of this government in Americanize the new world and perhaps the old, but not by the power of the almighty dollar, not by the urgency of trade demands, not by any manifestation or display of force, but rather by the more potent and enduring means of the dissemination of those lofty, civilizing agencies, those great principles, those the ideals, those substantial virtues, upon which our country was founded and upon which it has continuously thrived and had its well being."

THE DOVER BOILER WORKS REPRIMANDED

The Somerset and Union County Boards of Freeholders Adopted Resolutions.

A SCATHING REBUKE

CONCERN FAILED TO LIVE UP TO THE TIME CONTRACTED TO BUILD BRIDGE.

Notice Given That the Girard Avenue Structure Must be Ready for Use by End of the Year—The Company's Excuses.

The Dover Boiler Works was severely censured by the Boards of Freeholders of Union and Somerset Counties, in special meeting Friday, because of the non-fulfillment of their contract to provide the structural iron work for the new Girard avenue bridge. The scathing rebuke administered by the Boards was voiced in the following resolutions which were sent to the works:

"Whereas, owing to the unbusiness like action of the Dover Boiler Works, and their numerous and trivial excuses for delay in completing their contract respecting the Girard avenue bridge;

"Therefore be it resolved, that it is the sense of the joint meeting of the Boards of Somerset and Union Counties that the Dover Boiler Works be notified that unless the girders, etc., for the Girard avenue bridge be put in place at their own expense and a safe and convenient passage for public travel thereon be made on or before December 31, 1903, that said contract be then cancelled; and further that the said Dover Boiler Works be held responsible in every particular for all damages; and that this notice in no sense so be considered as a waiver to any claim which we now, or may hereafter have thereunder.

"And be it resolved that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Dover Boiler Works forthwith."

The bridge was to have been completed by September first; that is the Dover Iron Works should have had the structural iron work on the spot ready for the contractors and masons to go ahead with the work. The first delay was occasioned when the Dover concern shipped some inferior iron work to this city, only to have it refused by Engineer Hubbard. Numerous other delays have been experienced by the contractors in this city and the foregoing ultimatum was sent, demanding that the bridge be put in a passable condition by December 31, to which date the Boards adjourned.

If the bridge is not in such a condition that vehicles may safely pass over it by that time, the Dover concern will forfeit any amount of damages which may be sustained by the county through the imperfect construction of the bridge. The counties hold the bonds of $1,000 provided by the company.

There were present at the meeting the entire Board of Somerset County and the bridge committee of the Union County Board, which is composed of Freeholders William A. Westphal, chairman; Joseph McCandless, John Rohlson, of Fanwood; Noah Woodruff, of Roselle Park; E. K. Adams, of Cranford; County Engineer J. Frank Hubbard and County Attorney William A. Codington.

Husband Not Guilty.

The case of Mrs. Watson O. Emery, of Lincoln, against her husband, who lives in Newark, on a charge of threats, was heard Saturday afternoon before Justice VanMinden at Dunellen. Lawyer W. T. Sandford represented Mrs. Emery and Coddington & Swackhamer the husband. The defendant was acquitted.

Unitarian's Bazaar Abandoned.

Rather than go to the expense and trouble attending upon the annual bazaar, the women of the Unitarian Church have decided not to hold that event this year. Instead the needed amount of money has been contributed by the women and other members of the church.

MT. OLIVE CHURCH A SEPARATE INSTITUTION

Will Become Such at Beginning of Year, Severing Relations With First Baptist.

RESULT OF FRICTION

COLORED PEOPLE NOT SATISFIED TO BE GOVERNED BY WHITE BRETHERN.

Expressed Dissatisfaction Because They Couldn't Chose Their Sunday-School Superintendent and Arrange Their Summer Outings.

After being under the guidance and receiving the assistance of the First Baptist Church for nearly twenty years, the members of the Mt. Olive Baptist Church (colored) will, beginning January 1, launch forth upon their own resources. This they will do believing that they have gained sufficient financial means to carry out their much-desired plans. In making this change the members will dissolve their relationship with the First Baptist Church and will elect their own church and Sunday-school officers, and, in every way govern themselves.

For some time past there has been a feeling of unrest on the part of some of the members of the Mount Olive Church on account of a supposed restraint placed upon their actions. The First Baptist Church has never attempted to govern them so far as church matters are concerned, except at times when advice and assistance have been sought, but the Sunday-school has for twenty years been under the direct supervision of the First Baptist Church, which from year to year has chosen the superintendent.

For many years S. B. Joseph filled this position and during the past sixteen years M. C. Dobbins has held the place, being re-appointed each year. Associated with him have been a number of white teachers, including Miss Cole, Miss Thickstun, Miss May E. Howlett, N. H. Saxton and others. There have also been a few colored teachers. The school has always prospered. Each year the effort has been to make it more self-sustaining, but there have been occasions when financial assistance was necessary from the First Baptist Church. The latter church has always given the school a Christmas entertainments and a trip on the annual excursion to the seashore.

Some of the colored members have desired to arrange their own summer outing, instead of going with the white people, while others have been perfectly satisfied with the usual arrangement. The planning for these outings has been attended with more or less friction. Now, the officers of the Baptist Church have decided that if the colored church desires to govern itself it can do so. Every effort will be made to give the church a good start the first of the year.

According to the deed of the Mt. Olive Church property the members can do as they please with it, except to mortgage or sell it. The church has recently been greatly improved through the aid of money subscribed by many white folks and by contributions of its members.

M. C. Dobbins, as well as several of the white teachers, will return to the First Baptist Church, where they will continue their interest in the Sunday-school work, their places to be filled entirely by colored persons. The pastor, Rev. E. E. Jackson, will have general supervision of the church and school. Before the change goes into effect the Mt. Olive Church may communicate with the First Baptist Church, and the latter body will then vote to sever the relationship. This action will be taken within a short time.

Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, whose name is mentioned by Andrew P. Carter, of New York, in an answer filed by him to Mrs. Carter's injunction suit now pending in Chattanooga, Tenn., with the names of Col. Pope, the bicycle manufacturer, and W. Preston Harrison, brother of Mayor Carter Harrison, of Chicago, as having been on a footing of undue friendliness with Mrs. Carter, said yesterday that Mr. Carter's course was absolutely unjustified, and said that there was no possible excuse for coupling his name with hers. Gen. Sickles spent the summer of 1901 at the Hotel Netherwood and is well known in this city.

New Sewer's Completion.

James Maybury & Sons, of Passaic, who have be encngaged in building an extension of the sewer system in this city, five miles in length, will complete the work in about ten days, provided the weather is favorable. During the course of the work much delay has been caused by the trouble in securing pipe.

WORK AHEAD FOR COMMON COUNCIL

Annual Reports of the Various Departments of the City Government to be Presented.

REORGANIZATION JAN. 1

APPOINTMENTS TO BE MADE BY MAYOR JENKINS.

Selection of Committees An Important Matter—Some Changes That Will be Made—Ralph I. Tolles Likely to be President.

At the adjourned meetings of the Common Council to be held tonight and Tuesday night, December 29, business tending toward the close of the year's municipal affairs will be considered. This will include the presentation of the various reports from the committees, as well as city officials. As the past year has been a busy one in many respects, the annual reports should be of much interest. There has been the introduction of the Gamewell Police Patrol system, an extension of the sanitary system of sewage, municipal street sprinkling, improvements in the poor department, and many other things of more or less importance. All of these things will come in for a share of notice in the reports.

Then there will be the reports of Chief Doane, of the fire department, as well as that of building inspector; Chief Kelly, of the police department; Street Commissioner Gavett, City Judge William N. Runyon, City Treasurer W. F. Arnold, City Collector F. H. Smith and a host of other reports. It is predicted that these reports will show the city to be in fine condition financially and otherwise and that the Council for 1904 will have no cause for regret.

According to the State law the new Council will have to meet on the night of January 1 to organize. It is not likely that much else will be done, as this date falls on a holiday. At that meeting the Mayor's message will be received as well as his appointments. While there are not many appointments to be made, considerable interest will be manifested in these. It has been reported that Assessor J. A. Hubbard is to be retired in favor of Harry B. MacDonald. In view of this many petitions have been circulated in an effort to to keep Mr. Hubbard in office. What effect these will have with the Mayor remains to be seen.

Another matter arousing much interest is that relative to the appointment of J. W. Murray, Jr., as an officer in the fire department, which position he has held for many years. It has been reported that John Cose is slated for this position. This has stirred Mr. Murray's friends and they declare that they will not see him "turned down" without a just cause, and no just cause can be given. Both the change in the Board of Assessors as well as the fire department is reported to be in the line of rewards for services performed at the last election, as the two men named for the positions are known to be workers in the faction that controls the city.

Another interesting features in the organization of the new Council will be the selection of committees. The new body will be composed of seven new members, allowing for a varied distribution. It is hinted that some changes are to be made that will be a surprise. It is generally conceded that Ralph I. Tolles will be the new president, unless he should decide to remain on the floor for another year. He has been a valuable member of the streets and sewer committee and if he accepts the presidency his loss will be felt. He will be the oldest member of the Council and one best acquainted with that work. Just who would be called upon to accept the chairmanship of that important committee is not known.

It is quite likely that Mr. Lee will remain as chairman of the fire committee and Mr. Daniel as chairman of the finance committee, both having proved their usefulness, while Mr. Randolph will probably retain the chairmanship of the police committee. There are a number of changes to be made and much business is in prospect for 1904. Wise action is therefore necessary and there seems to be plenty of material to fill the various positions to be vacated.

Mrs. J. H. Thompson, of Orange, has been visiting relatives in Plainfield for several days.

WM. BUTLER YEATS ON CELTIC REVIVAL

Distinguished Irish Scholar Tells of the Effort to Return to Gaelic Tongue.

A POET AND DRAMATIST

SONGS AND CUSTOMS OF THE ANCIENT PEOPLE DWELT UPON.

Effort Being Made to Establish a National Theatre in Dublin—Facts About Irish Literature—The Purity of Their Art.

William Butler Yeats, the Irish poet and dramatist, lectured Tuesday at the Park Club before a good-sized audience. Mr. Yeats is the leader of the Celtic revival in Ireland the revival of the Irish language, literature and customs, a movement coincident with the efforts of Dr. Douglas Hyde in the Gaelic league.

Mr. Yeats explained the meaning of the revival of the Irish tongue, which to the unobservant might appear retrogressive, shutting off Ireland from much of the fruits of modern thought conveyed with such nicety by the English language. "In separation all things grow," said the Irishman, indicating wherein Ireland was losing its identity and aping Englishmen in thought, customs and dress, through its neglect to maintain a national language and the national folk lore. Through the revival of the language, the old songs have been re-sung, the old spirit of patriotism re-awakened.

The efforts for a national theatre in Dublin and a national drama have aroused the highest enthusiasm. Irish audiences have passion. Irish dramatists are not required to work down to languid audiences and this gives them the power of expressing the highest that is in them with a surety of intense appreciation.

Ireland through the new movement is preserving its own, resisting imitation, creating powerful personalities and defiant wills. It is barking back to its old folk-songs, the ancient songs of love and battle, the fairy lore of the middle ages, the songs that make a people of culture, that make possible the great lyric, the great drama or epic. These are the songs that are oftenest preserved by being sung rather than written, for, said Mr. Yeats, the written book need not be the chief instrument of literature.

Mr. Yeats referred to the writings of some of the Irishmen more closely identified with the Gaelic movement, O'Leary, Johnson and Rousell. He read selections from some of their works as well as two or three of his own poems, one of which in particular was beautiful in its simplicity and its purity of diction. Mr. Yeats' own dramatic company in Dublin is playing this winter three of his own plays in verse and three in prose.

The speaker compared the folk lore, the songs of an ancient people, with the music ball song that is sung in other nations to the exclusion of songs of literary value. He referred to the middle class poems of Mrs. Hemans and Macaulay, poems wherein the intellect speaks rather than the soul, which are written not for the pure love of singing for one's self, but to please others. He described the naivete of the works of present day Irish poets, their nobleness of simplicity, the purity of their art that means a cultured people behind it. He compared it with the drama "Everyman" brought from the fifteenth century and played in this country last year.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL EXERCISES

Address by Rev. E. V. Stevenson and Recitations and Songs the Features.

DAILY PRESS BANNER

AWARD OF TROPHIES WON AT RECENT INTER-CLASS ATHLETIC MEET.

Exercises in the Grammar and Primary Departments—Gifts Exchanged by Pupils—Chorus Singing Part of Programme.

The presentation of athletic prizes and honors won last fall by pupils at the High School was the leading feature of the Christmas exercises at the school this morning. The individual winners in the fall field meet received their ribbons and Harry G. Thompson was awarded a silver medal for winning the individual athletic championship of the school. A banner in red and blue, the school colors, was presented to the class of 1905, which won first honors in the fall athletic meet. The banner, appropriately inscribed in gold letters, was given by The Daily Press. P. H. S. insignia were awarded the members of the school teams who won the honor in the season's athletics. In awarding the silver cup given by Schwed Brothers and won by the classes of 1906 and 1907 in the Plainfield junior league, the presentation address was made by Harold Robert.

The Christmas exercises were held this morning at 11 o'clock. The Assembly Hall was decorated with bunting and ribbon in the several class colors, making the occasion one of special attractiveness and animation.

This was the programme: Anthem, Prepare ye the Way of the Lord, Garrett; declamation, The Spirit of Christmas, by Ralph Eckert; anthem, Christian, Awake! Salute the Happy Morn," Schnecker; recitation, The Triumph of Ole Bull, Miss Emily Winans; solo and double quartette, The Birthday of the King, Charles L. Lewis, the Misses Newman, Patton, Meador and VanDeventer, Messrs. Fenne, Anderson, Babcock and Titsworth; chorus, Christmas Hymn, Brick; recitation, The King and the Fool, Miss Lillian A. Walsh; anthem and solo, There Were Shepherds, Buck; solo, by Mrs. McDonald.

Chorus, Nazareth, Gounod, by students of the school. Presentation to the school of a colored photograph of "Washington Crossing the Delaware." Presentation address by Francis K. Anderson; acceptance, by VanWyck Brooks; anthem, See Now the Altar, Faure, address by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson.

Anthem, Sing, O Heavens, Tours. At the conclusion of this programme the senior class gathered on the platform and followed the usual custom of giving presents to the junior class. Each present was accompanied by a piece of poetry of a whitty character.

On account of the cramped conditions at the Franklin School the exercises were not elaborate. The programme consisted of Bible reading, stories, by Miss N. J. Bullock, and carols. The exercises at the Lincoln and Washington public schools were held this morning.

In the Bryant School this was the programme: Singing by the school, Scripture reading, prayer, carols, recitations and songs by Clementine Bramble, Lillie Remppies, Harry Carey, Isabel Harvey, Marguerite Hopp, Hazel Putnam, Herbert Schreiner, William Wheelan, Hasel Runyon, Helen Weseman, Leonard Lewis, Elsa Helle, Ethel Naylor, Mary Coughlan, Helen Meaney, Arthur Lewis, Kitty Dolly and I. Marguerite Hope, John Harris, Eleanor Sperry, Katharine Bingaman.

Special Christmas exercises were held this morning at the Irving Public School, consisting of songs by the school and recitations by these children, under the direction of Miss Perrine, the principal:

At the same time the members of the kindergarten had a Christmas tree with exercises in the Epworth House of the Monroe Avenue Church. This afternoon, the first primary, under the direction of Miss Mary Griswold, Miss Elizabeth White and Miss Lillian Glen were in charge of the kindergarten exercises.

The pupils in the Seventh B grade at the Whittier Public School had lots of fun yesterday in an exchange of gifts. The presents were of small value and were intended only as an exchange of good wishes among the members of the class. Some received jumping-jacks, others got candy, pictures, while one member received a small toy pickle. The opening of the various packages caused no end of fun and the programme was a happy diversion.

CREPE PAPER IGNITED

FLAMES EXTINGUISHED WITHOUT THE FIREMEN'S AID.

Communion Table, Pulpit Platform Carpet, Pastor's Chair and Pulpit Desk Damaged—Young People Put Out the Flames.

While the committee on Christmas decorations was engaged in arranging these decorations at the First Presbyterian Church, last night, considerable excitement was caused by a fire which resulted in about $500 damage. The young people were about to place a large design of crepe paper in front of the organ, when one end of it caught fire from a burning gas jet. In an instant the paper was in a blaze, and articles dropped here and there about the front of the church, resulting in damage to the communion table, pulpit platform carpet, pastor's chair, pulpit desk and several cushions in the front seats.

Those present immediately began the work of extinguishing the fire, and a still alarm was sent to fire headquarters. Before the firemen arrived the fire was about out and there was nothing for them to do. No one is blamed for the accident, it being the result of general thoughtlessness.

MOSE IN A MELODRAMA

PATROLMAN QUAAS SAVES DRUNKEN MAN FROM HORRIBLE DEATH.

The fortune that is said to favor drunken men came to the aid of Henry Stephany last night and probably saved him from a horrible death. The man was found by Patrolman Moses Quaas at 7:10 o'clock lying in a drunken stupor with his body across the tracks near the North avenue railroad station. A few minuets later a heavy freight passed by that would have ground his body to a pulp. Stephany was released this morning on suspended sentence.

LABOR UNION MEN FEAST

LEADERS DISCUSS PLANS FOR JOINING STATE LABOR ORGANIZATION.

G. M. Ward, of Jersey City, representing the State Trades Council, was in attendance at the dinner given at the Hotel Arlington, in the borough, last night, when the question of whether or not the local trades council should join the state councils was discussed. John P. Cosgrove, of Elizabeth, was also present. Mr. Cosgrove is the secretary of the State league and he also made an address, advocating the local council coming into the state organization.

About thirty members of the local Council and representatives of the various unions were present and nearly all of them took part in the discussion which followed the speech made by Agitator Ward.

The meeting was presided over by Clarence Mundy, president of the local Trades Council. He introduced the speaker, who showed the advantages of joining the State league.

Y. M. C. A. Xmas Dinner.

The Christmas dinner at the Y. M. C. A., given by the boys' department to some of their friends less favored of fortune, is in charge of the boys' work committee, Orra S. Rogers, chairman. The committee will be assisted by some of the members of the local bands of King's Daughters.

Good Skating.

Although there has been a thaw in this locality for the past few days, the skating yesterday and today is fine on some of the ponds. On Tier's pond the ice is rather rough in places, but at New Market the pond is covered with a sheeting of smooth, hard ice.

"LARRY" IN VAUDEVILLE

OLD STAGER IN HIS CUPS SHOWS REAL FIGHT WHEN ARRESTED.

The spectacle of a drunken man and a police officer struggling, and swaying back and forth in the patrol wagon, now and then coming perilously near to rolling out to the street, furnished excitement last night at about 8:30 o'clock. "Larry" Wallace, the old stager, was the drunk and he gave the police a bad quarter of an hour before they could get him behind the bars.

Patrolman Messler made the arrest at the corner of Park avenue and East Second street, after a lively fight in which Wallace, in a drunken frenzy, threw the policeman and Constable Walters, who assisted him, all over the sidewalk. After being lifted into the patrol wagon, Wallace began another fight with Patrolman Higgins, who with difficulty held him under until police headquarters was reached.

Wallace was sent to Elizabeth for thirty days this morning by City Judge Runyon.

CITY TO RECEIVE BIG FRANCHISE TAX

Amount Due Plainfield $4,113,23, Which is Nearly Double That of Last Year.

INCREASED VALUATIONS

CORPORATION PROPERTY HAS BECOME A MORE VALUABLE ASSET.

Electric Light and Gas Company Pays Over $2,000, While Trolley Gives $992.00—Telephone's Debt $146.74.

Tax Collector Frank Smith has received the annual notice of apportionment of taxes due this city under the franchise act. There is a noticable increase in the amount this year, due in a measure to increased valuation in corporation property. The total sum is $4,118.23, which is $2,111.17 more than last year.

Itemized, it is as follows:

Public Service Corporation, $992.57; Plainfield Water Supply Company, $579.63; Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, $2,183; Postal Telegraph Company, $.29; New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, $146.74. The Public Service Corporation is relieved of paying into the city the amount charged against it as a franchise taxes, because it already pays much more than that amount into the city for licenses. The object of the franchise tax is to protect cities and communities against officials who might give away valuable franchises free. The tax then gives the city some compensation for the use of the grants. In this city, the trolley company is obliged to pay a license fee which is in effect a franchise tax, although it is more than the State apportions.

Compared with the figures of a year ago there is a great increase in the valuation of corporation property in this city. The franchise tax of 1902 was itemized as follows: Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, $1,876.47; New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, $107.03; Postal Telegraph Company, $.21. The water company is not included in this list because of a peculiar controversy between the borough and city which resulted in the tax being paid over to the North Plainfield borough. This, however, was eventually settled, the city of Plainfield receiving $8.35.29, or $45, 69 cents more than is apportioned the city in the tax rate of this year.

A year ago the franchise tax list was itemized as follows: Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, $1,934.93; Postal Telegraph Company, $.14 and the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, $203.36.

ORPHANAGE SAID TO BE SURE

COLORED INSTITUTION IN EXCLUSIVE SECTION OF CITY TO OPEN APRIL 1.

Rev. Scott Wallace, Spencer Conway, Rev. J. W. Mitchell and Mansfield Robinson, who have been chosen as a committee to carry out the plans for the establishment of an orphanage and refuge at the corner of Prospect avenue and Rahway road, say that the home would be established unless white people succeed in getting the property away from them. The deal for the property has been made through a local lawyer, who for the present refuses to allow his name to be used, and Mr. Wallace says he has received several subscriptions of $1,000 each from several persons.

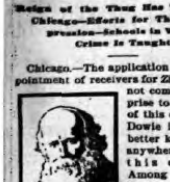
OUR CHICAGO LETTER

The Financial Mystery of Zion City Is Still Unsolved.

DOWIE AND HIS CREDITORS

Reign of the Thug Has Terrorized Chicago—Efforts for Their Suppression—Schools in Which Crime Is Taught.

Chicago.—The application for the appointment of receivers for Zion City did not come as a surprise to the people of this city, where Dowie is probably better known than anywhere else in this country. Among the unbelievers a financial smash of great magnitude had been the general prediction for some months.



John Alexander Dowie

Zion City has been a mystery. In fact, it is still a mystery. The curiosity of the public has been fed with a mass of figures representing bills against Dr. Dowie, with estimates of possible assets, with figures given by the general overseer himself as to his financial standing; but there has been but little that gives anything like a clear insight into the ways and methods of Zion.

In fact, the mystery has but deepened because of the seeming failure placed in the institution and its head by the *conc*erns having claims against it. Before the receivers were appointed more than 50 firms had filed suits against Dowie for goods furnished him. What they were asking were judgments, the forcible collection of which would have meant the appointment of receivers, and yet when the receivers are appointed they protest against it, and the majority ask that the receivership be dissolved, and that the venerable head of the Christian Catholic church be permitted to continue his operations.

It looks very much as though these men, at least, now understand the financial possibilities of Zion; that they have been given an insight into the methods of Dowie, and that he shall be in a position to pay if let alone. Dowie, himself, claims assets of more than $14,000,000 over and above his liabilities, and says he is in no way financially embarrassed. The receivership is expensive, and if Zion is solvent, it but helps to eat up the funds that might otherwise go to creditors, and force the community into bankruptcy. The whole thing is a mystery from which the public have gained but little light.

The Tithes.

It is more than possible that the creditors see an opportunity in the tithes being paid in to Dowie. Among the estimates that have been given out is one relating to this part of Dowie's income, and it says the contributions of the faithful amount to some $7,560 monthly. This, probably, accounts for many things that have before been so deep a mystery. It may account for the payment of dividends on lace factory stock which have, as a rule, been paid promptly.

To imagine that these tithes come exclusively from the poor is to make a grave mistake. Since the present troubles at Zion City began it has been demonstrated that all of Dowie's followers are neither illiterate or poverty stricken. Before the receivers had been in charge a tree climber, a mysterious stranger, said to be a wealthy Milwaukee banker, was on the ground with offers of assistance to the extent of $200,000. This was not advertised as a gift, but as a loan from his personal resources of the banker. Another offer of $50,000 came from a New York woman who was willing to trust the general overseer with that amount at five per cent. interest, and who evidently did so, not from motives of gain, but because of belief in Dowie.

From the fact that a majority of the creditors protested against the continuance of the receivership, it is evident that whether the merchants with whom he does business believe in his religious claims or not, they do believe in his ability to raise funds when they are needed, and that they prefer to take their chances on his ability to do so rather than have the available assets disposed of as they will bring. They believe Dowie in power is a valuable asset.

Reign of the Thug.

The capture and confession of the street car barn murderers has produced a new season of morality in Chicago. The thugs are being hunted down, and either driven from the city or confined within the walls of the bridewell—for a period.

In Line of Duty

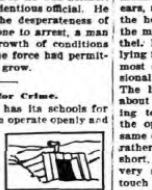
And it is time. Eight policemen killed within a period of three years is the record of the thugs in that line alone. It would take much larger figures to tell the number of murders of civilians committed if I had the statistics. It had reached the point where the policeman took his life in his hands every time he went on duty. The patrolman and the detective were both exposed to the unerring aim of the murderous thug.

There is no doubt that the Chicago police force is far from a model one in many respects. The Hermann "graft" committee investigations have proven that some of the force are not above taking "protection" money from the vicious classes, and it is this protection which has brought about the reign of the thug in the city. But on the other hand there are as brave men on the Chicago police force, men as true to their duty to the public which they serve, as may be found in any other city in America, and it is the true man who has suffered for the shortcomings of the faithless ones.

Detective Quinn was one of the true men. He was neither a fool nor a coward. He met death in the performance of duty. As did seven others of his companions of the force within the last three years. Had he shot Marx without warning, and without the confession Marx afterwards made, he would have been criticised as being "too free with his gun." When he did not do so and suffered the penalty the public called him a fool for letting a bad man get the best of him. But he was neither. He was just a conscientious official. He knew nothing of the desperateness of the man he had gone to arrest, a man who was the outgrowth of conditions the unfaithful of the force had permitted and assisted to grow.

Schools for Crime.

Every large city has its schools for crime. Some of them operate openly and are well supported by the general public. Such, for instance, is the dime museum, which finds its opportunity in catering to the morbid curiosity of the public.



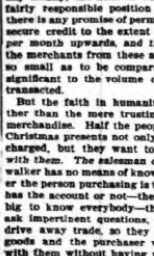
Educating the Small Boy

Almost as fine are the companions of Marx had been landed behind the bars of the police station the night of the shooting which he had made so desperate a stand in the sand dunes of Indiana was on exhibition in Chicago. The exhibition of this was quickly followed by the exhibition of the sweetheart of Van Dorel, the public flocked to see both of these objects. They were especially attractive to the small boy of the city, and around them he built a romance, with the murderers as the heroes. Since their exhibition every open lot of Chicago has witnessed a rehearsal of the Indiana tragedy that has brought out all the inert viciousness of the average small boy, and has started many of them on the road to crime. The city council propose to put a stop to exhibiting this kind, and when it does so it will have closed one of the schools for crime in this city.

The all-night saloon is another of these schools for crime; the dance hall that is open to the drunken revelers of a city at all hours of the night is yet another. Both of these are, for a time, under the ban. If they stay closed two other of Chicago's schools for crime will have passed out of existence. Take away from the small boy the yellow-back novel and still another will have been removed. This making heros of criminals is but the making of criminals of boys who otherwise might be heroes.

Faith in Humanity.

That Chicago is not all bad is proven by the trust the State street merchants place in humanity. At no time in the year is this trust so exemplified as during the holiday shopping season.



Issuing a Charge

At the stores where the better class of trade is catered to the "charge" account is the rule rather than the exception. During the month of December, especially, more money goes onto the books than into the cash drawer. The people buy Christmas presents and have them charged, and the merchants trust them.

It is not a hard matter, this opening an account with the big stores. Almost any family, the head of which holds a fairly responsible position in which there is any promise of permanency, can secure credit to the extent of from $25 per month upwards, and the losses to the merchants from these accounts are so small as to be comparatively insignificant to the volume of business transacted.

But the faith in humanity goes further than the mere trusting them for merchandise. Half the people who buy Christmas presents have not the means charged, but they want to take them with them. The salesman or the clerk-walker has no means of knowing whether the person purchasing is the one who has the account or not—the town is too big to know everybody—they cannot ask impertinent questions, that would drive away trade, so they deliver the goods and the purchaser walks away with them without having paid a cent, and upon their own guarantee that they have an account and will pay the bill the first of the month. There is no other city in the world where the merchants place so much faith in humanity.

LITTLE MEADOW MICE

The Naturalist Finds in Them as Interesting Subject.

How One Industrious Creature Tunneled Under His Bootleg —Nest Full of Baby Mice.

It was a bright morning in the late summer, and, clad in rubber hip boots and a waterproof coat, I lay in the wet grass at the edge of a swamp watching a family of muskrats, who were busy with some work which I was anxious to see more of. But they were not in the least interested in my observations, and inconsiderately moved away long before I had finished with them. I was about to follow when something moving in the grass nearby attracted my attention. There was something creeping its way along under some matted dead grass, which heaved up every few moments, as it was pushed upward with irregular jerky movements. Presently, at a spot where the grass was thin, there was poked out a little dark-brown head with a blunt, bewhiskered, trembling muzzle, black, beady eyes, and short ears, almost buried in the fur. It was the head of a meadow mouse, one of the myriad little beings which live their harmless, quiet lives in our lowlying fields and meadows, and of which most of us see nothing save an occasional specimen brought in by the cat. The little creature before me looked about for a moment, and, seeing nothing to alarm her, came boldly into the open. Her body, which was the same color as her head, was round and rather stout, and terminated in a very short, straight tail. The legs were also very short, and the body seemed to touch ground as the little creature moved. She nosed about for a few moments, and then stood upright on her hind legs, with her forepaws hanging down in front, turning her head first this way and then that, in order to get a good view of her surroundings. Nothing alarmed her, so down she dropped on all fours again, and came straight toward me. The first obstacle which she encountered was my leg, and to the problem of getting past this huge barrier she gave her entire attention. First of all she reached her nose as far as possible under my rubber boot, and tried to pass under it, as she had passed under the grass, by lifting it up with her head. But the leg was too heavy, so this plan was abandoned. There was nothing for it but hard work, so she set to, digging a way with both forepaws, looking up every now and then with her bright eyes shining through a ring of mud. Whenever a little heap of mould had been scraped under the body, the hind feet were brought into play, and with these the dirt was flung away in the rear. When roots were encountered they were bitten through with the teeth, and once I saw the little mouse bring out a stone in her mouth. It was but a short time before the subway was complete, and the furry engineer come out upon the other side. The knee of my other leg was bent, so there was no difficulty in passing under that one, and away went the mouse with the soil, flung up

A MEADOW MOUSE.

STYLES OF THE MOMENT.

Loose Hanging Bolero—Ribbon and Taffeta Ruchings.

The three-quarter coat, according to the leading fashion authorities, is going out of style, and they are showing jaunty little jackets and blouses ending at the waist line and so designed as to simulate waists and give to the whole costume the air of a gown.

The wide, even the very wide, belt is a feature of nearly all the new dresses. So is the loose hanging bolero effect with wide three-quarter length sleeves which allow a glimpse of an inner blouse of mull and embroidery having exaggerated sleeve puffs of the same creamy material.

Ribbon and taffeta ruchings of all widths are very smart on otherwise plain gowns. A net frock much admired on a debutante recently was trimmed with a cape arrangement over the shoulders edged with three rows of this narrow ruching. The skirt was likewise banded. Skirts, by the way, are becoming fuller and fuller, so that they hang in folds all around.

The ingenuity of the tailor is again shown in the manipulation of cloths for woman's use. English tweeds, Scotch and Irish friezes, etc., have a soft finish. The higher authorities in the sartorial world no longer care for the harsh makes of stuff except in the creation of the riding habit.

With elderly women chiffon velours and panne still continue the favorite evening fabrics, and indeed for day wear as well velvet of every possible make is used.

The cut shows a pink chiffon waist trimmed with venetian lace and narrow sable bands.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

FURS AND CHIFFONS.

Combinations of Expensive Skins and Rich Laces Are the Fashion.

Fur coats are now being made very fancy, and many of them boast expensive lace trimmings or wide lace sleeves which are plainly visible beneath the three-quarter length baggy open sleeves of fur. Sometimes also these fur coats have yoke pieces of rich lace.

Etip yokes are seen on very many tailor mades, and these retain the slen-derness of the figure where it would ordinarily be lost sight of in the fullness of the rest of the skirt.

Gowns of black chiffon dotted here and there either with chenille or with net are very effective for evening wear.

Dinner blouses of chiffon are used with skirts that harmonize in shade for less dressy occasions, but these are seen mostly in black or in white.

There has been a determined effort to bring corduroy to the front for dressy street costumes, but this has not been a great success owing to the superiority of the lustrous chiffon velvets and panne.

Velvet, velveteen and corduroy are the leading materials for the nursery folk. The belt is to form a very important item in the attire of the smart people. For little boys up to six the Russian blouse will be the correct thing, in as wide a striped corduroy as may be obtained. The only difference as regards these garments from those of their sisters is the addition of leather trimmings, which form the collar, belt, side band and cuffs.

The picture shows a velour waist trimmed with lace and mink tails.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

A KENTUCKY AUTHOR.

Alice Hegan Rice and Her Delightfully Human Stories.

"I would rather have written 'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch' than any other book I know of," said a literary gentleman of long ideas. "It's full of cheery and optimistic and so pleasant and good natured all through."

And, come to think of it, nobody would be apt after reading either "Mrs. Wiggs" or "Lovey Mary" to get up and go and commit suicide. Rather would he, though he were in the depths of the dumps and of hard luck, laugh, pull himself together and say:

"There's a chance for us still, O soul! Let us pick up and go in and try it again. We'll win out yet."

And an author who can write a book which gives that impression in these days has a clear mission. It is not any wonder that children in England and America delight in the simple story of Mrs. Wiggs. Wise teachers in many schools use it as a supplementary reading book. As Frances C. Simpson writes, "Familiarizing the homely, sweethearted scenes in the young lives of the cabbage patch to those who do not live so humbly makes all the world akin."

MRS. ALICE HEGAN RICE.

The veritable, actual cabbage patch is in Louisville, just as described. Miss Simpson, who lives in Louisville, says of it: "Mrs. Wiggs' wonderful garden is there, with its varieties of broken crockery, old pots, a piece of a cart wheel and a glass globe as decorations. It all fits in exactly, even the pump where Mrs. Wiggs met Lovey Mary, and the 'commons,' and Miss Vinney's denominational garb."

As a matter of fact, the celebrated cabbage patch is less than half a mile from the red brick house in which the girl author wrote of it in the unpretentious tale which, like Dickens' "Christmas Carol," the mind of one who has read it especially reverts to at Christmastide. The patch itself is so very plain and humble that the hundreds of people who now make pilgrimages to it are often disappointed and inclined to exclaim:

"Is that all there is of it?"

Just so. It is the highest tribute one could pay to the exquisite literary art of Alice Hegan Rice. Anybody could see that patch and the queer, scrambling, hand to mouth life of its inhabitants, but it required a genius to see the possibilities for literature that lay therein. Common people see there only the not always clean, not always agreeable life of the poor quarter of a city, but Mrs. Rice says, "The cabbage patch is full of stories." She herself has a way of making quaint, humorous, philosophical cabbage patch observations to her familiars in everyday life, they say. What a delightfully jolly companion she must be!

Socially Mrs. Rice is extremely popular. On the return from her honeymoon journey to Europe the doorbell of the Hegan home in Louisville was broken down by the multitudinous jerks of old friends who called and insisted on seeing her. She was born and brought up in Louisville. Her friend, Miss Simpson, writes of her:

"Mrs. Alice Hegan Rice is a woman of about twenty-eight, with beautiful dark eyes and hair and a face that is interesting beyond the ordinary, as there beams from it a genial kindliness and a hidden laugh in the brown eyes. She is of medium height and graceful figure, a real Kentucky girl in speech and manner. She has always shown to her friends the inclination to wit and humor, picking up and using in everyday conversation remarks similar to those she puts in the mouth of Mrs. Wiggs. These bits of fun often were sent to newspapers and magazines and found a ready market."

It was as a humorist in conversation that Miss Hegan became noted first among her friends. It is as a humorist in print that she is best known to the public, but one endowed with that true mirth provoking power whose source is always infinite human sympathy.

It is especially interesting to note that Miss Hegan's earliest successes were achieved in a women's club which met regularly for literary work at the girl's own home. Charming women are cultivated Louisville ladies, with their unconventional, frankly expressed kindliness and sprightliness, and that club was a typical assemblage of such women. They wrote and read aloud in meeting essays, stories, poems and every manner of literary sketch.

The hopeful, sunny atmosphere that pervades Mrs. Rice's stories is the reflection of her own happy childhood and girlhood. The Hegans were a hospitable family who knew well how to enjoy life. They owned extensive woodlands near Louisville. In the impressionable years of the future author an old Kentucky cabin was maintained in these woods, and there "week end parties" assembled summer after summer to live the life of nature. There mirth, liberty and joy, likewise good will and affection, reigned supreme.

JANE STORY.

DAINTY GOWNS.

Increasing Fullness of Waists and Skirts a Feature.

Great fullness with horizontal trimmings in both waists and skirts is one of the newest features of dress.

A dainty dancing gown of white mull spotted in black was lately had a gauged waist falling off the shoulders, disclosing a bertha of black lace over white chiffon edged with black tulle ruching. Across the waist and intersecting the skirt in three places this wavy banding of lace occurred. The sleeves were mere puffs of mull and chiffon, ending at the elbow. There was a broad girdle of black chiffon velours, and the skirt hung in full folds both back and front.

Another evening gown which possessed chic had its waist composed of a bolero of lace, with lace caps from which escaped three ruffles which formed the sleeves. The skirt had a slightly fulled upper part, reaching about as far as a hip yoke, and the rest was all ruffles graduated in width.

Motifs of lace, laid on gold colored satin and surrounded with scrolls of very narrow gold cord or braid, make an uncommon trimming for cream or ivory cloth, and a collar of mink or skunk, intermixed with old lace, looks charming on a white wrap.

The picture shows a bridesmaid's frock made of chiffon voile. The fichu and wide sleeve ruffles go well with the picture hat.

NOVELTIES OF THE SEASON

Usefulness of Chiffon Velvet—Moire Cloth Just Coming In.

Chiffon velvet is used for a variety of things, including hats. The fact that it is one-half the weight of ordinary velvet makes it very valuable in millinery.

Evening coats are made of richly tinted, heavy lace trimmed with a fringe made of the thread of which the lace itself is composed. These coats, to give them warmth, are lined with chiffon velvet.

Among the novelties of the season is moire cloth which is stamped by machinery into a beautiful imitation of watered silk and is very well suited for handsome street costumes.

A gown *made of silk poplin seen re*cently had full sleeves, cut cape fashion, together with the loose bolero. It had no shoulder seams. These very loose boleros, ending well above the waist line, are considered smart just now. They are trimmed with bands and figurings of velvet, and the skirts which go with them are very full and are decorated with similar bands.

A novelty in girdles is of fancy tinsel, ornamented with gilt harness buckle and double ring backpiece and lined with black silk, which forms an edge to the surface of the belt. Another novelty is the threefold taffeta belt, with its oxidized buckle and backpiece in the form of a bat with spread wings. Crushed leather is, however, the feature of the moment, greens, grays, tans and browns being the favorite colors.

The cut shows hats of chiffon velvet trimmed with soft ribbon rosettes.

THE SLOW GIRL

She Should Wake Up

THE bachelor gave a cynical little laugh.

"Well, the slow girl is better than the rapid girl," he remarked.

"Why, the idea!" cried the worldly wise woman. "But let me tell you that while there are undoubtedly some—er—young ladies who would do well to slow down there are even larger numbers who need the spur rather than the checkrein."

"Most women would rather be comfortable than anything else," remarked the bachelor sententiously.

"Um! That sounds as if it had come from a book; but, even so, much depends on the meaning of the word 'comfortable.' Most of the slow girls I know are not even comfortable in the sense of being at ease in their minds. They simply lay the trouble to bad luck, that patron saint of the lazy. In nine cases out of ten (we will leave that tenth case for real hard luck) they have themselves to blame. Any girl who is alive has no business to stand dolefully at the window with 'lonely' written all over her and watch the fun of the rest of the world. Let her sit down and make out a list of the women she knows and why they don't call or invite her any more and of the men she knows or might easily know and the reason why they don't come around. Perhaps she hasn't asked them! Well, if she waits for men to ask permission to call in this busy, overrushed world I am afraid the dear girl will sit alone in her studio, parlor, reception room or whatever it may be more than one evening in the week. There is a way of doing things that is not bold or sentimental—a frank look in the eyes, like a nice boy's; a cordial intonation in the voice and a 'How would you like to run up some evening next week and take dinner with me, Mr. Smith?' And she doesn't need to make any fuss for him. Men hate fuss and formality.

"It's the same way with a girl's friends. She is worse than silly to confine her attentions to one or two, merely contenting herself with paying formal calls on the others. She must circulate among them, introduce those whom she thinks will be congenial, bring around the men and make them meet her girl friends or, better still, plan little foursomes in which she will bring a man for the other girl and the other girl will bring one for her. If she is selfish and stuffy and poky, she never, never will have friends. And why are some girls afraid to make friends with influential people—people who can help them along in the world? They are just as easy to entertain as ordinary folk if a girl can make herself interesting, and if she doesn't know how to do that let her study how.

"I should like to say to every girl who is slow: If your surroundings swamp you, change your surroundings; if your lack of means cramps you, find some way of augmenting those means, and it not infrequently happens that your very work will bring you friends. But move along. Get ahead, whatever you do. Let only one thing worry you—the thought that you are idle, that you are not making the most of life, that you are not advancing. That ought to worry you to death if you are frittering your time.

"'And for goodness' sake, whatever you do, keep your eyes open. Look straight ahead. Don't live in the past, and don't believe that stupid saying of old women, 'It will all come right somehow.' It won't come right unless you make it so.

"'I don't believe in planning for the future. It will all come right somehow,' murmured one of these feminine weaklings as she dropped a few gentle tears over a faded packet of love letters. Not that she cared particularly, but there being nothing else to do that afternoon she beguiled the tedium of her lonely life by taking out of her trunk the almost forgotten love letters and crying over them. Great pity she couldn't better her condition by doing something practical."

"Upon the whole," murmured the bachelor, "I don't think I should care to be the slow girl."

"There is such a thing as a happy medium," the worldly wise woman answered, with dignity.

MATERIALS AND COLORS.

This Materials Used Winter and Summer—The Vogue of Purple.

Mousseline de soie makes dainty blouses and evening gowns for debutantes, and white mousseline de soie is particularly effective with yellow lace trimmings.

Heliotrope and lavender are enjoying a return to favor which has not been equaled for a long time. Great bunches of violets are worn with the purple cloth costumes, and with these are also worn large hats of beaver either in white or of a violet tint trimmed with sweeping ostrich plumes.

Never before has there been such latitude in the choice of dress material. Everything is fashionable provided the color is becoming and the cut is in good taste. Soie de chine, crepe de chine, veilings and even mull makes of silk and satin are worn as much in the winter as in the summer.

A great many of the handsomer dresses have two bodices, one for day and the other for evening wear.

fective guipure; also velvet sorties de *theatre and driving mantles are ex*quisitely garnished with coarse guipure and fur, while last, but not least, is the combination of guipure with silver galloon on plaited tulle hats. These tulle and lace hats, prepared for dining in restaurants, are eminently becoming. The additional note of brightness in the band of old silver galloon encircling the crown of a gold galloon hat putting innumerable plaitings of tulle illusion promises to become exceedingly attractive and will be considerably worn with the semi-toilette de soiree. White ostrich plumes have the stems or quills finished off in an old style gold chased ornamental needle shaped tag. These bright little et ceteras must be very discreetly used; otherwise they become common and gaudy.

SEEN HERE AND THERE.

Little Dress Hints Useful to the Woman of Limited Means.

The economical girl can get along very well nowadays with one reception frock and one smart tailor made.

Picture hats of white, hairy felt are very becoming and not too expensive, for if the shape is becoming they can be trimmed at home.

Sleeves are the leading feature of fashion. The old style bell sleeves are exaggerated in width and eked out by ruffles of chiffon and lace. The undersleeves are confined at the wrist with bands of silk, lace or velvet.

Stamped and figured velvets are among the smartest dress materials for street costumes and even for evening wear.

Gray in every conceivable tint is very popular, and the new gun metal shade of broadcloth vies for favor with spotted silks and brocades and with dyed lace.

Fashion is very liberal as regards shape, but everything of the wrap or mantle type must be wide and full. Evening coats of light brocade show touches of bright velvet and paste buttons, with hanging frills of chiffon and a little fur or feather trimming at the neck. Short, old fashioned ties in ermine or sable are admirable to finish the neck of an opera coat.

Although the new woolens with dashes and flakes of color are largely used for winter toilets, yet the smartest ones are of self colored fabrics, with a smooth surface, intermixed with a little faced cloth of brighter tone and tastefully appliqued with embroidered scrolls or motifs.

In the illustration is shown a picture hat of white rough felt trimmed with white roses and a gray and white feather.

HE SCENTED DANGER.

Bishop Bowman Warned Lincoln Against Wilkes Booth.

Had a Premonition of Disaster, But the President Was Not Impressed by It—Interesting Historical Reminiscences.

Rt. Rev. Dr. Thomas Bowman, of No. 66 Walnut street, East Orange, N. J., is the senior bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, and, although 86 years of age, enjoys good health and is active. He lives with his son-in-law, Burns D. Caldwell, one of the vice presidents of the Lackawanna railroad.

Bishop Bowman was born near Berwick, Pa. He has been a clergyman for 65 years. He served as chaplain of the United States senate during 1864 and 1865, and while on the national capital warned President Lincoln of John Wilkes Booth, whom he had seen prowling about the capitol, and also about the white house. Mr. Lincoln was not disturbed, and took no extra precautions, and five nights later, April 14, 1865, he was assassinated in Ford's theater by Booth.

"The first time I recollect having seen Booth," said the bishop to a New York World man, "was one morning just as I was about to open the senate with prayer. The members were in their seats and stillness had come upon the gathering. I stepped forward and was about to speak when a man entered. He was so striking and handsome as to attract attention anywhere, but that was not what caused me to pause.

"The man made a peculiar impression upon me that I could not account for. He startled me, and I was so disconcerted that I could not go on. I turned to one of the members and called his attention to the visitor. He made some slight remark, after which I collected myself and continued my prayer, but it was a long time before I recovered from the shock of that man's appearance.

"I have never recovered from the impression I then gained, that he was there for no good and that his presence boded evil for some one.

"Some days passed and again I saw this man. I met him on the street in the vicinity of the government buildings and I saw him in the senate chamber. He made me uneasy and I inquired who he was. I was not reassured when I was told that he was one of the Booths and a prominent actor, for I could not shake off the impression.

"The persistence with which Booth hung about me gave me great anxiety. Soon after I saw him prowling around the executive mansion and in the vicinity of the president's office. He apparently was taking notes of the entrances and exits. Now thoroughly alarmed, I sought out President Lincoln and told him of the man, and that I believed Booth would take his life if he got the chance.

"Although I do not remember exactly what Mr. Lincoln said at the time, I do remember that same old smile of ineffable kindness that came over his countenance as he replied that he did not believe that anyone would murder him. His great and good mind could not picture such a crime. I had delivered my warning, but I felt more uneasy than ever. A day or two later I left for my home, in St. Louis, my task as senate chaplain having been performed. I had barely reached there, when there was flashed over the wires the news of the assassination.

"I shall never forget the feeling that took possession of me as I read, coupled with this, that the deed had been done by John Wilkes Booth, the very man I had warned the president against."

Bishop Bowman's duties did not bring him in close contact with Mr. Lincoln and, as he himself says, he was very careful about calling upon the president. He first saw Lincoln when he preached at a little town in Illinois, where the latter worshiped before the war.

Mr. Lincoln was at the service, and at its conclusion came forward and shook hands with Mr. Bowman, then a circuit preacher. The two chatted together for awhile, and then Mr. Lincoln invited the minister to his home, where he was entertained at dinner. Bishop Bowman did not see Lincoln again until he met him at Washington, the head of the nation.

Dyed Lace Makes Effective Ball Gowns—Red Is Much Worn.

Red, both in light and dark shades, is very much worn this winter, and pretty red cloth gowns are trimmed with flat braid, bias velvet or fringe.

Black silk tassels appear, plentifully besprinkled, on many an otherwise plain gown, and they are a most effective mode of trimming.

Narrow bands of fur are much used, even on very thin materials, such as chiffon, voile and crepe de chine.

The modified rever is a feature of dress which is being revived even on evening bodices.

Dyed lace makes effective ball gowns, and this is especially good in lace dyed brown trimmed with ruchings of brown chiffon and bits of applique left ecru here and there.

Wide girdles of flowered silk are quite the thing for girlish dresses.

There are charming materials for coats. The vigognes with hairy tufts or a scattered sprinkling of white hairs make up quite smartly with stitched strappings of self colored cloth and piplings and linings of silk or satin, while the new "fur" plushes are a boon to those who cannot afford the real thing. Moleskin plush, lined with gray satin and with steel or silver buttons and chenille tassels, is quite smart, and seal plush is difficult to distinguish from the real skin when carefully managed.

The picture shows a red cloth gown trimmed with flat braid.

ivory are much used for carriage and evening coats. The coarsest dyed lace lined with heavy silks and velvets makes the most elaborate wraps of all.

Handsome buttons of ivory, jewels and old brocade appear on evening wraps. These can easily be made from small pieces of dress goods which would otherwise be thrown away and can be embroidered and elaborated during the hours devoted to fancy work.

Three-quarter length loose coats of pale colored broadcloth are very smart trimmed with embroidered lace, gold and silver motifs or chenille tassels.

There is no doubt that many of the lesser dressmakers are getting good effects at moderate cost by using chine silks, although, of course, some of the really old patterns command a very fair price.

Moleskin, while a dull looking fur, mixes charmingly with ecrise and with white lace or ermine.

The cut shows an evening dress of flowered silk trimmed with chenille.

Clark for mayor. Not a bad suggestion.

Princeton University has 1,432 students and one football team.

Newark doctor says there's typhoid bacill in cider. We never did like cider.

Trenton saloon keeper gives green trading stamps. Is this an attempt to bride women temperance workers?

Dispatch from Trenton says that one-fifth of the State's money goes to its dependents. Are the legislators included in this class?

Let us be thankful that the Presidential campaign takes place in cold weather. We won't be afflicted by the sight of Panama hats worn by the Republicans.

An exchange says: "It is announced that Governor Murphy has never been in the race for United States senator." Quite correct. He might be in a walk for the office, however.

Following the announcement that New Jersey is for Roosevelt comes a report from the State Board of Health that the births exceed the deaths in this State for the year by at least 2,000, showing that its citizens are determined to give hearty endorsement to the strenuous man's platform.

Retail advertising must be written in harmony with the character of the business. There is somebody in every successful business that gives it character. It may or may not be the manager. In one very successful concern it was an old maid sister. She had a great influence on her brother manager, and he seldom went contrary to her ideas.—Printers' Ink.

The advertising of every business should do good to every department. Its purpose is more far reaching than the particular offerings made in each announcement. The public's estimation of a house is based upon a thousand and one little things. This public will rightly judge the character of your entire establishment by the way you advertise certain items. About two years ago this statement appeared in Printers' Ink: "Above the article advertised, always consider the effect of every statement upon the character of your house." The intervening years of advertising work have strengthened the conviction as to the absolute soundness of this statement. Each ad should build all along the line. It should help create good character—the most valuable asset of any business.—Ex.

It is a foregone conclusion that the Republican party in New Jersey will be solid for the renomination of Theodore Roosevelt at the Republican National convention to be held in Chicago on June 21, and the only question that remains is, who will be the luminaries of the voice of the people? It is generally believed that the big four in Ocean, Keen, Murphy and Stokes—will be chosen delegates at large. To all outwardly appearances this quartette of master politicians would be the most representative that could be chosen. In addition to these captains of the party, the usual number of district delegates will pose as the lesser fry of New Jersey Republicanism. The Democratic party has not set a time and place for its National convention, but in all probability the session will be held in New York. One reason for this is that the party leaders believe that New York State can be made solid for its nominee at the coming Presidential election. Odell has dragged Roosevelt into the factional fight there and the two are lined up against Senator Platt and in consequence there is some reason to suppose that the feeling will be given expression at the polls. Then again, the signal victory of George B. McClellan in New York City was on as to boop up the hopes of the ... and his of the party there irrespective of the various shades of belief. "As New York goes, so goes the Union" is a popular saying that has been disproven of late, and the Democrats will have to do a lot of pealing to make any inroads into Roosevelt's popularity, which is conspicuous in the South and West.

"The Laird o' Borderland" and "Alexander," in "Mother Goose," at the New Amsterdam.

AMUSEMENTS.

Klaw & Erlanger's Drury Lane spectacle, "Mother Goose," has made a tremendous hit at the New Amsterdam Theatre and is playing to the largest attendance in New York. It is not only a great comic musical entertainment, but a distinctively artistic one as well. Beneath all the wit and humor of the book, the fascinating music and the gorgeousness of the stage settings and costumes, there is a moral to its story which adds greatly to its interest.—"Contentment." The two great ballets far surpass anything of the kind ever presented here. The Nouveau art ballet at the end of the first act is a most gorgeous conception, showing in processions, ballets and tableaux all the fine arts. Nearly 400 people are utilized in the exposition of this wonderfully beautiful idea. At the end of the second act, "The Land of Heartsease," the great feature of the production is seen, eclipsing even the grand ballet of the first act. That "Mother Goose" is the greatest production of this character ever seen in America is generally accepted as a fact, by all critics, theatrical managers and the public. The demand for seats is phenomenal. Orders for seats for any performance in the next four weeks may be sent by mail, accompanied by remittance. All such orders will be promptly responded to by the mail order bureau of the New Amsterdam Theatre.

After being entertained and sometimes satiated, and not infrequently bored with all manner of serio comic drama, with the conventional and unconventional, the musical comedy, farce and farce-comedy, the society drama, the heroic melodrama and all that, it is a genuine relief to turn to a play like "Way Down East," which returned to the Academy of Music, New York, Monday night, as one would turn to fragrant breezes from the heart of the woods after enduring the heat and the burden of the day. "Way Down East" does not boast one person who speaks good grammar except the city villain. One remarkable thing about the present production at the Academy in the manner in which the cast has been kept up to its original standard of excellence. The majority of the men and women in the present company has been playing in "Way Down East" since it was first produced. During the engagement matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday and extra matinees on Christmas and New Year's day.

Denman Thompson and George W. Ryer's pastoral comedy "Our New Minister" which has caught the popular fancy of all New York entered upon the third week of its merry run at the American Theatre on Monday of this week. The "Standing Room Only" sign was brought into use every night last week, while on Saturday night the entire house was sold out at 8:15. The comedy with its excruciatingly funny characters and situations will hold the boards of the American for a long time to come. The New York critics admit that "Our New Minister" is a far better play than the "Old Homestead." The matinee on Wednesday, December 23d, will be known as "Children's Matinee," and every child attending will receive a box of bon bons as a holiday gift.

A recently introduced (and very successful) innovation at the Proctor theatres is that by which all patrons, whether near at hand or far away, can have their choice seats reserved for them three weeks in advance. They can be ordered by mail, by telegraph, by telephone, or in person, at almost any hour of the day or night; for the Proctor box offices are now kept open from 9:30 in the forenoon until 10:30 at night. Better than all, one is invariably certain of courteous treatment in ordering his seats. And this is a great treat, when one bears in mind that incivility is too often met with in the box office of many metropolitan playhouses.

The management of the West End theatre has the honor of announcing that a special engagement has been made with Henry W. Savage for five weeks of Grand Opera by his famous English Grand Opera Company, which opened last night, December 21. This visit of Mr. Savage's great singing organization will be a rare musical event at the West End, and all lovers of good music in the mother tongue, should unite in extending to it an enthusiastic welcome and make its engagement a pronounced success. There will be matinees on Wednesdays, Saturdays and holidays.

Beginning at Madison Square Garden on Tuesday morning, January 5th, and closing on Saturday evening, January 9th, the Fifteenth Annual Exhibition by the New York Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association will score another success, as the most important show of the kind in America. H. V. Crawford, the veteran secretary and superintendent, reports the greatest number of entries, in every department, that the association has ever had. All the space in the Garden will be filled, and the standard breeds of fowl and the fancy ones, and the pigeon will make a display that the breeders value and the public appreciate. The pet stock department will have rabbits and cavies in large numbers.

This week at the Grand Opera House will be a memorable one, as the attraction is one of the strongest the theatre ever played the theatre. "The Runaways" with Fay Templeton and the big Broadway cast should cause a furore on the West Side and Messrs. Shubert, Nazon & Zimmerman and Springer expect unprecedented results. "The Runaways" is one of the brightest and breeziest entertainments yet devised for the Metropolitan public; it is a combination of musical comedy, opera bouffe, extravaganza and spectacle. The chief ingredients of its make-up are girls, music, comedians, costumes—and Fay Templeton, the only Fay.

This is what the New York Sun says of Robert Mantell who is appearing in the "Light of Other Days" at the Fourteenth Street Theatre:

"Robert Mantell is here in an old fashioned 'thriller' in which he shines. He is still the sterling actor that he was in the days when he supported Fanny Davenport in 'Fedora,' his voice rings the changes from melodrama to comedy with the old time ease. The audience wept, with him, laughed with him and cheered him until he must have been glad that he was back in New York again. He was ably assisted by Miss Marie Booth Russell, Miss Charlotte Lambert and a good company."

LITERARY.

Scribner's Magazine for January, beginning its 35th volume, contains two of the leading features of the coming year, Robert Grant's serial, "The Undercurrent," and Captain Mahan's "The War of 1812." Robert Grant's fame as a social philosopher and satirist was increased by his "Reflections of a Married Man," and fully confirmed later in his remarkable novel, "Unleavened Bread." "The Undercurrent" is the highest achievement of his art. It presents a number of very individual characters—not types—struggling with present-day conditions. It is a human love-story, unfolded by actual conditions of wealth and poverty, religion and irreligion.

The January Red Book is characterised by its usual high standard of excellence in cover, illustrations and stories. Seventeen portraits introduce the pictorial features, nine of them photographic studies by American artists, and eight selections from Paris studios. The stories, a dozen or more, are invariably readable, clever and original. Among the authors represented in this number are Arthur E. McFarlane, Harris Merton Lyon, Rafael Sabatini, Annette Kittredge, Frederick Walworth, Marion Short, Kemlo Watson, Mary E. FitzGerald, John Harwood Bacon, Ida Alexander, Frederic Johnston and Bradley Ford. These stories are illustrated throughout and the color printing, convenient form and typographical excellence of the magazine make it one of the most welcome of all the periodical list.

COLORED CONFERENCE SUSPENDS CRUDUP

Prompt Action Taken by His Brethren Against Pastor of the Filmore Baptist Church.

MINISTER SECURES BAIL

CONGREGATION TO BE NOTIFIED TO SUSPEND MAN AWAITING TRIAL.

Revs. Jackson, Mitchell and Wallace Condemn Their Brother at Largely Attended Meeting of Conference Held in Newark.

By a unanimous vote, Rev. Essex J. Crudup, pastor of the Filmore Baptist Church, of this city, was suspended from the fellowship of a conference of New Jersey (colored) Baptist ministers at Newark yesterday and instructions sent out for his suspension as pastor of his church.

More than thirty ministers of colored Baptist churches gathered in the Bethany Baptist Church at Newark, yesterday morning and afternoon and suspended their regular weekly session for a special session to discuss the case of the Plainfield minister who is under indictment on a serious charge brought by Richard Randolph, whose daughter, Regetta E. Randolph is the other party to the case, and who is awaiting trial by the Grand Jury on a second similar charge brought by Alden Alston whose wife is the main witness.

The discussion of Crudup's case was general and thorough, the Plainfield ministers participating being Rev. J. W. Mitchell, Rev. E. E. Jackson, of Mt. Olive Baptist Church, and Rev. Scott Wallace, of the Calvary Baptist Church. The meeting was presided over by Rev. W. D. Watkins, of Orange, with Rev. E. O. Joiner, of Roselle, secretary.

As a result of the investigation, which included a reading of accounts of the Crudup cases appearing in the daily papers, the accused was suspended from the fellowship of the Baptist colored church conference of New Jersey; and the pastors of the other Plainfield Baptist churches, Rev. E. E. Jackson, of Mt. Olive, and Rev. Scott Wallace, of the Calvary Baptist, were instructed to notify the authorities of the Filmore Baptist Church to suspend Crudup from the pulpit of the church as its pastor, pending the action of the Grand Jury. Upon the failure of the church to comply with these instructions, it was decreed that the institution would be dropped from the fellowship of the State colored Baptist churches.

The accused man was notified to be present at the conference to speak in his own defense but failed to appear. He is out on bail furnished by M. E. Miller, one of his congregation.

FACTS CONCERNING 1904

TWO ECLIPSE OF SUN AND NONE OF THE MOON IN A LEAP YEAR.

The first leap year in eight years will be 1904 and it will have only two eclipses. This last condition has not occurred before for a century and will not happen again for another hundred years.

According to ordinary usage 1900 would have been a leap year. But the calendar of Julius Caesar consisted in giving the year 365¼ days, which was 11 minutes too much, an error which by 1582 had amounted approximately to ten days.

There will be no eclipses of the moon during 1904, and only two minor ones of the sun. Neither of these will be visible in the United States.

The new year will comprise the latter part of the 128th and the beginning of the 129th year of American independence and will correspond to the years 5664-65 of the Jewish era. The Jewish new year will begin at sunset September 9, 1904.

Officially by the opening of the St. Louis exposition, but not chronologically, the year will make the centennial anniversary of the Louisiana purchase. The purchase was made from France in 1803. The year will mark the centenial of the Lewis & Clark expedition which opened up the Louisiana territory.

This expedition left St. Louis in 1804 and was out two and a half years. It proceeded up the Missouri to its head waters, explored the region, made a portage overland and continued down the Columbia. This opened up a vast extent of country and gave the United States a basis for claiming the Oregon country later.

The year 1904 will also make the bicentennial of the taking of Gibraltar by the English, August 4, 1407, and the battle of Blenheim, August 13, 1704.

The Singer Manufacturing Company will close tonight and remain closed for ten days.

MINISTER DEPLORES THINGS NEGLECTED

Rev. Dr. Schenck, Pastor of Trinity Church, Points Out the Existing Evils.

PROPHYLAXIS, HIS TOPIC

THE DEMORALIZING INFLUENCE OF CHEAP LITERATURE AND CIGARETTES.

Prevention Better Than Cure, Vein of Speaker's Argument—Trolley Company's Attention Drawn to Needed Remedies.

Protesting against the condition of the local trolley system, the attitude of the company in not properly providing for its passengers, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed Church, Sunday morning arraigned the Public Service Corporation in a sermon, the subject of which was "Prophylaxis." He took his thought from Deuteronomy, 22:8. The passage deals with one of the laws of Moses which compelled people to place a battlement about the roof of their houses. The pastor explained that the word prohpylaxis was a medical term, meaning prevention rather than cure. The battlement was ordered placed about their roof of Eastern houses because people made a practice of living on the roof of their dwellings and that the battlement served to keep them from falling off.

The minister said that the Heavenly Father did not wish to see human life needlessly sacrificed and therefore commanded Moses to make the law written in the Old Testament. "Life is held by us too cheaply," he said. "We handle it too recklessly. In no other nation of the same standing in the world is life held at so little value as in our county. In this country last year there were thousands killed in railroad collisions. In England, there were none. There precautions have been taken. Here the railroads wait to be ordered to use safe guard by coroner's juries." The speaker declared that we have a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to animals, but man must take care of himself. Man must take chances while the animals are taken care of by law.

"The trolley cars in our cities are a constant menace to the people in our streets," said he. "They disregard the public's welfare. It was not until the law compelled them to that they placed fenders on the cars, vestibules for motormen and other safety appliances. The cars in this city are run too fast and many improvements are needed. What we want is cars that do not threaten to part asunder when one rides in them. I entreat prophylactic measures on the part of the road in making some repairs to the road bed on Front street between Grant avenue and Elm place. The same rails which were put down when the company first laid its tracks here are in use today and it is positively physical suffering to ride in the cars that pass over them. The rails are not only a disgrace to the company but are a source of discomfort to the tax payers who own property along that line. I believe it is high time for the authorities to do something. But we must not bear too hard of the Corporations. There is very much responsibility resting with the individual. The one great aim of today is to secure speed. If we have two routes to travel we will invariably take the short route even though it be the way of peril.

The police of our State came in for a severe arraignment at the hands of Trinity's pastor. He referred to the boy criminals of Chicago and asked where these youngsters secure their cheap an immoral literature which are the cause of many a boy's downfall. He asked where the small boy gets the illegally sold cigarettes. "The laws of our State," said he, are not self-acting. They need the enforcement of the police. "It is not your or my place to ferret out crime," he said, "but is the duty of the police.

P. S. C. Adopts Novel Scheme of Preventing Unreliable Men Getting Employment.

PREVENTS DISHONESTY

CHANGE TO BE MADE IN THE BADGES WORN BY CONDUCTORS.

Corporation Has 2,500 Men in Its Employ — Where Photographs Are to be Placed—Objection to the Plan.

Conductors and motormen entering employ of the Public Service Corporation after the first of January must consent to have their photographs taken and placed in the company's bureau of records for identification purposes. The facts connected with the plan are generally known to the men, some of whom apparently are not aware that the rule will apply only to new employes.

The object of the rule is to protect the company against itinerant motormen and conductors who, discharged by one division superintendent, either for dishonesty or incompetence, are frequently enabled to obtain employment from another division superintendent, to whom they are not known. It usually happens that they are soon dispensed with in the second case for the same causes that prompted their dismissal in the previous instance.

Dishonest conductors have been the cause of the P. S. C. losing large sums of money. As soon as they are found out the men, who have been detected "knocking down" fares by the spotters and conductors who have stamped out the evil to a large extent, are discharged. It is to prevent such ones from getting back into the employment of the company and beginning their thefts anew, that the new rule has been decided on.

The Public Service Corporation has about 2,500 men in its employ, and it is impossible to keep track of all these and prevent being imposed upon without the aid of some practical system.

Trolleymen who have worked in New York and Brooklyn, frequently obtain employment on the New Jersey lines, starting Jersey City, working all through Elizabeth and Plainfield, till they strike Camden, meanwhile "knocking down" all along the line. The officials of the Public Service Corporation think the plan hopeful ultimately of making some arrangement with the New York and Philadelphia trolley companies and also with the Philadelphia companies for a general photographic system.

Each new motorman or conductor will have two pictures taken from the same negative. One picture will be deposited in the bureau of records, and the other will be sent to the division superintendent under whom the new employe is assigned. When a man is discharged for offense his photograph will be placed on one side, and the photographs of new applicants can thus be compared with those of discharged employes before applicants will be put to work.

The conductors' badges are also to be changed and new forms of application printed, these innovations being part of a reorganization scheme all along the line to prevent pilfering and increase the good of the service.

When the new rule goes into effect all applicants for positions will be referred to headquarters, though it is possible the employment bureau will be open in different cities on different days.

Some of the old men on the system say that if any attempt is made to photograph them there will be trouble. "We won't stand for it; no 'mugging' for us," is the way one man put it.

RECREATION PARK PLANNED

SCHEME OF LOCAL REAL ESTATE MAN TO CONDUCT A PLACE NEXT SEASON.

Early in the coming summer, William Jeffery will open a picnic grove probably in the Western part of the city. The grove will be established and conducted chiefly for the mothers and their children and admission thereto will be by tickets which must be approved by the recognized representatives of Mr. Jeffery.

The idea is to locate rustic houses throughout the grounds providing conveniences for people desiring to eat their lunches there. There will also be a baseball grounds, tennis courts and many other forms of amusement. Mr. Jeffery will personally superintend the grove and the place will be provided with police protection.

Persons will be taken back and forth from the city to the grove in three large stages and during the season attractive programmes will be arranged, including concert music and other entertainments of a proper sort.

REV. JOHN M'MURRAY TO LEAVE PLAINFIELD

Pastor of Monroe Ave. M. E. Church Likely to Sever His Connections Here in March.

GROWTH OF THE CHURCH

A FORMER MISSION OF FIRST M. E. CHURCH HAS PROSPERED.

Pastor Has Received Three Invitations Elsewhere, But Has Made No Decision—Work He Has Accomplished Here in Plainfield.

In all probability there will be a change in the pastorate at the Monroe Avenue M. E. Church next March, when the Newark conference meets. Rev. John McMurray, the present pastor, is now concluding his fourth year at the church and he has been most successful in his work. He has made it a rule not to remain in a charge over three years, but in the present case there was considerable work he wanted to accomplish this year and when he was invited to remain he accepted. This work he has about completed and he will no doubt make a change in March. Just yet he is not prepared to say where he is likely to go. He has received two or three invitations, but he has not given a definite answer to any one.

At all events Mr. McMurray is quite sure to be found in another year in a larger charge. He is an able divine and an energetic pastor and organizer. During the four years he has been at the Monroe Avenue Church he has succeeded in getting many forces to work, including the boys, the men as well as the women's societies. They are now doing good work.

This church has had a remarkable growth since organization on December 31, 1896, with a membership of 106. During the succeeding seven years the membership has grown until at present it numbers about 310. This increase, about one hundred per cent., cannot be expected to continue at that rate for there is not the people in that part of the town to make this possible, but there is no reason why there should not be a steady increase if the same wise management continues. The Sunday-school, under the able direction of Walter M. McGee, as superintendent, has been one of the most encouraging features of the work at this church. The membership is large and the interest continues unabated.

The church occupies a peculiar position. It is situated between Hope Chapel and the Church of the Heavenly Rest, and is located in a place where it does not affect the other houses of worship. In the western part of the city are a number of Methodists who find it not only inconvenient, but not desirable to travel so far to other Methodist churches. It was the First M. E. Church that originally established this place of worship as a mission. The late James McGee became greatly interested in the work and he finally devoted his entire time out of business to the work of the mission and through his help and generous contributions, made it possible for such a church to become established and grow.

During the mission period Rev. Mr. Munson, a sudent, was in charge and afterward Rev. W. C. O'Donnell was called there. He served two years at first, then became the regular pastor, serving three years more. Under his direction the church prospered and increased in membership. When Mr. McMurray leaves, his successor will find everything in good condition.

Judging from present rumors it is quite likely that Rev. Dr. E. L. Earp will continue with Grace M. E. Church another year. He is now closing his second year at that church and he and his people have become much attached in the Christian work.

LITERARY.

"Voices and Visions," a volume of verse by Franklin Baldwin Wiley, literary editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, who formerly resided here, has won much favor among literary men. Mr. Wiley's poetry is fresh and spontaneous and varied in theme and treatment. One critic finds in it "fertility in diction, taste in imagery, sweetness and facility of expression, and much that indicates real poetic fire." The book includes much fine descriptive verse, some humorous efforts, and a number of charming love poems. It is published by The Gorham Press, Boston. $1.25.

TAX LAW EXPLAINED TO COLLECTOR SMITH

Changes in Duties of Collector Made by Act Which Has Just Gone Into Effect.

THE STATUTE IN DETAIL

MEANS OF ENFORCING PAYMENT FULLY SET FORTH.

Powers of Collector—List of Uncollectable Taxes to be Presented to Governing Body Which Disposes of Them—Other Details.

Tax Collector Frank H. Smith has received from Secretary Thomas B. Ueber, of the State Board of Taxation, notices in regard to Article VI, of the revised tax act of 1903, which sets forth the duties of these officials and provides for a number of the changes in the methods heretofore employed by them. The new act, which is in effect today allows collectors to take means to enforce payment of tax bills, which were not enforceable under the old statute.

The first paragraph of article VI, which the Secretary encloses with the note, provides, among other things, that in any city the common council, or other governing body, may authorize and regulate the payment of taxes levied in any year by operating claims held by taxpayers and duly ordered paid by the city for current expenses of the same year.

It is further provided that by December 22 of each year the collector shall pay to the county collector out of the first moneys received for the amount of county and State taxes for his district, and that the county collector shall turn over to the State treasurer the State's share in the sum thus received by January 20.

It is provided in the next paragraph that interest at seven per cent. per annum, or at such higher rate, not exceeding twelve per cent., as the governing body of the tax district may, determine upon, shall be charged upon all taxes not paid by December 20.

The belongings of tenants of property shall be liable for proceedings under the law, and, on payment of taxes, may recover from the landlord in action of contract, or by withholding the sum necessary from the rent.

If the collector believes that any of the delinquents of taxes on real estate are uncollectable because of a fictitious or double value, or any other palpably erroneous statement, or that any dog tax, poll tax or tax on personal property is not collectable because of removal, absence, death or insolvency, he shall present those in a separate list to the governing body and the latter will decide what is to be done with it.

Each collector, except those in cities governed by charter, must make a return on the first Tuesday of February to the county clerk of all the uncollectible taxes listed during the year.

There are still many borough property owners who have not paid their bills although the number is less than that of last year. $6,000 was collected by Tax Collector Brown on Saturday and $5,000 approximately, yesterday.

"GOOD DRESSING"

A Sure Thing—No Failures at This Reliable House.

Just as sure as the night follows night, the man who dresses a "line" on good dressing, how it can be done on a little money, and who are the best clothiers to seek, will get a straight tip at Watson's of Newark. Good dressing, an absolute necessity for success and self respect, is a sure thing if you go to Watson's.

You get good quality and all the style that's coming to you if you get your clothes at Watson's. You save a neat bit if you secure some of their winter suits now advertised. Their clothing is always pressed, ready to put on, being kept on hangers. Then after securing "sure things" in suits and overcoats, annex a pair of shoes with a view of completing the "good dressing" effect. Good dressing? "Sure thing" at Watson's, Broad and Market street, Newark.

Letter Carrier Promoted.

Postmaster E. H. Bird has recommended the appointment of E. T. Van Winkle as clerk in the local postoffice beginning January 2. VanWinkle will be promoted from the position of carrier. James E. Bailey is in line to succeed VanWinkle in the position of carrier.

Xmas Needs.

The Relief Association, Mrs. C. E. Brooks secretary, announces that it is in need of about $35 more for Christmas gifts. Money only is required as an ample supply of toys has already been received.

Mrs. David Bowden, of West Fourth street, has been discharged from the hospital and has returned home.

RECEIVER TO FINISH "THE PLAINFIELD"

Central Railroad's Fine Ferryboat to be Completed by Order of Judge Kirkpatrick.

TERMS OF AGREEMENT

WORK TO BE DONE IN CRESCENT YARDS AT ELIZABETHPORT.

The Railroad Company Has Paid $150,000—Story of the Boat—The Order Made by the Court in the Matter of Settlement.

Judge Kirkpatrick yesterday signed an order instructing Receiver James Smith, Jr., of the United States Shipbuilding Company, to finish the ferryboat Plainfield in the Crescent Shipyard at Elizabethport, the Central Railroad to pay over the $37,500 remaining of the contract price; if it costs more to complete the boat the railroad people to pay she difference; if less the creditors of the corporation to get the benefit.

In asking the court for the order counsel for the Central Railroad Company stated that his clients entered into contract with the United States Shipbuilding Company to build the ferryboat Plainfield on September 17, 1902, to cost $187,500. On June 20, 1903, this boat was launched, at which time there had been paid to the builders $150,000, leaving a balance of $37,500 to be paid when the trial trip of she boat had determined her to come up to the contract requirements. When the Crescent Shipyards were shut down in Elizabethport this boat was within twelve weeks of completion.

Counsel for the railroad asked the court to instruct the receiver to allow the railroad people to finish the Plainfield, or order the receiver to complete the boat and receive the $37,500 remaining unpaid.

In deciding on the order, Judge Kirkpatrick said that it would more equitably protect creditors if the boat was built under the direction of the receiver.

Counsel for the General Electric Company also petitioned the court for an order compelling Receiver James Smith, Jr., to return an unfinished dynamo now on board the Plainfield. The claim was made that this dynamo remained the property of the electric company until the full amount of the bill, $2,480, had been paid. The petition was, however, withdrawn, counsel announcing his determination to use the sheriff of Union County, who, with the property in his possession, is enjoined by the United States Court from proceeding with the sale, under lien.

FUNERAL OF AUGUST BACH

REV. JOHN JUSTIN AND REV. DR. CORNELIUS SCHENCK OFFICIATE.

Services over the remains of the late August Bach, whose death occurred last week, were held yesterday from his late residence on Somerset street by Rev. John Justin, pastor of the German Reformed Church. The attendance was large, many being present from the Trinity Reformed Sunday-school where the dead man was a member. At the German Reformed Church, Rev. Mr. Justin and Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Church, conducted the service in German and English. The interment was in the Methodist Cemetery. The display of flowers was very handsome and among others was a remembrance from the members of the Sunday-school. The pall bearers: Hiram Humes, William Kreiney, Clarence Bittenbouse, Albert Schemp, Elmer Wheeler and Charles M. Dolliver. The honorary bearers were Frank Platts, Percy Bangbart, William Trembath and William Henry. Mr. Bach was a member of the Trinity Reformed Church Christian Endeavor Society.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Governor Murphy has leased the residence of John H. Scudder, on West State street, Trenton, and will occupy it as the executive mansion during the legislative session of 1904. Governor Murphy is to take possession of his Trenton residence January 15.

As an especially harmonious caucus of the Republican Senators, held in Trenton Sunday night, a slate of officers for the coming session of the legislature was agreed on. Senator Wakelee, of Bergen County, was selected for president; Senator Cross, of Union County, for leader on the floor, and Senators Bradley, of Camden; Bacheller, of Essex, and Brown, of Ocean, as a steering committee to choose the minor officers. Among the other officers agreed was journal clerk, Merchant Meeker, Union County.

MRS. T. R. VAN ZANDT CLAIMED BY DEATH

Good Woman Overcome in Heroic Battle for Life After Celebrating Her Birthday.

A MEMBER OF TRINITY

A HUSBAND AND TWO DAUGHTERS SURVIVE HER.

Born Near East Millstone—Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garret Garretson — Funeral Thursday—Interment at Blawenburg.

Mrs. Lillian VanZandt, wife of T. Romeyn VanZandt, died yesterday afternoon at her home, 935 Madison avenue, following an illness of several weeks' duration. While visiting relatives at Blawenburg, Somerset County, she was taken sick, ill, but apparently improved but six weeks ago an operation was deemed necessary and since that time she fought bravely to recover health and strength. There were complications and despite the best medical aid and attention the disease could not be baffled.

Mrs. VanZandt was born in the vicinity of East Millstone and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garret Garretson, of that place. She observed the thirty-ninth anniversary of her birthday on last Sunday. Before moving to Plainfield, Mr. VanZandt was engaged in the flour and feed business at Irvington, later establishing the same kind of a business here with Edward V. H. Voorhees. Subsequently Mr. VanZandt built a handsome home in Madison avenue, and then brought his family here.

She was a member of Trinity Reformed Church and while she was active in the various departments of church work, she was especially so in the Ladies' Christian Work Society, being its secretary for a number of years. She was a sincere Christian and was admired for her rare womanly qualities, being a devoted wife and mother.

She is survived by a husband, two daughters, Ethel and Marguerite VanZandt; her parents, Miss Anna M. Garretson, a sister, and Edwin Garretson, a brother, of East Millstone; Mrs. Stephen Voorhees, another sister, of Blawenburg, and Wilfred Garretson, a brother, of Newark.

The funeral services will be held Thursday morning at 10:45 from the residence, 935 Madison avenue, and Rev Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed Church, will officiate. The burial will be at Blawenburg, Somerset County.

MR. FISK ON THE HOSPITAL

HE SAYS THE INSTITUTION IS IN AN EXCELLENT CONDITION FINANCIALLY.

Former Mayor and Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, who have been sojourning at Lakewood for several days, came to Plainfield on Thursday to attend the reception at the new hospital. Mr. Fisk is now enjoying excellent health and he was much gratified with the success attending the completion and opening of the new hospital.

Mr. Fisk states that the hospital is in excellent condition financially, that is, there is not a heavy mortgage on the new buildings and he believes that in the course of seven or eight months a sufficient amount of money will have been received to build the Nurses' Home. It is quite fortunate that for the present accommodations are found in the third floor of the administration building, where the nurses can be cared for temporarily. The Board of Governors, he says, appreciates all that the people of Plainfield have done for the hospital and hopes that united support will be continued.

CRUELTY CASE.

Postponement of Trial of Man Charged With Starving Horses.

The case of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty of Animals against David Blackford was brought up in Justice Warden's court at Dunellen Saturday and adjourned to next Saturday morning, December 26, by consent of counsel for the plaintiff, F. J. Blatz. Blackford, who is charged with starving to death three horses at his farm in South Plainfield and leaving three others in a dying condition from lack of food, pleaded not guilty. He is represented by Robert Adrane, Esq., of New Brunswick.

—The Christmas dinner list will not be complete without first consulting Neuman Brothers for fresh vegetables.

NEW FACES SEEN IN LOCAL PULPITS

Facts Concerning the Changes Made in a Number of Plainfield Churches Recently.

THOSE WHO HAVE LEFT

LONG PASTORATES HAVE PROVEN TO BE THE RULE.

Crescent Ave. Presbyterian, Grace and St. Stephen's Episcopal, First, Park Ave. and Seventh-Day Baptists and Swedish Pilgrim.

There is probably no place in New Jersey where there have been so many ministerial changes during the past two years as in Plainfield. With the exception of the Methodist, where changes are made every few years, the other denominations had been more or less exempt from these changes. When one minister made the start, others followed in quick order, and today there are many new faces seen in the various pulpits.

One of the first changes was made at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Presbyterian Church, where Rev. Dr. W. B. Richards, after a long and successful pastorate, resigned to accept charge of the Brick Presbyterian Church, one of the most important of that denomination in the East. He is meeting with the same success that characterized his work in Plainfield.

Following Dr. Richards in the Crescent Avenue Church, Rev. John Sheridan Zeilie, the present pastor, is receiving the hearty co-operation and support of his people in carrying on this important work. Mr. Zeilie is well thought of and has been given a cordial reception.

Another change was that of Rev. J. W. Richardson, who resigned the pastorate of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, to accept his old charge at Stamford, Conn. After many months the officers of that church have secured a successor in Rev. A. E. Finn, now pastor of the Baptist Church at Cherryville, Hunterdon County. He is a young man 35 years of age and he has the highest endorsement of the Baptist clergy of the State, where he is known.

One of the most important changes was at the First Baptist Church, where for over forty years, Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes served faithfully and efficiently as pastor. His service is without doubt the longest of any minister in one church here. It is only his physical capacity that prevents a continuance of the work. After a long time had elapsed, the committee appointed for the purpose, secured Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of New York, as pastor. He takes the charge for one year, but judging from the success now attending his work he will probably continue for a longer period.

Another change following a long pastorate was the one at Grace Church, where Rev. Erskine M. Rodman retired after many years service. He was succeeded by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, who came from St. Michael's Church, New York. He is doing an excellent work among the people in that parish.

Rev. M. Norseen, as pastor of the Swedish Pilgrim Church, was another one of the ministers to leave Plainfield. He was instrumental in reviving the interest among his people in Plainfield and was able to see the beginning of a new church edifice now completed. His successor is Rev. L. T. Lindholm, an able divine, who is continuing to interest his people in church work.

After a comparatively short pastorate, Rev. Dr. A. E. Main resigned the pastorate of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, to accept a professorship at Alfred University. He was succeeded by Rev. George B. Shaw, who came from the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, New York. While Mr. Shaw has not been in Plainfield long, he recently received a call to Ashaway, but declined it. While he does not believe in long pastorates, he has been in Plainfield so short a time he decided to remain.

Still one other change soon to be effected is at St. Stephen's Church, Ravine road, where the recent resignation of Rev. William Vincent Dawson, rector, has been accepted. He goes to St. Paul's Church, Elk Rapids, Mich., and for the present will be succeeded by Rev. William Harris, of Martine avenue, a retired clergyman.

A contemplated change is at the First M. E. Church, where Rev. Dr. W. O. Snodgrass, the pastor, has resigned, after a service at this church for five years. He is spoken of as the successor to Rev. Mr. Wright, now presiding elder of the Jersey City district, while Rev Dr. J. L. Hazlhurst, now at Morristown, and formerly pastor of the First M. E. Church, is considered as a successor to Dr. Snodgrass. There may also be other changes in the local M. E. Churches when the conference meets in March.

The other churches where there have not been recent changes are First Presbyterian; Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor; Congregational, Rev. C. L. Goodrich; Warren Chapel, Rev. J. O. McKelvey; Hope Chapel, Rev. L. R. Howard; Church of the Holy Cross, Rev. W. Montgomery Downey; Monroe Avenue, Rev. John McMurray; Grace M. E., Rev. E. L. Earp; Church of the Heavenly Rest, Rev. Harris C. Rush; Trinity Reformed Church, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck; Unitarian, Rev. A. C. Nickerson; St. Mary's, Rev. Andrew M. Egan; St. Joseph's, Rev. W. H. Miller.

CORESPONDENT DETERMINED.

Rev. Dr. Van DeWater Still Anxious to Clear His Name.

Rev. George R. Van De Water, of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, New York, declares he is going to clear his name in the Watt divorce case. In an interview he is reported as saying: "Mrs. Adele Watt may have obtained her desire," he said, "but I have not mine. I intend to fight this out to the end, and have the falsity of all charges against me determined absolutely and for all time in the court. I am thankful for, but am not content with, the trust and confidence of my parishioners. I don't know just how my bearing is to come about, but if I have to employ all the lawyers in New York city I will see that my good name is cleared of the slightest question in doubt. This can be done and will be done, if not in one way, in some other."

LITERARY.

The Scientific American has issued another special number, this time devoted to the iron and steel industry of the United States. Technically considered, the number is one of the best of the special issues which have so far been prepared by the Scientific American. Each article bears the stamp of absolute certainty of fact—a certainty gained by a personal examination of each of the plants describes. Instead of giving a condensed account of a large number of less important works, the editors have wisely adopted the plan of selecting a certain number of large industrial establishments, and of giving them a very thorough description. Among the more notable articles of the issue may be mentioned those on armor plate and gun steel, structural shapes, tube making, chain making, steel and wire making, and rail making. The number is dressed in a handsome colored cover.

City Clerk J. T. MacMurray has returned home from an out of town business trip.

BRAIN FAG PILLOW.

An Aromatic Affair That Soothly Lulls the Weary Owner to Restful Slumber.

The brain fag pillow is made of silk, or made of satin. It matters not what the outside may be. It is the interior part that is important, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

The pillow when it is made, must contain a small slit in one side, a slit just large enough to admit one's hand. Into this there can be bundled the contents of a rose jar.

The idea is to produce a variety of scent. And, when all the odors of Araby and a few extra ones have been obtained, the whole must be stuffed into the pillow.

It is a very good plan to add a few feathers, or a little down, for rose leaves are not always soft enough and sweet grasses have stiff hard stems. A little inner pillow of down, or a few handsful of down added to the leaves, the balsam, the lavender, and all the rest, will make the pillow light and fluffy.

The pillow must be filled with every sort of sweet thing, all nicely dried and rolled with the hands. Rolling the leaves and the grasses with the hands tends to powder them and make them softer and more easily packed.

The first breath of the pillow is that of herbs. It seems a little like a pine pillow. Late in the season, when all the rest have begun to grow dim, one gets the scent of the rose leaves. They pervade everything upon which the pillow lies, and even one's hair and one's gown, if one has lain upon the pillow, will smell like rose leaves.

If one wants it to be real rose one can add a drop of attar of rose and ten drops of oil of rose geranium. Shake it through the leaves before putting them in the pillow, let dry off a little to take off the oily feeling, and then one will have a scented pillow that is a scented pillow.

Such a pillow is not for ordinary use. It is not for show, but for headaches. It is kept put away in the locker, or high in the clothes press, where the silk quilts lie.

When tired the owner of the brain fag pillow breathes it long and deeply and sometimes she falls asleep.

The sleep may not be more than five minutes long, just the forty winks of beauty sleep. But what are the results? Bright eyes, quick, good natured brains, and such a fund of strength and delight.

The influence of sweet scents upon the spirits is a thing that is discussed by those who know all about it. The mind, being invisible, can be affected by invisible things, and is, therefore, peculiarly susceptible to scents. This is one method of reasoning.

However this may be, the brain fag pillow is an excellent thing to have in the house. And the woman who makes one and keeps it handy will resolve never again in all her life to be without this beautiful article of household comfort and hygiene.

FADS AND FANCIES.

Odds and Ends of Feminine Finery for the Winter Season.

Pastel blue is a new and fashionable color.

One of the prettiest skirts in velvet is shirred at the waist and finished with a row of fringe at the hem. A skirt of this sort allows of an elaborate bodice.

Chiffon velvet is the elegant fabric for dinner gowns. When the color is shaded into three tones it is most fashionable.

White cloth is one of the prettiest fabrics for the reception gown, especially if it is relieved with embroidery or insertions of some contrasting tint.

Lovely "sets" now come in the popular purple tints. A favorite one is pinky violet tone comprises a hat, a tie of tulle, a graceful collar of taffeta and one of those huge new muffs.

Mousquetaire gloves are coming in once more—especially the shorter lengths—which are worn with tailor suits and which give such a graceful touch at the wrist.

Pyrography and Swedish woodwork, imitated in papier mache, are other novelties of the season. They come as buckets, boxes of all shapes and wash tubs.

Brocade silks are back in favor. Indeed, flowered patterns are obtaining even among the velvets.

Leather is pressed into service for short motor coats. They are perfectly plain in exterior finish, and are frequently lined with expensive fur, but the leather coat has not the vogue it obtained in earlier seasons.

French Beefsteak.

ALFRED T. SERRELL DEAD

ONE OF FIVE NOTED BROTHERS DIES IN HIS EIGHTY-SIXTH YEAR.

Alfred T. Serrell, brother of the late Lemuel W. Serrell, of this city, and uncle of L. W. Serrell, Jr., of West Seventh street; Harold Serrell, of Myrtle avenue, and Miss Lila Serrell, of Plainfield avenue, died Thursday, in his eighty-sixth year, at the home of his son, Alfred W. Serrell, in Cambridge, Md. Mr. Serrell's health was broken ten years ago by a fall from a surface car in New York. Besides his son he leaves a widow and daughter. Burial will be at Tarrytown, in the family plot in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery. His brother, General Edward Serrell, distinguished himself in the Civil War, and later built the first great suspension bridge—that at Niagara Falls. John Serrell, another brother, was one of the designers and constructors of the Brooklyn Bridge; Lemuel became a famous patent lawyer; Joseph was City Surveyor of New York for many years, and Alfred became proprietor of a saw and planing mill, and invented the first machine for cutting wood mouldings. He was one of the founders and a trustee of the Franklin Savings Bank and a founder of the old Forty-third Street, and subsequently of the Fifty-third Street, Methodist Episcopal Churches. He was chief of a volunteer fire company.

PRESENT CONDITION OF GUARD

QUARTERMASTER'S REPORT CONTAINS FACTS OF INTEREST TO COMPANY K.

In the current report of Quartermaster-General Richard A. Donnelly it is shown that the expenses of maintaining the guard are not far in excess of last year, when the total expenditure was $181,000. This sum includes the encampment at Sea Girt, the expenses of transportation, military manoeuvres, celebrations, funerals and the like, and also includes the cost of keeping and repairs of the ordnance. During the last twelve months, the department has received from the United States Government, according to the report, 3,750 rifles and 170 carbines. The rifles are worth $41.08 each and there are 3,750 cartridge belts, each worth $1.75.

Altogether, the cost of the last encampment was slightly in advance of last year, being about $20,000 as compared with $17,697, for 1902. It is recommended in the report, that the system of feeding the soldiers be changed, that stores be issued to each company separately and that the different companies do their own cooking and serving. This is the mode in New York State and has been found to be entirely satisfactory. In the last year 6,000 medals were issued to the Spanish-American War veterans, and about 400 to New Jersey's Gun Cotton feeders. Details of the celebration at Monmouth, the cost of this and other trips of the guardsmen and such other detailed information is likewise included in the statement.

DOG ON A LONG JOURNEY.

Traveler Worsliper on Canine Crated Up for Shipment Across the Continent.

"Passing along a city street the other day," said a town traveler, according to the New York Sun, "I saw, tied on at the end of a loaded express wagon standing in front of an express office, a crate containing a dog, a dog that was being shipped somewhere by express.

"Curiosity prompted me to look at the shipping tag on the crate. The dog was going to a city on the Pacific coast, a long journey, but I didn't doubt it would get there safely.

"The crate was big enough for its comfort, and it seemed to me that the dog was one likely to stand the journey well, to make friends with all the expressmen and messengers it met on the way, and to get the best possible treatment.

"I'm no judge of dogs, and I may be away off on this one, but this didn't seem to me to be a valuable dog. It was short-haired, brindle in color, of medium size and rather lanky build, and with a rather stubby head. But it had an intelligent and friendly face, which was just now rather wistful.

"As I read my self-addressed on the top of the crate to turn the tag so that I could read the address, the dog reached its head over toward me inside, glad to meet with somebody, even if the somebody was a stranger.

"It was, in fact, a gentle, kindly dog, and whether a valuable dog or not, I'll bet it is one beloved by whomever it is going to meet over on the other coast, and I'll bet that it makes friends with and gets the best of treatment from every man who has the handling of it on the way across."

PUDDLING FOR BULLPOUT.

How the Fish Are Caught with the Bare Feet in Canandaigua Lake, New York.

"Puddlin' fer pout" is a novel method of catching what are commonly known elsewhere as bullpout or "bullheads"—a species of catfish common to all the lakes, ponds and mud-bottomed streams of this region. It is done with the bare feet, says the New York Sun.

The puddlers—and there are only a few of them, owing to the truly ticklish nature of the pastime—frequent the marshes along the inlet at the Head-of-the-Lake when the weather is "right" for "hole in." A puddler's outfit consists of a basket or a bag thrown over his shoulder to hold the fish. Nature does the rest.

The puddler goes into the marsh in his old clothes and sometimes his bathing garments, first rolling up his trousers and sleeves as far as possible. Then he moves along cautiously, bare-footed, on the muddy bottom, feeling with his feet for the holes that form the lying-in resort of the bullpout. When his carefully groping foot comes into contact with a smooth, slimy, slightly squirming substance he knows that he has found his quarry. Deftly reaching down he slides his hand along the fish's body as carefully and gently that the preoccupied pout suspects no evil. He maneuvers until his hand can tightly grip the wedge-shaped body of the bullhead and then, quick as a flash, he grabs the fish and has it in his bag almost before it can flop.

FICTION IN FREE LIBRARIES.

Much of It Read by English Readers When History and Biography Would Benefit More.

Viscount Goschen presided at the summer meeting of the University Extension students at Oxford, and in an interesting address which he delivered, dealing with free libraries, he referred to the complaint that fiction played so important a part in these institutions, reports the London Telegraph. In some he had heard that as much as 80 per cent of the volumes issued was of that description, though he was glad to know that in others it was but 45. There were critics who doubted the use of public libraries at all, as the class of literature was to play so great a part in their work, but they should remember that generally the readers had no books at all at home. While fiction was recreative and educational, it often was highly stimulating and satisfactory. A great many of the readers in the public libraries came home wearied from their work, and in a frame of mind in which it might be difficult for them to apply themselves to some of the more serious books, but if they would only try biographies, histories and works of that kind, they would find them, as soon as the plunge had been taken, as great, or of even greater interest than works which seemed lighter reading.

Exports of Butter.

Argentina exports more than 3,000,000 pounds of butter annually, nearly all of it to Great Britain. It brings 24 cents a pound at the creameries, and the exporter gets an average of 24 cents a pound. Butter from no other country except Denmark brings as good a price. The cows are principally Durham crosses.

COLLEGE MEN, MINERS

MISSIONARY AND WIFE LIVED IN ONE ROOM IN EAGLE CITY.

Citizens Are Cultured People—Rev. Mr. Kirk to Return to the Fields —Young Women Sang at Meeting.

Rev. J. W. Kirk, who, after a successful pastorate of seventeen years in a large Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia, gave up that charge and engaged in the mission work in Eagle City, Alaska, under the direction of the Presbyterian Board of Missions, addressed a large gathering of women Friday afternoon in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, telling of his work during the past three or four years in Alaska.

Mr. Kirk told how he and his wife journeyed to that far away place in Alaska, where they were obliged to live in two rooms. The work prospered and the misses Mrs. Mr. Kirk and his wife to give up one of their rooms for a mission. The missionary finally consented, they eating, sleeping and living in one room. Mr. Kirk said he had his bed in one corner, a cook stove in another, his study in another, while the center of the room was used for the dining table.

The missionary said that he felt as though his people were quite as cultured as those in this part of the country, for many of the miners are college graduates, who have gone to that country in search of gold. Mr. Kirk said that his work extended to the Indians, whom he found to be very appreciative. Owing to the fact that the thermometer in Eagle City averages 68 degrees below zero it is difficult for a person to remain very long in the country, but he expects to return.

During the meeting yesterday several selections were sung by a choir of young women, accompanied by violin and piano.

PHILA. FLYER KILLS A NEW MARKET MAN

T. L. Merle, a Milkman, is Struck by Engine at Dunellen and Dies Instantly.

AT RAILROAD CROSSING

SAID THAT GATES WERE RAISED AND ENGINEER FAILED TO WHISTLE.

The Dead Man Leaves a Wife and Two Children—The Railroad Company Investigating the Cause of the Accident.

Thomas L. Merle, a local milkman, of New Market, was instantly killed last Thursday while driving over the Prospect avenue crossing of the New Jersey Central at Dunellen. The accident happened about 6:35 o'clock, when a Philadelphia express, going west, struck the rig in which Merle was riding. This is the same train that ran into the Easton local at Westfield almost a year ago, causing the worst wreck in the history of the railroad.

Merle, had been to Plainfield and was in George Voehl's bakery about 6 o'clock. He was talking about a recent law suit in a New Market court and was congratulating himself that he had been victorious. He started for home shortly afterwards.

It is said that the gates at the Prospect avenue crossing were raised when Merle reached that point and that he did not see the express until too late to do anything. The horse was killed, the wagon smashed into splinters and Merle's body was terribly crushed, nearly every bone being broken. A fracture of the skull caused instant death.

That the engineer of the train did not see the rig on the crossing seems evident for, it is said, that he did not blow the whistle. The train ran some distance after striking the rig. It then stopped and later continued its journey.

The body was removed to Runyon's morgue at Dunellen, and later taken to the home in New Market. It was reported early in the evening that Merle's boy was in the wagon with him, but investiagtion proved this to be untrue. Merle was born in France in 1860 and came to this country when a boy. He ran a commission bakery wagon for some time, having bought out "Mayor" Bill Smith, of New Market. He gave up this business a few months ago and engaged in the milk business. He is survived by a wife and two children.

An investigation of the accident is being made by officials of the New Jersey Central.

ANOTHER SITE FOR PARK

SUGGESTION THAT ONE BE ESTABLISHED ON GIRAUD AVENUE.

The statement recently made by Borough Councilman J. K. Arnold that Plainfield had given up the project of locating a city park near Randolph road and his presentation and adoption of a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee to confer with a similar committee from the Common Council of Plainfield regarding the establishment of such a park on the Boice property on Elm place, has been received more or less favorably.

There are many persons who believe that in the Western part of the city there is a better opportunity to locate a park for the city and borough. There is a strip of land extending from Giraud avenue through to Compton avenue that some consider would make an ideal place for a park. There is plenty of natural shade on both sides of the brook and the scene is picturesque from any point in that vicinity.

There are so many natural advantages in this strip and the cost of establishing a park there would be materially lessened. Then the fact that an avenue is in the near future to be opened from Compton avenue in the city to Myrtle avenue in the borough, would add to the value of this site.

PAID FIRE DEPT. FOR BOROUGH

The Council Passes a Resolution Instructing the Drawing Up of Ordinance.

MUCH BAD FEELING

Action the Result of Warren Engine Company's Refusal to Allow Use of Its New Building for the Council Chamber—Councilman Clark Explains His Position.

North Plainfield is to have a paid fire department and the volunteer system, which has been the pride of the borough people for years, last Friday heard its death knell sounded at a time when the companies were at the height of their career as volunteer organizations. Before the new volunteer headquarters is completed the company finds its services no longer required.

This is the resolution offered by Councilman James K. Arnold, an exempt fireman: "Be it resolved by the Mayor and Council of North Plainfield that the borough attorney be instructed to draw an ordinance to make a paid fire department in the borough of North Plainfield."

The action is the result of the drawing of a resolution by the members of Warren Engine Company and its presentation to the Common Council, opposing the attempt of the Council to make the upper rooms of the new engine house a Council chamber. The resolution was passed with but one dissenting vote, that of Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., who has championed the cause of the firemen throughout the discussion. The passage of the ordinance was a shock to the representatives of the North Plainfield fire department who were present. They did not expect such a termination of the question which has been agitated for the past week or two.

As a result of the passage of the resolution and ordinance by the Council to move into the new building in spite of the objections of the Company, a heated argument followed; Councilman Robert Clark, Jr., resenting what he termed a personal remark made by Councilman Lee, and declaring that he was not courting any favor from the firemen and that to prove his assertion he would resign in February his position as Councilman. He declared he acted in the matter as a conscientious representative of the people and would stand by his vote against moving into the new house and against a paid fire depart*ment in the borough. When Mayor* Smalley asked him to reconsider his words, Mr. Clark said that he might retract what he said about resigning. *The discussed waxed warm and per*sonalities were indulged in.

After the Council had decided in the affirmative regarding the proposal to move the chambers into the headquarters, Mr. Arnold arose and said:

"I have been a fireman in this company and no man in the borough has the interest of the organization at heart more than I. For that reason I have done much for the department since I have been a member of the Council but I feel hurt at the action of the Warren Engine Company in refusing to grant to the Council the use of the rooms sixteen times a year.

"I am the taxpayers' representative and many taxpayers have come to me and said that we were foolish to pay out $350 a year for a Council chamber when the borough is erecting a building which would meet their needs as a meeting place. I am in favor of a paid fire department in the borough and I believe it cannot come too soon." He then offered his resolution. When the roll was called Councilmen Arnold, VanArsdale, Lee, Northrup and Nicholls voted for the resolution and Councilman Robert Clark against.

WILL OCCUPY THE NEW ENGINE HOUSE

Borough Council Last Friday Passed Resolution to Take Such Room As Necessary.

A WARM DISCUSSION

FIVE COUNCILMEN FAVORED RESOLUTION AND ONE OPPOSED IT.

Mr. Clark Sided With Warren Engine Company—Resolutions Received From Company Declaring the Action An Encroachment.

The North Plainfield Common Council last Friday passed a resolution to move into the new Warren Engine Company building and to remodel the interior of the structure so as to provide a suitable room to be used as a Council chamber. In spite of a resolution submitted by the company protesting against the Council's using part of the upper room of the new engine house, this resolution was offered by Councilman Lee: "Resolved: That this Council take such room in the said engine house as may be necessary for its need." Councilmen Arnold, VanArsdale, Lee, Northrup and Nicholls voted for the passage of the resolution and Councilman Robert Clark against it.

The resolution submitted by Chief of the Fire Department J. J. Stahl, as representative of the company, was as follows: "Whereas: This company has been informed through the chairman of the fire, water and lamps committee of the North Plainfield Common Council, that on April 1, 1904, the present lease of the rooms of the Council will expire and it has become necessary for the Council to seek other quarters and the new fire house has been mentioned as a possible chamber, and,

"Whereas, we realize that all power is invested in the Council to occupy the said room as a Council chamber, and

"Whereas, we believe that such occupation of the said engine house will be, in a measure, an encroachment on the company, be it

"Resolved, That we register a vote against such action on the part of the Council."

The resolution is signed by L. B. Bodine, secretary pro tem. The resolution was referred to the fire, water and lamps committee.

Mr. Clark stated that he met the Company, as instructed and was courteously received. He submitted to the members the proposition and the above action was taken. Councilman Northrup asked what the vote was against the measure and Chief Stahl replied that out of a membership of thirty-eight, twenty-five were in attendance at the meeting, and sixteen were in favor of the resolution and nine opposed.

A spirited discussion followed especially between Councilmen Clark and Northrup. Mayor Smalley made a few remarks to the effect that, while bonds had been issued for the new house which was almost completed, there was no intension of using the structure for anything but a fire headquarters. He said the need was obvious for the Council to provide itself with suitable quarters for public hearings and stated meetings. It was not the intention of the Council to take up any more room that it actually needed.

The Mayor characterized the action taken by the firemen as absurd. He declared that he did not see how the Councilmen could represent the people and the fire company at the same time. "We represent the public," he said, "and it'is better from the public's point of view that we occupy the house."

Mr. Clark then said that he would vote against the proposal because he was convinced that when public monies had been appropriated to a specific purpose, the object for which the money was spent could not be diverted from its stated purpose. Mr. Northrup declared that the Council had a perfect right to do as it pleased with the building, so long as the original purpose of the house was not actually interfered with in any way, and said that inasmuch as the firemen were servants of the Council and the Council was not the servant of the fire department, the governing body of the borough had a perfect right to occupy a part of the headquarters as a Council chamber.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 27—Comment by Rev. S. R. Doyle.

Topic.—An optimist' missionary meeting.—Isa lx, 1-4.

Many missionary meetings are not optimistic. There are so many seeming discouragements in the way of mission work that God's people do not always enter into missionary meetings and service with an optimistic spirit. When we think of the number of those who are in heathen darkness and their condition morally and spiritually we are almost overwhelmed with the problem before us and feel like crying out, "Who is sufficient for these things?" The, result is depression rather than elation, and many good Christian people are often much depressed over the conditions and outlook of missionary work. But while these things are dark and appalling there is another side to the question. The cloud has a silver lining, as Isaiah shows when he calls upon the church to "arise, shine!"

1. Missionary optimism is possible because the church's light has come. The church is to lighten the darkness of heathendom, and its light has come. Jesus, the Saviour of the church and the Light of the world, has come. Christ came first to lighten His church and then through His church to lighten the world. The first great step in the enlightenment and salvation of the world has been taken. Christ has come, and hence Isaiah calls to the church: "Arise, shine, for the light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee: For, behold, the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people; but the Lord shall arise upon thee, and His glory shall be seen." God's method in saving the world was not to dispel its darkness at a single stroke, but through an enlightened part to enlighten the whole. Israel was the part, and Israel's light has come in the person of the divine Messiah, Jesus Christ, who is also "the Light of the world."

2. Missionary optimism is possible because the enlightenment and salvation of the world are assured. The light has come and in due time will enlighten the entire world. "And the gentiles shall come to Thy light and kings to the brightness of Thy rising." This is the prophet's prediction that the gentiles as well as the Jews will come to the light which God has sent into the world. And this prediction will come true. It was given under the inspiration of God and cannot fail. The Scriptures repeatedly predict the salvation of the world. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son" for it, and the entire world will some time hear His name and believe in Him. But, furthermore, the prophet in vision sees the fulfillment of his prophecy. Like the apostle John, he looks down and see. All they gather themselves together; they come to thee; * * * the abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee; the forces of the gentiles shall come unto thee." And as we look down the ages with Isaiah we realize what Isaiah saw in vision. The light has come. The church is spreading it abroad, and the gentile nations are seeing it and in large numbers, presaging ultimate entire success, are being gathered in. The first sheaves have come and the full harvest is assured.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. lii, 7; Nah. i, 15; Ps. lxxii, 8-11; 17-19; Matt. v, 14-16; Matt. xiii, 31-33; Dan. ii, 44, 45; Acts i, 1-8; xiii, 44-49; Rev. xxi, 23-27.

Some Definite Resolves.

Dr. Clark in a recent "Familiar Letter" in the Christian Endeavor World asked Endeavorers to join with him in resolving some definite things for this season's work. Four of the suggestions follow:

First.—I will have a quiet season of communion with God every day.

Second.—I will pray day by day for an outpouring of the Spirit and for a genuine spiritual awakening.

Third.—I will set apart sacredly the hours for public and social worship in my own church and, when possible, will allow nothing to interfere with them.

Fourth.—I will give systematically, proportionately, generously, as God prospers me.

The Three Things.

Three things to love—courage, gentleness, affection. Three things to admire—intellect, dignity and gracefulness. Three things to hate—cruelty, arrogance and ingratitude. Three things to delight in—beauty, frankness and freedom. Three things to like—cordiality, good humor and cheerfulness. Three things to avoid—idleness, loquacity and flippant jesting. Three things to cultivate—good books, good friends and good humor. Three things to contend for—honor, country and friends. Three things to govern—temper, tongue and conduct. Two things to think of—death and eternity.—Henry Van Dyke, D. D.

The Workshop.

Christian Endeavor is the workshop where Jesus, the carpenter's Son, sharpens the instruments which He uses in the daily construction of His churches.—C. L. Mason in Christian Endeavor World.

The Mint.

Christian Endeavor is the mint where metals are coined and stamped with the King's own likeness.—Effa H. Winkler in Christian Endeavor World.

Pen Points.

There should be no dead line this side of eternity for the Christian Endeavorer.

There are no hammocks in the Christian Endeavor society. It's a workshop, not a rest room.

Where the words "Endeavorer" and "worker" are not synonymous, conditions must be radically wrong.—John R. Clements.

CUPID HAS NEW NAME.

President Roosevelt Calls Royal Delegate to Congress from Hawaii "Mr. Kuhio."

One of the most interesting figures in congress is the delegate from Hawaii, Prince Cupid. His real name is Prince Jonah Kuhio Kalanianaole. He acquired the title "Cupid" while at school in San Francisco, and now he is to be officially called out of his name again because the president cannot pronounce his appellation. He is to be known in official circles as Mr. Kuhio.

Mr. Kuhio is accompanied everywhere he goes by a secretary. He has also a "personal secretary" and several other personages in his suite. He dresses well, wears his straight black hair a la pompadour, and his fierce black mustache is forever waxed brilliantly. He is about six feet tall and has a fine physique, erect and athletic. William Haywood, who was the last consul of the United States at Honolulu and who now represents the Planters' association of Hawaii, recently called on the president to arrange for the presentation of the new delegate.

"I shall not call him Prince Cupid," Mr. Roosevelt declared, "and I cannot pronounce his last name. I never would be able to remember it, anyhow. Can't we cut it off somewhere and make it simpler?"

Mr. Haywood conferred with Prince Cupid's advisers and after a lengthy debate "Mister Kuhio" was evolved from the troublesome cognomen. In Line of His Business.

A talkative barber in the Dorchester district of Boston is fond of entertaining his patrons by the relation of horrible stories. "My good fellow," said a customer who was having his hair cut, "why do you always tell me such shocking stories—such blood-curdling details of the latest murder?" "Oh, sir, there is a very simple reason for that!" replied the barber. "If I make your hair stand on end, my work is twice as easy!"

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 27, Missionary Meeting—A World-wide View—My Responsibility.

The surest test of one's religious condition is found in the way the needs of others are regarded. If their distress causes one to also feel distressed and to anxiously help to relieve the difficulty, the spirit and mind of Christ have certainly taken possession of that person. If any one can see another suffer and not feel an impulse to relieve, even if it costs sacrifice to self, such coldness, indifference and self care are proofs of the lack of the Christ spirit.

The marks of Christian life in the soul are the desire to help others and the sense of pain at sight of sufferings of others.

This sentiment does not arise in us by any conscious effort in answer to a consciousness of duty. We must say, "He is in need; I ought to help him and *feel sorry, and I will feel sorry be*cause it is my duty," and so work ourselves into a sympathetic condition. You can't do it if you try. The utmost possible will be but a superficial imitation of sympathy which will deceive no one but yourself. It will resemble the true as much, perhaps, as brass resembles gold.

If you have salvation through Jesus, you will feel great, deep heart throbs for the world of men in darkness and wickedness and will want to help Him save them. What then? Why, then, you will need to know about them, all their needs, their sorrows, miseries, wickedness, strife, hopelessness and helplessness. Then, when the heart grows sick and the stupendous task looms black, ominous and utterly beyond all possibility of accomplishment, when the littleness of one's own strength shows in discouragingly against the mountain mass of the world's sin—then, if ever, comes the soul stilling assurance of the all sufficiency of God's grace.

What can I do? What ought I to do? I ought, first of all, to keep my ears and eyes open to learn the world's need. I am responsible to know if my fellow men around me are acquainted with God and His offers of salvation. I can find out that as easily as I can find out if they are in good health.

I can live close to Jesus, so as to feel kindly and compassionately toward the world's need. Others may feel contempt and condemnation for the weak and may show harshness in treatment of the helpless. Squalor, misery, vicionsness and all uncleanness, physical and moral, are revolting to all the finer sensibilities. No one from preference would seek the society of those infected with smallpox or the plague. Every sense revolts at close contact with the infection. The pollution of all ungodliness is soul sickening. We may turn from it and refuse all aid and fancy that in our relish for perfumed garments we are conscientiously with beauty and strength we are made purer and find a higher culture. What folly!

If you have ever been sick almost unto death and from utter weakness and dire collapse have slowly, have passed the crisis point and come slowly, slowly up the long hill of convalescence back into the enjoyment and exercise of one power after another, have felt all the fresh renewed with exquisite sensibilities of all the soul, but with faculties and experience of mature years, you have known the joys of a resurrection. This is much and worth all suffering.

But to have saved another and brought him up this path not merely of physical recovery, but of renewing by the Holy Ghost, and see the new life abounding gloriously—well, that is blessedness. Ever do it? You ought to. You need it. The world needs it. God needs it.

You are responsible for it.

Christian Life and Art.

If we but look at it right we shall find a religion in God's first creation, light; in God's first temples, the groves; in moon and stars and fiery firmament, in clouds and mists and seas and plains, in man and beast and bird and creeping thing. Art is an exposition and an interpretation of all these. The feeling of noble exaltation or depression which is at the bottom of every masterpiece and which in a measure is communicated to the spectator is as much God given in the landscape and figure of today as in the Madonna and saint of yesterday. The star of Bethlehem and the star shining in a great man's mind come from one source, and if we but study them they will lead back to that source.—J. C. Van Dyke.

The Tree of Decision.

At Reigate, England, in the spacious grounds of the ancient priory, there is a tree which is known as the tree of decision. Under it stood Lady Henry Somerset in the darkest hour of her life. The very foundations seemed to be giving away. She was struggling with a great temptation. Is there a God? who then came to her this message: "Live as though I were, and you shall know that I am." The decision was made, and God became real.—Dr. Josiah Strong.

Get Close to Him.

If you stand half a mile off from a man and throw the gospel at him you will miss him, but if you go close to him and lay hold upon him, giving him a hearty grip of the hand, and show that you have an affection for him, you will, by God's blessing, lead him in the right way.—Spurgeon.

Our Future Good.

So should we live that every hour
May die as dies the natural flower—
A self reviving thing of power.

That every thought and every deed
May hold within itself the seed
Of future good and future need.

—Milnes.

CONDUCTORS MUST FURNISH A BOND

Public Service Corporation Will Introduce Innovations on Trolley Lines.

TO TAKE EFFECT JAN. 1

FARES TO BE TURNED IN BY CONDUCTORS ONLY TWICE A DAY.

General Manager Orders Change at Meeting of District Superintendents at Jersey City—Bond to be for Sum of $50.

The Public Service Corporation, on January 1, will make a sweeping change in the present system of turning in the nickels received by the conductors. For years it has been the practice for the conductor at the end of his trip to make out his slip of fares and hand it to the receiving department. Under the new plan the conductor will hand over his fares twice a day at the car barn, which, in future will be the only receiving station, and every conductor will be required to furnish a bond of $50.

The weekly meeting yesterday of General Manager W. Wheatly and the division superintendents was a protracted one and many reforms were discussed. After it was over Secre*tary Frederick Evans of the corpor*ation announced the proposed change in the receiving system.

"Yes," said he, "we intend to transfer the existing receiving station to the car barns, and we think the plan will facilitate the business of the corporation."

The news of the bonding of conductors was not received with unmixed pleasure, and the result will be that many men will lose their jobs at the end of the year, it is believed.

The new rule is said to counteract the "knocking down" process, which on the Public Service lines exists to some degree, as it does on all large systems. However dishonestly inclined a conductor might be, he can scarcely get away with $50 a day.

This sum will be guarantee for the company in case of charges of dishonesty against any employe.

PARK CLUB RECEPTION.

Prominent Society Women Will Have Charge of the Event.

Arrangements are being made for a New Year's Day reception to be held at the Park Club in the afternoon of January 1. The women who will have charge of the affair are Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, Mrs. Frederick Goodhue Mead, Mrs. George A. Chapman, Mrs. Charles A. Reed. Those who will be at the tables serving tea include Mrs. August Kleinecke, Mrs. T. U. Morris, Jr., Mrs. Walter M. Mc Gee, Mrs. Samuel Townsend and Mrs. George F. Dupee. They will be assisted by a number of young women of the club.

MRS. TAYLOR BURIED.

Funeral Services Conducted at Her Late Home by Rev. C. E. Herring.

The funeral services of Mrs. Herbert S. Taylor were held Wednesday, Dec. 17, from the late residence on Westervelt avenue, in the presence of a large number of friends and neighbors. There were a number of beautiful floral tributes. The services were conducted by Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church. There were two vocal selections by a quartette composed of Fred S. Cutter, E. E. Runyon, M. C. VanArsdale and A. L. Titsworth. The remains will be taken to Harwich Port, Mass., for interment. The pall-bearers were Fred S. Cutter, H. S. Potter, William A. Coddington and Hiram Woodruff.

W. C. T. U. VICTORY.

Middlesex Court Refuses a License to Dunellen Saloonkeeper.

Joseph Ritter, of Piscataway, has been granted a permit to sell liquor by Judge Woodbridge Strong, of New Brunswick. There was opposition to granting the liquor license of John Edward Lampster, of Dunellen, and he did not get it. This marks a victory for the Women Christian Temperance Union in Dunellen, who have made a determined fight against the saloon.

Fireman's Father Dead.

Frank McCabe, of the Fire Department, has received word from Dover, N. H., that his father is dead in Ire*land. The dead man leaves* three sons, Alexander and Barnard McCabe, both of Dover, N. H., and Frank McCabe, of this city.

Joy in Dunellen.

Miss Ruby Smalley and Chester A. Gaskill, both of Dunellen, will be married Wednesday night, January 6, at the home of the bride's mother in Brooklyn.

EARLY HISTORY OF SCOTCH PLAINS LIBRARY

Records in Existence Today of First Association Organized in 1800.

MET WITH HARD TIMES

PLAINFIELD MADE USE OF THE SECOND LIBRARY ASSOCIATION IN THE PLAINS.

Present Library Organized in 1889 Occupies Comfortable Quarters—Rooms for Entertainment of Young People—A Building Fund.

In historic old Scotch Plains there are few institutions of greater interest than the old library which is not only one of the oldest in the State, but as the present time, one of the largest and most complete of the smaller town libraries in New Jersey.

There have been three distinct library associations in the town. The first authentic record of one in 1800 when the Scotch Plains Reading Society was organized, the librarians record of books loaned by the society being in existence at the present time in a remarkable state of preservation. This society continued its existence presumably for twenty-three years until the incorporation of the Scotch Plains Library Company.

The early struggles to maintain the new institution are revealed in the minutes of a number of the meetings the records of which are in possession of the present librarian, William VanValkenburg. At the annual meeting of May 6, 1823, there was a balance of $6.16 in the treasury. Evidently this was a large sum in the eyes of some of the members of the company, as a motion that the annual payment be dispensed with was lost by a small vote. At this meeting Jonathan Osborn was appointed librarian for the ensuing year. The committee appointed to buy books consisted of Dennis Coles, grandfather of C. J. Ackerman, Coles, Samuel B. Miller and Jonathan Osborn. Recompense Stanbury, father of William Stanbury, was elected president and Dennis Cole vice president.

Two dollars and sixty-nine cents was the balance in the treasury at the next annual meeting in 1824 held at the schoolhouse, and adjourned to the tavern of Peter B. Davis. It was at this meeting that Scotch Plains claims Plainfield was given its first opportunity to avail itself of the benefits of a public library, the minutes of the meeting containing a record of a resolution recommending that the residents of the village of Plainfield be allowed the privileges of the library, such as were regularly accorded nonresident members. A resolution was also passed that Samuel B. Miller, Dennis Coles and Aaron Osborn act as a committee to consider the propriety of amending the constitution so as to remove a portion of the library to Plainfield. The records do not show, however, whether or not the change was made.

The present Scotch Plains library association was organized April 4, 1889, one of the principal objects of the association being to provide the young people of the village with a reading room. The association obtained the use of the parlors of the Excelsior Hose and Ladder Company for its purposes, and occupies the same comfortable quarters which are directly above the town hall, today. Three rooms are used, the largest for a reading room, the smaller ones for smoking and reception rooms.

Several years ago a building fund was established and still exists, the association hoping some day to own its own building. During the fourteen years of the association's existence, the number of volumes has increased from 350 to 1,495. The attendance has been encouraging, the records of the last quarter showing 750 visitors and the loan of 488 books. The association is without any endowment fund.

The present officers of the association are: President, John Robinson; vice president, Mrs. S. S. Thomas; secretary, William B. Noble; treasurer, Dr. W. F. Westcott; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Thomas M. Paff, Jr.; trustees, A. D. Sheppard, Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, Rev. Dr. A. H. Parks, Dr. F. W. Westcott, George B. Nicholl, David P. Hall, John Robinson, L. W. Miller, Mrs. T. J. Nicholl, Mrs. L. W. Miller, Miss Mary N. Mead and Miss Jennie E. Eyre.

Footpath in Township.

The North Plainfield Township Committee will soon begin the work of laying a footpath from the end of the Somerset street trolley line to Demler's hotel in the Notch. The footpath, which was secured by Hippolyte Texier, Postmaster Smith and Dr. Moldenke, will be three feet wide and six inches deep. As far as Codington's dam it will be located on the westerly side of the roadway and from there to the hotel it will run on the easterly side of Somerset street.

MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL OPEN

New Structure, a Credit to Plainfield, Inspected by the Public.

MANY AT RECEPTION

STORY OF THE INSTITUTION AND NAMES OF ITS BENEFACTORS.

While the fondest hopes of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, as well as all those who are especially interested in this institution, have not been entirely realized, there was a general spirit of rejoicing and thanksgiving Thursday, when the new hospital, situate at the corner of Park avenue and Randolph road, was opened for inspection and the reception of the people in Plainfield and North Plainfield. Of the group of five buildings which go to make up the new hospital, all are completed excepting the Eastern Ward for women and a few more days' work will finish the work in this building. Considering the difficulty experienced in getting the necessary money to build the new hospital, those in charge are deserving of much credit for what has been accomplished. There were about one thousand persons attending the reception.

A pleasant feature was the presentation to the Board of Governors of a check for $1,000 by a Plainfield woman who attended and desired to endow one of the private rooms. The gift was thankfully received.

There were a few pleasant surprises announced in a leaflet distributed among the guests. It contained on one page the floor plans for the hospital and on another page the list of subscribers to the building fund, names of the Board of Governors, medical staff, Woman's Auxiliary Board. The building committee occupy a place on a third page, while on the fourth page announcements are made of the fact that the Muhlenberg Operating Pavilion was given by J. Howard Wright, of New York, in memory of his two grandsons, Howard Wright Corlies and Parker Wright Mason, that the J. Hervey Ackerman Ward for men, was given by Ernest R. Ackerman, a member of the Board of Governors, and the isolation ward, which is yet to be built, is made possible by the subscriptions given by Mrs. Samuel Milliken, Edward F. Milliken, Foster Milliken and Mr. and Mrs. James W. DeGraff, all members of one family.

This is the cost of the land and new buildings: Lands, $11,000; approximate cost of all building erected (5), grading, driveways and sewer plant, $70,000; approximate cost of furniture and furnishings, $3,500; total, $83,500.

The building committee is composed of Charles J. Fisk, chairman; DeWitt C. Irons, J. Frank Hubbard, William R. Cook and Charles E. Brooks. Tracy & Swartout, of New York, were the architects and these were the contractors: W. E. Pangborn, C. M. Wilson, G. J. Tobin, Woolston & Buckle, Allen B. Laing, Kinsman & Kocap, J. W. Gavett, F. J. Hubbard and C. M. Meeker. The construction of new building was begun July 14, 1902, and the corner-stone was laid December 6, 1903. The buildings will be opened for the admission of patients December 28 1903.

In this connection it might be said that the hospital was incorporated May, 1877, and the first building opened for the admission of patients December 1, 1881.

These are the subscribers to the building fund, exclusive of the subscriptions to Nurses' Home fund: Morris Abrams, Ernest R. Ackerman, Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. Warren Ackerman, Albert H. Atterbury, Mrs. George H. Babcock, John T. Baker, Mrs. Noah C. Barnhart, Elliot T. Barrows, Mrs. Charles W. Beebe, John V. Berkman, Lucius H. Biglow, Jr., Edward H. Booth, Mrs. Josiah Bowne, Mrs. George H. Burgess, Charles C. Burnet, John Busbnell, William J. Buttfield, Aaron Carter, George A. Chapman, Edward B. Clark, James T. Closson, Conohmen's Union, William R. Cock, William R. Coddington, Mrs. Everett Colby, John H. Cuthbert, James W. DeGraff, Mrs. James W. DeGraff, Rev. M. E. Dwight, Alfred W. Duxbury, Alexander H. Faber, Charles J. Fisk, Miss Edith C. Fisk, Mrs. John G. Foster, Elston M. French, A Friend, George H. Frost, William A. Garrigues, Alexander Gilbert, Jabez C. Gilbert, Stephen A. Ginna, George H. Goddard, William T. Gough, George Gudewill, John F. Harman, Henry D. Hibbard, William F. Hobbie, Edwin S. Hooley, J. Frank Hubbard, Samuel Huntington, Mrs. Charles Hyde, Dorsey W. Hyde, Louis K. Hyde, Frank de L. Hyde, Henry C. Irons, DeWitt C. Ivins, James W. Jackson, Samuel F. Kimball, Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Charles S. Lee, Mrs. Rufus P. Lincoln, Through Mrs. Linke, Acker, Merrill & Condit, Ballantine & Company, Budde & Westermann, E. & J. Burke, Henry E. Gourd, Hunt & Leach, Karl Hutter, William Lanahan & Son, Fred. Pabst, G. S. Kamlock, Wilson Distilling Company, Mrs. Pierre Mali, Charles M. Maltbie, Craig A. Marsh, Charles W. McCutchen, Henry A. McGee, Medical Staff of Hospital, George P. Mellick, J. Dorsi Miller, Edward F. Milliken, Foster Milliken, Mrs. Samuel Milliken, Thomas Minford, Miss Elizabeth G. Morris, Thomas J. Mumford, William D. Murray, Mrs Lawrence Myers, Henry B. Newhall, William H. Pangborn, James F. Parker, Israel C. Pierson, Florentin Pelletier, Lewis V. F. Randolph, Howard P. Reynolds, Louis R. Ross, Harry G. Runkle, A. M. Runyon & Son, Isaac W. Rushmore, Joseph W. Sanford, William L. Saunders, Sylvanus L. Schoonmaker, Walter Scott, Charles Shipp, Alfred H. Shrevell, John F. Stevens, Harry M. Stockton, George A. Strong, Henry P. Talmadge, Mrs. Dexter O. Tiffany, J. Evarts Tracy, Tracy & Swartout, Miss Florence Tweedy, Miss Isabel Tweedy, Miss Mary E. Tweedy, Mason W. Tyler, Mrs. Mason W. Tyler, Mrs. Benjamin Urner, Anthony C. Vail, John Valiant, Mrs. Daniel T. VanBuren, Philip V. R. VanWyck, Mrs. William B. Wadsworth, Ernest E. Walz, Mrs. Frank D. Warren, Miss Catherine R. Webster, M. Weinberger, Clifton Wharton, Jr., John M. Whiton, Charles M. Wilson, Emil Woltmann, Francis Wood, Woodhull & Martin, J. Howard Wright, J. Dunbar Wright, Joseph W. Yates, Joseph B. Yerkes.

The Nurses' Home is also to be built. A fund of $1,400 has thus far been subscribed toward this building. The total cost is $8,000. For the present the nurses will be provided for on the third floor of the administration building, but it is hoped that the home will be made possible within a short time.

The familiar Red Cross flag was displayed yesterday on the Administration building during the hours of the reception. It is arranged to transfer the patients from the old to the new hospital on Monday, December 28

A few facts concerning the new hospital are interesting. It will accommodate sixty patients; thirty-four in the wards, sixteen in the women's ward and eighteen in the men's. Four patients can be provided for in the eye and ear wards and twenty-two in private and other rooms. In the construction of the hospital the very latest approved methods have been adopted. This is especially true of the operating pavilion, it being considered of the most modern type. The pavilion is tiled and the equipment is perfect. This same rule prevails in the other departments. In the basement is the dispensary. The group of five buildings include the Administration, the Muhlenberg Operating Pavilion, the J. Hervey Ackerman Ward, the Eastern Ward and the kitchen building. All are practically separate, yet all are connected. Yesterday a large sign placed in each room or department designated the use to which it will be placed. In the design and construction of the buildings much has devolved on Tracy & Swartout, the architects, and they have received much praise for their work.

At the reception the women of the auxiliary to the Board of Governors, together with the wives of many physicians of the city composed the receiving committee. These women received: Miss Elizabeth R. Cook, chairman; Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, Mrs. Daniel T. VanBuren, Mrs. Samuel Huntington, Mrs. Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Miss Emily B. Tracy, Mrs. Henry Lapsley, Miss Emilie Schipper, Miss Mary E. Tweedy, Mrs. J. Howard Wright, Mrs. M. Edgar Corlies, Mrs. John B. Dumont, Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, Mrs. Samuel Milliken, Mrs. James W. DeGraff, Mrs. Mason W. Tyler, Mrs. Charles Hyde Mrs. Dorsey W. Hyde, Mrs. Frank deL. Hyde, Mrs. Mina C. Edgerton, Mrs. Rowland Cox, Mrs. Eric N. Erickson, Mrs. John B. Probasco, Mrs. Thomas H. Tomlinson, Mrs. William C. Boone, Mrs. Monroe B. Long, Mrs. William H. Murray, Mrs. John H. Carman, Mrs. Erskine M. Rodman, Mrs. John C. Whiton, Jr., Frank Hubbard, Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy, Mrs. William E. Lowe, Mrs. George H. Goddard, Miss Mary A. E. Wood, Mrs. Howard P. Reynolds, Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, Mrs. DeWitt C. Ivins, Mrs. Benjamin A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. George A. Chapman and Mrs. William C. Kinney.

These women presided at the tables and poured tea: Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows, Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, Mrs. Robert Rushmore, Mrs. Evarts Tracy, Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, Mrs. J. Edgar Corlies, Mrs. F. H. Andrews, Mrs. W. A. Pinto, Mrs. John Gray Foster, Mrs. H. M. Stockton, Mrs. Lewis G. Timpson and Mrs. Lewis E. Waring. Assisting these women in the ten rooms were these young women: The Misses Helen Louise Brown, Douglass, Flanders, Margaret Goddard, Harriet Goddard, Harman, Holly, Grace Kaufman, Massett, Katharine North, Rodman, Rowland, Stevens, Strong, Helen Talmadge, Margaret Tracy and Florence Wadge.

Board of Governors consists of Charles J. Fisk, president; Rev. Erskine M. Rodman, William R. Cook, John M. Whiton, J. Frank Hubbard, Samuel Huntington, J. Evarts Tracy, William E. Lowe, George H. Goddard, Francis Wood, Howard P. Reynolds, Edward H. Ladd, Jr., William L. Saunders, Charles E. Brooks, Ernest R. Ackerman, DeWitt C. Ivins, Benjamin A. Hegeman, Jr., George A. Chapman, William C. Kinney; honorary member, J. Howard Wright.

This is the medical staff—Surgical department, Monroe B. Long, Ellis W. Hedges, William H. Murray, Benjamin van D. Hedges; eye and ear department, Frank C. Ard; medical department, Thomas H. Tomlinson, William C. Boone, John H. Carman, Peter J. Zeglio; pathologist and bacteriologist, Norman H. Probasco; M. Allen Starr, consulting physician; Joseph E. Janvrin, consulting gynecologist; Edward J. Ill, consulting gynecologist; William T. Ball, consulting surgeon; George W. Endicott, consulting surgeon; John B. Probasco, consulting surgeon.

Assistants to medical staff, Marcus L. Clawson, Albert Pittis, J. Hervey Buchanan, Peter B. Cregar, Alfred F. VanHorn.

The Woman's Auxiliary Board has to se officers: President, Miss Elizabeth B. Cook; vice presidents, Mrs. Daniel T. VanBuren, Mrs. Samuel Huntington. Miss Harriette E. Wildey is superintendent of the hospital.

ANOTHER AIR LINE TROLLEY CONSIDERED

Route Between Bound Brook and Newark to Pass Through Borough.

PLANS EXHIBITED HERE

THINK THAT TRIP CAN BE MADE IN TWO HOURS.

No Rights of Way Have Been Secured—Civil Engineers at Work—Said That Local Capital Will be Invested.

To connect the terminal of the Raritan River Railroad when it is extended from New Brunswick to Bound Brook with a trolley road, which will be an air line, between Bound Brook and Newark, is reported to be under consideration among some Philadelphia, Jersey City, Newark and Trenton capitalists. It is probable that there will be some local capital invested in the project.

The road will compete with the Plainfield, Elizabeth and Central Jersey lines and the Middlesex and Somerset section lines as it connects Dunellen and Bound Brook. The trolley road, it is said, was planned at the time the Baltimore and Ohio system took over the control of the Raritan river road. Nothing has been done so far in the way of securing rights of way, but a few days ago plans for a "fast line" were in this city and were shown to a few capitalists. It is planned to construct the road so that it will be possible for the cars to make the trip from Bound Brook to Newark in less than two hours.

The map showed that the road will connect Bound Brook, Dewey Park, North Plainfield, Summit, South Orange and Newark. The proposed "fast line," it is said, will only connect with regular stations and it is possible that it will handle express matter.

John Harvey, a farmer living near Dewey Park, declared a few days ago to a Daily Press reporter that he has seen a party of men at work surveying through that section for several days, and it is now believed that these men who stopped at South Plainfield may have been connected with the new company.

If such an arrangement is carried through New Brunswick, as well as Bound Brook and Plainfield will have an air line trolley communication with Newark.

PASTOR WAIVED EXAMINATION

MR. CRUDUP CONCLUDES THAT PRELIMINARY HEARING IS UNNECESSARY.

Rev. Essex J. Crudup, pastor of the Filmore Baptist Church, charged by John Alston with improper conduct with Mrs. Alston, waived examination Friday afternoon in Justice Huff's court through his counsel, Samuel S. Buckhaner, Esq. He will be tried at the next session of the Grand Jury. Bail was fixed at $500 and was not furnished despite efforts of the pastor's loyal parishioners.

An immense crowd was present, including many of the colored sisters of the church, when the case was called at 2 o'clock in the police court, and a general sigh of disappointment arose when it was learned that there was to be no hearing of the evidence.

William Newcorn, Esq., is Alston's legal adviser.

MIANTONOMO'S OFFICERS.

Nominations Made by Tribe of Red Men Last Night.

Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., nominated officers at last week's meeting: Prophet, Edward Crosby; sachem, Charles Kellar; senior sagamore, Samuel Montross; junior sagamore, Harry Dreier, William Vogel, Phillip Sheridan; chief of records, Charles L. Holstein; keeper of wampum, Fred A. Weber; representative to Great Council, Charles McKinley, alternate, Morris Kadensky; trustee, Past Sachems A. J. Stiglits, J. T. Green, John Schneider, Peter Sheridan, Charles McKinley, Michael Leahy, William Newcorn, Peter Doeringer, Morris Kadensky. Two propositions were received and the chief's degree was worked upon two candidates. An entertainment was provided, including songs by C. L. Holstein, George S. McGinnis, T. J. Green, speeches by Senior and Junior Sagamores Kellar and Montross and a clog dance by Past Sachem Slorah.

Building Permit.

The building permit for alterations and extensions in the building on the corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue, owned by the Hannah Dorlach estate, has been granted by Inspector Doane.

A SETTLED QUESTION

Panama Is a Closed Chapter In the History of Nations.

COLOMBIA MUST SOON SUBMIT.

Isthmians Have No Fear of Bogota Government's Action or of Her Army's Attempt to Reconquer the Country.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—"Refusal by the United States to consent to a proposition from Colombia for a reference of the Panama question to The Hague tribunal is expected and will be fully approved by the European powers."

This statement has been made by a European ambassador of high rank and influence. It has already been made in substance, though in rather more diplomatic language, to General Rafael Reyes, the Colombian minister, who is expected in his forthcoming note to the state department to suggest The Hague tribunal as the proper place for the settlement of the isthmian problem. Whether the knowledge that the refusal of such a request so far from prejudicing the European powers against the Washington government will call forth their emphatic indorsement will cause General Reyes to modify his note is not yet certain.

The ambassador quoted in explaining the attitude of European powers said:

"Panama is a closed chapter in the history of nations, and The Hague court is not the place for settled questions, but for pending questions, which are referred to it with the full approval of all the parties interested. When Russia, Germany and France recognized the independence of Panama they set their seal of approval on the prompt action of the Washington government in pledging itself to guarantee and maintain the independence of the republic it had previously recognized. Nations can hardly be expected to settle questions of sovereignty or national honor at The Hague. Moreover, in my opinion it would not be within the province of the Washington government to grant such a request from Colombia. It is to Panama, not to Washington, that Colombia should take such a proposition.

"There is, however, a question between Colombia and Panama which with all propriety might be referred to The Hague and to which reference the United States will scarcely offer objection. It is the question of the assumption of a portion of the public debt of Colombian debt. If General Reyes should ask the United States to use its good offices to have this matter brought before The Hague, Panama might safely acquiesce in such a proposition. The difficulty in making this request would be that Colombia thereby would recognize the independence of the new republic, but this must come sooner or later."

At the navy department the statement is made that the instructions to the naval commanders in isthmian waters to "prevent the landing of forces with hostile intent" have not been modified. These instructions, it is believed, are sufficiently comprehensive to enable the commanders to maintain open transit across the isthmus and to protect the new republic from Colombian expeditions.

A full and detailed report of the condition of affairs on the isthmus as he saw them will be made to President Roosevelt and to Secretary Hay by Admiral John G. Walker, chairman of the isthmian canal commission, who has just returned to Washington from Colon. The admiral on his arrival said:

"The Panama government is composed of excellent, capable men who have the confidence of the people. Everything is orderly and quiet, and had I not known that a revolution had taken place I would not have known it, nothing to show there had been any change. The only thing that was apparent was the fact that I could not get as much silver for an American dollar as I had on previous trips to that country. The government officials express confidence that the coming constitutional convention will indorse the ratification of the Hay-Bunau-Varilla Panama canal treaty."

The admiral said the isthmians have no fear that the Colombians will attempt to reconquer the country. There is not, he said, a trail in all Panama of sufficient width to drive a wagon. Colombia has never built a trail or constructed a bridge in Panama. The impassability of the country renders it unlikely, in the admiral's opinion, that any warlike measures will be undertaken by Colombia.

A report from Bogota says patriotic meetings are being held there every evening at which contributions of men and sums of money are offered to the government. Even the women demand to be enlisted for the purpose of going to Panama to subdue the separatists.

The government only awaits news from General Reyes and if that news is to the effect that nothing can be accomplished by diplomatic means then the authorities will continue to send troops toward the isthmus.

The government and people hope that the United States government will avoid a conflict, and they rely upon the fairness of the American press.

A MESSAGE FROM RICO.

Foreign Minister at Bogota Claims Treaty Has Been Violated.

BOGOTA, Dec. 23.—Dr. Luis Carlos Rico, minister of foreign affairs, cabled General Reyes at Washington as follows:

"If the explanation which the United States government has given to the press is of a diplomatic character answer, clearing the following points:

"By the treaty of 1846 the United States did not acquire control over interoceanic transit, but entered into obligations by which for compensatory favors it guaranteed the neutrality, property and sovereignty of the isthmus, the sovereignty being indivisible.

"If the United States government prevents the government of Colombia from subduing the rebels, then it ought to submit them to Colombian authority.

"The United States has never protected Colombia against foreign invasions. Whenever that government has interfered to prevent the interruption of traffic it has been because of the rights granted or at Colombia's request. Only in this instance has it interfered on its own initiative, with the evident object of protecting the secessionists on the isthmus.

"If the guarantee of neutrality were to be looked upon as a privilege it would prevent the sovereign government from keeping order on the isthmus, which is against the principles of all governments.

"The protocols of 1879 did not grant any new rights to the United States, much less the right of dominating this territory.

"The Hay-Herran canal treaty did not modify the obligations which the United States contracted by the treaty of 1846 to guarantee the neutrality, sovereignty and property of the isthmus. When this treaty was disapproved no new propositions were made.

"The orders given by the United States government to its navy have helped to favor the secession movement, and Colombia was at peace when this movement was begun.

"The conduct of the Washington executive has been and now is favorable in every way to the rebellion, but not to the maintenance of order, which is contrary to the principles and antecedents of the United States government and to the policy established by it during the American war of secession."

Buchanan at Colon.

COLON, Dec. 23.—William I. Buchanan, the United States minister to the republic of Panama, has arrived here on the Panama Railroad company's steamship Yucatan and immediately took a train for Panama in company with United States Consul Gudger, who came to Colon to receive the minister.

RISING SUN MURDER.

True Bills Returned Against Victim's Twin Brother and Others.

RISING SUN, Ind., Dec. 23.—In its report of the investigation of the assassination of Miss Elizabeth Gillespie, who was shot while sitting in her window at home, the grand jury has returned true bills of murder in the first degree against James Gillespie, a twin brother of the murdered woman; Mrs. Belle Seward, her widowed sister; Mrs. Carrie Barbour, niece of Dr. Thad A. Reamy, an eminent physician of Cincinnati, and Myron Barbour, her husband. Mrs. Barbour is sister-in-law of Dr. William Gillespie, brother of the murdered woman. When Gillespie were expecting the arrests, and Dr. Gillespie drove to the home of the accused in a closed carriage and brought the indicted persons to the courthouse, surrendering all of them to the court.

A newspaper photographer attempted to take a snap shot of the party and was struck by James Gillespie, who broke away from Sheriff Rump and knocked the camera from the hands of the photographer. The indictments charge them with "feloniously, maliciously and with premeditated intent causing the death of Elizabeth Gillespie." A conspiracy among members of the murdered woman's own family to kill her is charged. James Gillespie, her twin brother's life, who is charged as the principal, although all are charged with murder in the first degree. Each entered a plea of not guilty.

Must Work or Get Out.

VICTOR, Colo., Dec. 23.—Major H. A. Naylor, in command of the district during the absence of Colonel Verdeckberg, has made the statement that owing to the large number of idle men throughout the district an order would be issued next week that all those having no employment or visible means of support would be given the alternative of going to work, leaving the district or going to the bull pen for an indefinite term. A disbursement of $20,000 has been made to the soldiers.

Turkey Makes Reparation.

ALEXANDRETTA, Syria, Dec. 23.—The governor of Alexandretta made an official call upon United States Consul Davis and formally apologized for the indignities suffered by the consul. Admiral Cotton has left here on the United States cruiser San Francisco for Beirut. Attarin, the naturalized American citizen whose arrest by the Turkish authorities caused United States Consul Davis to leave Alexandretta, has been liberated.

Burglars Join Chain Gang.

MOBILE, Ala., Dec. 23.—Pending the convening of the next grand jury Albert Driscoll and J. E. Russell, suspected of being safe blowers, were sentenced to the county chain gang. The men are charged with having carried concealed weapons and bringing burglars' tools into the state. Under the laws of Alabama persons charged with state offenses may elect to go to the convict camp instead of remaining in jail until their cases are tried.

Pope's Dispensation For New Year's.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—The apostolic delegation has received word from Rome that the pope has granted dispensation from abstinence on New Year's day, which falls on Friday this year. The delegation has sent out circular letters to all the bishops notifying them of this fact.

SMITH'S TEAM ADDS ANOTHER VICTORY

Neal's Aggregation Also Wins in the Y. M. C. A. Basket Ball League Games.

FINAL PLAY NEXT WEEK

A CLEAN SWEEP MADE TO DATE BY SMITH'S TEAM.

Neal's Men Played All Around Heinecke's—Smith's Supurb Work—Both Games Easily Won—The Lineups.

Smith's team and Neal's were the victors in last week's games in the senior Y. M. C. A. basket ball league. Both victories were easily won, Smith's by a score of 24 to 14 over Hand and Neal's by 19 to 6 over Heinecke.

The games were played with considerable snap but with few evidences of practiced team work. Smith did great work for his team, dodging the opposing guard cleverly in the second half and scoring six pretty baskets. Hand's team led at the end of the first half in this game, 11 to 7, but were unable to maintain the pace in the second period.

Neal's men played rings around Heinecke's, leading them throughout. Seven of their points were scored through the many fouls of their opponents. The guarding of Heinecke's men was lax and at times their work was wholly spiritless.

Next week it will be Smith against Heinecke and Neal against Hand. The last two games in the league will be played after the holidays and another league to be run on a somewhat different plan will be started. Summaries:

Smith—Smith and Calcen, forwards; Hallock, centre; Schuck and Skull, guards. Hand—Sheppard and Hand, forwards; Joseph, centre; Carolin and Sebring, guards. Score, Smith 24, Hand 14. Goals from the floor, Smith 6, Calcen, Hallock 2, Schuck, Skull, Sheppard 1, Hand, Joseph 2, Sebring. Goals from fouls, Calcen 2, Joseph 2, Sebring 2.

Neal—Miner and Bentliff, forwards; Cahoone centre; Hoagland and Kirch, guards. Heinecke—Heinecke and Mundy, forwards; McCullough, centre; Collins and Utzinger, guards. Score, Neal 19, Heinecke 6. Goals from the floor, Miner 2, Bentliff 2, Cahoone 2, Heinecke 3. Goals from fouls, Cahoone 7.

Referee, Collier. Umpires, Hand, Heinecke and Long. Time, 15 min. halves.

Smith's team has made a clean sweep in the games played to date. It has won five and lost none. Heinecke and Neal are tied for second honors with two victories and three defeats, and Hand is last with one game won and four lost.

ACKEN, COUNCILOR.

Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M. Choses Officers.

Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., met last week in the Babcock building, at which time officers were nominated and elected. They are: Councilor, Harry Acken; vice councilor, R. B. VanArdale; conductor, Will LaTourette; warden, F. W. Welsh; inside sentinal, C. L. VanArdale; outside sentinal, R. Snyder; representative to State Council, Albert Pangborn and W. L. Walker, and T. B. Scull, were chosen delegates to the New Jersey Funeral Benefit Association.

CHURCH REPORTS.

Annual Statements Made of Monroe Avenue M. E. Church.

Reports from the officers of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church were received last night and all of the old business of the present year was cleared up. The church according to the reports has grown steadily stronger and more influential during the year. The library in particular has increased in importance. The officers of the church elected last month will assume their duties at the beginning of the new year.

Telephone Seeking Franchise.

The Fanwood Township Committee met last night, at which time an application was received from the Central New Jersey Telephone Company to enter that township with telephone wires in opposition to the New York and New Jersey system. The committee took no action in the matter beyond passing it to the first reading and allowed it to rest on the table. It will be brought up for discussion at the next meeting. The corporation counsel, William R. Codington, was present.

Charity Ball at Casino.

The charity ball for the benefit of the building fund of Muhlenberg Hospital will be held in the Casino on Thursday night, January 28.

XMAS OBSERVED BY THE SCHOOLS

Great Festivals in a Number of Local Churches Attract the Young and Old.

VARIOUS PROGRAMMES

The Anniversary of Christ's Birth Celebrated in Regal Style—Presents for the Young — Recitations, Songs and Stories Given by the Pupils—The Details.

First Baptist.

The little folks of the First Baptist church Sunday-school had a jolly good time at their annual Christmas entertainment held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room of the church. Mrs. J. A. Powlison, superintendent of this department, assisted by several teachers, was in charge. The room was appropriately decorated, while a Christmas tree was the centre of attraction.

The programme opened with Scripture reading by Mrs. Dudley S. Miller, a prayer and the singing of Luther's Cradle Hymn. This was followed with a welcome address by Herbert Rittenhouse and a song and recitations by Emilie Compton, Florence Neal, Ralph Smalley, Lawrence French, Elmer French, Lester Chandler, Junior VanDeventer and Bessie Carson. Ethel Marie Runyon and Bessie Cass were received as new members. Announcement was made of the birthdays of Mary Buchanan, Loraine Dunn and Mabel Douglass. Each pupil present received presents, consisting of books, games and dolls, while the older persons were served with tea and wafers.

Last night the entertainment for the older members of the Sunday-school as well as the church, attracted a large audience. C. H. Bigler, Jr., was the chairman of the Christmas entertainment committee. Joseph Lorain appeared in a series of imitations principally on the banjo and xylophone, as well as imitations of the phonograph, automobile and mosquitoes. Miss Edith Cline Ford gave a number of recitations, imitating birds and her impersonation of child life as well as other characters. Joe Mackay, "the human violin," and vocal mimic, who claims to be the only person giving the imitation of violin playing so near the real thing, that many were deceived. He related many humorous stores. He was accompanied on the piano by Miss Edith Cairns. At the close of the entertainment there was a novel feature. Bonbons were generously shot out of a small cannon into the audience, causing a wild scramble among both young and old for the confection.

Trinity Reformed.

The children of the primary department of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school were made happy with Christmas gifts and a Christmas celebration yesterday afternoon in the Sunday-school room. Those in the primary department received cases and the children on the cradle roll were given boxes of blocks. Songs and recitations were rendered by Helen Wooley, Edith Richards, Margaret Vandeventer, Blanche Derry, Gertrude Schleif and Edna Oliver. The entertainment was under the general charge of the superintendent of the primary department, Mrs. J. M. Tier, and the corps of teachers acted as a committee and served refreshments.

The Sunday-school room was crowded to the doors in the evening for the annual entertainment of the main department of the Sunday-school. A delightful programme was rendered. C. Southard Thompson, of Elizabeth, for a long time a resident of this city, was the chief entertainer. He is known as the "handkerchief king" and does things with handkerchiefs, making them appear and disappear in unaccountable places, that certainly give him the right to the title. He was loudly applauded for his clever work in this and other sleight-of-hand performances.

Other numbers on the programme were humorous selections and songs by J. F. Dillon, musical selections by Paul Cobeen and soprano solos by Miss Dorothy Halstead. Miss Halstead and Mr. Dillon, in a clever comedy sketch on the troubles of a newly married couple, kept the room in laughter.

The committee in charge of the entertainment consisted of Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, Miss Mabel Wilson, Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, Mrs. L. R. Schofield, Edgar Sheppard, H. J. Martin and H. W. Marshall.

At the close of the entertainment gifts were distributed to the members of the school.

First M. E.

The primary department of the First M. E. church Sunday-school had a good time yesterday afternoon in Vincent chapel, a Christmas entertainment being provided for the little tots. The affair was a simple, but enjoyable one, consisting of recitations by Dorothy Lynn, Jubilee Rowley, Chauncey Stewart, Edward Crone, Helen Derby and Helen Carson.

A Christmas tree, attractively decorated with holiday gifts for the children, was arranged in one of the class rooms and after the programme these gifts were distributed to the delight of the pupils. A feature thoroughly enjoyed was the serving of ice cream and cake. The entertainment was concluded with the playing of games. These women were in charge of the affair: Mrs. Arthur Crone, Mrs. Thomas McDonald, Miss Edna French, the Misses Snodgrass, Mrs. William Symons and Miss Elsie Horne.

Crescent Avenue.

The children of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, in a spirit of making Christmas a merry time for those little children in this city who are less fortunate, brought with them to the Yuletide exercises in the Sunday-school room of the church yesterday afternoon a quantity of wearing apparel and food for the children in the Industrial Home in this city. The gifts will fill a barrel and will be sent to the home today. The children at the afternoon entertainment were treated to a moving picture exhibition. These were most entertaining to the little folks. Later in the afternoon ice cream and cake were served. The older members of the Sabbath-school were entertained by the biograph pictures at night. Christmas greens formed the principal decorations. Those in charge of the programme were Miss Piersin, Mrs. Roger Murray and Miss Bowen. A feature of both the afternoon and evening entertainments was the singing of Christmas carols by the members of the school.

Holy Cross.

The Christmas entertainment at the Church of the Holy Cross, in the Borough, was conducted last night on an elaborate scale. The children were treated to the novel sight of seeing a real live Santa Claus climb down a chimney and received gifts from his hands.

Forming in the parish house, the choir augmented by the members of the Sunday-school, sang a processional to the church, where, for a half hour devotional and praise services were held. Christmas carols were sung and the rector, Rev. W. Montgomery Downey, made a short address to the younger members. After the services in the church had vested choir and Sunday-school pupils returned to the parish house, singing carols on the way, where they were introduced to Santa. Santa appeared in the person of William Westphal. The part was carried well.

The arrangements were in charge of the teachers of the Sunday-school. They spent most of the afternoon in arranging the place with Christmas greens and Yuletide blossoms. In charge were Mrs. William A. Westphal, Miss Faber, Mrs. Bradley Hall, Miss Miss Rita Pond, Bradley Hall and the rector, Rev. W. Montgomery Downey.

Park Avenue Baptist.

The members and friends of the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday-school were entertained last night by the annual Christmas tree celebration. All the seats in the Sunday-school room were occupied. The entertainment began with selections by the Mandolin and Banjo Club of the High School, under the leadership of Chester Briggs. Some mystifying sleight-of-hand tricks by Mr. —— Doane provided amusement, and Chester Briggs was heartily applauded for some finely played mandolin solos. Henry Hall's phonographic selections were particularly good. A selection by the Mandolin and Banjo Club concluded the programme.

Gifts of dolls and toys were distributed by the committee to the children in the primary department and boxes of candy to all the members of the school. The committee consisted of Miss Florence Hawkins, chairman; Mrs. Nelson Runyon, Miss Delia Runyon and Mrs. W. S. Lowry.

Monroe Avenue M. E.

Readings on the birth and childhood of Christ illustrated by stereopticon views were the feature of the entertainment of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church Sunday-school last night. A series of humorous pictures was also presented. Weston Gavett and Fred Phillips had charge of the stereopticon. The music included several carols, singing by the primary department and a solo by Miss May Pound. The entertainment was in charge of Walter M. McGee, superintendent of the Sunday-school.

Hope Chapel.

A most successful Christmas entertainment was held by the Hope chapel Sunday-school last night. The programme consisted of an address by Henry C. Squiers, superintendent; the singing of Christmas carols by the school; the presentation of stereopticon views and moving pictures, and recitations by Elmer DeHart and Miss Mabel Hunter. The singing was led by Ira W. Travell. Gifts of candy and oranges were distributed to all the members of the Sunday-school and the children of the primary department were remembered with dolls and other toys. The committee in charge was composed of I. W. Travell, chairman; John H. Cose, George E. Firstbrook, Benjamin Evans and Charles Vincent.

Grace M. E.

"A Christmas Eve Adventure" was the title of a clever four-act play produced last night in the Sunday-school rooms of the Grace M. E. church. In the case were Miss Ada VanHorn, Stubbpardee; Miss Adelaide March, Fairy Queen; Misses Jennie and Alice DeMott, flower girls; Miss Edna Sebring, Miss Kipsey and Miss Margaret Darby, fairies. Others in the cast were Benjamin Schuck, Russell Harden, Raymond Stevens, Russell Conroy, Miss Anna Hoagland and Miss Bertha Simpson. All those in the cast were attired in brilliant costumes.

The committee in charge of the arrangements were Miss Della Voehl, Miss Minnie Marsh, Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp, Benjamin Schuck, Mrs. Giddis and the superintendent of the school, John Valiant.

In the afternoon the little children of the school took part in a Christmas entertainment which was a great success. The little ones sang carols and took part in motion songs. The committee in charge of this part of the programme was Miss Belle Lunger and Miss Winifred Carroll.

Bethel Chapel.

One of the most cheerful places in the city last night was Bethel chapel where Christmas exercises were held. The church was decorated artistically with greens, ferns and Yuletide blossoms and each person present received a gift. The committee in charge of the exercises consisted of Miss Ophelia Dorsey, Miss Clara Lane, Miss Anna Brodnax aond Benjamin Sutton. These had charge of the refreshments of ice cream and cake. The presents were given out by the superintendent, Stephen A. Ginna, and the pastor, Rev. F. D. Tilden. Christmas carols were sung by the Sunday-school scholars and Miss Gussie Wray.

First Presbyterian.

The Christmas entertainment yesterday afternoon in the Sunday-school room of the First Presbyterian church closed with a cob-web social. At the end of the various strings the members of the Sabbath-school found their gifts.

Exercises and recitations were given by Elston Hoagland, Tullia Alcord, Marielle Dunham, Ethel Naylor, Margaret Hutchinson, Ethel Neill, Francis Cadwell, Craig Blair, Lucille Ewart, Marguerite Woolston, Harold Phifer, James Buckle, Iola Schenck, Constans Hutchinson and Marion Wan.

"The Awakening of Santa Claus," these took part: Santa Claus, John S. Johnston; Mrs. Santa Claus, Miss Julia Williams; star fairies, Tullia Alcord, Marielle Dunham and Ethel Naylor; old man, in search of the North Pole, Ray Boice; his wife, Galdys Edsall; polar bear, Charles Burns; mother goose, Beatrice Bedford; boy blue, Lucile Ewart; Jack, Craig Blair; Jill, Margarite Currin; Mother Hubbard, Francis Cadwell; imps, James Buckle, Horace Adams, Harold Phifer and Elston Hoagland.

The Santa Claus at the First Presbyterian church even remembered the members of the cradle roll. Each tot received a scrap book. Photographs of all the members of these were associate members of the Sunday-school were displayed. The committee in charge of the arrangements for the entertainment was Miss Jessie Pruden, Miss Josephine Morrison, Miss Linda Morrison, Mrs. George Ballantyne, Miss Clara Dunham and Mrs. Edgar W. Williams.

East Third Street Chapel.

Both old and young had a good time at the Christmas entertainment at the East Tihrd Street chapel, last night, when a varied programme was presented. Joseph Lorain, who afterward entertained at the First Baptist church entertained, assisted other talent in giving his clever imitations and playing on the banjo, while Rosano, a juggler, kept all in perfect wonderment as he performed his various tricks.

Fred VanEps received a great ovation when he rendered a number of his best selections on the banjo, while soprano solos by Miss Florence Bennett, recitations by Miss Hazel Grant and cornet solos by DeWitt France were fully enjoyed, as were also vocal duets by Miss Nettie Young and Miss Freda Gray, a violin solo by Harold Welsh, accompanied by Mrs. G. W. Saums. There were several carols by the primary department, led by Miss Christine Vibrock.

After the entertainment there was the presentation of several gifts, including a Morris chair to Rev. George Bowers, who has labored faithfully at the chapel, and a handsome hall chair to L. W. Randolph, the superintendent of the chapel. Mr. Randolph presented the Morris chair, while U. B. Crane presented the hall chair on behalf of the Sunday-school. Rev. J. Lester Leggett, who enters upon his work at the chapel January 1 was present and was introduced to the members and friends.

This committee was in charge: L. W. Randolph, U. B. Crane, Edward Baker, Frank Stewart, Webster Grant, Miss Idilie Titus, Miss Lizzie Frank, Miss Hattie Ayres, Mrs. John Mackey, the Misses Mackey, Miss Deborah Winn and Miss Christine Vibrock. All of the members of the school received appropriate gifts.

Seventh-Day Baptist.

"Santa Claus' Defenders," was the name of a Christmas cantata given at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, last night under the auspices of the Sabbath-school. Various pupils of the school, together with a chorus composed of the little folks in the primary department gave the cantata. These folks heard that there was a scheme on foot to do away with Santa and they rally to the support of the patron saint.

The chief characters included "Mr. Discontent," Charles P. Titsworth; "Santa Claus," Charles Neagle; "Grimmy," Roy Titsworth; "Old Women," Mrs. J. G. Miller, Miss Nan Randolph, Mrs. C. H. Dunham, Dr. Martha Stillman and Mrs. G. E. Stillman; "Goodwill," Helen Rogers; "Peace," Ethel Rogers; "Love," Helen Ford; "Fairy Sylph," Nellie Williams; magic dolls, Hannah Shaw, Dorothy Hubbard, Jessie Jones and Evaleise St. John; "Harry," Alfred Manley; "Herman," Robert Mitchell; "Amos," Phillip Mosher; "Baker," Boardman Mosher; "Bits," Violet Jones, while Miss Cornelia impersonated the characters of "Maggie," a street waif, and "Amelia," singing two soprano solos in each impersonation. Mrs. W. C. Hubbard was the accompanist.

After the entertainment Santa Claus distributed gifts. The entertainment was in charge of Miss Ernestine C. Smith, chairman; Miss Myra Clark and Mrs. Nathan E. Lewis. This was the refreshment committee: Mrs. G. H. Babcock, Mrs. O. L. Ford, Mrs. I. N. Phillip Mosher; Mrs. W. H. Satterlee and Mrs. J. G. Miller. Miss Ida Spicer purchased the presents and C. L. Ford's Bible class took charge of the decorations.

Each person attending brought either an apple or potato and these will be distributed today among poor families in the city.

Grace Church.

The Christmas festival of the Sunday-school of Grace church, held in the parish house, last night, differed from those held in previous years. There was no tree and the entertainment was provided by a professional prestidigitateur, who bewildered both old and young. The other part of the entertainment consisted of mandolin and banjo selections by four men who belong to the colored mission of the church.

The pupils of the school received gifts of candy, but other more substantial gifts were brought to the church a week ago Sunday. These were sent to the Mission House at Trenton to be distributed among the poor of the diocese.

These persons composed the committee in charge of the affair: Mrs. W. Fairlie Dunn, Mrs. J. P. Taylor, Miss Florence Tweedy, Miss Rodman and Harry Finch, Howard Fleming and J. E. Erickson.

Heart Party Now Year's.

The entertainment committee of the Park Club has completed arrangements for the New Year's Day reception to be held at the clubhouse in the afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock. At night there will be a progressive heart party with the usual pleasant features.

Shoplifter in Court.

Charles Francis, arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge of shoplifting at Koon's Five and Ten Cent store, was released on a suspended sentence this morning in the city court.

John Dunn, of North avenue, has recovered from a slight illness.

SCENES MAGNIFICENT PICTURED VIVIDLY

J. Dunbar Wright's Description of Enchanting Country Including Yellowstone Park.

AT THE PARK CLUB

LECTURE ON AMERICAN'S WONDERLAND FINELY ILLUSTRATED.

The Grandeur of Nature as Seen Through a Car Window—Talk Given for the Benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital.

Through the unique scenery of the Yellowstone Park and among the grand peaks and passes of the Canadian rockies, J. Dunbar Wright, conducted the enthusiastic party of Plainfielders, who, Tuesday night, attended his lecture at the Park Club house. The lecture was an account of a trip actually taken by the speaker through the wonderful county he described, and the fine photographs which illustrated it were the work of his own camera.

In beginning his account of the Yellowstone, Mr. Wright exhibited a map, showing the location of the various points of interest in the Park, and the route taken by the coaches which traverse it, the trip usually being made in five days.

Pictures of the hotels at the stopping places were shown, Mr. Wright making humorous comments on the accommodations to be found at each. The comfortable coaches, each with its quartette or strong and well-kept horses, were shown in many situations along the route, travelling the almost perfect roads of the Park, some of which are a triumph of engineering skill over nature's obstacles.

The speaker gave a vivid description of the scenes in this wonderland of America; the marvellous many shaped and brilliantly colored formations of limestone and silicate, the boiling springs, strange hot water or mud geysers, with their periodical erruption, the weird Fire-Hole river, and the grand canyon, in the rushing waters at the bottom of which Mr. Wright caught the finest brook trout of his experience.

The second part of the lecture was devoted to the trip through the Canadan Rockies by way of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The photographs were taken, in part, from the car window. Views of sublime peaks, deep gorges, dashing cataracts and rivers of ice followed in rapid succession. Others pictured Mr. Wright experiences in climbing mountains and glaciers, where, as he remarked, one could slide down, in five minutes, the slope he had taken five hours to climb.

The lecture was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. Mr. Wright's style was simple, entertaining, and humorous, while his photographs were remarkably clear and illustrative, and in many cases had been colored so as to bring out in an excellent manner the striking hues to be seen in the Yellowstone scenery.

The last views of the series were not exhibited, as unfortunately the gas in the stereopticon suddenly gave out. Mr. Wright, however, added that his had nearly given out also, so the gathering broke up amid much laughter.

The lecture, which was well attended, was given for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital. The name of Wright is no new one in effort in behalf of the hospital, as it was the father of last night's speaker who was instrumental in the building of the new operating pavilion.

FATAL FRACTURE OF SKULL.

James B. and Robert Guttridge Hear of Their Father's Death.

Word has been received by James B. and Robert Guttridge, of South avenue, of the particulars concerning the death of their father, Robert Guttridge, which occurred at his home in Snettisham, County of Norfolk, England, December 16. He was out riding and he stopped his horse to button his coat, it being a very cold day. A horse he was driving gave a sudden start and threw Mr. Guttridge out of a wagon, fracturing his skull and caused death. Mr. Guttridge was in the sixty-ninth year of his age.

JOCELYN JOHNSTONE'S WILL IS PROBATED

Former Rector of the Church of the Holy Cross Cuts Off a Daughter and a Son.

ESTATE LEFT IN TRUST

LEWIS M. AND NORA JOHNSTONE THE BENEFICIARIES NAMED.

Legatees Must Not Communicate With Their Mother, the Divorced Wife of Rev. Mr. Johnstone—Value of the Estate is Unknown.

The will of Jocelyn Johnstone, late private secretary to former Borough President Gugenheimer, of New York once rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, North Plainfield, and later an instructor of boys here, was admitted to probate yesterday in the Surrogate's office, New York. The value of the estate is unknown. The will is dated January 2, 1902, shortly before the testator's death. The entire estate is left in trust to Robert S. Johnstone, a deputy assistant district attorney, with the exception of his library which goes to his son, Lewis M. Johnstone, when he attains his majority. The testator directs that all his property be sold and the proceeds used to pay for the education of his son Lewis at the Columbia Law School. Should the sum realized be insufficient the will directs that the deficiency shall be made up from royalties upon book and manuscripts.

The testator provides that the residue of the estate shall be paid over to his daughter, Nora M. Johnstone, characterized in the will as dutiful and affectionate to him. The will provides however that if the son Lewis or the daughter Nora communicate or associate with their mother living in Birmingham, England, from whom Mr. Johnstone was divorced, their share in the estate shall go to his brother, Roden Johnstone, in Downpatrick, Ireland. A further provision of the will is that $1 each shall be paid to Alan M. Johnstone, a son, and Olive M. Johnstone, a daughter, as their full share of the estate.

STRANDED THESPIAN ARRESTED

CLIFFORD MENUEZ, AN ACTOR, SEARCHING FOR HIS WIFE, WHO IS AN ACTRESS.

Clifford Menuez, a broken down actor, was stranded in this city yesterday, and was taken to police headquarters by Patrolman Overbaugh because it was said he had been acting suspiciously at the North avenue railroad station. He was given a night's lodging at the station and told to leave town this morning.

Menuez stated that he had come here from Boston over the Joy line to New York city, looking for his wife, who, he said, had been playing with a company at the Central theatre. He claimed that his home was in Chillicothie, Ohio, and that he had telegraphed to a brother in that place who had promised to send him money.

It was thought at the North avenue station that someone had been tampering with the lock of the ticket office, but there was nothing to show that Menuez had been guilty of this.

The Present Incumbent Has Served Faithfully for 37 Years—Majority of Property Owners Remonstrate Against Practical Politics Being Introduced—The Petition.

Mayor Jenkins has received a petition from the residents and property owners of the Third ward urging the re-appointment of Joseph A. Hubbard as assessor from that ward.

Men from all walks of life, irrespective of party affiliation, have united in an expression of confidence in, and fitness for, this important office. They represent a majority both of the taxable property and voters in the ward.

The list also includes all the Commissioners of Appeal and a majority of the Third ward Republican City Committee.

Another petition and indorsement from members of the Union County Board of Assessors has also been presented. For many years Mr. Hubbard has been continuously identified with this office, and he has done much to equalize taxation throughout the county The city has had no more conscientious public servant.

Why not re-appoint him? Who is urging a change, and why?

These are questions the petitioners of the Third ward wish answered.

The Daily Press which first protested against the proposed change herewith reproduces the petition:

Plainfield, N. J., Dec. 30, 1903.

To the Hon. Olin L. Jenkins, Mayor of the City of Plainfield, N. J.:

Dear Sir: The undersigned residents and property owners of the Third ward, do hereby recommend the re-appointment of Mr. Joseph A. Hubbard as Assessor of the Third ward for the ensuing term:

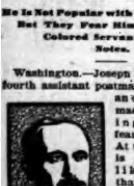
MEN OF WASHINGTON

A Budget of Timely Gossip from the National Capitol.

THE POSITION OF BRISTOW

He Is Not Popular with the Politicians But They Fear Him—A Popular Colored Servant—Other Notes.

Washington.—Joseph L. Bristow, the fourth assistant postmaster general, is an official who has made good by being strictly and fearlessly honest. At this moment he is perhaps less liked personally than any other official of the government, and yet there is no other official of the government who is quite so sure of holding on to his position as long as he likes, as is Mr. Bristow.



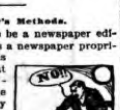
Hon. Joseph L. Bristow

In the course of his career as fourth assistant postmaster general he has made enemies by the hundred, and many of these enemies are men high in position and possessed of great influence; but he goes cheerfully on, seemingly indifferent to friendships or enmities, attending strictly to business and making good.

Bristow occupies an anomalous position. He not only has administrative duties in the postal service, having immediate supervision over fourth-class postmasters, and now temporarily of the delivery systems; but he is also head of the force of detectives, known as inspectors, who are set over the rest of the postal service to see that it is kept up to the mark. These inspectors are constantly going up and down all over the United States looking into the operations of every post office, so that Bristow is in reality at the head of a great detective bureau, and in the course of events, through long habit, he has become an ingrained detective himself. Perhaps that is now his most marked characteristic. He hunts for crime with the instinct of a policeman, and he glories in its discovery. In pursuing the ends of justice he is influenced by neither personal nor political considerations. No wonder he is not liked.

Bristow's Methods.

Bristow used to be a newspaper editor. In fact, he is a newspaper proprietor now, and his income from that source supplements nicely the niggardly salary paid by the government. When he was personally conducting his little paper, the Journal, out in Kansas they say he was always hot on the scent of anything that looked like crookedness, and the practice he had there has stood him in good stead since.



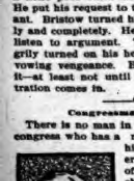
Turned the Screw Down

But the habit of mind is not conducive to personal popularity. Senators and representatives who have business with Bristow in the administrative division of his work complain that he always seems to look on them with suspicion. So pronounced had this feeling become a few months ago that there was a strong movement to secure his removal in order to make way for somebody who would be a little more tactful and confiding. Indeed the movement had gained such headway that Bristow's departure from Washington was confidently looked for by the unregenerate when the president suddenly ordered the general investigation of the post office and the fat was in the fire.

Bristow is really no more popular now than he was before he made his record of indicting the postal conspirators, but he is several hundred per cent stronger. One of the most influential men in the senate called on Bristow not long ago to inquire about a little post office affair in his state. He put his request to the fourth assistant. Bristow turned him down abruptly and completely. He refused even to listen to argument. The senator angrily turned on his heel and went out vowing vengeance. But he won't get it—at least not until a new administration comes in.

Congressman Hitt.

There is no man in either branch of congress who has a more interesting history than Robert Roberts Hitt, of Illinois, the chairman of the committee on foreign relations.



Hon. Robert R. Hitt

Mr. Hitt, away back before the war, as a boy, was the stenographer who took down Lincoln's speeches in the Lincoln-Douglas debate. Afterwards he came to Washington, and he was connected with the white house staff when Lincoln was assassinated.

When Andrew Jackson took the oath of office as president, after the tragedy, Hitt was present in his capacity as stenographer, and he tells an interesting story of that occasion which has never been in print. It is history that Johnson was drunk on condition to take the oath. To put it charitably, he was over-stimulated. As the oath was administered he turned to those near him and muttered:

"That ain't the thing that counts. They'll have to look at my record to see what I'm going to do."

He then proceeded to deliver a rambling address, which Hitt took down in short hand. The speech was so extraordinary that republican leaders who heard it went to Hitt and told him that it must not be given to the public in the form in which it was delivered. Hitt accordingly wrote it out and submitted it to some of the wiser heads that night. They went over it carefully, polishing it into shape, all with the view to preparing the way for a sentence which they added: "I shall follow in the steps of my lamented predecessor."

After this doctoring Hitt took the speech to the new president. By that time Johnson had sobered up. He read the speech over carefully and with evident approval.

"I didn't realize," he said, "that I was making so good a speech."

But when he came to the last sentence he balked.

"Did I say that?" he asked. "I don't remember anything like that."

Hitt replied that he hadn't quite caught the conclusion of the speech, but he believed that was what the president intended to say. But Johnson wouldn't have it. He went over the sentence several times and then declared that he would not let it go that way. He struck out the obnoxious sentence, and all the scheming of the wise leaders went for nothing.

Passing of a Colored Factotum.

"Uncle Jerry" Smith, the old colored factotum at the white house, has raised the stars and stripes over the historic mansion for the last time.

Ever since Grant was president, a generation ago, Uncle Jerry has performed that duty, and he has taken as great pride in it as the color bearer of a regiment does in carrying his standard into the thick of the fight, but increasing years, with their legacy of feebleness and, failing sight, have served him the summons at last, and hereafter the agreeable task will be executed by younger hands.

Several times of late Uncle Jerry has raised the flag union down. It happened, unfortunately, on the day the Honorable Artillery of London visited the white house, and that brought the situation to a climax.

A retired enlisted man of the navy and a retired sergeant of the army will now perform the ceremony by turn—which is fitting; as the president is commander in chief of the army and navy of the United States.

There will be sincere grief over the departure of Uncle Jerry. No public functionary in Washington has been more familiarly known by all sorts and conditions of men. A southern darkey of the old type, courteous to the point of elegance, with a cheery smile and a profound bow for every frequenter of the executive mansion, he has been a picturesque survival of the earlier day. Nobody will ever fill his place. His long white apron and broom and his honeyed speeches are things of the past, never to be recalled.

Senator Quay

Quay Will Stay.

Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, says that Senator Quay will be re-elected. Senator Quay says that this is his last term in the senate. The chances are that Penrose is right, in spite of the fact that Quay is the acknowledged boss of Pennsylvania politics and ought to know as much about his own political future as anybody else.

The fact is that the Pennsylvania republicans need Quay in the senate, and nobody else could quite take his place. He announced a year or so ago that he would not be a candidate for reelection. That was when he was ill and felt his life might depend on his withdrawal from public life.

He is better now. In fact, he is better than he has been before in years, and the members of the organization think he had better remain in the senate, thus preventing a fight for the succession, which is always unpleasant in a state where the machine likes to see itself running smoothly without any creaking of the joints. The chances are that Quay will be reelected by the machine and that he will agree to serve again.

Quay has always been regarded as an Indian in politics. He never forgets a friend or forgives an enemy. It is not generally known, however, that Quay is realy of Indian descent, and that he is very proud of it. If he had the right he would be chief of a tribe which is now quartered in the Indian territory. On certain ceremonial occasions they always send for him and they always expect him to come. He has rather go out and fraternize with the red men with whom he claims kinship than participate in the most splendid function in Washington. They are proud of him and he seems to be equally proud of them.

LOUIS A. COOLIDGE

THE NAVY'S FAVORITE.

Commander Lucien Young Probably Is the Most Popular Man and Officer in the Service.

Commander Lucien Young, U. S. N., who has charge of the lighthouse service on the great lakes, with headquarters in Chicago, is possibly the most popular officer in the navy, and this is saying much. They tell the story that when Young was appointed to the naval academy and was undergoing his preliminary examination for entrance he spelled Europe "Urope," a feat which made the board of naval examiners laugh. One of the members said, however: "Look at the physique of that boy and don't let a little thing like the dropping of an "E" stand between him and a sailor's life."

Young was admitted to the academy and the government has been glad of it ever since. When he was on his first cruise in the Mediterranean he jumped overboard from the yard arm into a heavy sea and saved the life of a sailor who had been washed from the deck. Some years later when the U. S. S. Huron was wrecked off Hatteras, Young volunteered to attempt to carry a line ashore. It was midnight and there was a howling storm bowling down the coast. The captain of the Huron told Young there wasn't one chance in a million that he could reach shore alive. "I'm lucky," said Young. "I think I can hit the one chance," and saying it he went overboard with a light line. He was nearly dashed to pieces on the rocks, but he succeeded in making his way through the black night and the white sea until he could get a footing on the beach. When he gained consciousness some time afterward he learned that the line he had brought ashore had been the means of saving half the crew of the Huron.

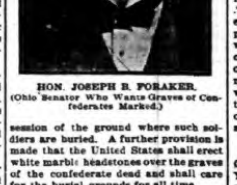
CONFEDERATE GRAVES.

Senator Foraker of Ohio Wants Uncle Sam to Erect Marble Headstones Over Them.

Senator Foraker has introduced a bill in the senate which has for its purpose to carry out in part the wish expressed by President McKinley when he made his notable tour of the south the year before he was assassinated. The Ohio senator's measure provides "for the appropriate marking of the graves of the soldiers and sailors of the confederate army and navy." It authorizes the secretary of war to ascertain the locations of all the graves of confederates who died in federal prisons and military hospitals in the north, and to acquire possession of the ground where such soldiers are buried. A further provision is made that the United States shall erect white marble headstones over the graves of the confederate dead and shall care for the burial grounds for all time.



HON. JOSEPH R. FORAKER.
(Ohio Senator Who Wants Graves of Confederates Marked.)

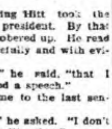
Senator Foraker's bill carries with it an appropriation of $100,000 for this purpose of doing reverence to the memory of "him who was once mine enemy."

A Stone in His Appendix.

Within a period of less than 12 months Clarence Lowe, of Morrisville, N. Y., has suffered from three severe and prolonged attacks of appendicitis. The last attack came on about three weeks ago. Making no permanent improvement, the attending physicians decided that an operation would be necessary to save the patient's life, and a few days ago the appendix was removed. The surgeons were dumfounded to find that the severed appendix contained what closely resembled a smooth stone or some hard substance nearly an inch in length and resembling a filbert. The doctors are strongly of the opinion that the ball gradually formed in the appendix, as the opening of the appendix is much too small to admit of the passage of any hard substance of the size of the one they found. The young man is making rapid recovery.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Alumni coaching has proved popular among colleges of the west of late and there has been a tendency to thus replace the familiar type of leader. Arthur Curtis, an alumnus of the University of Wisconsin, and who coached the Badger football squad the past season, was employed to continue another year. Fogg, Juneau, Abbott, Driver and Lerum, who have played on the team for two seasons, are being considered as assistants. It is regretted by those in favor of the alumni system that in most cases the change to this method is induced by the failure of the big teams to succeed in the company in which they wish to travel. Prominent among the schools of the west is Illinois, which will inaugurate a return to the system once inaugurated by George Huff. Huff was a Dartmouth man, pure and simple, but yet was strong with Illinois and in some respects regarded as an alumnus. He was succeeded by a long list of special coaches, who under the conditions at Illinois proved practical failures. They failed largely because of their youth in the coaching line and because they either did not have the brain to develop under Illinois conditions or did not stick to the task as Stagg and Yost have done. Yost, however, had his preliminary ups and downs with other schools and learned many valuable lessons. Illinois coaches have never had that opportunity. It is thought that perhaps an alumnus would, as with the case of Curtis at Wisconsin, have the interest and confidence of the school and be permitted to work out a system. It seems now very likely that the ex-center rush, Lowenthal, of Illinois, will be the man selected to inaugurate a return to the old-time style of coaching at Illinois. McCornack at Northwestern has a three-year contract. When he quits he hopes to see an alumni system of coaching established. Should he do so and have successful teams the next two years, it will be the first winning school to quit one system and go to the other with its eyes open. And a severe task it will be for the poor alumnus who steps in at that critical time and a blow it will be to the school should the system fail to make good at the jump-off.



Arthur Curtis

To "Larry" Lajoie, captain of the Cleveland American league team, belongs the real honor of having been the leading batter in the league during the season of 1903, with an average of .355. "Duke" Farrell, the veteran catcher of the Boston team, heads the list with a percentage of 406, according to the official figures, but as Farrell played but 17 games, while Lajoie appeared in 126 contests the honor of the year go to the big Frenchman. After Lajoie comes the name of the unfortunate Delehanty of the Washington team, who lost his life in the Niagara river. "Del" had played in 43 games and an average of .349. "Nick" Altrock, the pitcher who won the final game for the White Sox in the local post-season series, is fourth on the list, with a percentage of .333 and after him comes Crawford of Detroit, Dougherty of Boston, Hickman of Cleveland, Young of Boston and "Willie" Keeler of New York. Earl Moore of Cleveland, with 22 games won to seven lost, heads the list of pitchers with a percentage of .759. While Moore is the leader he has but two points the better of Rhoades of Boston, who won 29 games and lost but nine, and Tom Hughes of Boston has a percentage of .750, winning 21 games and losing seven. Bernhard of Cleveland, who led the pitchers last year, is in fourth place, with a percentage of .737. Fielder Jones of the Chicago White Sox leads the outfielders with an average of .968, making but four errors in 137 games, while "Billy" Sullivan of the same team is a close second to Jack Warner of New York among the catchers, with a percentage of .997.

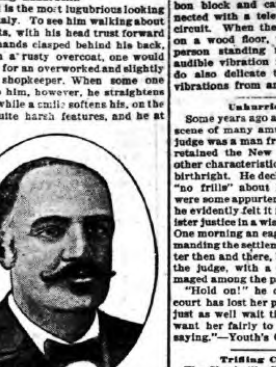
James J. Hogan, '05, of Torrington, Conn., has been elected captain of the Yale eleven for next year. Hogan has played tackle for three years on the Blue and prepared at Phillips Exeter academy.

A decision of importance to bowlers and bowling clubs intending to participate in the national championship contests of the American Bowling congress at Cleveland, February 22-29, has been rendered by the executive committee. Under the Indianapolis plan of organization it was supposed that all entries would have to be affiliated with one of the local city organizations. This, however, is not the case. Any club or bowler is eligible upon compliance with the rules of the congress, but no club is entitled to any voice in the proceedings of the congress unless affiliated with one of the city associations.

"Bobby" Walthour, for himself and his team mate, Munroe, won the recent six-day bicycle race in Madison Square Garden. Forty yards separated Walthour from Leander, who was second at the finish, being ten good yards ahead of Floyd Krebs, behind whom came Fisher, an indifferent fourth.

ITALY'S NEW PREMIER.

Although Democratic in Principle, Signor Giolitti Is a Thorough Disciplinarian.



GIOVANNO GIOLITTI.
(Recently Appointed Prime Minister to the Kingdom of Italy.)

It would be hard to find a more genuinely picturesque man of affairs among European statesmen than Signor Giovanni Giolitti, Italy's new prime minister, to whom has just been handed over such a tangled skein for unraveling by the retiring Zanardelli.

Giolitti is the most lugubrious looking man in Italy. To see him walking about the streets, with his head trust forward and his hands clasped behind his back, attired in a rusty overcoat, one would take him for an overworked and slightly anxious shopkeeper. When some one speaks to him, however, he straightens himself, while a smile softens his, on the whole, quite harsh features, and he at once shows what he is—a leader of men.

Although a democrat in every drop of his blood and in every line of his figure, he is respected, but feared, by his subordinates. When he first went to the ministry of the interior, the clerks, ignoring the lesson which they should have learned in a glance at the man, thought that, as he was a democrat they might relax some of that deference which is used to exaggeration in monarchical countries, and Italy in particular. But a few prompt transferrings to small country places soon made matters clear and showed them who they had to deal with.

When minister, seeing the king often and being treated by him as a friend, Giolitti lost none of his "republican" simplicity. One day he arrived at the royal palace, and, instead of waiting for all the usual red tape of being passed from one flunkey to another, introduced himself immediately into the royal presence. Victor Emanuel III. looked up surprised, but Giolitti disarmed his anger by saying:

"Your majesty knows I am not used to courts. You called me, and here I am."

The two chief fads of the new premier are that he has an absolute detestation of tailors and a tremendous aversion to having his photograph taken.

YOUNG MAN WENT HOME.

How a Hard-Headed Missouri Business Man Rescued His Son from Starvation.

Hon. "Champ" Clark is fond of telling the following story of an old friend of his, who, in his home in Jefferson City, Mo., enjoys a local reputation for grim humor.

The old gentleman in question is the possessor of a large fortune, which he has accumulated by much hard work and the closest attention to business. He has a son whom he wished to train up in his father's business. But the boy was set upon leaving home and seeing the world. So he procured a position in Chicago. He soon lost the job, however, and in a short while found himself without means of livelihood.

Then he telegraphed to his father for money—in fact, he sent several urgent

HON. CHAMP CLARK.
(Missouri Statesman Famed as Prince of Western Story Tellers.)

messages of this sort over the wire—but to all his appeals he received no answer.

Finally, in desperation, the son of the rich man telegraphed his father in these words:

"You won't see me starve, will you?"

The old man's answer came thus:

"No! Not from this distance!"

Then, says Mr. Clark, the boy decided to go home and work in his father's firm.

Are Economical Housekeepers.

The wives of French peasants are excellent housekeepers, and are noted for their thrift and tidiness. In most cases the earnings of the husband are small, but his wife is an excellent manager and generally a capital cook. She evolves dainty dishes out of trifles; makes a leek or a cabbage, with a few bones, produce soup which is delicious; and transforms dried beans or macaroni, with an egg or a vegetable, into a nutritious and palatable dish.

Delicate Contrivance.

Delicate vibrations too slow to produce sound—that is, having a rate of less than 16 per second—are made audible by a new apparatus. A ten-pound weight, having a small carbon plate cemented vertically to its side, is suspended from the arm of a standard by a stout rubber band, and a carbon block is placed on the floor or other vibrating body, with a slender graphite pencil resting on it and leaning against the carbon plate. The carbon block and carbon plate are connected with a telephone in an electric circuit. When the apparatus is placed on a wood floor, the heart beat of a person standing near produces an audible vibration in the telephone, as do also delicate tremors and distant vibrations from any source.—Science.

Unbarred Justice.

Some years ago an Ohio court was the scene of many amusing incidents. The judge was a man from Connecticut, who retained the New England speech and other characteristics which had been his birthright. He declared that there were "no frills" about his court, but there were some appurtenances without which he evidently felt it impossible to administer justice in a wise and temperate way. One morning an eager petitioner was demanding the settlement of a certain matter then and there, but while he pleaded, the judge, with a disturbed face, rummaged among the papers on his table.

"Hold on!" he cried, at last. "This court has lost her pencil, and you might just as well wait till she finds it if you want her fairly to take in what you're saying."—Youth's Companion.

Trifling Corrections.

The Shrubville Clarion has an editor who tries never to let the grass grow under his feet. His celerity helps him to acquire news, but it is also the cause of an occasional paragraph like the following, taken from a recent issue:

"Last week we gave the particulars of a devastating fire in the town of Jenkins, with the number and names of the victims. We now wish to correct a few inaccuracies such as will sometimes find their way into the columns of any catastrophe. There were no victims, for the conflagration was checked before it actually took place. We may also add that the fire was not in Jenkins, but in the town of Scranton."—Youth's Companion.

No Cloudburst.

There is really no such thing as a "cloudburst," for clouds do not burst. The word is entirely metaphorical. Says a meteorologist: "Rain comes down in accordance with physical laws. At any given temperature the atmosphere can hold a limited quantity of water-vapor. The warmer the air the more water-vapor it can hold. But if air already saturated with it be cooled, it will be supersaturated with moisture at its new temperature, and the resulting flow of rain is literally the superfluity. A 'cloudburst' is simply the result of the very rapid cooling of an atmosphere which was hot and was also water-saturated."

Beginning of the Scrap.

"A penny for your thoughts, my dear," said the wife of his bosom.

"I was just thinking of the quotation, 'What fools these mortals be,'" replied the masculine section of the combine.

"Well," rejoined the unsilent partner, "I suppose that does strike you with a thud at times."

"Yes," answered the freight payer, "especially when I recall that fatal moment when I proposed to you."—Chicago Daily News.

Medical Perils.

In Beloochistan, when a physician gives a dose, he is expected to partake of a similar one himself as a guarantee of his good faith. Should the patient die under his hands, the relatives, though they rarely exercise it, have the right of putting him to death, unless a special agreement has been made freeing him from all responsibility as to consequences; while, if he should decide upon immolating him, he is fully expected to yield to his fate like a man.—London Tit-Bits.

Hang-Nail Ruins Arm.

A hang nail induced blood poisoning in a finger which extended to the left arm of Ford Hunter, of South Bend, Ind., and will cause him to lose that member. The soreness began only a few days ago, and since then the arm and hand have swollen to unusually large proportions.

GERMANS CHALLENGE

They Are Invading South American Countries in Large Numbers.

Emperor William Approves of Their Going, and May in Time Dispute the Monroe Doctrine with Us—Interesting Figures.

The tide of German emigration to South America flows steadily, increasingly, and the kaiser warmly encourages his people in this movement. Apropos of which, a careful student of international politics declares that the German emperor is building up his navy for the very purpose of some day trying issue with the United States as to that well-known Monroe doctrine of ours.

The same writer says it is common talk in official circles that the emperor fully realizes the richest and most easily accessible field for German energy and emigration lies in this vast and little exploited region. Germany needs markets and she proceeds to make them where she can; and South America is one of the richest countries in the world; a country not already preempted by some enterprising one of the great nations, and its wonderful waterways make the interior accessible. The Amazon for 5,000 miles is traversible, the La Platte for 4,000 miles, the Orinoco for 1,000 miles, and lesser streams are navigable for considerable distances. That this great, marvellously rich land has lain so long undeveloped is attributable to two causes; the unstable nature of South American governments; and that shadowy but persistent Monroe doctrine which warns "hands off." But the bold kaiser says: "Who's afraid?" and enters in.

It would look as though the United States were thoroughly alive to the fact that the Germans are invading this long jealously-guarded tropical America, for some time ago all the American consuls were required to furnish fullest information in regard to German colonization in South America. And when one glances at a map of the different districts where the German has obtained a strong foothold, one does not wonder our government is somewhat concerned with this feature of German expansion.

In Brazil alone there are said to be more than 400,000 German residents. In the province of Rio Grande there are over a quarter of a million Germans—almost 20 per cent. of the population; in Santa Catherina over 60,000—practically 21 per cent.; in two towns Germans form 80 per cent. of the population; then there are six German settlements where the number of Germans range from 95 to 80 per cent. of the whole number of inhabitants. In the Argentine Republic many Germans have found homes to their liking, and quite a number in Chili.

It is estimated that more than $150,000,000 of German capital is already invested in Brazil. In Central as well as South America Germany has large commercial interests, and as some of the Central American states are now offering special inducements to desirable immigrants, probably the Germans ere long will endeavor to make for themselves homes there. But it will take Latin-America some time to rival our country in the number of its German-Americans, recent statistics showing that nearly 90 per cent. of the German emigrants still go to the United States, and less than five per cent. to Brazil, Argentine and the other American countries.

Germany needs new fields not only because of her demand for markets, but because she has a population that is increasing beyond all capacity of the home land to maintain it. At present she is seeking for more colonists than any other country in the world save Great Britian. According to Mr. Poultney Bigelow, the notable feature of this movement is that the German as a colonist prefers almost any flag to his own. If this be true, then the Germans may be willing to abide by the agreements that obtain in the various South American districts in which they have settled, and our old friend, the Monroe doctrine, may consider itself unassailed.

But a noted English weekly, the Saturday Review, declares that England need feel no anxiety whatever over the navy-building going on over in Germany, declares that the readiest cause for naval conflicts will be found in the struggle between Germany and the United States for the partition or exploitation of the great South American continent. And doubtless battle-worn John Bull breathes a little easier at the though that the energetic William is looking our way instead of his.

THE NEW WOMAN

She Worthily Wears the Name

A YOUNG man employed in a city had not written home in four months, not even to his mother. His mother reproached him bitterly for his neglect; so did his sisters. They lived in the country on a farm, and his letters were an event in their lives. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself to treat your relatives like that," said a lady to him. "Well, I know I ought; at least I suppose I ought; but, you see, it's like this: I've been here in town three years. I work as hard as I can and watch every opportunity to better myself honestly, and I really think I'm getting on. I need something cheerful and lightening to my life out of work hours. But, if you will believe me, in all the three years I've been here I've never once had a letter from home which did not contain bad news or doleful and depressing thoughts that made me blue for days. It's got so I dread to open a letter with the home postmark upon it. Every item of disease that afflicts any of the family, even to a toothache, is poured into me. Every letter is full of moaning about poverty or the failure of crops, the quarrelsomeness of this or that neighbor, the dread of a mortgage on the farm, the creeping of age and helplessness on my mother and father, the threatened blindness of old Great-uncle Jehoshaphat, the fear that Brother Ned is taking to drink or that Sister Mary is going to marry that no account Tom Bradley. If there's nothing else there's a gathering up of all the scandal garbage in the county, and it's unloaded on me. I can't stand it any longer. Mother's letters are so doleful and miserable and full of anxious, graveyard forebodings that they almost make me laugh sometimes in spite of myself. That's the kind of stuff one's family inflicts on its members who are away from home. Never once anything cheerful or hopeful or encouraging from any of them. That's why I stopped writing home."

The British house of lords has finally barred women lawyers from the practice of their profession in the United Kingdom. Because of their sex women are forbidden to enter the legal profession, says this house of musty old obstructionists. The house of lords is the chief obstacle to the progress of both the new man and the new woman in England today. And yet silly, ignorant young American women are fairly tumbling over one another to marry these arrogant, narrow minded, old fogy peers. It's a strange world.

* *

One British noblewoman has recently visited the United States who may well be patterned after by American women in the matter of unostentatiousness in dress. She is Lady Rodney of the bluest of British blood, yet so gentle mannered, so sweet voiced and so plainly dressed that except for her refinement and evident high breeding she might just be taken for anybody. At the opera in New York, where she was the guest of one of the richest women in America, refined Lady Rodney wore a plain, simply made silk gown, perfectly tasteful, but with almost no ornamentation, and she appeared without jewels. The contrast between her and the overdressed, extravagantly ornamented American women in the boxes about her was something remarkable. People remembered Lady Rodney herself, not what she had on.

A thoroughly capable woman is she who can successfully manage children, dogs and hired people.

* *

Did you observe what a row was raised in certain quarters when some time since a young lady refused to be married by a ritual which makes the bride take a pledge to "obey" her husband? Splendid, high spirited girl that, and she will make a noble wife, too, for her action shows she has a conscience in the matter of taking pledges and would not make any vow she did not expect to keep. Now let us have plenty more girls to follow her example.

* *

Oh, if men, especially preachers, could only see and understand that the complete freeing of woman and her consequent mental and physical development would result in bringing the whole race to godlike stature!

* *

Poets have the true vision. It was a living truth Tennyson uttered when he wrote: "The woman's cause is man's. They rise or sink together, bond or free."

* *

The silliest ambition a woman can cherish is that of trying to outstrip some other woman in the splendor of her dress, house and furniture. Heaven have mercy on all such!

* *

What does gorgeousness in dress, house or furnishments count in comparison with the splendid physical beauty and strength, the undreamed of mental and spiritual development, now possible to the race and in a measure to every individual woman?

* *

Remember this always: The inferior position to which woman is relegated in both civil and ecclesiastical realms is a survival of the customs of the orient, whence Christianity took its rise. The teachings of the Christ were the exact opposite of indicating any inferiority in woman, but the oriental parasite lacked itself on to the rites and usages formulated for the Christian church centuries after the death of the Founder of Christianity.

FOR MORNING WEAR.

Some Smart Shirt Waists Made of Substantial Materials.

Plain shirt waists of sicilienne, cheviot and broadcloth are worn beneath tailor made coats. They have longer shoulders and more fullness than formerly.

One of the most useful things to possess is an unlined skirt of white cloth well cut and well fitted. This may be used winter or summer with fine white waists and a pretty white hat.

For dinner or restaurant wear nothing in the way of a white waist equals the blouse of cream net incrusted with narrow lace insertion or applique. This is made very full, with a transparent yoke and a collar and very much puffed sleeves set into a deep tight cuff of lace.

The three-quarter coat is seen in walking suits in conjunction with the kilted skirt. It blouses and is belted in with a wide band of crinkled suede leather.

Of the trimming for winter gowns the colored Paraguay laces with raised effects are quite suitable for smart wear and are most effective on cloth and woolens with a smooth surface. Some of these laces are woven in two distinct colors, and others form a frame of medallion shape to surround the daintiest little embroidered sprays. A few of these motifs of lace and embroidery are quite sufficient to trim a bodice, and they are also used on coatees and boleros, and especially on smart waistcoats of pale colored cloth.

The illustration shows a new shirt waist having a deep yoke which gives the long shouldered effect.

WHAT WOMEN ARE WEARING

Return to 1830 Styles—Figured Silks and Accordion Plaitings.

White cloth is as fashionable as ever, but it is only for the well to do on account of the rapidity with which it soils.

We have returned to the 1830 styles in matters of dress, as witness the full skirts and the deep pointed waistbands. Old fashioned silks, flowered or plain, are trimmed with frayed out ruches of pale blue or pink.

Loose hanging boleros of black chiffon velvet are trimmed with dainty gold thread tassels and bands of embroidered lace.

Both large and small spots and even velvet brooches are coming into favor. Velvet gowns of every kind are seen for both day and evening wear.

Soft chine silks, together with flowered muslins and mulls, make charming gowns and blouses for evening wear. They are particularly becoming to young girls.

Accordion plaited black crepe de chine made with a wide girdle and a handsome jeweled buckle is a very useful as well as becoming afternoon gown.

Ribbiness and similar materials are again much used, as well as long haired, thick vicunas. Invisible checks, stripes and other quiet patterned fabrics are smart.

The picture shows a gown of ivory cloth trimmed with narrow fur and spotted velvet.

A RANCH GIRL.

"Bossie" Mulhall, Champion Steer Roper of the Southwest.

If an eastern college girl should spend a year on a western cattle or horse ranch and avail herself of the opportunities she would have for acquiring knowledge she would learn quite as much as in the best year of university life. The learning of the college might be classical; that of the ranch would be distinctly practical, and the twelve months spent there would probably be the most healthful year of her life—free, noble and independent. In truth, not a few of the gifted and noted young women of today—artists, actresses, singers and others—took their rise and spent their early girlhood in the broad region where one's nearest neighbor is sometimes miles away and where it is wicked not to be well.

Athletic development now being fashionable among women, we need not be astonished at any exhibition of muscular strength and skill on the part of the feminine sex. We need not be surprised really, you know, when Miss Lucille Mulhall, a mere slip of a girl eighteen years old, wins the first prize of $1,000 over the most skilled cowboys in the southwest in a champion steer roping contest at South McAlester, I. T. Women could have done the like all along.

It is of interest to know that the girl who won the prize, Miss Mulhall, affectionately called "Bossie" by her intimates, is a refined, well educated, accomplished young lady, who knows Latin and mathematics and can play the piano exquisitely as well as dance like a fay. Besides this she is an expert rifle shot and is said to have killed a prairie wolf at very long range. It is plain that cowboy accomplishments do not interfere with social and educational ones; on the contrary.

Miss Mulhall's father, Zack Mulhall, owns and lives on a large ranch in Oklahoma, and there his two daughters, Lucille, or "Bossie," and Agnes, received the cowboy part of their education. It is pleasant to know their father encouraged their acquirement of practical ranch knowledge and skill, considering that no gymnastic training for his girls could be better than cowboy athletics. Therefore they learned to gallop like mad after a herd, to "cut out" and rope a wild steer and to throw and tie it as well.

At the agricultural fairs in the ranch region the cattle roping contests are a regular part of the entertainments. In the southwestern territories there is annually a great cowboy tournament, where the cattlemen show their courage, strength and skill in competitive exhibitions. A great number of the spriest, wildest steers the country affords are driven to the grounds and put inside the inclosure ready for the sport. The yearly contest draws cowboys and spectators not only from Indian and Oklahoma territories, but from Texas and from states to the north and west. It was in this tournament that Miss Mulhall won her laurels over the bravest, most skillful lariat throwers in the land.

The steers are selected by lot, so that the girl "Bossie" had no advantage at all over her masculine competitors. The conditions were that each contestant should rope, throw and tie three steers, one after the other, and the person who did this in the quickest time should be the winner. The most difficult part comes perhaps after the animal is "roped." The long, coiled, snake like lariat has to be hurled at the steer in full gallop. It must either catch him square over the horns or else be neatly thrown around one of his flying heels. In either case, with the help of the trained cow pony, the creature is thrown and tangled in the rope. Then, quick as lightning, the rider must dismount, run to the struggling steer and tie him fast, so he cannot rise and run away.

All this Miss Mulhall accomplished three times and did it more quickly than any of the men contestants. It was a fair and square victory. One steer she roped, threw and tied in forty seconds, and that was her quickest time. It is not, however, quite equal to the champion record, which is a few seconds under hers.

At the contest Miss Mulhall rode astride on her favorite cow pony, which had been trained for the sport. She has always ridden astride, for no sidesaddle would be safe in the rough riding which cow people must do. It may be mentioned that quite recently some of the most popular young ladies of New York's exclusive set have given up sidesaddle and appeared bravely riding astride.

CHILDREN IN COLD WEATHER

Hints Which Will Help to Keep Them Well and Strong.

This season of the year is almost as dangerous for the young child as the heat of the dog days. Measles, catarrh and other kindred complaints are frequent, and they cause much distress.

It is a great mistake to suppose that a child must go through certain diseases in childhood. There is no such need, and the fewer illnesses a child has the better chance it has of growing up a healthy man or woman.

I have no patience with the toughening process which tries to make Spartans out of young children by exposing them to cold. Cold is an enemy to the young and the very old, and, far from making a child healthy, leaving its arms and legs exposed undermines its constitution. And, as for making a child wear low necks on cold days, that is positive cruelty, while it is unhygienic in the last degree.

Children require more rest than grownups—ten hours out of the twenty-four is not a bit too much. The old proverb, "Early to bed and early to rise," should be enforced in more households than it is.

The question of food is a very important one. Four meals a day are not too many for a child even up to the age of fourteen. In winter the diet should be one conducing to warmth, such as oil and fats, milk, eggs, butter, etc., and the carbohydrates—starch, sugar, cereals, etc. An almost ideal food is milk, because it combines all the above qualities.

EASY FANCY WORK.

Dainty Employment For the Leisure Hours of Winter.

The shops are full of fancy pieces, and the working of some of the designs makes an attractive occupation for the leisure hours of winter.

Take the sideboard cloth in the illustration, for instance. It is made of sea green linen, and as the design is of convolvuli, pale pink and purple wash linen thread should be used. The three lines on the edge should be done in heavy satin stitch. Crewel stitch, satin stitch and an ordinary filling in comprise its stitches.

A sachet for amateur photographers ought to be large enough to hold pictures of houses and scenery and pretty enough to be an ornament to the table. One of these was made recently of ivory satin. The cover, painted to resemble an old illumination, had a border of conventional tudor roses and fleur-de-lis, while in quaint lettering was the well known line:

The quality of mercy is not strained.

A very good quotation for an amateur photographer.

Cushions of red denim, have embroidered over them the signatures of prominent people copied.

Glove boxes are always pretty, but a little hard to make, as they require care and neatness in handling. They are hand painted with Watteau figures.

The practical girl embroiders during the winter months white linen turnover collars and cuffs in button stitch. These will look very smart on her white shirt waists next summer. She even, if she is very ambitious, embroiders for herself a white linen dress, robe patterns of which already stamped may be purchased at any fancy work store.

ALICE EVANS FANNING.

FASHIONS FOR GIRLS.

A Wide Variety Offered in Color, Cut and Material.

Who has not read the story of "Little Red Riding Hood," with its tragedy? And we all know that the distinguishing feature of the story is the pretty red cloak, with its hood, which the little girl wears as she travels through the lonely woods on her errand of mercy. Well, the fashion in red cloaks of this exact description has been revived, and the street is plentifully besprinkled with them, in windows and outside. The color is red, undeniable and unmistakable red, in the brightest cardinal shade. The shape is a plain circular, with a capuchin hood, which may be left to hang down the back or be brought up over the dimpled face, and it should reach quite to the bottom of the dress.

FROCKS FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

One beautiful little girl was made the happy possessor of one of these and in addition had a large hat of plaited taffeta of the same shade and color. Her hair fell in long dark ringlets over the hood to the cape from under the big picturesque mob cap. The whole was quaint and very pretty, and the girl, the cloak and the hat were much admired. The cloaks are not so very expensive, as they are unlined and are worn in very cold weather with a knitted vest.

These jersey vests are among the most valuable of the small belongings of a woman's outfit, as they make it possible to be warm and comfortable while wearing an unlined coat.

For the young schoolgirl there are many pretty fancies in the way of neat and girlish frocks, but the dainty old apron is gone from our gaze. Girls no longer have these pretty little adjuncts for their adornment and incidentally to preserve their dresses. A few mothers put clean white aprons on their small girls, but after a child is eight or nine she disdains aprons.

The dress for schoolgirls are made of woolen goods of various kinds—serge, cheviot, flannel, albatross, Scotch plaids and some few of the sibelines. These are in all the colors of the season, and there seems really to be no difference in the material worn by mothers and children. The belts and collars are generally of velvet or silk to match. Yokes may be of light silk covered with heavy lace, or for ordinary wear the tucked blouse waist is the favorite, with no trimming beyond the decorative effect of the tucking. A really pretty school frock for a girl in her early teens was of tan colored albatross, both skirt and blouse laid in box folds and stitched down. The plaits run out at the knees, which allows the proper fullness to the skirt. The bishop sleeves have two box plaits down to the elbows. A neat black or brown leather belt and a white linen collar, with a dark red or a brown or even a black bow tie, make the costume girlish and "taking."

A more dressy frock is made of light blue liberty silk, the skirt being cut absolutely straight, so that the shirring at the hips and bottom brings it to a perfect adjustment to the slim figure. The waist has shirring around the top, so that it takes the form of a yoke. The upper parts of the sleeves are also shirred, as is the forearm. A couple of rows of black lace insertion are placed around the foot of the skirt, and there is a sash of black satin ribbon.

For the house Oxford ties are prettier than high boots, but high laced or buttoned boots are necessary for the street.

Short sack coats, long rain proofed coats and thick frieze coats for very cold days are all seen. Box coats of melton, with pretty facing, are very natty for the young. Small fur pieces for the neck are shown for young girls, but physicians advise that they should not be worn, as the wearing of fur around the neck tends to weaken the throat.

A few words may be added regarding the undergarments for growing girls. Corsets are out of the question, but there are waists which support the skirts without unduly compressing the young form, and the union woolen undergarments are worn nearly everywhere. Then come the drawers and skirts. The former may be short and plain, the warm flannels are underneath. There is a short knitted wool skirt fitting closely to the body and a colored silkoline or satine skirt for every day. For "nice" nothing is so suitable as white with plentiful ruffles of lace or fine embroidery.

EVENING COSTUMES.

Gowns of Black Tulle—Vogue of Chenille and Accordion Plaiting.

Evening gowns of black tulle and chiffon are considered very smart. These are trimmed with black velvet ribbon or tiny ruchings of lustrous silk. Medallions of black velvet and chantilly lace are also very smart. The hair, being dressed low, requires less ornament than formerly, and when there is ornamentation it takes the form of jeweled pins or combs.

Crepe de chine dresses trimmed with fringe of the same shade are always graceful and pretty.

Chenille tassels and chenille fringe are much used in combination with lace. White chiffon combined with jeweled lace is another feature of the moment, and tiny gold tassels brighten up otherwise somber gowns of black.

Accordion plaiting on liberty satin and crepe de chine continues in high favor.

A beautiful robe a princesse for the bride's mother at a coming wedding of importance is of pansy colored velvet with a black and gold galloon trimming on either side of a very fine point d'alencon lace vest, which is further beautified by being studded with a design of finely wrought gold. The gown hangs in graceful folds to the ground, and at the feet appears a Greek trimming of gold galloon. Some ruches of old d'alencon form a fitting finish to the sleeves, which are of fairly voluminous proportions. To complete this exquisite toilette de reception is a pale heliotrope beaver hat, its only trimming being a long, sweeping plume which nearly touches the shoulder. A bouquet of parma violets and La France roses will accompany this chic costume.

The picture shows a crepe de chine evening gown made with gaugings.

FASHION HINTS.

Circular Trimmings Are Once More Coming Into Vogue.

One of the dainties frocks seen recently was of royal blue chiffon trimmed with gaugings and wide ruffles of accordion plaited chiffon peeping from under a dyed lace bolero.

The latest skirts show circular trimmings instead of the perpendicular lines we have become so used to. Fringe plays as important a part in the trimming of the skirt as of the waist.

The three piece costume is among the smartest conceits of fashion. This consists of a dress trimmed with fringe or dyed lace and a cape with long chiffon or fur stole ends of the same material as the dress and trimmed with the same dyed lace.

Three-quarter coats of moleskin are lined with cream satin and have fluffy jabots of creamy lace. The tiny skins are so joined together as to produce a plaided effect.

On the whole, fashions are plainer than heretofore, but the materials are more voluminous and more costly.

In the cut is shown the latest thing in skirts. It is made with circular tucks and fringe trimming.

THE WOMAN FAKIR

She Is Everywhere

"AH, well, I suppose we're all of us fakirs, more or less," began the woman who had to put on magnificent appearances on a tiny income.

"If you really want to see women fakirs, though, you want to go to a large city," remarked the woman who knew.

"Or to heathen countries," put in a third—some of the women missionaries they send out, for instance."

"Now, I'm not going to have anything said about missionaries."

"My dear, I'm not saying anything against the noble women who go out there and roast in the sun and freeze in the wind and rain with the laudable purpose of really helping the starving and the unfortunate, but there are some women—and I speak with knowledge—who undertake this missionary work just to make themselves persons of importance. I have in mind one woman in particular, born in a small village, without a ghost of a chance to amount to anything. Her drab hair tightly drawn back from her sharp pointed features suggested a weasel or a bird of prey. Well, she was getting into sear and sad spinsterhood when she happened to meet some one who sent out missionaries to faraway India. By the exercise of a little hypocrisy and mock piety she managed to be sent out as nurse. She stayed over there four years and at the end of that time returned with considerable avoirdupois, a florid, self satisfied countenance, the title of doctor—which she had procured heaven knows how—and two trunks simply packed with spoils from the heathen—presents, as she explained, from admiring and grateful patients. But there is room for doubt on that score. Anyway they were a choice lot of valuable bits taken here and there from different parts of the country. So now with the prestige of her foreign travel she has set up an office in a fashionable locality where, with a wise air, she doles out advice to foolish women and takes in fat fees."

FOR SWEET CHARITY?

"My dear, speaking of bogus church work, you should be at the head of a settlement in the slums to see sweet charity worked for the social game."

"A nice opportunity for parvenus?"

"A nice opportunity for parvenus—a nice opportunity for all sorts of people who never had a decent social circle of their own to get into—to the settlement and proffer their services free of charge for the suffering poor, and then, my dear, they become acquainted with the patronesses, and they graft, graft, graft, graft! They spend every cent to the best advantage too. If they give a dinner to the infant kindergarten they invite dear Mrs. Fitzmillion, the foundress and patron saint of the institution, to preside, and how can she refuse when so much is being done for her little ones? The next day an account of the whole affair appears in the newspapers, and Mrs. Socialclimber's name is linked with that of her patroness."

"And don't forget sweet charity for a percentage," put in the business man. "That is the worst form of fakirism. My dear woman, just imagine yourself a busy man, scribbling away in your private office, when suddenly two ladies are announced, and when they are grudgingly admitted to your august presence you find they are two stunning young girls—real ladies, mind you—beautifully and irreproachably gowned in the finest cloth and velvet. The elder of the two begins, with a pretty, diffident blush, to solicit your subscription for the Home For Siberian Orphans With One Foot, let us say. They both explain that they hate to go around in this way (with another pretty blush), that they are not used to it, but the home is in such needy. The orphans have no shoes or stockings, a holiday is drawing nigh, and this seems to be the only way to collect money from the hard hearted merchants and financiers who can well afford it. What would you do if your little ones had only one foot each and no shoes and stockings? You thrust your hand hastily into your pocket; you give them $5, $10—anything. How can you resist? You are well bred, plainly embarrassed girls who are thus doing violence to their natural timidity for sweet charity? And do the infants get their shoes? Well, perhaps they do, and perhaps they don't, but anyway not until the percentage, and a large one, has been deducted for the benefit of the sweet, refined, shrinking young creatures."

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, Dec. 31, 1903.

Necessity is the mother of invention, but advertising is the wet-nurse.—Printers' Ink.

Some advertising men think that Philadelphia's retail publicity, as exhibited in its daily papers, is the best in the United States, and there is good ground for this opinion. In connection with this it is well to remember that the Curtis Publishing Co.'s two great magazines have set entirely new styles in magazine advertising. In writing of advertising one is so often drawn to the Saturday Evening Post and Ladies' Home Journal for examples that the repetition of their names is monotonous.—Ex.

If there be any just cause why Joseph A. Hubbard should be removed as a member of the board of assessors the public has a right to know it. No man should be ousted from his position in the municipal government unless he is derelict in his duties or is incapable of discharging them. Unless it be shown that it is detrimtal to the interests of the taxpayers, Mr. Hubbard deserves to be reappointed to the position he had held for thirty-four years. Those who desire to have the present third ward assessor dropped should come out and make their charges specifically. Can they do it?

Governor Murphy will name the successor of Robert S. Green, of Elizabeth, on the State Board of Assessors and James E. Martine, who has steadfastly fought tooth and nail for the Democratic party, is a candidate for the position which must be filled by a Democrat. As might be expected there's a whole flock of Democrats anxious to get the job, and the friends of Martine, will have to hustle to convince the Governor that the Plainfield is the right man for the place. Few men in New Jersey are so much abreast of the times in State affairs as is our conscientious, aggressive and able fellow townsman, "The farmer orator." For forty years the interests of the Democratic party he has considered his interests and during that time he has advocated its principles and its candidates' success without any reward. There is not a man in this city who can say aught against him and the Governor will win many friends among the Republicans here if he selects Martine for the place. At the same time he will have the satisfaction of knowing that he has discharged his duty most creditably.

The Newark Evening News counsels the promoters of the so-called colored orphanage not to erect a building on Rahway road as is at present proposed. Incidently it speaks of the site as already having been purchased which fortunately is not the case. This is what the Newark paper has to say on the subject:

"The southeasterly section of Plainfield, which includes Netherwood, is one of the finest residental sections of that beautiful city of the plains. It is high and dry, has good drainage, fine water, pure air, electric cars and a fine view of the mountains distant on the north and of the fertile plains of Middlesex on the south. But the present inhabitants of the Netherwood section are up in arms and threaten to sell their properties, at a sacrifice if necessary, and move away. This is all because a committee appointed to procure a site for the building a negro orphanage has bought a large corner lot in this fashionable and desirable section, and is preparing to build on it. The Plainfield people generally are becoming more and more exercised over the matter and the local papers are taking up the question and are giving much advice. The committee has been made aware of the popular objections and has been advised to accept a less conspicuous property, but the colored men seem thus far determined to stand on their legal rights and to establish the orphanage on the site selected. It is poor policy on the part of the colored people and their committee to take this attitude. They cannot afford to plant an orphanage where it is objectionable to so many white people, and where it will inevitably cause the depreciation of valuable property, for the simple reason that they must depend on the contributions of white people for most of the money to maintain the institution. They would better yield to public sentiment and accept some other site. Meantime they might drive a pretty sharp bargain in disposing of their corner lot and thus have more funds to expend in puting up a costlier building on a cheaper lot."

Should the colored people attempt to make capital by such methods as the Newark News points out is within their power, they will find that the charitable people of Plainfield will not extend them any aid in conducting the institution.

AMUSEMENTS.

Next week will be one of the great holiday weeks of the year and extra preparation has been made for it by Mr. Keith. Special attention in the arrangement of the bill has been given to the women and children, who, with one accord, look forward to this season of entertainment as being theirs by right of custom. In no place of amusement are their interests more catered to than at Keith's, and this is not true only of the present but at all times, without regard to seasons. For this reason Keith's is the family theatre.

That popular duo of "broken German" funmakers, the Rogers Brothers —Gus and Max—will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House beginning Monday evening, Dec. 28. The vehicle will be a new vaudeville farce by John J. McNally, called "The Rogers Brothers in London." It will be presented in three acts, with very novel locale of scenes. The music this season, composed by Max Hoffman and Melville Ellis, presents a wider variety of catchy, tuneful airs than in the past. Three of the principal numbers are a distinct departure from the music heard in this style of entertainment.

One of the most striking dramatic successes of the current season has been scored at the New York Theatre by Bertha Galland in "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," a four-act play dramatized by Paul Kester from Charles Major's novel of the same title. Miss Galland's engagement of three weeks will end Saturday evening of next week, January 2. This play is a romantic love story of the time of Queen Elizabeth. Surrounding Miss Dorothy, who is made the central figure in the play, are the grand dames and court gallants of the time, including Queen Elizabeth herself and her beautiful, ill-fated cousin and rival, Mary Queen of Scots. "Dorothy Vernon" is an unusually strong dramatic story, full of exciting situations, which are well played by an excellent supporting company, which includes Frank Losee as Sir George Vernon, William Lewers as Sir John Manners, May Robson as Queen Elizabeth, Isabel Richards as Mary Stuart, Carl Anthony as the Earl of Rutland and George LeSoir as the court jester.

Irene Bentley as Kitty Calvert in "A Girl From Dixie" at the Madison Square Theatre is doing the best work of her career and her daintiness of manner and charming stage presence, easily make her the centre of the varying stage pictures. Her vivacity and animation and the abandon in which she portrays the ragged country girl, and afterwards the refinement of the waif as the society lady have added no little to her reputation, while her several song numbers have scored unqualified hits. In the supporting cast are Arnold Daly, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Albert Hart, George Schiller, Charles H. Bowers, Wilmer Bentley, Charles French, Charles Schoffer, Evelyn Nesbit, Dorothy Donner, Esther Lyons, Rose Hart and about fifty other. The regular matinees at this theatre are on Thursday and Saturday afternoon, beginning at 2:30.

The greatest of rural dramas, "Way Down East," is the offering at the Academy of Music. This production of the play has never been seen outside of this theatre and it thrills audiences which fill every seat in the big house. "Way Down East" has received hearty endorsement from the pulpit as a production which every one should witness. The subscribe is will find it convenient to attend the matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2 or the night performance at 8:15.

Manager F. Ziegfeld, Jr., announces the last two weeks of "Red Feather" at the Lyric Theatre. The big company with its stately and goldenvoiced prime donna Miss Grace Van-Studdiford, with the comical Thos. E. Shea, the volatile, Elise De-Vere and its host of other splendid features tours in the large cities of the West for the remainder of the season on Monday, Jan. 4.

Klaw & Erlanger, whose remarkable energy and enterprise have done so much for the American stage, have achieved their greatest triumph in production in "Mother Goose," now reaning at their New Amsterdam Theatre. What this theatre is to the playhouses of the world, the finest, this production is to stage efforts in general, the greatest. Nothing like it in magnitude, gorgeousness of scenery and costumes or number of people employed in presentation, has ever been seen in the world. This production presents not only one great novlety, but many. It is a procession of novelties from start to finish. Like the famous three-ring circus, it is three great shows in one. An extra matinee performance will be presented on New Year's Day and regular matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Seats may be ordered by mail accompanied by remittance.

"Mam'selle Napoleon," in which Anna Held is now appearing at the Knickerbocker theatre, has to do with love and intrigue in the days when Napoleon juggled nations and principalities as a mere pastime. The music is by Gustav Luders, composer of the score of "The Prince of Pilsen." "Mam'selle Napoleon" may truly be said to be a very costly damsel. 'Twould not savor of exaggeration to say that "a barrel of money" has been expended in presenting her and the pictured narrative of events in her career to the public. Evidences of a lavish hand are everywhere, and it must truly be said that the standard of acting in the play is particularly high, the richness of the investiture, the pretty chorus girls and the lilt of certain of the songs cover a multitude of sins.

"Weber & Fields" will enter upon the new year with "Whoop-Dee-Doo" and "Waffles" as the most successful of all their productions since they took possession of the Music Hall. There will be an extra matinee New Year's Day when the entire company will receive callers and extend a hearty welcome although separated from guests by the footlights and orchestra. Preparations have been made behind scenes for a celebration between the matinee and night performances and occupants of all the dressing rooms will be "at home" to their brother and sister performers. There is talk of a dainty spread to be served by Miss Lillian Russell, and her callers will comprise Weber & Fields, Louis Mann, Peter F. Dailey, John T. Kelly, Evie Stetson, Carter DeNaven, Charles Halton and all the other members of the all-star stock company. Afternoon dress will be dispensed with. After the night performance Thursday, Weber & Fields will receive the members of the company and a few selected friends in the Music Hall cafe.

Santa Claus is on the stage during the last act of "Babes in Toyland," at the Majestic Theatre, as all the extra holiday matinees, with various and sundry packages and parcels of presents for the children in the matinee audiences. Out-of-town and local patrons have signified their intention of bringing the children to see the beautiful extravaganza and thank Manager Flaherty for keeping open house during a season when there is a slump in commerce and busy men have an opportunity of being amused. New features in the production make the season a gala one for both the company and the old and new patrons.

The first week of the year will be marked as Keith's by the presentation of one of the best vaudeville bills of the season. There is no one particular cat or acts that stand out above and beyond all others for all around merit, the bill could not be improved upon. As in all of the programmes as arranged for the Union Square Theatre there will be several novelties, the soul of variety. Some of these have been brought from Europe at great expense, while others are the results of the efforts of native performers. Few bills contain the names of more artists in their various lines who are entitled to be called headliners.

Charles Richman and his fine supporting company at the Manhattan Theatre, New York, in Victor Mapes' romantic drama of the Revolution, "Captain Barrington," continues as one of the most potent dramatic attractions in the metropolis. This play has been accepted by press and public as the most stirring, pleasing and picturesque drama of the Revolutionary period yet presented. It has all the fascination of a spirited story of that vital period, filled as it is with action and color, while its love story is one of the most delightful imaginable, and its comedy is rich and amusing. Among the distinguished military personages who witnessed and applauded "Captain Barrington" at the Manhattan last week were General Nelson Miles and General Corbin, Commander of the Department of the East of the United States Army.

SMITH'S TEAM WINS THE LEAGUE SERIES

Six Straight Victories the Record of Aggregation Finishing in First Place.

Y. M. C. A. TOURNAMENT

HEINECKE'S FIVE DEFEATED IN FINAL GAME, SCORE BEING 13 TO 9.

Neal's Team Crushes Hand's Collection of Players in Last Match—Score 27 to 0—Standing of the Four Teams—Summaries.

The senior basket ball league at the Y. M. C. A. brought its series of games to a close last Monday with a final victory for Smith's team which gives it a clean record of six victories and no defeats. Smith's five took a hard earned win from Heinecke's team, the final score being 13 to 9. At the end of the first half the score was four to four and when the second period opened both teams were on their mettle and fighting hard for every advantage.

Hand's team was overwhelmed in its game with Neal's. It failed to score even a goal from foul and its guarding was so weak that the Neal boys made the score 27 to 0, their baskets being made almost at pleasure.

The standing in the league is: Smith—6 games won, 0 games lost; Neal—3 games won and 3 lost; Heinecke—2 won and 4 lost; Hand—1 game won, 5 lost. Summaries:

Smith—Smith and Radford, forwards; Chilcen, centre; Scull and Brokaw, guards. Heinecke—Woodland and Mundy, forwards; Utzinger, centre; Ashbolm and Heinecke, guards. Soors, Smith 18, Heinecke 9. Goals from the floor, Smith 2, Radford, Calcen 2, Scull, Woodland, Mundy 2, Heinecke. Goals from fouls, Calcen, Mundy.

Neal—Whitley and Bentliff, forwards; Collier, centre; Hand and Hoagland, guards. Hand—Hand and Shepperd, forwards; Jacot, centre; Sebring and Carolin, guards. Goals from the floor, Whitley 6, Bentliff 3, Collier 4. Goal from foul, Collier.

Referee and umpire, Cahoone and Collier. Time, 15 min. periods.

FUNERAL OF H. D. JANES

REV. DR. RICHARDS AND REV. MR. ZELIE OFFICIATED AT THE SERVICES.

The funeral services of Henry Dwight Janes were held Monday at 8 o'clock from the late residence, 120 Crescent avenue. Besides a large number of friends and neighbors from this city, there were present many New York business men, associates of Mr. Janes at the Home Insurance Company's offices, where he was employed for nearly forty years. They also sent beautiful flowers in great quantities, there being wreaths and other pieces and cut flowers.

Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, where Mr. Janes was a trustee for many years, offered prayer and read a Scripture selection in opening the services. A quartette composed of Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, Miss Ella Randolph and Mr. Runyon then sang "Jesus Lover of My Soul," after which Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, of the Brick Presbyterain church, and a former pastor of Mr. Janes, made a few remarks and offered prayer. The services closed with the singing of "Rock of Ages," by the quartette.

Early this morning the remains were taken to Haverhill, Vt., where the interment will take place in the family plot.

DRYDEN SECURES DIVORCE

B. O. BOWERS, JR., CORESPONDENT IN SUIT OF FORMER PLAINFIELDERS.

By overhearing a conversation over the telephone through a cross wire, Robert Wesley Dryden, of New York, formerly of this city, was enabled to obtain testimony sufficient to secure for him a decree of absolute divorce from his wife, Blanche Alice Dryden. The divorce was denied him by Justice Scott, of New York, last August.

Mr. Dryden depended upon the testimony of Catherine Venables, Mrs. Dryden's colored maid, to sustain his charge that his wife had transferred her affections to Benjamin O. Bowers, Jr., of this city. Mrs. Dryden talked with Mr. Bowers over the telephone from the Hotel Vendome and the clue thus furnished enabled Mr. Dryden to win his case.

Mr. and Mrs. Dryden were married in Camden in 1895 and lived in this city where the alleged cause of action arose.

XMAS ENTERTAINMENTS IN SUNDAY-SCHOOLS

Young Folks of First M. E. and Congregational Churches Celebrate the Great Feast.

UNIQUE PROGRAMMES

MISS AIMEE EMMONS' RECITATIONS PLEASED BOTH ASSEMBLAGES.

Euterpean Glee Club Provided a Pleasant Feature of the First M. E. Affair—Xmas Gifts for New York Mission at Congregational.

First M. E.

The Christmas entertainment at the First M.E. Church, last Monday, was given by the Euterpean Glee Club, of this city, assisted by Miss Aimee Emmons, and for over an hour the members of the Sunday-school and their friends enjoyed a programme of unusual excellence. The work of the quartette, E. E. Cutting, E. Maxwell Honeyman, Sydney R. Titsworth and Howard T. Lewis, under the direction of Clifford Braisder, pianist, was cordially received. The quartette selections included some of the latest compositions, while the solos by Mr. Cutting and Mr. Honeyman, and the solo parts by the other two members, won well-deserved applause. The voices blended in the sweetest harmony and the audience was thoroughly appreciative.

Sharing the honors of the evening, Miss Emmons received much praise for her work. Her first selection was Dickens' "Christmas Carol," and during the forty minutes required to give it she held the closest attention of everyone present and won the sympathy of all for old "Scrooge," who eventually learned to appreciate Christmastide. The next selection by Miss Emmons was "Budd's Christmas Stocking," in which she again won applause.

After the programme there were presentation of boxes of candy to the pupils, the presentation of an upright piano to the beginners' class, while Miss Sharp, pianist of the Sunday-school and Mr. Kennedy, the sexton, each received substantial remembrances.

Congregational.

The Sunday-school Christmas exercises of the Congregational Church proved enjoyable to a large assemblage at the church last Monday. A prettily decorated Christmas tree was a feature. The sleight-of-hand performances of William A. Ransom, of Rahway, were unique and brought enthusiastic approval.

The services opened with a hymn by the Sunday-school, "Come All Ye Faithful," followed by a carol, "Down the Ages Afar." Two vocal selections in Scotch and Irish were rendered by Willard Wadsworth and a recitation, "Two Stockings," evoked much enthusiasm for Miss Amy Winant. Two songs were sung by the primary department, in charge of Miss Mary Robinson, "The Star of Bethlehem" and "Under the Starry Sky." The musical programme concluded with a carol, "Christ Was Born."

One of the most pleasant number of the programme was the bringing of gifts for the Italian Sunday-school of Rev. Antonio Arreghi in New York. The gifts included food, books and toys and formed two large packages. In addition a donation of $10 was made in money.

Boxes of Christmas candy were distributed to the members of the school. A handsome present was made to George W. Dean, the sexton of the church, in recognition of his valuable services.

In the musical part of the programme, Miss Wadsworth accompanied her brother, Mr. Wadsworth. In the other parts Miss Yale accompanied.

The services were under the general charge of the superintendent, Alexander Millar.

The singing was in charge of R. S. Lane. The entertainment committee consisted of Miss Mary Whiton, chairman; the Misses Addie Jackson, Aimee Emmons and Mary Robinson, who with others decorated the Christmas tree.

Agriculture Society Meet.

CHRIST'S NATIVITY ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATED IN THE CHURCHES

The Congregations in Plainfield and North Plainfield Commemorate the Greatest Day of Christendom.

NUMEROUS ELABORATE SERVICES

THE LITTLE ONES GATHER IN THE SUNDAY-SCHOOLS TO SING THE PRAISES OF THE SON OF GOD—INSPIRING MUSIC AND APPROPRIATE SERMONS IN MANY LOCAL EDIFICES—THE DECORATIONS WERE ALSO VERY ATTRACTIVE.

First Baptist.

The Christmas services at the First Baptist Church Sunday morning and afternoon were of unusual interest and were largely attended. The edifice was appropriately decorated with flowers and evergreens, while a brilliantly lighted evergreen star over the organ loft was a feature. In the morning the large chorus choir rendered a number of anthems. The solo parts were taken by Miss Louella C. Harris, soprano; Mrs. F. M. Ward, contralto; William Holmes, baritone, and George Smith, tenor.

During the service there was an impressive sermon by the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, whose theme was "Christ and His Divinity." It was a strong discourse.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon there was the service under the auspices of the Sunday-schools of the church, at which time a special programme was presented, opening with a selection on the organ, with violin and piano accompaniment. Howard Case, the church organist, presided at both services. Other features were the singing of Christmas carols by the main school and the primary department, Scripture recitation by the Junior department, responsive reading, offertory selections by the trio and an address by the pastor. His remarks were chiefly to the young people and were full of interest. George H. Batchelor, superintendent of the home school, was in charge of the afternoon services. There was no night service at the church.

Park Avenue Baptist.

The services at the Park Avenue Baptist Church yesterday morning and in the afternoon, under the auspices of the Sunday-school, were in keeping with Christmastide. In the morning Rev. Mr. Sheppard, of Warwick, N. Y., preached a Christmas sermon, and the quartette choir, consisting of Miss Henrietta Cuming, Miss Adele Runyon, Charles Dayton and Robert Davis sang two selections, one being "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night," a composition of Daniel Davis, the organist.

In the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the Sunday-school held exercises in the chapel under the direction of Miss Florence G. Hawkins, assistant superintendent. There were several recitations by members of the primary and junior departments, a feature being the singing by the juniors. There was also a cornet solo by DeWitt Frazee. Miss Mamie Clark presided at the piano. The church and chapel were decorated with evergreens. The annual entertainment at this church will be held tomorrow night.

Trinity Reformed.

At Trinity Reformed Church Sunday-school yesterday was the big day of the year. The Christmas exercises were held in the evening and the little ones of the school solitted and sang themselves into the hearts of a big congregation that left not a pew in the church vacant. The church was decorated with Christmas greens and wreaths and above the altar in red and green in the form of bells were spelled out the words "Merry Christmas." The services were conducted by the pastor and an address was given by Rev. E. M. Rodman, rector emeritus of Grace Church. The regular church choir assisted in the music. Christmas songs were sung by the entire school and the junior and primary departments. There was also a responsive reading by the juniors.

A. L. Titsworth presided at the organ, and was choirmaster and the children's musical instructor.

The children who recited were: Ralph Martin, Rosamond Rogers, Madeline Streader, Helen Roberts, Helen Wooley, Clifford Cole, Marion Blair, Beatrice Tier, Edith Doeber, Madeline Blair, Margaret Hope, Pearl Drew, Gertrude Armstrong, Ella Van Arsdale, Lillie Schlief, Elsie Tier, Blanche Derry, Walter Fisher, Harold Hand, Edson Day, Russell Vroom, Horace Van Arsdale, Charlie Keiderling, Raymond Stevens, Anna Vail, Russell Hoagland, Anna Lee, Eddie McKee, Ernest Stevens, Ella Case, Adelaide Fritz, Edith Richards, Margaret VanDeventer, Emma Ryno, E. Oliver, Gertrude Schlief. There were individual and concert recitations and exercises. Mrs. J. M. Tier, superintendent of primary department, was in charge of the children.

There was special music both morning and evening at Trinity Church. In the morning, the pastor, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, preached on the subject, "Christmas, Before and After."

First M. E.

The Christmas services at the First M. E. Church yesterday were of unusual interest. In the morning there were anthems by the chorus choir under the direction of Charles L. Lewis, including a duet by Mrs. Thomas MacDonald and Mr. Lewis. The pastor, Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, delivered an appropriate sermon, the chief thought being of Christmastide.

In the afternoon in Vincent Chapel the Sunday-school rendered a programme, in which "The New Born Hope," a musical service was presented. James R. Joy, superintendent of the school, was in charge. There were recitations by Leah Wightman, Helen Joy, Jubilee Howley, Chester Alpaugh, Harry Staats and Ernest Lockwood. There was an address of welcome by Marion Lynn, a Bible verse by Alice Joy, a song by Ruth Lynn, and a song by Helen Derby and the beginners' department. This programme was given chiefly by the primary and intermediate departments, while Dr. Snodgrass made an address and Rev. Dr. J. R. Bryan pronounced the benediction. R. A. Fenno was chairman of the general committee and Nelson A. Miller was in charge of the music. The decorations were arranged by Louis Wilson.

At night there was a special service, including stereopticon views illustrating the advancement and influence of Christianity upon the world. These views were shown by John Neagle and Dr. Snodgrass explained them. There were anthems by the choir and while some of the views were being exhibited Charles L. Lewis sang selections appropriate to them. The church was decorated with evergreens and flowers and all of the services were largely attended.

Grace M. E.

Grace M. E. Church was filled with parents and Sunday-school children yesterday afternoon when the Christmas exercises of the school were held. In the morning the pastor, Rev. Dr. Edwin L. Earp, preached a special Christmas sermon and in the evening he delivered a sermon on "Resolutions" in which he gave sound advice for the New Year. The infant and intermediate department exercises were held in the afternoon. Those taking part were: Dorothy Martin, Mabel Winans, Clara Bodenheimer, Alfred Lowrey, Howard Titus, William Giddis, Gladys Brokaw, Mildred Harden, Helen Nelson, Evelyn Nelson, Blanche Stout, Eva Taynor, Bessie Taynor, Edna Mantz, Edith, Kiva and Myra Lippincott, Beatrice Pope, Edna Stewart, Alletta and Flo Jacobs, Blanche Bensen, Dorothy Penwell and Howard Titus. The girls of Miss Delia Voehl's class gave a selection. They were: Miss Agnes Flemming, Miss Edna Beeching, Miss Clara Rink, Miss Lillian Titus and Miss Myra Lippincott.

The exercises were in charge of Miss Mary Steiner, Mrs. Anna Most and Miss Belle Longer. The skill with which the children took their parts is due to the untiring efforts of the committee who devoted much of their time to rehearsals.

Monroe Avenue M. E.

The special exercises of the Monroe Avenue M. E. Sunday-school yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock were chiefly by the children of the primary department. Among those who took part in song and recitation were Helen Davenport, Dottie Thiers, Mary Mc Neal, Carrie Thiers, Carol MacMurray, Flossie Gilbert, Dorothy Barrett, Bessie Gunsleman, Elizabeth Thiers, Louise Praed, Edith Schwartz and Daisy Gilbert. The opening prayer by the pastor, Rev. John MacMurray, was followed by responsive reading conducted by S. H. Beckman. An address was delivered by Walter S. McGee. The members of the senior department represented by Herbert Hillman sang. Mrs. N. M. Smith and Miss Mae Brower arranged the work of the senior department and Miss Emily Haff had charge of the primary work. Those who assisted were Miss Leora D. Wenzel, Mrs. S. T. Saums, Miss Beulah Cline, Miss Olla Cline, Miss Charlotte Aldrich. The church was decorated with Christmas greens.

Crescent Avenue Presbyterian.

Christmas hymns were sung by the Sunday-school of the Crescent Avenue Church yesterday afternoon. The exercises opened with a "Welcome" recitation by Helen Ryder, followed by a selection given by five little girls, Caroline Slocson, Catharine Brown, Jessie Stewart, Nellie Strong and Allison Williams. There was a duet by Leonard Lewis and Lyle Smith, of the kindergarten. Rev. John S. Zelie made an address. The members of the primary department sang these songs: "Christ Was Once a Little Baby" and "Under the Stars." There will be an entertainment for the school tomorrow night.

At the Crescent Avenue Church last night the cantata, "Story of Bethlehem," by J. E. West, was sung by the regular choir, assisted by a New York choir and local soloists. The regular choir and soloists were Miss Ruth Lewis, Miss Grace Carroll, Rhys Thomas and Herman Greibert. The New York choristers were the Misses Bussard and Boyle, and Messrs. Cafferty and Bolton. Others from this city were Mrs. Asa Collier, Miss Mary Carman, Miss Daisy Kline and Mrs. Burnett, soprance; Miss Hubbell and Miss Langdon, alton, and Elmer E. Runyon, William Gilbert and Mr. Weston, tenors. Arthur D. Drake was organist. Sermons were preached morning and evening by the pastor, Rev. J. S. Zelie. Music in the morning was by the regular choir.

Warren Chapel.

Christmas carols and hymns were sung yesterday afternoon by the children of Warren Chapel Sunday-school. The pastor, Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, made a short address to the children and Chauncey L. Fenton, a West Point Cadet, gave a short address to the children on "Christmas Day." The arrangements were in charge of the Aid Society of which Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman is chairman. The superintendent of the Sunday-school, Joseph W. Gavett, made a few brief remarks. The attendance was a record breaker for the year. The Christmas exercises for the older scholars will be held Wednesday night.

Hope Chapel.

For the first time in the history of Hope Chapel the Christmas exercises in that church were held there yesterday. Hitherto it has been the custom for all the chapels connected with the Crescent Avenue Church to meet at the latter place to hold the Christmas service. On account of the increased number of Sunday-school children it was found that there would not be room enough in the mother church for all the members of the chapel Sunday-schools. Rev. George F. McAphee, an officer of the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church, made an interesting address. He told the children some interesting things about the Indians in the West and how they were becoming Christianized. He told of Indian life in North and South Dakota. The children of the school sang Christmas carols and hymns.

Roman Catholic.

Christmas exercises in the Roman Catholic churches in this city and borough were held on Christmas day and therefore the only Yuletide celebration was in the special music which was repeated at the morning service in St. Mary's Church when at 10:30 a solemn high mass was held. Father Andrew M. Egan was the celebrant, Father Delanbanty, deacon, and Father Frederici, sub deacon. At St. Joseph's R. C. Church a special musical programme was rendered at the 8:30 mass when the children of the Sunday-school choir, numbering seventy-five, sang the sarced music. The 10:30 mass was a high one at which Father William H. Miller was celebrant.

Grace Episcopal.

At the Sunday-school festival of Grace Church yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, a number of carols were sung by the school. The infant class sang "Twinkling Stars." The rector, Rev. E. V. Stevenson, told a "Christmas Story." The Christmas music was repeated at the regular services of the church yesterday, St. John's day. Mrs. W. J. Freeman was organist. In the morning an offering was taken for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital.

Holy Cross.

At the Church of the Holy Cross yesterday the Christmas music was repeated. In the afternoon service at 4:30 there was special music by the choir and a solo by Mrs. William L. Saunders. J. E. Stiff was organist. The Sunday-school celebration will take place tomorrow night.

Heavenly Rest.

Christmas music was repeated yesterday at the regular services at the Church of the Heavenly Rest.

St. Stephen's.

The usual services were held at St. Stephen's Church yesterday, with a children's Christmas carol service at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The music was in charge of Charles Sehr, organist, and the vested choir. The carols sung at the Christmas entertainment on Thursday night were repeated and the rector, Rev. William Vincent Dawson, made a short address. The choir also rendered special music, including several anthems.

Congregational.

At the Congregational Church Sunday morning there was a special Christmas sermon by the pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, and special music by a quartette consisting of Miss Cornelia Miller, Mrs. Charlotte M. Ross, Fred Taliamy and Fred S. Cutter.

Sunday-school exercises were held in the afternoon. The singing was led by R. S. Lane, who also sang a solo, "Work and Sing, Good Christians." C. K. Shupp rendered a trombone solo, "The New Born King," with violin obligato by G. H. Spier. The organist was Mr. Hubbard. Christmas carols were sung by the whole school and included the "Song of Gladness," in which the solo part was taken by Miss Edith Robinson. A short Christmas talk on "Hope" was given by the pastor.

Seventh-Day Baptist.

The Christmas services at the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Saturday morning consisted of a short appropriate sermon by the pastor, Rev. George B. Shaw, and several special selections by a chorus choir under the direction of D. E. Titsworth, director, with Miss Jessie Utter at the organ. The entertainment will be held in the church tomorrow night.

East Third Street Chapel.

Christmas services were held at the East Third Street Chapel Sunday at 3 o'clock, when a special programme of music was rendered and there were short and appropriate remarks by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist Church, and George A. Chapman, the chief thoughts expressed being in harmony with the season. The chapel was decorated with evergreens and flowers and the services were of interest to all.

Bethel Chapel.

Decorated with Christmas greens Bethel chapel Sunday afternoon was the scene of a pleasing Christmas service conducted by the Sunday-school children. Christmas carols were sung and addresses were made by Rev. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, Frederick H. Andrews, William D. Murray and the pastor of Bethel Chapel, Rev. F. D. Tilden. It has been customary heretofore to hold union services in the Crescent Avenue Church, but on account of the large number of little folks in the Sunday-schools of the various chapel, it was decided to hold the exercises separately. The Christmas tree exercises were held Tuesday night.

Mt. Olive.

There was special music by the chorus choir and an appropriate sermon at the Christmas service held at the Mt. Olive Baptist church, Sunday morning, and at night there was a special chil 'ren's service in charge of the pastor, Rev. E. E. Jackson. There were anthems by the junior chorus of thirty-two voices, assisted by the church choir, under the direction of Richard Randolph.

In addition there were recitations by Miss Ivy Henry, Willie Jones, Miss Laura Connett, Miss Agnes Alexander, Miss Elizabeth Yetman, Miss Lottie Jones, Miss Alberta Gordon, Miss Florence Washington, Miss Anna Fisher; an essay by Miss Mary Randolph and a vocal duett by the Misses Maude and Mattie Green. The annual Christmas entertainment of the school will be held tonight.

The session of the Sunday-school Sunday afternoon was in the nature of an exchange of greetings and farewell to Superintendent M. C. Dobbins and the other white teachers who sever their relationship with the school this week. There were remarks by Mr. Dobbins, Pastor E. E. Jackson and O. B. Leonard, clerk of the First Baptist Church. The latter reviewed the history of the colored church, recounting its successes and failures.

First Presbyterian.

Appropriate Christmas services were held at the First Presbyterian Church, Sunday. At the morning and night services there were special selections by the quartette choir, Miss Esta Raybert, soprano; Mrs. S. H. Tugwell, alto; E. E. Cutting, tenor, and S. R. Titsworth, bass. The music was under the direction of Clifford Braider, organist, and assisting were Kenneth Stuart, violin, and Miss Bensen, piano. There were also selections by the instrumental trio. The pastor, Rev. C. E. Herring, preached at both services.

In the afternoon the Sunday-school held a service, during which there were a number of recitations and songs by the children, carols by the whole school, and an address by the pastor. E. M. Cave, superintendent, was in charge, and Miss Remsen presided at the piano.

Whosoever Mission.

The Whosoever Mission Sunday-observed the Saviour's birthday with a song service and recitations by the pupils. The children of the school took part in singing the carols.

J. ACKERMAN COLE'S GIFT

SCOTCH PLAINS CITIZEN PRESENTS TWO BRONZES TO NEWARK LIBRARY.

Two pieces of statuary are to be presented to the Newark Public Library this week by Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, who purchased them in Europe for this purpose. They are bronzes, and in his letter to the Library trustees Dr. Coles did not make it quite plain in announcing the gift, whether they were busts or full-sized statutes, saying in one place that they were busts and in another that they were exact copies of large statues, one of them of heroic size. The trustees can not tell just what disposition will be made of the gifts until they know their size.

Both the statues or busts are bronze, one a copy of the Apollo Belvedere, in the Vatican, and the other a faithful reproduction of a famous statue of Caesar Augustus. It was intended by Dr. Coles that the gift should reach the Library on or immediately before Christmas, but they will not arrive before Tuesday. The art commission of the Newark Free Library, which is supposed to pass upon all gifts of this sort before the trustees accept them, has not seen the bronzes. Dr. Coles feels confident that the recognized artistic merits of his gifts makes their acceptance a certainty.

INSURANCE CO. TO PAY.

First Presbyterian Church Congregation to Recover $500.

The damage to the First Presbyterian Church, caused by the fire there last week, is fully covered by insurance which will be recovered from the company. As has been estimated the damage will amount to about $600. It was thought by some of the congregation that the church would not be able to recover the insurance as the nature of the decorations in the edifice was of such inflammable material. It seems that in the policy there is a clause which allows the church to decorate and the pastor, Rev. Charles E. Herring, has been advised that the damage will be settled for by the insurance company.

Fire at Railroad Station.

A fire in the Netherwood station, Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock, burned the ceiling along the sides of one of the closets, the amount of damage being inconsiderable. A lighted cigar or cigarette thrown in a cuspidor filled with sawdust was the cause of the trouble. The ticket agent at the station, George Tester, put out the flames, using the station hose. An alarm was rung in from Box 28, but the firemen found little to do after their arrival.

Family reunion.

A family reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chester B. Dennis, on East Sixth street, Saturday evening. During the evening there were instrumental and vocal selections, recitations and a good social time. Those were present: Mr. and Mrs. Chester B. Dennis and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Corra Ryno and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert S. Martin, son and daughter, of this city and Borough; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Belles and daughter, of Naugatuck, Conn., and A. W. Sutphen, of Newark.

MARTINE MAY GET FAT POLITICAL JOB

Republican Leaders Urging Governor to Place Him on State Board of Assessors.

POSITION PAYS $2,500

VACANCY TAKES PLACE IN MARCH AND DEMOCRAT MUST BE NAMED.

Martine Anxious to Secure Position Has Never Held Political Office Though He Has Been in State Politics for Forty Years.

After forty years tireless work in behalf of his party, James E. Martine, of this city, is likely to receive a political position, and if he does it will be due entirely to the efforts of those whom he has fought in the political arena. A vacancy in the State Board of Assessors takes place March 2, 1904, the term of Robert S. Green, Democrat, of Elizabeth, expiring at that time. Green will not be reappointed. The salary attached to the office is $2,500 a year and the vacancy must be filled by a Democrat.

It is said that when the Republican leaders in the State learned of the coming vacancy, a number interested themselves in Mr. Martine's behalf and have been urging Governor Murphy to select the one man in the State who has never lost his courage notwithstanding the repeated defeats his party has encountered in the State and Nation during the last four decades.

When seen today by a reporter for The Daily Press, Mr. Martine admissed that he is seeking the appointment and as might be expected of him spoke hopefully of the outlook. "The first intimation I had that my name would be placed before the Governor," said Mr. Martine, "was in letters received by me from men who though staunch Republican leaders are strong personal friends of mine. The position is a pleasant one according to my tastes and I don't mind saying that I will take it if Governor Murphy selects me. I have told my Republican friends that should I be honored by them in this city, I will not flinch from my duty as a Democrat to continue to fight against the Republican party's principles. If I should be an officeholder, I'll be the same Jim Martine shouting the glories of Democracy."

Other Democrats who are mentioned for the position include Robert Stockton and Francis B. Lee, of Trenton; Frederick Parker, of Monmouth; Thomas Birch, of Burlington; Eckard P. Budd, of Burlington, and former Senator Lewis J. Martin, of Sussex.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Young People Join in Celebrating Chester Peck's Tenth Birthday.

Marking his tenth birthday, a party was given in honor of Chester Peck, son of William Peck, Saturday night at the latter's home on Clinton avenue. The evening was spent in playing games and listening to mandioin selections by Chester Peck, Miss Edith Sears and Agnes VanNorden. The Misses Grace Squier and Valley Brooks sang a duet. Those present were: The Misses Grace and Nellie Squier, Valley Brooks, Frances Rittenhouse, Edith Sears, Florence Phillips, Agnes VanNorden, Jannie Hazard, Edith and Olive Bird, and John Rittenhouse, Ernest Bird, Erickson VanNorden, Russell Hess, Chester Peck, Fred Jacobs and Mr. and Mrs. William Peck.

CHARLES E. DUNHAM DIED SATURDAY

Former Plainfield Merchant Carried Off by Heart Trouble at His Bound Brook Home.

SIXTY-FOUR YEARS OLD

ONE OF SEVEN SONS, KNOWN AS A TEMPERANCE WORKER.

Wife and Daughter Survive Him—Mr. Dunham Was Engaged As a Shoe Merchant Here and Later in Business in Bound Brook.

Charles E. Dunham, for many years a resident of North Plainfield, died soon after 12 last Friday night at his home in Bound Brook, following a severe illness. He was taken Monday night with what appeared to be neuralgia of the stomach and which later developed into heart trouble. He rallied and seemed much improved, until yesterday afternoon when there was a turn for the worse.

Mr. Dunham was about sixty-four years old. He was born in Piscataway, being one of seven sons. All but two, George Dunham, of New York, and William Dunham, of New Market, are now dead. Besides a wife and one daughter, Miss Elfreda Dunham, three sisters-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Pares and Mrs. D. C. Adams and one living in Minnesota, survive him. He was for many years a deacon in the Congregational Church, Bound Brook, and he was a very active church and temperance worker.

Mr. Dunham was engaged in the shoe business at the corner of Park avenue and West Front street for a long time. About fifteen years ago he moved to Bound Brook and engaged in the hardware business which he continued until a few years ago, when he gave up business and just devoted his time to looking after his property interests, some of which is on Craig place, North Plainfield. According to the annual custom Mr. Dunham and his family expected to spend Christmas at the home of Dr. and Mrs. D. C. Adams, of Grove street.

A DEVOTED MISSIONARY DIES

MRS. KATE B. HORTON, OF CRANFORD, WELL-KNOWN IN THIS CITY, IS DEAD.

Mrs. Kate Brownlee Horton, wife of Edmund B. Horton, and daughter of the late Rev. Dr. James Brownlee, of Port Richmond, N. Y., died at Cranford, Wednesday. For a great many years she was corresponding secretary of the Woman's Executive Committee of the Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed Church of America. Mrs. Horton made tours annually to the far west, visiting the Indians, Mountain Whites and she worked especially among the Hollanders and Swedes. On several occasions she has addressed mission meetings at Trinity Reformed Church.

Raoul Julius Auerbach, Jr., of New York, Groom at a Quiet Ceremony Here.

SAILED FOR BERMUDA

REV. DR. CORNELIUS SCHENCK OFFICIATED AT THE NUPTIAL SERVICE.

Miss Estelle Gardner, of New York, Bridesmaid, and F. E. Blume, Also of New York, Best Man—Groom a Medical Student.

Miss Clara Grace Marie Blume, daughter of Mrs. J. C. M. Giebelhouse, of 635 West Front street, and Raoul Julius Auerbach, Jr., formerly of Plainfield, but now of New York, were married Christmas eve at the home of the bride's mother in the presence of the relatives and a few intimate friends. Owing to the recent death of the bride's brother, the affair was a quiet one. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed Church, performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Miss Estelle Gardner, of New York, as bridesmaid, and the bride's brother, F. E. Blume, also of New York, was best man. An informal reception followed the ceremony, after which the bride and groom left for New York from which place they sailed for Bermuda. They will be absent an indefinite time.

The groom is a medical student at a New York college and with his parents has been spending the past two summers in Plainfield, living in the residence adjoining that of his bride's mother.

CHRISTMAS AT THE Y. M. C. A.

ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN BY NEW YORKERS, ASSISTED BY MISS BENNETT.

There was a fair-sized crowd at the Christmas entertainment given under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. in the association hall. Miss Edith Ford Cline and Miss Emily Farrow Gregory, of New York, were the entertainers, assisted by Miss Florence Bennett, of this city, soloist, accompanied on the piano by Miss Renstrom, of this city.

The programme opened with a opened with a Christmas solo by Miss Bennett, "The Chimes of Normandy." Recitations followed by Miss Gregory, whose impersonations kept the audience in constant laughter and brought her numerous encores.

"The Other Woman," a one-act play, was the evening's hit. The parts were taken by Miss Gregory and Miss Kline, and were played with a high degree of dramatic skill. Recitations in negro dialect by Miss Cline were well received. The entertainment closed with a solo, "O, Sweet With Flowers," by Miss Bennett.

HETTY GREEN IN PLAINFIELD

THE WEALTHIEST WOMAN IN AMERICA ONCE RESIDED IN THIS CITY.

Few people in this city know that Hetty Green, the richest woman in the world, lived in this city at one time, yet such is the case. What is more, her son, who now has an ambition to become the Governor of Texas, was well known at the local freight depot where he was at times employed. An interesting story is told by a well known citizen about her "penny squeezing" habits.

It seems that one evening several years ago, a woman called at his house and inquired about the rental of a dwelling owned by him. The rent was fifty dollars a month and she bargained so persistently for lower rent that the citizen would not rent the building to her. At the time the citizen did not know with whom he was dealing.

Later, in conversation with a friend, he was asked if he knew who the shabbily dressed woman was. He was forced to admit that he didn't, whereupon he was told that it was none other than Hetty Green, the wealthiest woman in America, which greatly surprised the owner of the building.

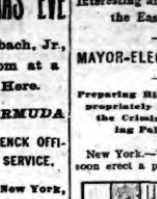
OUR GOTHAM LETTER

Interesting and Timely Gossip from the Eastern Metropolis.

MAYOR-ELECT OF NEW YORK

Preparing His New Home—It Is Appropriately Located—Operation of the Criminal Sage—A Banking Palace—Other Items.

New York.—Workmen of the city will soon erect a pair of fine ornamental lamps at either side of the broad stone steps leading up to the door of the old-fashioned mansion at 10 Washington square, which Mayor-elect McClellan has leased for six years. His term is two years.



The Mayor's Lamps: Why Not?

The lamps are the sign of a mayor's occupancy. They are always placed before the house of a mayor and are not taken away when he dies or fails of reelection. Always they twinkle as they have done, it may be for more than a century, unless the house is torn down. So passing along a humble street in the tenement quarter one comes at times upon the twin lamps at what was once the door of a mayor, and is now a rabbi warren of the very poor. I ran upon a pair of the city's lamps the other day in Second avenue, in which is now the Hungarian quarter. They reminded me of mid-century times when Thackeray visited this country and made his headquarters with a fashionable family on Second avenue.

The political problems of McClellan center upon whether he can satisfy the "boys" without too much dissatisfying the solid citizens who downed Van Wyck two years ago. The social side of his life promises to be interesting. For when McClellan was a poor newspaper reporter he married the pretty daughter of John G. Heckscher, a very great swell in the 400. It may be that Mr. McClellan's political ambition stepped in at this time; the story goes that Richard Croker himself, hearing the name of George McClellan, saw the young man and gave orders for his political advancement. The possession of a beautiful and tactful wife, skilled in social arts and personally acquainted with the elite of New York, has smoothed his pathway greatly, especially in Washington, where so much is made of social distinctions.

An Ideal Home for a Mayor.

From the upper room, which he will use as a study, technically a "hall bedroom," but in dimensions some 15 feet by 16, as the hall over which it is placed is generous, Mayor McClellan will look out over the scene of his social activities of nearly a century. Near by lived "Miss Flora McFlimsey, of Madison Square," whose chronic state of "nothing to wear"-ness aroused the ire of William Allen Butler years ago. Here also lived "Cecil Dreeme" in Winthrop's old narrative. Here the elder Henry James placed more than one of his stories. A hundred feet from the McClellan home, Fifth avenue begins its north and south sweep between the home of Gen. Lloyd Brice and that which was the art palace of Mary Morgan. Thence for a mile the avenue is given up to trade, but the square retains most marvelously the old social character. For Mrs. Pierre Lorillard, Mr. F. H. Lovell, Mr. Tailer, a relative by marrige of the Lorillards and a notable swell, and Gen. Brice are McClellan's neighbors on the one hand; on the other side are Robert W. DeForest, the millionaire tenement house commissioner, who has done in two years such a wonderful work for improving the homes of the city, Charles W. Gould and John G. Carlisle.

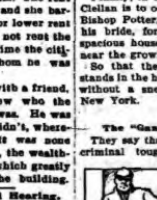
Miss Flora McFlimsey

Finally, in the very house which McClellan is to occupy lived recently Bishop Potter, who now occupies with his bride, formerly Mrs. Clark, her spacious house upon Riverside Drive, near the growing Cathedral of St. John.

So that the future mayor's home stands in the heart of what may be called without a sneer the "best society" of New York.

The "Gangs" and the Police.

They say that there are 80 "gangs" of criminal toughs terrorizing different parts of New York. The "Monk East-man Gang" is perhaps the most famous from the fact that its leader was recently accused of going over into New Jersey to "do up" a fighting conchman for a Wall street "magnate." Upon that occasion a state senator from New York testified to "Monk's" good character and said that he was very useful to Mr. Sullivan—the great and only "Tim"—and to Foley, the Tammany leader of the Second district. It was the "Monk" East-man gang that was sent up by the Foley leaders to beat Devery in the primaries in the famous Nineteenth district last summer. After the gang got its money for "repeating" and returned to its own neighborhood the men "blew in" their earnings for drink at such a pace that before morning they had nearly killed several members of rival "Paul Kelly gang." Now "Paul Kelly" is an Italian, by the way, and his real name is Appollonio something or other; hence the rivalry is explained.



"One of the Gang"

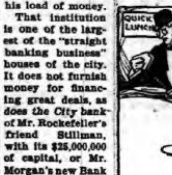
This incident explains also why it is so hard to break up the vicious gangs. But the line is drawn. The other morning a boy in a hurry brushed against a bank messenger in the Wall street district who was carrying a bag of money to another bank, more than $100,000. The messenger knocked the boy down, fearing an attack by thieves, and almost before he could pick himself up four policemen were upon the spot and the scuffers were literally carried off their feet.

Chief Byrnes' "deadline" is still operative. Law or no law, a known criminal who ventures farther toward the stock exchange than Fulton street is arrested. He may have legally a perfect right to be upon the public street anywhere, but he would explain that right in unsympathetic cars if he wasted breath upon it.

A Palace for Banking.

The messenger who was jostled was headed for the National Park bank with his load of money.

That institution is one of the largest of the "straight banking business" houses of the city. It does not furnish money for financiering of the very poor, does the City bank of Mr. Rockefeller's friend Stillman, with its $25,000,000 of capital, or Mr. Morgan's new Bank of Commerce with the same capital and even larger deposits. But its deposits are, in proportion to its $2,000,000 capital, enormous, and its business uses 250 employes.



Filed With Pork and Pie

To house and care for these and to provide upon a scale of unprecedented magnificence for its patrons the Park bank has about completed a palace of the sort which has first appeared in the world. It stands upon costly Broadway frontage, but makes no attempt to provide offices for rental in upper floors or to pierce the sky with many stories. As in the great hall of the new Stock Exchange and of the Produce Exchange its banking room reaches aloft a hundred feet, I should say, to its vaulted roof. The walls are of the costliest imported marbles. It is called the "million-dollar banking room." The cost must have been not much less than a million.

Clerks, bookkeepers, directors and all the busy men about the place have offices arranged in the nine stories of offices that at one end of the building rise to the same height as the banking room. Next these offices and convenient are the kitchen and dining room. President Delafield knows that time is money. He knows, too, that men do not do their best work when unwisely filled with pork and pie, especially when there is a "small bottle on the side." Every one of the 250 employes is fed upon the premises—well fed, too—so far as his luncheon goes. This is an economy to the bank as well as to the employe.

The Smashing of Shamrock.

It is cool weather for yacht talk? Nevertheless, an interest rather pathetic attaches to the smashing of Shamrock I, the first boat Sir Thomas Lipton has brought over to try conclusions with the Columbia. She is being broken up for material at City Island.

How She Looks Now

Haul out of the water one of these great boats for knocking and her enormous size is better seen than ever in dry docks. What looked upon the water like a boy's toy yacht, so gracefully did she heel to the breeze, now towers away into the sky amazingly. First, there is the most valuable portion, the lead fine-keel, caked and sheathed and braced to the hull with steel. This rises above one's head to the height of a two-story house as she stands upon the ways before launching, and is to swell out into the shallow, powerful hull. This again, seen overhead, looms enormously, its 140 feet by 20 feet dwarfing everything else in sight.

Not so very many of the cup defenders have yet been broken up for material. The Independence of Thomas Lawson, which never became a defender, went to the melting pot long ago. But the earlier cup yachts make fine, fast, roomy and convenient large schooners when transformed. The Volunteer had perhaps of all the series the best model for a "wholesome boat" suitable for real use. One only needs to see a cup racer out of the water for the wreckers' convenience to realize what a nuisance she is, her shape how preposterous, her building and repair how great an expense, and when she goes to the knacker her half million of cost shrinks to $12,000 or so of value.

RELICS OF A POET

Authenticity of Shakespearean Memorials to Be Investigated.

The Shakespeare's Birthplace Trust Formed at Stratford-on-Avon to Search Out Truth in Connection with Each Relic.

What is and what is not worth preserving as a memorial of Shakespeare must always be an interesting question not only to Englishmen, but to Americans. The Shakespeare's Birthplace trust has been formed to search out the truth in connection with each relic, and see that as far as possible only the plain truth is told about the articles preserved in Stratford-on-Avon.

Even Shakespeare's house is in large part a restoration, a fact duly stated on the souvenir ticket given to each visitor who pays for admission. Fortunately the birthplace needed less restoration than the adjoining and communicating house, which was John Shakespeare's business place, and is now the museum; yet even the birthplace has had such possibilities of gradual alteration that the late Halliwell-Phillips suggested that on the cellarage only could be sure that it remained in the same condition as it Shakespeare's day.

The relics in the house vary considerably in interest. Not one piece of its furniture is known to have been there it Shakespeare's time; though some pieces have been bought by the trustees, because they were in the house early in the last bentury, and were then shown as being old furniture of the house. The desk from the Grammar school is frankly stated to be Shakespeare's, "by old tradition," and other objects have their claims to notice.

The portraits of Shakespeare include many with incomplete pedigrees, and some of undoubtedly later date that Shakespeare's death. Yet while one "authority" believes in the Ely palace portrait, another is frankly attached to the "Flower" painting at the Memorial theater. Only the Droeshout engraving in the first folio, and the bust in Trinity church have unassailable histories.

The Shakespeare museum, commonly called Anne Hathaway's cottage, has "nothing but local tradition," with some small amount of confirmatory evidence on which to rest its claims. Yet what can be stronger than local tradition back to a time when there was no conscious art inventing a fabulous story. Even the name of Shakespeare's wife rested on this same local tradition until comparatively recently. Every church register in the neighborhood had been searched and searched for a record of the marriage, and it was a matter of surprise when a bond for the issue of a special license of marriage between "William Shaxpere et Annum Hathway" was found in the consistory court of Worcester.

The New Place museum adjoins the site of the house which Shakespeare bought when retiring to Stratford as a successful man, and where he died. Amongst other things in the museum are a shovel board from the house across the way, which is now the "Falcon Inn," a board which old tradition has associated with Shakespeare as a player of the ancient game of shovel board.

Even at the church the old font may not be the one at which Shakespeare was christened. We have no contemporary description of the font at which the ceremony took place. But we have the baptismal record:—"1564, April 26. Guilielmus filius Johannes Shakspere;" we see that this is "the old font;" and its style takes us back to at least as early as Shakespeare's time.

ROOM IN WHICH SHAKESPEARE WAS BORN

H. SNOWDEN WARD.

Pennsylvania's Natural Wealth.

The most valuable of the state's resources are its fuels, in the form of anthracite, bituminous coal, petroleum and natural gas. It is to the possession of these fuels, so asserts Mr. Addison B. Burk in an article on Pennsylvania in Pearson's, that Pennsylvania owes its supremacy in the industries of iron and steel and glass. It produces nearly all the anthracite mined in the United States, as well as very large part of the bituminous coal; and for many years it has been the source of main supply of petroleum and natural gas. Although its agricultural interests are overshadowed by its mineral products, it had 224,248 farms in 1900, valued at $703,373,760, with live stock valued at $103,439,132, and with farm products for the year worth $207,885,660. In foreign commerce alone it has fallen behind. Philadelphia was at one time the chief commercial port of the country.

ROYAL BLUE FLYER KILLED PLAINFIELDER

John Stien Struck Down on Christmas Day While on His Way to His Mother's.

ACCIDENT AT DUNELLEN

BODY TOSSED IN THE AIR AND DECAPITATED BY FAST TRAIN.

Dead Man Employed in Local Laundry—Thirty-two Years of Age—Leaves a Wife—Member of Fraternal Orders.

While on his way to New Market with Christmas presents for his aged mother, who resides at that place, John Stien, of this city, was struck down by a Royal Blue line flyer and instantly killed. The fatal accident occurred at the Dunellen station of the Jersey Central at 9:45 Friday morning.

Mr. Stien got off a local westbound train on the opposite side of the Dunellen station, presumably intending to take a short cut through the road to New Market. As he alighted from the train and just as he was about to turn around, the Blue Line train suddenly bore down upon him. The fast train was too near for Stien to make his escape or the engineer to stop his train. The head was severed from the body and thrown a hundred feet, while the body was tossed between the express and the local trains.

What was left of the body was gathered up and taken to Undertaker W. G. Runyon's morgue, where for some time there was some doubt as to who it was. Later investigation, and the fact that Mr. Stien was known to be at that time on his way to his mother's home, proved the body to be his.

Mr. Stien was employed in Thorn's laundry in the east end of the city. About six years ago he was married to the daughter of the late John Hague, for many years an engineer on the New Jersey Central His wife survives him. Mr. Stien was born at New Market and was 32 years of age.

Tonic and Strengthening Properties are enhanced by the great care taken in the manufacturing process, as the various stages are supervised by the personal superintendent of the Speer vineyards, and the purity and genuineness are guaranteed by the Speer Wine Company, and Health Officers of the States where it is sold.

Speer's Port Grape Wine is a pure juice, free from alcohol, and is highly recommended by the medical profession.

Every bottle bears the signature of Alfred Speer, Passaic, N. J., to cover the cork of each bottle.

Speer's (Socialite) Claret

Is held in high estimation for its richness as a Dry Table Wine, specially suited for dinner use.

Speer's ★★★ P. J. Sherry

Is a wine of Superior Character and partakes of the rich qualities of the grape from which it is made.

Speer's ★★★ Climax Brandy

IS A PURE distillation of the grape, and stands unrivaled in this country for medicinal purposes, and equal in every respect to the high brands Old Cognac Brandies of France, from which it cannot be distinguished.

NEW JERSEY Y.M.C.A. ATHLETIC MEET HERE

Fifteen Associations to Compete in Competition for the Championship of the State.

FEBRUARY 8, THE DATE

EACH ASSOCIATION ENTERING EVENT WILL FURNISH A JUDGE.

There Will be Five Events—The First Regular Athletic Meet of New Jersey Y. M. C. A.—Committee to Make Arrangements.

A State Y. M. C. A. athletic meet will be held with the local association Monday, February 8. Letters have been sent to the fifteen associations in Northern New Jersey, all of which, it is expected, will be represented. It will be the first regular athletic meet in the athletic league of the northern part of the State, and that it is held in Plainfield is a commentary on the excellent equipment of the local association.

Five events will be contested, the 13-pound shot put, the three standing broad jumps, running high jump, running high dive and a potato race, which will cover a quarter mile. Each association will be entitled to enter five men, only one of whom, however, will be allowed to enter any one event. In this way each association will have a single representative in each event.

Each association represented will send a judge, the local association to furnish measurers and scorers and attend to other details.

The winner of the games will be practically champion association of the State, as, of the seventeen associations in New Jersey having physical departments, fifteen are located in Northern New Jersey. A sub-committee of members of the local association will be appointed soon to make all arrangements for the meet.

SANTA CLAUS AT WATCHUNG

SCHOOL CHILDREN RENDER A PROGAMME AND LISTEN TO ADDRESS.

Santa Claus with a full pack visited the Watchung, N. J., public school at Watchung Wednesday. The school building was filled with parents and friends of the pupils. This is the programme as rendered:

Singing by the school, "'Tis Winter;" welcoming address, Charles Mersing; recitation, in concert, "Ho! Ho! for the Mistletoe!" recitation by school, "Jolly Old Santa Claus;" class song, "Have you seen, Dear Santa?" song, "Eight Little Turkeys are we;" recitation, "Can you Tell the Story;" class recitation, and chorus, Christmas Chimes and Carols; recitation, "Santa's Mistake," Roy Herrman; recitation, "Fooling Old Santa Claus," Clarence Schmidt; class song, "Tip toe, off to Bed;" recitation, "Kitty's Grief," Isabele Deats; singing by the school, "Snow Song;" "'Phoning to Santa," Miss Elsie Schmidt;" "The Cook's Chorus."

The presentation of gifts was made by a Santa Claus who was a delight to the children. Gifts were made to the teachers, Mrs. S. S. Higgins and to Miss A. Grace Higgins. A Christmas address was made to the children by Dr. Richard Moldenke.

FUNERAL OF MRS. VANZANDT

REV. DR. SCHENCK AND REV. MR. GOODRICH OFFICIATED.

A large number of relatives and friends attended the funeral services of Mrs. T. Romeyn VanZandt which were held Thursday from the late residence in Madison avenue. Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed Church, of which Mrs. VanZandt was a member; assisted by Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, of the Congregation Church, officiated, the latter reading the Scripture selection.

Dr. Schenck spoke impressively of the life of Mrs. VanZandt and dwelt on the Scriptural thought of those who sleep in Jesus. To the bereaved ones he told them not to sorrow. He also spoke of the active life of Mrs. VanZandt in her church and of her devotion in her home. During the services E. E. Runyon sang two appropriate selections.

There were a number of beautiful floral tributes, including a wreath of roses from the Consistory and a large bunch of roses from the Ladies' Christian Work Society, of Trinity Reformed Church, also cut flowers from relatives and friends.

The interment will take place today at Blawenburg, Somerset County.

—James Patterson, of West Front street, is building an addition to his house.

ELECTION OFFICERS' CLAIMS TO BE PAID

Council Agrees to Settle All Claims for Elections of 1901-02, Abiding by the Decision.

DUNELLEN AVE. OPENED

COMMISSIONERS APPOINTED TO ASSESS DAMAGES TO PROPERTY OWNERS.

No Legal Action to be Taken Against Durlach Brothers—Adjustment of Tax Bills—Final Session of Old Council to be Held Dec. 31.

When the adjourned meeting of the Common Council was held last night, Mr. Tolles moved to suspend the regular order of business to allow the presentation of a report on the extension of Dunellen avenue to Myrtle avenue in the borough. He offered a resolution to the effect that inasmuch as the property-owners could not agree in the dedication of property, that a commission consisting of J. Wesley Johnson, David O. Smalley and George Griffin, be appointed to make a just and equitable adjustment and assessment of the property, and Monday night, January 18, was the time fixed when the commissioners will report. These commissioners have agreed to serve without compensation.

All of the members present at the meeting except Councilmen Pray, vanHerwerden and Tyler. Most of the time was occupied in disposing of various petitions, the majority of which were presented at the last regular meeting and since then had been considered by the chairman of the finance committee, Mr. Daniel, and the corporation counsel.

After a conference between the corporation counsel and Miss Mattison, of the Board of Health office, regarding the latter's claim for pay as registrar of vital statistics, the question appearing to be which fund this sum should be taken from, it was reported that the claim had been withdrawn.

Mayor O. L. Jenkins appointed William G. Messler a regular policeman, he having served nearly a year as a special to the satisfaction of the police board and the appointment was confirmed.

Corporation Counsel Marsh recommended to the Council that the claims of the election officers for 1901-02 be paid, as a recent decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals, the court of last resort indicated that they are entitled to the sum of $3 for each registry day and $7 for each election day, with the understanding that the city pays only for the work in connection with city elections. The recommendation of Mr. Marsh was adopted and a question of long standing is finally settled.

Mr. Marsh also reported on the ejectment suit brought against the Messrs. Durlach, owners of the property corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue, for the removal of a certain building from the street line. He stated that the contract for the work had been awarded and that A. L. C. Marsh had been engaged as architect. The plans as shown to Building Inspector Doane provides that the building shall face Watchung avenue, that the first floor is to consist of one large and two small stores. Mr. Marsh recommended that as the property-owners have commenced work that legal action be deferred. This recommendation was adopted.

Mr. Daniel reported on the several petitions presented at the last meetings and referred to the finance committee. Regarding the petition of John C. Daly for an adjustment on taxes to the amount of $12.60 which he claimed he paid twice on his Everett place property, it was voted to refund the sum when a certified statement of facts is presented. The request of Elias T. Brown for a reduction of taxes on her property at 741-743 Dunellen avenue, on the grounds that she was assessed for a barn which is not on her property, Mr. Daniel reported that the tax assessed represents an increased valuation of the property from $4,500 to $5,100 and on the recommendation of Mr. Daniel the request of the petitioner was not granted.

One of the most difficult cases reported on was that relative to the petition of Mrs. Lucy E. Tomlinson, who asked for exemption for a tax of $4,500 in the bank as personal property. Mr. Daniel stated that money in the bank is taxable, in fact all real estate or personal tax is liable to tax, but it happens, according to Collector E. H. Smith's statement that several beneficiaries as a result of the Westfield disaster a year ago, went before the Commissioners of Appeal and had an adjustment made regarding several amounts placed in the bank. Mrs. Tomlinson failed to do this and if the Council should exempt her from this tax the law would be violated. The action in imposing this tax on Mrs. Tomlinson was characterized as an outrage by President Buckle, for he declared that many persons who have money in the bank escape a similar taxation. The matter was referred to the finance committee for further consideration.

The petition of Carl Lindmark asking for exemption from a dog tax on the grounds that he did not have a dog when the assessor was around, was denied, it being stated that it was not necessary for Mr. Lindmark to have the dog at the specified time.

M. E. Risberg, who claimed a tax of $2.51 was paid twice, will be reimbursed that amount when she presents a certified statement of facts, and the Council voted to pay E. L. Finch $87.23, that being the sum necessary to reimburse him in the transfer of the assessment on a property on Arlington avenue. It was discovered that Mr. Finch was paying an assessment on some property owned by another party, the lot number being designated wrongly.

The petitions of the American Sabbath Tract Society for exemption from an assessment on bank stock and the Firemen's Relief Association for exemption from tax on Pemberton avenue property, were referred to the city clerk to be in turn referred to the new Council for consideration.

Mr. Lee offered a resolution providing for the location of three two-way fire hydrants, one at the corner of Denmark road and Berkeley avenue, another one on Berkeley avenue and a third on West Sixth street and Clinton avenue. These hydrants will be put in position after the extension of the mains.

The Plainfield Electric Light Company informed the Council that fourteen new street lights have been located as directed.

After President Buckle announced that all matters in the hands of the various chairman of committees on December 30 would be referred to the new Council, and the bills were audited, the Council adjourned to hold a final meeting on Wednesday night, December 30, when the years' reports will be presented.

SEVEN YEARS MARRIED

FRIENDS JOIN WITH MR. AND MRS. I. P. RUNYON IN CELEBRATING EVENT.

William Henry and John McLaughlin gave a select dance at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac P. Runyon, on Somerset st., Wednesday, which was attended by about thirty young people of this city and borough. The affair was arranged in celebration of the seventh wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Runyon. Wendel's orchestra, with harp accompaniment, was the music for the evening. At a late hour refreshments were served.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 5—Commence by Rev. E. M. Doyle.

Topic.—The kind of growth I need in 1904.—Eph. iv, 11-16.

The kind of growth I need in 1904 depends entirely upon the condition of my moral and spiritual character at the beginning of this year. What God wants us each one to be is a symmetrical, well balanced, full rounded Christian. No Christian grace should be abnormally developed. No one should be given such prominence as to dwarf the others and give them no opportunity for growth. Each Christian grace is to be so normally developed that when they are all taken together they will present a perfect spiritual life, as when the members of the body are so evenly developed that in the aggregate they go to make up a perfect physical man. This being the aim, we must therefore grow in the graces in which we are deficient. The missing grace is to be added and the weak grace to be strengthened. Therefore to grow intelligently we must examine ourselves as to our needs and then they may be supplied. Do we lack love, then we should grow in love. Is our power to resist temptation weak, then that should be strengthened.

But the apostle lays special emphasis upon the fact that in the development of the perfect man in Christ particular stress needs to be laid upon certain virtues. In these things all should grow, and it is hardly imaginable that any of us has so far developed in Christian virtue that growth is impossible. Among these fundamental principles of Christian character stand faith, knowledge and love. Without faith it is impossible to please God, and that we may develop a Christian character that will be well pleasing in his sight faith must become more and more a part of our lives. Growth in knowledge is also essential to symmetrical Christian development. "Grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ," says the Apostle Peter. Knowledge is not virtue. A man may know, yet not do. But knowledge is essential to growth. We cannot believe until we know what God would have us believe; we cannot love until we know whom God would have us love; we cannot do until we know what God would have us do. Growth in knowledge is most essential, therefore, to perfect development. And all growth is in love. Love is the basis and the aim of the cross of all the Christian graces. "Rooted and grounded in love," we are to come "unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

God recognizes our need of growth and has provided for it. His Holy Spirit has endowed certain of His people with special powers of religious leadership. He has given us apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers "for the perfecting of the saints." Let us under the direction of the Holy Spirit Himself and His inspired teachers strive to grow nearer and nearer to the goal of perfect manhood set before us throughout this entire year.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ps. i, 1-6; xcii, 12-15; Hos. xiv, 5, 6; Matt. v, 48; vi, 33, 34; vii, 12; Phil. iii, 12-14; Eph. iii, 14-21; Heb. xii, 1, 2; II Pet. iii, 18; Rev. ii, 10.

Ex-General Secretary Baer.

In all the wide field of Christian Endeavor no man, next to Dr. Clark, is better known than Mr. John Willis Baer, who for many years served the United society as its general secretary and who saw the movement develop from its infancy to childhood to the time when it had become a worldwide force. The possessor of splendid personality and with rare gifts as a public speaker, in addition to being an executive of exceptional ability, Mr. Baer has had no small part in developing and advancing Christian Endeavor.

JOHN WILLIS BAER.

Although in his present position on the home mission board of the Presbyterian church he has not so large opportunity as formerly to plan and work for Christian Endeavor, he is still with voice and pen doing much to spread its influence and increase its usefulness.

Once an Endeavorer, Always One.

No Endeavorer need ever leave the society. The time may come for him to leave the active membership, but he should never be less than an honorary member.—Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark.

An Addition to the Motto.

The Endeavor motto is "For Christ and the Church." Add this to it—"the whole wide world for Jesus."—Rev. Reginald J. Campbell, Minister of City Temple, London.

Gems of Thought.

Lord, help me to take fewer things into my hands and to do them well.—Wayland Hoyt, D. D.

Let us be sure that the more we realize God's vaster purposes the more dearly we can feel His personal care.—Phillips Brooks.

There has never been a great and beautiful character in which has not become so by filling well the ordinary and smaller offices appointed of God.—Bushnell.

I believe that all who truly desire and seek it may love God with all their heart and soul, mind and strength, and their neighbors as themselves. This is entire sanctification.—Bishop Vincent.

Affects the Tobacco.

The spicy odor that is noticeable in the cigar box comes from the wood of which it is made. It is not because it is impregnated with the tobacco. On the contrary, the tobacco takes the flavor of the wood. That is the reason why a particular kind of wood is used for the boxes of all the best cigars. It is Spanish cedar, an expensive wood, very durable, and the only kind which has been found to improve the flavor of the cigar.

Lord Curzon's School Days.

Like so many men who achieve greatness in after life, Lord Curzon's school reputation was not of the most promising. "He was clever enough," one of his old masters said recently, "but he was incorrigibly lazy and was far more immersed in mischief and practical joking than in his books. And yet, although he never did a stroke of work he could by any exercise of ingenuity avoid, he could always somehow manage to hold his own with the other boys of his form."

It Is the Largest.

The most extensive wine cellar in the world is owned by the Roumanian government. A railway tunnel 2,600 feet long between Galatz and Barbushi could not be used for railway purposes because of its interior construction. It was leased to a wine dealer, who has turned it into an immense wine cellar.

Costly Book.

The personal estate of Heber R. Bishop included manuscripts on jade, which are to be published at an outlay of at least $75,000. The copies are to be limited to 100, and it is stipulated that they shall be distributed only to certain museums and libraries in this country and Europe.

Considered of Value Now.

There are immense forests of Aleppo pines in Algeria, which have up to now been considered of little value; the suitability of this wood for road paving and for timbers for mines and telegraph posts, may have the effect of enhancing the value of these forests.

Foreigners in Tokio.

At the beginning of this year there were altogether 1,512 foreigners residing in Tokio. They included 634 Chinese, 298 Americans, 198 Englishmen, 90 Corseans, 83 Germans, 81 Frenchmen, 23 Indians, 19 Russians, 8 Canadians, 8 Swiss and 6 Austrians.

Horses for South Africa.

The shipments of remounts from Hungary to South Africa amounted to 45,640 in 1902, and account for $5,270,000 It is said that the Hungarian-bred horses are wonderfully adapted to the climate and soil of South Africa.

Safety in Sleep.

A medical authority says that in railway collisions nearly all the passengers who are saleep escape to a great extent the bad effect of shaking and concussions, Nature's own anaesthetic preserving them.

American Books in Japan.

Japan has more translations of American books than any other foreign nation. Gidding's "Principles of Sociology," Mayo Smith's "Statistics of Sociology" and "Little Lord Fauntleroy" have had large sales.

A Limited Industry.

Chemists' shops are limited to a certain number in Berlin, and new licenses are rarely granted. A business was sold for £9,600 in Danzig recently, including £5,000 for the license.

Germany's Glove Industry.

The glove industry of Germany has, during the last few years, made such strides that the output is now believed to equal that of France. There are 1,100 glove factories in Germany.

Eyesight and Tight Collars.

An authority on the subject declares that many cases of defective eyesight are caused by wearing tight colors, which interfere with the circulation of blood to the head.

Dickens' Birthplace.

The city of Portsmouth, England, recently bought the birthplace in that city of Charles Dickens, and will probably establish a Dickens museum in the house.

The Explanation.

"What is the new piece you're playing? Is it by Wagner?"

"No; the piano is out of tune."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Most Popular Sachet Powder.

Probably more "violet" sachet powders are sold than all other varieties put together, "heliotrope" coming second in popularity.

The Willing Worker.

A contented, willing laborer is worth 50 per cent. more than the dissatisfied compulsory worker.—Chicago Daily News.

Soot on the Carpet.

If soot falls on the carpet cover it thickly with salt. It may then be brushed up without fear of doing damage.

Money Spent on Sport.

More than $10,000,000 worth of sporting goods were sold in the United States last year.

In England.

The lord chief justice is, by virtue of his office, the principal coroner of England.

Servants in London.

Only 11 per cent. of the families of London employ a servant, but there are 205,658 persons of the servant class.

Piles of Ancient Make.

Pins have been found among the Egyptian mummies and in the prehistoric caves of Switzerland.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Jan. 5: "The Kind of Growth I Need in 1904" (The Morning Watch. Enrollment—Eph. iv, 11-16.

The growth set forth by the apostle is twofold. It is the increase of the person in his individual life of confidence in Christ and Christly knowledge. This is to be attained in the stature of a full grown manhood in spirit. This is the maturity of Christian faith and experience. Not that any two persons will be exactly alike any more than two full grown men are physically alike, but there is a degree and perfected knowledge will be marked. Uniformity is no more to be desired nor sought in spiritual life than in bodily appearance. Frederick as emperor of Germany may prefer a bodyguard of men all of whom shall be giants in stature, but he will never succeed in making all his subjects six feet tall.

I ought to grow up in Christ in all things until I am full grown.

There is such a thing as family resemblance so that children show a genuine likeness in features to those to each other and to parents. In some cases this is very marked. Sometimes twins look so much alike that only intimate friends can tell them apart. So in spiritual matters. We come to be and speak and think and live the same as Christ and God, our Father. Our resemblance to each other and to Him increases as we go on in this way of living. Yet must Jesus ever be our elder brother, the first begotten of God. We are privileged to grow up into Him and to attain to the measure of the stature of His fullness.

Beside this personal and individual growth there is a community life in which we have part. The "body of Christ" it is called by Paul. It is composed of all those who love and serve Him. He is described as the head, and all others appear as parts of the body. This is a favorite figure of speech with the apostle. He regards some as eyes, others as ears or hands or feet. Each has some place in forming an perform in the church. No one is to despise another because his appointed work is not the same as that other's. Each is to esteem and honor the other. The work of each is needful for the success of all.

Personal advance and growth can only be in union with the progress of all the rest.

The growth needed by each in 1904 is such as shall best develop a symmetrical personality and a united church. Special needs peculiar to each case must be studied by each one for himself. Careful self examination will be required for this. In some particulars all are alike and require the same things. And for which all parts are sustained and nourished in common and disease in one part affects all, while strength in one part assails all others to maintain health, so in the church of Jesus Christ there are graces and gifts for which all are to partake and to which each must contribute.

It may be well to itemize some particular needs.

First.—I need to grow in steadiness of faith in Christ. I am to hold steady inside to that one purpose to be like Him, to be His in every way and everywhere and at all times. This is the inner life.

Second.—I must grow more skilful in His service to speak and do for Him in all ways possible.

Third.—I must grow in knowledge of Him and His world.

Fourth.—I must grow in ability to get and give for Him and His.

Pride Versus Progress.

Without humility religious progress is impossible. Pride is the destruction of the principle of progress. It whispers to us continually that we are all that we could be and so it points our attention to high positions and ambitious effort beyond the scope of other men. Yet the true growth of the soul is not to be measured by our attempting many extraordinary duties, but by the way of doing simple duties well, and humility, when it reigns in the soul, carries this principle into practice. It bids us hallow our work, especially whatever may be to us hard or disagreeable work, by doing it as a matter of principle. It enriches common acts of neighborly and social kindness with that intensity of moral effort which is due to every act of which the deepest moving power is the love of God.—Rev. F. D. Huntington, D. D.

The Pattern In the Mount.

Is not Christ the mountain up into which the believer goes and in which he finds the divine idea of himself? As a mountain is not only the meeting place of earth and heaven, the place where the bending skies meet the aspiring planet, the place where the sunshine and the cloud keep closest company, the home of storms and the grass, so Christ is the meeting place of divinity and humanity. He is at once the condescension of divinity and the exaltation of humanity, and man wanting to know God's idea of man, any man wanting to know God's idea of him, must go up into Christ, and he will find it there.—Phillips Brooks.

God's Message.

He who catches the one great thought of purpose in life has heard the first syllable of God's message to him. And after the struggle by which he consents to God's will in him, renouncing selfish desire, welcoming tyranny of duties, accepting a stern commission, always the angels come and minister to him.—Joseph May.

Nobler Work to Do.

Amid the gathering storms of doubt
Our hearts grow faint and cold;
The strength we cannot live without
Thy love will not withhold.

Our prayers accept, our sins forgive,
Our youthful zeal renew;
Shape for us holier lives to live
And nobler work to do.
—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

BOOK NEWS.

It is planned to issue on Thursday of each week items of library news. This will frequently take the form of book lists. Such as lists of books recently added, lists on special subjects and like topics. Frequently the lists will be annotated, the aim being to make these annotations of real service to the reader, by giving him the opinion of a trustworthy critic as to the value of the books in a few words as to their scope. Borrowers should keep these lists. The Plainfield Public Library will furnish to anyone making application a list of its books on a given subject.

Public Library Notes.

List of books on amusements and indoor games.

American Hoyle. — Chiefly card games, though chess, backgammon, dominoes and billiards are also described.

Beard.—Jack of all trades. One of the best books of its kind. Among rainy day ideas, the author tells how to have a circus in the attic, how to make two boys into one Santa Claus, how to give a wild west show in the house, a panorama show, etc.

Beebee.—Home occupations for little children. Helpful ideas for the home suggested by the kindergarten, with the object of giving added power to the child in carrying on plays and childish work by himself.

Cassell's book of indoor amusements.—Describes a large number of simple parlor games, arithmetical puzzles, card games, magic, etc.

Champlin. — Young folks' cyclopaedia of games and sports. A treasury of amusements of all kinds, conveniently arranged and simply described.

Hale, L. P.—Fagots for the fireside. Contains over one hundred games for evenings at home, and social parties.

Hoffman.—Modern magic. Sleight of hand and other tricks, both those which do, and those which do not require special apparatus.

Hoffman.—Parlor amusements and evening party entertainments. Describes games of action, catch games, games with pen and pencil, forfeits, afternoner amusements, tableaux and amateur theatricals, card and coin tricks, magic, charades, etc.

Holbrook.—How. A capital book. Besides telling how to make all kinds of things, requiring simple materials, it describes a number of tricks, and Christmas amusements, that any bright boy or girl can learn.

Lucas.—What shall we do now? Whoever is planning for a children's entertainment will find here many helpful suggestions.

Mott.—Home games and parties. Beside old favorites it gives many new ideas for evening entertainments. Describes guessing and ring games, home parties for children, tableaux, light refreshments, etc.

Sherwood.—Art of entertaining. Although largely on giving dinners, luncheons, etc., it contains chapters on private theatricals, how to entertain children, Christmas and children, etc.

Next week's issue will contain a list of the books added to the library during December, 1903.

TO PITCH FOR NEW LONDON

W. M'LAUGHLIN DENIES THAT HE IS NEGOTIATING WITH ANOTHER TEAM.

A report has reached this city that Warren McLaughlin, the baseball player, who represented Plainfield in the National League and who has for the past two years occupied a prominent position in baseball circles, had received a flattering offer from some western baseball manager to play ball in the middle West states this coming season.

Mr. McLaughlin was seen at his home this morning and when asked as to the truth in the report declared that he knew nothing of any proposition having been made to secure him for any western team. He said: "As far as I am concerned I know nothing of any proposition being made and I think there is nothing in the story. So far as I know now, I will be back in my old position on the New London team next season, as pitcher. If there are any negotiations going on they are between the New London management and the team out west as I am still under contract with the New England mangement.

Mrs. Jeremiah Burns, of Plainfield, has been visiting her sister at Raritan during the past week.

Miss Gertrude Harkins, of Plainfield, is visiting Mrs. A. Gibby Spencer, of Somerville.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. LaTourette, of East Fifth street, are visiting their daughter at Westerly, R. I.

Nasal CATARRH

In all its stages there should be cleanliness.

Ely's Cream Balm cleanses, soothes and heals the diseased membranes. It cures catarrh and drives away a cold in the head quickly.

Cream Balm is placed into the nostrils, spreads over the membrane and is absorbed. Relief is immediate and a cure follows. It is not drying—does not produce sneezing. Large Size, 50 cents at Druggists or by mail; Trial Size, 10 cents by mail.

AMELIA SUTTERLEIN SENT TO REFORMATORY

In Court of Special Sessions at Elizabeth, Judge Vail Disposes of Case Against Her.

COLORED MEN GUILTY

THREE PLAINFIELD NEGROES CONFESS THEIR WRONGDOINGS.

Alfred F. Willibald Gets Three Months as Do Also Wm. Saunders and Ernest Morris—Wm. McCoy to be Sentenced Next Week.

Amelia Sutterlein, the "woman burglar" of this city, who broke into the house of George Simon, of North avenue, and got away with a small amount of booty, was committed to the State Reformatory for girls last week by Judge Vail in the Court of Special Sessions at Elizabeth. Wednesday was sentence day in the court.

William Saunders, colored, of this city, pleaded guilty to the larceny of a bicycle and Ernest Morris to the larceny of a coat from U. B. Crane. Both were turned over to the probation officer. Charles Johnson, also from Plainfield, was committed to the county jail for three months for the larceny of a watch from Samuel Johannsen, of Scotch Plains.

For the larceny of $7 Alfred Fred Willibald, of this city, was committed to the county jail for three months. Willibald was arrested in Cranford. He is an old offender having been caught stealing $300 from the North avenue railroad station and sentenced to five months in jail several years ago. He is also said to have deserted from the U. S. army at one time.

William McCoy, colored, of this city, who was found with burglar's tools in his possession in the act of stealing copper wire from the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Railroad Company, pleaded guilty and was remanded for sentence until next week.

PERSEVERANCE ELECTS.

The installation will take place New Year's night, with District Deputy Charles McGinley as the installing officer. An official visit to the lodge will be paid January 3 by the State officers. The third rank was conferred upon two candidates at last night's meeting.

Horse Killed.

A peculiar accident happened on West Fourth street near Park avenue, Thursday afternoon, when one of the valuable horses belonging to the Plainfield Cab Company was killed. The horse, attached to one of the company's carriages, was standing on the street, when a Fourth street trolley car passed by. The horse was frightened and after a wild jump it fell to the ground, the result being that its back was broken. So far as can be learned the car did not strike the animal.

Rev. Mr. Condit to Wed.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Rev. C. B. Condit, of Liberty Corner, and Miss Mary M. Kymer, of Orange.

Artistic Banner.

The silk banner given the class of 1905 of the Plainfield High School by The Daily Press for its victory in the interclass games last fall, was made by the C. H. Coster Co., of No. 5 Park place, New York, artistic decorators and illuminators. The banner is in blue and red, inscribed with gilt letters and is a particularly handsome affair.

CHRISTMAS DAY IN THE CHURCHES

Roman Catholics and Episcopalians Celebrated the Anniversary of Christ's Nativity.

MUCH ELABORATE MUSIC

MASSES IN ST. MARY'S AND ST. JOSEPH'S MARK THE GREAT FEAST.

Special Services in Grace, Holy Cross and St. Stephen's Churches—Swedish Lutherans Observe the Day.

Episcopal Churches.

The attendance at the Church of the Holy Cross Friday was large. Services were held at 7:30 and at 10:30. Special music was rendered by the vested choir. The Christmas tree exercises will be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

At Grace P. E. Church Friday morning Christmas exercises consisted of Holy Communion at 7 and 8 o'clock and morning prayer and Holy Communion at 10:30 with a Christmas sermon on "The Birth of Christ" by the rector, Rev. E. V. Stevenson. There was special music by the boys' surpliced choir. At the service at 10:30, Rev. E. V. Stevenson was celebrant, Rev. E. M. Rodman, gospeler, and Rev. W. H. Neilson, epistoler.

The members of the Sunday-school of St. Stephen's Church had their annual Christmas festivities Thursday, the members of the primary department enjoying their celebration in the afternoon at the rectory, when games were played. There was a Christmas tree and around it the children sang carols. There was a distribution of presents, including oranges and boxes of candy. At night the older members gathered at the rectory, sang Christmas carols and had a general good time. Then followed the usual distribution of gifts. Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock the Christmas festival was concluded with a children's carol service.

In Roman Catholic Churches.

The services in both the Roman Catholic churches in this city were unusually well attended Friday. The Christmas music rendered was exceptionally fine and the disagreeable weather had no apparent effect on the usual attendance at the masses.

The high mass at 5:30 in St. Mary's Church was attended by a host of people, filling the edifice to its full capacity. At this mass the curate, Rev. Father Delahanty, officiated. Other masses were held at 6:30, 7:30, 8:30 and 9:30. The solemn high mass was held at 10:30, when the attendance was even greater than at the earlier service. Rev. Andrew M. Egan was the celebrant; Father Delahanty, deacon; Father Frederici, sub-deacon; and Father Dominick, of Paterson, assistant. In the afternoon, Christmastide services were held in St. Mary's Parochial Hall. There the children of the Sunday-school and church received gifts and candy. A programme rendered by the children was a feature. It follows: Chorus, by the school; "Adesta Fidelos;" action song by the kindergarets; recitations by Elwin Sullivan and Miss Mary Gartner; songs by the fifth and six method pupils; recitation, by Miss Ursula Calvin, Miss Alice O'Laughlin, Edward Hanrahan, Miss Catherine Powers, Miss Adele Von Ohl and Miss Helen Hanrahan.

The committee in charge of the programme under the charmanship of Sister Mary Esther, was the Misses Blanche Skinner, Nellie Hanrahan, Margaret King, Margaret Lutz, Mary McCarthy, Christian McEachen, Bessie Bebout, Elizabeth Brown, Elizabeth Casey, Mary Murray, Kathryn Galbraith and Emma Callahan.

The masses at St. Joseph's Church, in North Plainfield, were especially well attended. The chorus choir, augmented by seventy-five members of the Sunday school, rendered the special Christmas music most creditably. At 5:30, a solemn high mass was sung when Rev. Father Wm. Miller, the pastor, officiated. A low mass was said a 8:30 and another high mass at 10:30, when Father Burk, a Passionist from Hoboken, assisted. Three private masses were said. Among the special anthems rendered by the choir were Merodante's anthem and Novello's Adeste Fideles.

Swedish Lutheran.

The Christmas day services in the Swedish Lutheran Church were held Friday morning with all the characteristic Swedish customs. Swedish Christmas carols were sung by Mrs. L. T. Lindholm and the choir and a special Christmas sermon in Swedish was preached by the pastor, Rev. L. T. Lindholm. The services were very well attended and the floral decorations were exceptionally handsome.

German Lutheran.

The Christmas services at the German Lutheran Church, on Grove street, were held in the morning. They were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Theodore Duensing. In the evening the Swedish Lutherans held their Christmas services.

German Reformed.

Christmas service with a Christmas tree was held Friday p.m. in the German Reformed Church on Craig place and Duer street. The Sunday-school pupils, representing almost the entire enrollment, was present and each received a gift of candy. The programme which was rendered in the evening opened with a prayer by the pastor, Rev. John Justin. These pupils participated: Eddie Allen, George Angelbacer, Adelaide and Evelyn Fritz Minnie Endress, Emma Hidelbof, David Gestner and Flossy Krause, Evvylin Fritz, May and Emma Hidelbof, Minnie Endress, George and Albert Taylor, Lizzie Betsbold, Flossy Krause, Misses Bach, Hoerster, Allen and Hook.

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

WALDRON'S SADHOME-COMING

RETURNED FROM BUYING GROCERIES AND FOUND HOME BURNED DOWN.

While William Waldron was away from home Saturday night, his house at Sherman avenue was burned to the ground. Waldron had spent Christmas with his family visiting friends in Elizabeth and returned Saturday alone. He started a wood fire in a grate which evidently ignited the woodwork while Waldron was buying groceries in this city. The house is located outside the city limits and it was impossible to turn in an alarm. Even if firemen had been sent for they could have done no good as the fire was well under way when discovered and there was no water near with which to fight it. The house was newly built and furnished by Waldron.

TROLLEY MEN MAKE PROTEST

DISLIKE REPORT THAT THEY MUST HAVE UNIFORM OVERCOATS BY JAN. 1.

The conductors and motormen on the local trolley lines have been hearing reports for the past few days which they believe to have some foundation to the effect that unless they wear uniform overcoats when they report for duty on the morning of January 1 they will not be allowed to take out their cars.

They will also have to have new caps and new badges for use on that day. These will be distributed by the company, but the cost to the men will be $1.21 each. The caps will have straight peaks or visors instead of the slanting ones now used. New small coats with a limited number of pockets are also required. The new overcoats will, it is said, cost $12.50 each. Some of the new men aver that they are not in a financial condition to purchase the new coat.

Gun Club's Shoot.

The Independent Shooting Club defied the wind, rain and cold on Christmas Day and enjoyed the shooting at the Maple avenue grounds. The scores have not yet been arranged for publication as all the members have not qualified. Another shoot will be held on New Year's Day at which time it is probable that the qualifying rounds will close.

HOME OF F. AND A. M. DAMAGED BY WATER

Condensed Steam Caused $200 Loss in the Masonic Lodge's Communication Chamber.

ORGAN NOT INJURED

CEILING AND WALLS RUINED BY THE ESCAPING STEAM.

Trouble on Fifth Floor of Babcock Building in Connection With Heating Apparatus—The Carpet Damaged—Furniture Wet.

Much of the fine decorations of the Masonic rooms in the Babcock building were ruined last Sunday through a leakage in the steam pipes. The trouble came in the heating apparatus on the Madison avenue side of the building. There was no steam on during the day and the pipes probably froze. Then when the steam was turned on again late in the afternoon it made its way through the indirect steam heating box and the register to the ceiling where it condensed and fell in big drops to the floor and along the walls.

Besides the ruining of the decorations and the ceiling and walls the furniture was drenched. The carpet was wet through, but the damage to this will be trifling. The organ escaped, though the wetting of the side walls behind it may have injured the pipes slightly. It is thought that $200 would cover the amount of damage.

The whole trouble was solely on the fifth floor in connection with the heating apparatus of the Masonic Hall. The leakage to the floor below the Masonic lodge room was unimportant.

The trouble was located at 7:45 o'clock at night by Thomas Washington, janitor of the Stillman building, who heard the noise in the pipes and reported it to Thomas Titsworth, janitor of the Babcock building. One of the members of the lodge assisted the janitor in repairing the damage by removing and drying the furniture and furnishings that were wet.

Aged Woman Hurt.

Mrs. Mary Randolph, of Madison avenue, met with a severe accident on Sunday, when she fell and fractured the hip bone. Owing to her advanced age, she being over 80 years, the break will be a long time knitting.

Not An Embezzler.

The case against William A. Boe, charged with embezzlement from the firm of John R. Miller & Son, tobacco dealers, of Newark, was dismissed Monday in Justice Hull's court. The defendant was represented by William G. DeMess, Esq.

AT COUNCIL BLUFFS

Citizens Excited to Pitch of Lynching by Assaults.

NEGROES HAD VERY NARROW ESCAPE

Prisoners Were Removed to Fort Madison in Consequence of an Attack by an Infuriated Mob—Another Attack Threatened.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Dec. 30.—Neely Zimmerman and George Burk, the negroes charged with assaulting Mrs. Sparks and her daughter, who narrowly escaped lynching at the hands of an infuriated mob here, have been taken to the state penitentiary at Fort Madison for safe keeping. The two men were taken before Judge Wheeler and waived preliminary examination. The judge then signed an order for their removal. The men were hastily spirited away, and Sheriff Cousins left with them on the first train for Fort Madison.

During the day Sheriff Cousins learned of an organized plan to lynch Zimmerman and Burk and again made a request for a company of militia to guard the county jail and arranged for a heavy force of city police to assist in case their services were required. Feeling against the prisoners increased, and small groups of men gathered in the vicinity of the jail to discuss the matter. Sheriff Cousins then decided that the safer course was to remove the men from the city and applied for an order of removal.

Four assaults within a week similar to those made on Mrs. Sparks and her daughter had wrought up the working people of the city to a pitch of feverish excitement, and this feeling was freely voiced on every street corner. The excitement was sufficient to lead the authorities to the belief that a bold attempt would be made by a well organized mob to lynch the negroes, and they then decided to avoid all trouble by removing the cause for a repetition of the disturbance.

THE CHICAGO STRIKE.

The Liverymen Refuse to Arbitrate. Some Strikers Back at Work.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30.—A positive refusal to arbitrate was the decision of the joint associations of liverymen on the proposal submitted by the striking livery drivers. The strikers asked that the adjustment of the whole difficulty be placed in the hands of former members of the Chicago board of arbitration.

The reason given by the livery owners for their refusal of the proposition of the men was that the selection of the arbiter by drivers gave the employers no voice in the matter.

Many desertions from the union are reported. At the headquarters of the liverymen's association it was claimed that fully sixty strikers had applied for their old jobs and had been put back to work.

All Kinds of Weather.

NEWPORT, R. I., Dec. 30.—Nearly every kind of weather has been experienced here in twenty-four hours, snow, hail and rain falling, while a terrific thunderstorm, accompanied by blinding lightning, caused terror to many who retained the disastrous storm of 1894. At 7 o'clock the mercury was 8 degrees above zero and then went to 34 degrees. Afterward a heavy snowstorm set in, and in an hour the rumble of thunder was heard to the southward, and the wind increased until it had attained the force of a gale. The thunderstorm lasted an hour, during which the stone steeple on St. Mary's Catholic church and the wooden spire on Trinity church were struck by lightning, but neither seriously injured, and the fire and police system damaged. Later the skies cleared, and fair weather again prevails.

Grain Charged in Kansas City, Kan.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Dec. 30.—Members of the board of county commissioners of Kansas City, Kan., have been charged with soliciting bribes for the appointment of teachers to public schools by witnesses before the grand jury. Frank Colvin, a principal, is said to have testified that a member of the board demanded money for his reappointment, which he refused, and John Schaich, an attorney, is quoted as saying that a member of the board, through a third person, demanded money for the reappointment of his sister as a teacher.

Pittsburg Has Great Fire.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 30.—For twelve hours, commencing at 6 o'clock, thirteen engine companies battled with a stubborn fire in the six story storage warehouse of Haugh & Keenan, Third street and Duquesne way. Crossed electric wires is given as the probable cause of the conflagration. The loss, according to James P. Keenan, president of the company, may reach $700,000.

Father and Daughter Killed.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 30.—Piebe Ulberg and his daughter, Mrs. Ida Dwiggens of Georgetown, Mich., were killed by a Holland and Lake Michigan interurban car at Grandville last night. The cutter in which they were riding was reduced to kindling wood. Mrs. Dwiggens died almost immediately, but her father lingered until late last night.

Family Burned to Death.

BALLINGER, Tex., Dec. 30.—J. A. McBeth, his wife and five-year-old daughter and his brother-in-law, Bart West, were burned to death here in a fire which destroyed the furniture store of J. A. Ostertag. The property loss is $35,000.

ARMING FOR WAR.

Russia and Japan Prepare For a Great Struggle.

TWELVE RUSSIAN BATTERIES READY

Tokyo Government Invested With a "Monte Christo" Credit For Military Defense and Right to Create a War Council.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—A Russian dispatch says twelve batteries of the four grenadier brigades of field artillery, stationed in and around Moscow, have been selected for service in the far east and have received new guns which the Russian artillerists claim are superior to the French fieldpieces.

The early departure of three of these batteries is expected, which will place 108 field guns, with the latest equipment, at the disposal of Viceroy Alexeiff.

It is said here that all the volunteers living at their homes, who, as graduates of high schools, are privileged to serve only a year with the colors, have been ordered into barracks.

An official report from Tokyo says an emergency ordinance, promulgated late Monday night, invests the government with unlimited credit for purposes of military defense.

Three other ordinances were issued, relating, first, to the Seoul-Fusan railway, which is brought closer under official control; second, to the revision of the organization of the imperial military headquarters in war time; third, to the creation of a war council in war time.

These ordinances, it is considered, look like war and completely provide for all emergencies.

An extraordinary meeting of the privy council approved the issue by the cabinet of an emergency ordinance authorizing the guarantee of the principal and interest of an issue of 10,000,000 yen debentures.

The ordinance also provides for all possible military expenses for the protection of the railway and other interests.

It is reported that the Japanese ministerial council has demanded the transfer of 25,000,000 yen from the educational fund for emergency purposes.

Panic on Cotton Market.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 30.—It was a field day for bears in the cotton market. After several futile attempts to break the market a panic was caused in some way or another, and within ten minutes prices went down about sixty points, or $3 a bale. This happened during the noon hour, and for about half an hour the Cotton Exchange was in an uproar. Hundreds of longs were wiped out, and their efforts to get out with as small a loss as possible caused prices to go lower and lower. It was one of the worst stampedes of frightened longs ever seen in the local market.

Miscreant Who Despiled Train.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., Dec. 30.—General Superintendent J. B. Vahe of the Pittsburg and Lake Erie railroad has offered a reward of $500 for the arrest of the criminal who opened and spiked the switch at the southern end of the Newcastle Junction yards which caused the derailment of the westbound mail night train from Pittsburg yesterday. The heavy padlock had been wrenched loose and was found battered and twisted. The automatic signal lights showed white after the accident, indicating a clear track.

Navy Treatment For Consumptives.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Dec. 30.—The navy department recently decided to make a test of the open air treatment for consumption. After examining various localities it selected Warrington, near the navy yard, as the best location. Six patients are now under treatment at the camp for naval consumptives located three weeks ago, and so far all are showing improvement. If the camp should prove satisfactory it will be made a permanent institution.

Record Cold For Adirondacks.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Dec. 30.—Monday night was the coldest of the season in the Adirondacks. The lowest temperature was recorded at Bloomingdale, where the mercury stood 32 below zero. At Saranac Lake it was 28, Lake Placid 24, Lyon Mountain 20, Upper Chateaugay Lake 21, Dannemora 19 and Loon Lake 23 below.

Czar to Visit Italy.

ROME, Dec. 30.—It is asserted that Prince Ouroussoff, the new ambassador from Russia to Italy, in presenting his credentials to King Victor Emmanuel announced that it was the intention of the czar to visit Italy next spring in return for the Italian monarch's visit to Russia.

Senator Scott Denies.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—Senator Scott of West Virginia has denied as absolutely without basis reports that the chairmanship of the executive committee of the Republican national committee had been tendered him by the president and had been declined by him.

Porte Wants Italian Governor.

ROME, Dec. 30.—Rechid Bey, the Turkish ambassador, has presented to the Italian government the request of the porte for the appointment of an Italian officer to command the international gendarmerie in Macedonia.

"Fighting Bob" Sails For Manila.

HONOLULU, Dec. 30.—The vessels of the Asiatic squadron, under command of Rear Admiral Evans, which has been in this port for several days, have sailed for Manila via the island of Guam.

ROOT TO ACT FOR HAY

Secretary of War Will Negotiate With General Reyes.

CABINET CONSIDERS COLOMBIAN NOTE

Ratification of Treaty With Panama Must Be the First Step—Reyes Will Remain at the Capital Awaiting a Reply.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.—At a meeting of the cabinet called by the president the Panama situation was the principal subject under consideration. All members of the cabinet except Secretary Hay, who is ill; Secretary Shaw and Attorney General Knox, who are out of the city, were present. The meeting was one of the longest held for several weeks, the session consuming quite two hours.

Secretary Root was delayed nearly half an hour in his arrival at the meeting, having been in conference with General Reyes, the special representative of Colombia. This circumstance caused it to transpire that during the illness of Secretary Hay Secretary Root has been designated by the president to conduct the negotiations of this government with General Reyes.

Secretary Root laid before the president the details of his interview with the Colombian minister. Careful consideration was given to the Colombian note filed with the state department by General Reyes, but it can be said that no answer has yet been made to it. The note was submitted by the Colombian minister in Spanish. Some delay was encountered in the translation of the document, but finally the translation was laid before the president and Secretary Root for consideration.

Secretary Root informed General Reyes that the reply of this government was not ready, but that it would be given him as soon as possible. Secretary Root will give the response to General Reyes when a decision as to its precise nature shall have been reached.

No intimation of the contents of General Reyes' note or of the reply of this government is given from any authoritative source. It is known, however, that the administration regards the ratification of the treaty with the republic of Panama as the first step to be taken in the entire pending matter.

General Reyes has not indicated to Secretary Root what his intentions are regarding his future movements. It is presumed he will remain in Washington at least until the reply of the United States to his note shall have been presented, but so far as can be ascertained nothing definite is known as to his intentions.

Xavian Brothers' School Burned.

WORCESTER, Mass., Dec. 30.—The industrial building of Mount St. Joseph's School For Boys at Millbury, conducted by the Xavian Brothers of the Roman Catholic church, was destroyed by fire which started from a defective chimney. The loss on building and contents, including a printing office, wire working department and shoe shop, is $7,500. A winter's supply of vegetables, which the sixty-five boys dug from the farm of 150 acres, was lost.

Embezzler Shammed Sickness.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Dec. 30.—Waldemar F. Pengelson, bookkeeper for the Delaware & Hudson Line and Cement company of this city, was arrested and placed in jail on the charge of grand larceny in the first degree, being charged with embezzling several thousand dollars from the company. He pleaded to be violently ill, but when examined by two physicians, who reported that he was shamming illness, he dressed and walked to the jail.

Cyclone Taylor Arrested.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Dec. 30.—The Rev. Bushrod Sheddon Taylor, an itinerant preacher known in many parts of the United States as Cyclone Taylor, was arrested at Mooers Junction, in this county, and brought here charged by Emmett Armstrong with writing and sending through the mails postal cards containing scurrilous and libelous matter reflecting upon Mr. Armstrong's character. He pleaded not guilty.

Andrew Patullo, M. P. P., a Suicide.

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—Andrew Patullo, M. P. P., of Woodstock, Ont., committed suicide in London last night, where he had been visiting. He was formerly proprietor of the Woodstock Sentinel-Review. By his death the majority of Premier Ross in the Ontario legislature is reduced to two, and its resignation is probable.

Natchez Wants the Canal.

NATCHEZ, Miss., Dec. 30.—The Natchez Cotton and Merchants' Exchange adopted a resolution urging United States Senator McLaurin and Money to vote for ratification of the Panama treaty as a business measure and to insure construction of an isthmian canal.

Ultimatum to Franklin Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30. — The Chicago Typothetæ has issued an ultimatum to the Franklin Pressmen's union that hereafter the scale of wages will be $12 per week instead of $15. The places of any who will not accept this reduction will be declared vacant.

Mine Accidents in 1903.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Dec. 30.—Mine Inspector Evans of this anthracite district has reported forty-one fatalities and sixty-six nonfatal accidents during the past year.

Loubet to Visit Rome.

ROME, Dec. 30.—It is announced that President Loubet will visit Rome in April next.

HENRY DWIGHT JANES DIED IN R. R. DEPOT

Heart Disease Carried Him Off As He Passed Through Jersey City Terminal.

LIVED HERE 30 YEARS

FOR MANY YEARS A TRUSTEE OF THE CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH.

Claim Adjuster for Insurance Company—Aged Sixty-Five Years—Born in Boston, Ohio—Funeral Services Tonight.

While returning from New York to his home in this city Saturday night, Henry Dwight Janes, died suddenly in the Jersey City terminal of the New Jersey Central. Heart disease was the cause of death. Several friends of Mr. Janes were going through the terminal station at the time and hastened to assist him, but life was practically extinct before medical aid could be secured.

Mr. Janes was sixty-five years of age and was born in Boston, Ohio. He had been a resident of Plainfield about thirty years and at present was living with his family at the home of Mrs. Margaret T. West, 120 Crescent avenue. He was for many years a trustee of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church He lived an exemplary life and was held in high esteem. He was of a quiet and unassuming nature.

Mr. Janes held a responsible position with the Home Insurance Company, of New York, where he had been employed for thirty-seven years. His duties were those of adjusting and settling claims. Surviving Mr. Janes is a wife, a daughter, Miss Mary S. Janes and a son, Edward Janes.

A $30,000 IMPROVEMENT

GEORGE J. TOBIN TO ERECT A BIG BUILDING IN EAST FOURTH STREET.

Great possibilities are opening up for Watchung avenue, south of North avenue, as a business thoroughfare. Announcement was made through these columns a few days ago that a row of new stores and dwellings was to be erected at the corner of Watchung avenue and Fourth street to extend from that corner to the depot wall. Several stores in the old Crescent Rink building have recently been remodeled and have been occupied by enterprising business men, among them being George Scribner, the news dealer.

And now comes a report that George J. Tobin, sanitary engineer, will commence building a warehouse on the southwest corner of Watchung avenue and Fourth street. The building he plans to erect will cost in the neighborhood of $30,000 and while it will probably be occupied as a storage warehouse, it will be designed so as to be an architectural addition to the neighborhood.

Mr. Tobin this morning confirmed the report that he is to build on that lot and said that operations will be begun early in the spring. He said that the building will be at least five stories high and will be sixty by eighty-three feet, facing on Watchung avenue. He has had the plans drawn for the new building. It may be possible that there will be stores built in the lower floor. It will be thoroughly fire proof and will be equipped with elevators, fire bulkheads and other schemes for preventing the spread of fire. The building will be of stone or brick.

In speaking of the erection of the proposed building Mr. Tobin said that he has been contemplating the construction of the structure for some time but that on account of the unrest in the building trades, and the prevailing high prices of building material, he has been compelled to postpone the work on the building until spring.

DR. SNODGRASS TO STAY.

Congregation Asks Pastor to Continue His Good Work at First M. E. Church.

At the meeting of the Official Board of the First M. E. Church held last week, Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass received an unanimous call from the members of his congregation to return to minister to that flock for another year. In extending this call the congregation refuses to accept his resignation offered recently. It is believed that he will continue his work here. Few pastors have been as successful as ministers of that flourishing church as Dr. Snodgrass. During his six years' term as pastor of that flourishing flock he has built up the church to a great degree.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman and family, who have been spending several days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Matthews, of Grove street, have returned to New York.
